योग, ज्ञान, सांख्य, विद्याएँ, शिल्प आदि कर्म, वेद, शास्त्र और विज्ञान- ये सब विष्णुसे उत्पन्न हुए हैं ।। १३९ ।।

वे समस्त विश्वके भोक्ता और अविनाशी विष्णु ही एक ऐसे हैं, जो अनेक रूपोंमें विभक्त होकर भिन्न-भिन्न भूतविशेषोंके अनेक रूपोंको धारण कर रहे हैं तथा त्रिलोकीमें व्याप्त होकर सबको भोग रहे हैं ।। १४० ।।

जो विश्वके ईश्वर जगत्की उत्पत्ति, स्थिति और विनाश करनेवाले जन्मरहित कमललोचन भगवान् विष्णुका भजन करते हैं, वे कभी पराभव नहीं पाते हैं ।

Bhisma said— “Son! By continuously praising and chanting the thousand names of the Supreme Lord, who is beyond time, space, and material form, and who is the Lord of all gods and the universe, one can transcend all sorrows.

By worshipping, meditating upon, and offering prayers and obeisance to that eternal Supreme Being with devotion, one is freed from all suffering.

The one who is free from birth and decay, who pervades all, and is the ruler of all worlds, can grant liberation to those who sing his praises with sincerity.

The Lord, who is the benefactor of Brahmins, the knower of all dharmas, the source of all beings, and the ultimate cause of the universe, must be continuously worshipped, as doing so leads one beyond all grief.

Among all religious duties, I consider this to be the greatest —that a person should always engage in the devotional praise of the lotus-eyed Lord Vasudeva.

He is the embodiment of supreme light, supreme penance, and the ultimate refuge of all; he is the most sacred among all sacred places, the auspicious among all auspiciousness, the god of gods, and the eternal father of all beings.

At the beginning of creation, all beings originate from him, and at the time of cosmic dissolution, they merge into him. Listen to the thousand holy names of the Lord of all realms, Lord Vishnu, which dispel fear and sin.

The blessed devotees of the Supreme Lord never experience anger, jealousy, greed, or impurity in their intellect.

The heavens, the sun, the moon, the stars, the ten directions, the earth, and the vast oceans—all exist and are sustained by the influence of the great Lord Vasudeva.

Deities, demons, celestial beings, spirits, serpents, and rakshasas—all living and non-living beings function in accordance with the will of Lord Krishna.

The senses, mind, intellect, virtue, radiance, strength, patience, body, and soul—all these are forms of Lord Vasudeva, as stated by the Vedas.

Among all scriptures, righteous conduct is considered foremost, and from righteousness, dharma arises, whose true master is Lord Achyuta.

The sages, ancestors, gods, the five great elements, minerals, and all forms of life—everything originates from Lord Narayana.

Yoga, knowledge, philosophical insights, various sciences, arts, rituals, the Vedas, scriptures, and wisdom—all come forth from Lord Vishnu.

He, the eternal Lord Vishnu, is the sole enjoyer and sustainer of the entire universe. Though present in multiple forms, he remains one, manifesting across creation and pervading the three worlds.

Anyone who desires supreme bliss and spiritual merit should recite the Vishnu Sahasranama Stotra spoken by Sage Vyasa.

Those who worship Lord Vishnu—the creator, sustainer, and destroyer of the cosmos, the lotus-eyed and birthless Lord —never face defeat."

Mahabharat Anushashan Parva Adhaya 158 Shree Krishna Stuti by Bhisma Pitamah

भीष्मजीने कहा- युधिष्ठिर ! ये महान् व्रतधारी परम बुद्धिमान् भगवान् श्रीकृष्ण ब्राह्मण-पूजासे होनेवाले लाभका प्रत्यक्ष अनुभव कर चुके हैं; अतः वही तुमसे इस विषयकी सारी बातें बतायेंगे ।। ३ ।।

आज मेरा बल, मेरे कान, मेरी वाणी, मेरा मन और मेरे दोनों नेत्र तथा मेरा विशुद्ध ज्ञान भी सब एकत्रित हो गये हैं। अतः जान पड़ता है कि अब मेरा शरीर छूटनेमें अधिक विलम्ब नहीं है। आज सूर्यदेव अधिक तेजीसे नहीं चलते हैं ।। ४ ।।

कुन्तीनन्दन ! सृष्टिके आरम्भमें इनकी नाभिसे कमल उत्पन्न हुआ और उसीके भीतर अमित तेजस्वी ब्रह्माजी स्वतः प्रकट हुए। जिन्होंने उस घोर अन्धकारका नाश किया है, जो समुद्रको भी डाँट बताता हुआ सब ओर व्याप्त हो रहा था (अर्थात् जो अगाध और अपार था) ।। ९ ।।

जब धर्मका ह्रास होने लगता है, तब ये शुद्ध अन्तःकरणवाले श्रीकृष्ण देवताओं तथा मनुष्योंके कुलमें अवतार लेकर स्वयं धर्ममें स्थित हो उसका आचरण करते हुए उसकी स्थापना तथा पर और अपर लोकोंकी रक्षा करते हैं ।। १२ ।।

कुन्तीनन्दन ! ये त्याज्य वस्तुका त्याग करके असुरोंका वध करनेके लिये स्वयं कारण बनते हैं। कार्य, अकार्य और कारण सब इन्हींके स्वरूप हैं। ये नारायणदेव ही भूत, भविष्य और वर्तमान कालमें किये जानेवाले कर्मरूप हैं। तुम इन्हींको राहु, चन्द्रमा और इन्द्र समझो ।। १३ ।।

श्रीकृष्ण ही विश्वकर्मा, विश्वरूप, विश्वभोक्ता, विश्वविधाता और विश्वविजेता हैं। वे ही एक हाथमें त्रिशूल और दूसरे हाथमें रक्तसे भरा खप्पर लिये विकरालरूप धारण करते हैं। अपने नाना प्रकारके कर्मोसे जगत्में विख्यात हुए श्रीकृष्णकी ही सब लोग स्तुति करते हैं ।। १४ ।।

यज्ञमें स्तोतालोग इन्हींकी स्तुति करते हैं। सामगान करनेवाले विद्वान् रथन्तर साममें इन्हींके गुण गाते हैं। वेदवेत्ता ब्राह्मण वेदके मन्त्रोंसे इन्हींका स्तवन करते हैं और यजुर्वेदी अध्वर्यु यज्ञमें इन्हींको हविष्यका भाग देते हैं ।। १६ ।।

भारत! इन्होंने ही पूर्वकालमें ब्रह्मरूप पुरातन गुहामें प्रवेश करके इस पृथ्वीका जलमें प्रलय होना देखा है। इन सृष्टिकर्म करनेवाले श्रीकृष्णने दैत्यों, दानवों तथा नागोंको विक्षुब्ध करके इस पृथ्वीका रसातलसे उद्धार किया है ।। १७ ।।

ये ही सम्पूर्ण लोकोंकी शुक्लज्योति हैं तथा तीनों लोक, तीनों लोकपाल, त्रिविध अग्नि, तीनों व्याहृतियाँ और सम्पूर्ण देवता भी ये देवकीनन्दन श्रीकृष्ण ही हैं ।। ३१ ।।

रुद्र, आदित्य, वसु अश्विनीकुमार, साध्य, विश्वेदेव, मरुद्गण, प्रजापति, देवमाता अदिति और सप्तर्षि- ये सब-के-सब श्रीकृष्णसे ही प्रकट हुए हैं ।। ३४ ।।

ये विश्वरूप श्रीकृष्ण ही वायुरूप धारण करके संसारको चेष्टा प्रदान करते हैं, अग्निरूप होकर सबको भस्म करते हैं, झलका रूप धारण करके जगत्को डुबाते हैं और ब्रह्मा होकर सम्पूर्ण विश्वकी सृष्टि करते हैं ।। ३५ ।।

ये स्वयं वेद्यस्वरूप होकर भी वेदवेद्य तत्त्वको जाननेका प्रयत्न करते हैं। विधिरूप होकर भी विहित कर्मोका आश्रय लेते हैं। ये ही धर्म, वेद और बलमें स्थित हैं। तुम यह विश्वास करो कि सारा चराचर जगत् श्रीकृष्णका ही स्वरूप है ।। ३६ ।।

ये विश्वरूपधारी श्रीकृष्ण परम ज्योतिर्मय सूर्यका रूप धारण करके पूर्व दिशामें प्रकट होते हैं। जिनकी प्रभासे सारा जगत् प्रकाशित होता है। ये समस्त प्राणियोंकी उत्पत्तिके

स्थान हैं। इन्होंने पूर्वकालमें पहले जलकी सृष्टि करके फिर सम्पूर्ण जगत्को उत्पन्न किया था ।। ३७ ।।

राजन् ! इन्होंने ही इस विश्वको उत्पन्न किया है और ये ही आत्मयोनि श्रीकृष्ण अपनी ही शक्तिसे सबको जीवन प्रदान करते हैं। देवता, असुर, मनुष्य, लोक, ऋषि, पितर, प्रजा और संक्षेपतः सम्पूर्ण प्राणियोंको इन्हींसे जीवन मिलता है। ये भगवान् भूतनाथ ही सदा विधिपूर्वक समस्त भूतोंकी सृष्टिकी इच्छा रखते हैं ।। ४२ ।।

शुभ-अशुभ और स्थावर-जंगमरूप यह सारा जगत् श्रीकृष्णसे उत्पन्न हुआ है, इस बातपर विश्वास करो। भूत, भविष्य और वर्तमान सब श्रीकृष्णका ही स्वरूप है। यह तुम्हें अच्छी तरह समझ लेना चाहिये ।। ४३ ।।

प्राणियोंका अन्तकाल आनेपर साक्षात् श्रीकृष्ण ही मृत्युरूप बन जाते हैं। ये धर्मके सनातन रक्षक हैं। जो बात बीत चुकी है तथा जिसका अभी कोई पता नहीं है, वे सब श्रीकृष्णसे ही प्रकट होते हैं, यह निश्चितरूपसे जान लो ।। ४४ ।।

तीनों लोकोंमें जो कुछ भी उत्तम, पवित्र तथा शुभ या अशुभ वस्तु है, वह सब अचिन्त्य भगवान् श्रीकृष्णका ही स्वरूप है, श्रीकृष्णसे भिन्न कोई वस्तु है, ऐसा सोचना अपनी विपरीत बुद्धिका ही परिचय देना है ।। ४५ ।।

भगवान् श्रीकृष्णकी ऐसी ही महिमा है। बल्कि ये इससे भी अधिक प्रभावशाली हैं। ये ही परम पुरुष अविनाशी नारायण हैं। ये ही स्थावर-जंगमरूप जगत्के आदि, मध्य और अन्त हैं तथा संसारमें जन्म लेनेकी इच्छावाले प्राणियोंकी उत्पत्तिके कारण भी ये ही हैं। इन्हींको अविकारी परमात्मा कहते हैं ।। ४६ ।।

Bhisma said— "Yudhishthira! The great vow-bearing, supremely intelligent Lord Krishna has directly experienced the benefits of honoring Brahmins; therefore, he himself will explain everything to you.

Today, my strength, my hearing, my speech, my mind, my vision, and my pure knowledge have all gathered together. It seems that my body will not last much longer. Even the sun does not move as swiftly today.

The sky, the heavens, the four directions, and the four corners—all are below Lord Krishna. From him, the cycle of creation has emerged, and he alone has formed this ancient universe.

O son of Kunti! At the beginning of creation, a lotus sprouted from his navel, and within that, the immensely radiant Brahma appeared on his own. He dispelled the deep darkness that engulfed everything, including the vast oceans.

Whenever righteousness declines, the pure-hearted Lord Krishna manifests among the gods and humans, upholding dharma and protecting both the higher and lower worlds.

O son of Kunti! He renounces what is to be abandoned and becomes the cause of vanquishing demons. Action, inaction, and causation are all his forms. Lord Narayana himself embodies past, present, and future actions. You may recognize him in Rahu, the Moon, and Indra.

Krishna is the divine architect of the universe, its ruler, enjoyer, creator, and conqueror. He alone, holding a trident in one hand and a blood-filled skull cup in another, assumes terrifying forms. His deeds are famous throughout the cosmos, and all beings praise him.

Hundreds of Gandharvas, Apsaras, and gods remain in his service at all times. Even the demons seek his counsel. He alone guards wealth and desires victory.

During sacrifices, the hymns sung in praise are dedicated to him. The wise ones who chant the Sama Veda glorify his virtues. Brahmins versed in the Vedas extol him through sacred mantras, and the priests of Yajurveda offer oblations to him.

O Bharata! In ancient times, he entered the primordial cosmic cave in his Brahmanic form and witnessed the earth submerged in water during dissolution. He disturbed demons, titans, and serpents before raising the earth from the depths.

He is the radiance illuminating all worlds—the three realms, the three deities guarding them, the three types of sacred fires, the three sacred utterances, and all gods—he is Lord Krishna, the son of Devaki.

Time cycles, seasons, lunar phases, days and nights, moments, hours, and seconds—all these should be understood as manifestations of Lord Krishna.

O Partha! The Moon, the Sun, planets, stars, constellations, new moon, full moon, seasonal conjunctions—all originate from Krishna.

Rudras, Adityas, Vasus, Ashvins, Sadhyas, Vishvedevas, Maruts, Prajapatis, divine mother Aditi, and the Seven Great Sages—all have emerged from Krishna.

The cosmic form of Krishna assumes the aspect of wind to animate the world, fire to consume it, water to submerge it, and Brahma to create the universe.

Though he is self-aware, he still seeks knowledge of the eternal truths of the Vedas. He assumes the form of righteousness while upholding prescribed duties. He alone is established within dharma, the Vedas, and strength. Know with certainty that the entire animate and inanimate universe is his divine manifestation.

Krishna, in his cosmic form, takes on the luminous aspect of the Sun, appearing in the eastern direction, whose radiance illuminates the entire world. He is the origin of all beings. In ancient times, he first created water, then generated all existence.

O King! He is the creator of this cosmos, and Krishna, the self-born, gives life to all. The gods, demons, humans, worlds, sages, ancestors, creatures—all draw their existence from him. Lord Bhutanatha, as the eternal protector, desires to create beings according to cosmic law.

Believe that the entire world—auspicious or inauspicious, living or non-living—originates from Krishna. Past, present, and future—all are his manifestations. Understand this thoroughly.

At the end of life, Krishna himself assumes the form of death. He is the eternal guardian of righteousness. Everything that has passed and everything unknown yet to come—know with certainty that all emanate from Krishna."

"In all three worlds, whatever is supreme, pure, and auspicious or inauspicious—all are manifestations of the inconceivable Lord Krishna. To think that anything exists separate from Krishna is merely a sign of mistaken intellect.

Such is the glory of Lord Krishna. In fact, his magnificence is even greater than can be described. He alone is the Supreme Person—the eternal Narayana. He is the beginning, the middle, and the end of all living and non-living beings. He is also the cause of the existence of those who desire to take birth in this world. He is known as the immutable Supreme Soul."

Lord Hari, on the other hand, is unaffected by and hence devoid of the attributes (of Prakrti). He is the Supreme Person far beyond the range of Prakrti. He is omniscient and is a witness to everything. A person who worships him becomes bereft of gunas.

Srimad Bhagavatam 10th Book Chapter 46 Slokas 36-41

36 . Please do not get depressed, Oh highly fortunate ones! You shall see Krsna by your side. Just as the fire (lat-ently) exists in fuel, he abides in the hearts of all beings.

37. (Please do not entertain doubt how he will leave his dear parents and come to you). None is extremely beloved of or disliked by him, for he is above attachments. None is superior or inferior or unequal to him as he is the same to all.2
38. He has no mother, no father, no wife, no children or other relatives. He has none who is his own or who is his non-self. He has no corporeal form at all.
39. He has no bound of Karma. But out of sport and for the protection of the righteous, he incarnates in good (eg. Rāma, Krsna, bad (Fish, Boar) and mixed (e.g. Man-lion) types of species.)3
40. Though this unborn Lord is transcendental to and hence unaffected by guṇas, he assumes all the gunas such as the sattva, rajas and tamas. It is out of sportiveness that he creates, maintains and destroys the universe by these means.

Srimad Bhagavatam 10th Skanda Adhaya 63 – Bhagwan Shree Krishna Stuti

Juara prayed:

25. I bow to you, Lord of infinite potency, the controll-er of great gods (like Brahmā and others), the Soul of all (the universe). One without a second, (of the nature of) Absolute Consciousness, the Cause of the creation, subsistence and dis-solution of the universe, you are what is known as the Brahman which is indicated by the Vedas (but not cognised directly), absolutely serene, subject to no modification.

26. (You, being beyond all attributes, are the Lord of all). The Time-spirit (that impels action), Providence (resultant from the karma or action), Karma, Svabhāva (the natural pro-pensities as a result of Karma), substance (subtle elements), the body, Prāṇa (vital breath called Sūtra), the Ego, modifica-tions (viz. eleven senses-10 conative and cognitive senses+1 mind, the internal organ) and the combination of these evolutes called the Linga or subtle body which sets in motion the stream of cause-effect relation like that of the seed and the tree-all is your Māyā. I seek shelter in you in whom there is negation of Māyā.

27. Sportively assuming various incarnations (as Fish, Tortoise, Boar etc.) you protect the gods, saintly persons who abide by the dharına (duties prescribed for their respective class and stage in life) and for their protection you exterminate those who deviate from the righteous path and live by commit-ting violence. This incarnation of yours is intended for lessening the burden of the earth. submitted :

28. (It is not surprising that Båṇa fights with you as he is unaware of your real nature, for you are the veritable Brahman, the Supreme Light lying concealed in the Vedas (which are the Brahman revealed in verbal form). You reveal yourself to sages and hence those sages of pure heart realize you to be all-pervading and pure as the sky and (eternally) absolute.

29. You are indeed the Cosmic Man (Virāṭ puruşa) that comprise within you (as parts of your body) all the universe. Thus the sky is your navel; the fire, your mouth; water, your seminal fluid; the heavenly region, your head; the cardinal points, 'your ears; the earth, your feet; the moon your mind; the Sun, your eye; myself (viz. Rudra), your Ego (ahaṁkāra); the seas, your belly; Indra (and other protectors of the world), your arms;

30. Herbs and plants are your hair on the body; clouds, the locks of your hair; god Brahmā, your intellect; the pro-creator of the worlds, your generative organ; and Dharma (the god upholding righteousness), your heart. (But this Båṇa does not know this Cosmic Personality of yours).

31. This incarnation of yours, O Lord of undiminished glory and power (or who stay eternally in Go-loka), is for the protection of righteousness and for the prosperity of the world. All of us (protectors of various spheres) are delegat-ed powers by you and hence we (can) protect the seven spheres of the universe.

32. You are the one without a second, the First Person (beyond all persons belonging to the three states), pure, self-luminous through knowledge, the cause of all but yourself without any cause, the controller (of the universe). Yet you manifest your self through your Måyå as an individual Soul (in every being be it gods, men or subhuman beings) and throw light on everything.

33. O.Perfect Lord! Just as the Sun, covered under his own shadow (viz. clouds, his creation) illuminates both the clouds as well as other forms, you, though the Self-luminous, get concealed under the gunas (viz. Ego) and yet make all the gunas and their products shine (with your light).

I seek refuge in Lord Shri Krishna, who is the eternal sage, the embodiment of wisdom, the ocean of divine speech, and effortlessly accessible to diligent seekers like water in a sacred pot. His feet dispel all obstacles, and Garuda, adorned with beautiful wings, manifests his divine form. He alleviates the sins and sufferings of beings and is the ultimate refuge of the universe.

With countless heads, he is the primordial being, without beginning, middle, or end—adorned with imperishable glory. He bears the essence of creation, sustaining both seed and potency. Unborn, eternal, and the supreme transcendental Lord, he illuminates existence with his divine presence. II 5-6 II

In ancient times, Lord Krishna entered the ocean teeming with aquatic creatures and defeated the deity Varuna, who resided in the depths of the water.

Similarly, Hrishikesha slew the demon Panchajana, who dwelled in the underworld, and obtained the divine conch shell, Panchajanya.

In the Khandava forest, alongside Arjuna, Lord Krishna pleased Agni (the fire god) and acquired the formidable fiery weapon, the Sudarshana Chakra.

The mighty Lord Krishna, mounted on Garuda, went to the celestial city of Amaravati, instilling fear among its inhabitants, and took the divine Parijata tree from the alace of Indra.

Indra, well aware of Krishna's prowess, endured it silently. Among all kings, I have never heard of anyone whom Krishna has not defeated.

In battle, He triumphed over the kingdoms of Anga, Vanga, Kalinga, Magadha, Kashi, Kosala, Vatsa, Garga, Karusha, and Paundra.

Sanjaya! Likewise, the lotus-eyed Krishna conquered the warriors of Avanti, the southern provinces, the mountainous regions, Dasharaka, Kashmir, Auraska, Pisacha, Mudgala, Kamboja, Vatadhana, Chola, Pandya, Trigarta, Malava, and the nearly invincible Darada.

He also vanquished the warriors from various directions, including the Khasas, Shakas, and their followers, as well as the formidable Kalayavana.

Mahabharat Udyoga Parva Adhaya 70 – Description of Various Names and Qualities of Bhagvan Shree Krishna by Mahatma Sanjaya

भगवान् समस्त प्राणियोंके निवासस्थान हैं तथा वे सब भूतोंमें वास करते हैं, इसलिये 'वसु' हैं एवं देवताओंकी उत्पत्तिके स्थान होनेसे और समस्त देवता उनमें वास करते हैं, इसलिये उन्हें 'देव' कहा जाता है। अतएव उनका नाम 'वासुदेव' है, ऐसा जानना चाहिये। बृहत् अर्थात् व्यापक होनेके कारण वे ही 'विष्णु' कहलाते हैं ।। ३ ।।

भारत! मौन, ध्यान और योगसे उनका बोध अथवा साक्षात्कार होता है; इसलिये आप उन्हें 'माधव' समझें। मधु शब्दसे प्रतिपादित पृथ्वी आदि सम्पूर्ण तत्त्वोंके

उपादान एवं अधिष्ठान होनेके कारण मधुसूदन श्रीकृष्णको 'मधुहा' कहा गया है ।। ४ ।।

'कृष्' धातु सत्ता अर्थका वाचक है और 'ण' शब्द आनन्द अर्थका बोध कराता है, इन दोनों भावोंसे युक्त होनेके कारण यदुकुलमें अवतीर्ण हुए नित्य आनन्दस्वरूप श्रीविष्णु 'कृष्ण' कहलाते हैं ।। ५ ।।

वे हर्ष अर्थात् सुखसे युक्त होनेके कारण हृषीक हैं और सुख-ऐश्वर्यसे सम्पन्न होनेके कारण 'ईश' कहे गये हैं। इस प्रकार वे भगवान् 'हृषीकेश' नाम धारण करते हैं। अपनी दोनों बाहुओंद्वारा भगवान् इस पृथ्वी और आकाशको धारण करते हैं, इसलिये उनका नाम 'महाबाहु' है ।। ९ ।।

श्रीकृष्ण कभी नीचे गिरकर क्षीण नहीं होते, अतः ('अधो न क्षीयते जातु' – इस व्युत्पत्तिके अनुसार) 'अधोक्षज' कहलाते हैं। वे नरों (जीवात्माओं) के अयन (आश्रय) हैं, इसलिये उन्हें 'नारायण' भी कहते हैं ।। १० ।।

वे भगवान् गोविन्द सत्यसे श्रीकृष्ण सत्यमें प्रतिष्ठित हैं और सत्य उनमें प्रतिष्ठित है। भी उत्कृष्ट सत्य हैं। अतः उनका एक नाम 'सत्य' भी है ।। १२ ।।

विक्रमण (वामनावतारमें तीनों लोकोंको आक्रान्त) करनेके कारण वे भगवान् 'विष्णु' कहलाते हैं। वे सबपर विजय पानेसे 'जिष्णु', शाश्वत (नित्य) होनेसे 'अनन्त' तथा गौओं (इन्द्रियों) के ज्ञाता और प्रकाशक होनेके कारण (गां विन्दति) इस व्युत्पत्तिके अनुसार 'गोविन्द' कहलाते हैं ।। १३

वे अपनी सत्ता-स्फूर्ति देकर असत्यको भी सत्य-सा कर देते हैं और इस प्रकार सारी प्रजाको मोहमें डाल देते हैं ।। १४ ।।

निरन्तर धर्ममें तत्पर रहनेवाले उन भगवान् मधुसूदनका स्वरूप ऐसा ही है। अपनी मर्यादासे कभी च्युत न होनेवाले महाबाहु श्रीकृष्ण कौरवोंपर कृपा करनेके लिये यहाँ पधारनेवाले हैं ।। १५ ।।

Sanjaya said, “O King! I have heard the auspicious derivation of the names of Vasudeva’s son, Lord Krishna. As much as I remember, I shall narrate. In truth, Lord Krishna is beyond the reach of all beings.

The Lord is the abode of all beings and dwells in all creatures; therefore, He is called ‘Vasu’. Since He is the origin of the gods and they reside in Him, He is known as ‘Deva’. Thus, His name is ‘Vasudeva’. He is vast and all-pervading, hence He is called ‘Vishnu’.

O Bharata! Through silence, meditation, and yoga, He is realized; thus, you should understand Him as 'Madhava'. Since He is the substratum and the origin of the elements, He is also called 'Madhuha'.

The root 'Kṛṣ' denotes existence, and 'ṇa' signifies bliss. Being the embodiment of both, the ever-blissful Lord Vishnu, born in the Yadu dynasty, is known as 'Krishna'.

The eternal, indestructible, and supreme abode of the Lord is called 'Pundarika'. Residing there eternally, He is known as 'Pundarikaksha'. (Alternatively, His eyes are like lotus petals, hence His name 'Pundarikaksha'). As He causes distress to evil beings, He is called 'Janardana'.

He never deviates from truth nor from purity; therefore, in relation to pure existence, He is called 'Satvat'. The term 'Arsha' refers to the Vedas, and as He illuminates them, His name is 'Arshabha'. Through the association with 'Arshabha', He is called 'Vrishabhekshana'. (Since 'Vrishabha' means Veda, which acts as His eye or vision, this name is derived).

The Lord, victorious over enemy forces, is not born from any progenitor, hence He is called 'Aja'. The gods are self-effulgent, and due to His supreme radiance, He is called 'Udara'. As He possesses the quality of restraint ('dama'), His name is 'Dam'. The union of 'Dam' and 'Udara' results in the name 'Damodara'.

Since He is always full of joy, He is called 'Hrishika', and as He possesses divine wealth, He is known as 'Isha'. Thus, He bears the name 'Hrishikesha'. The Lord supports the earth and sky with His two arms, hence He is called 'Mahabahu'.

Lord Krishna never declines or diminishes; thus, He is called 'Adhokshaja'. As He is the refuge of all living beings ('Naras'), He is also named 'Narayana'.

Since He is present everywhere and is the dwelling place of all, He is called 'Purusha'. Among all beings, He is the supreme, hence 'Purushottama'. He is the origin and dissolution of existence and non-existence, and He always holds knowledge of all, thus He is known as 'Sarva'.

Lord Govinda is firmly established in truth, and truth is established in Him. He Himself is the supreme truth, so He is named 'Satya'.

Due to His conquest (as in the Vamana incarnation, where He encompassed the three worlds), He is called 'Vishnu'. Victorious over all, He is 'Jishnu'. Eternal in nature, He is 'Ananta'. As He perceives and enlightens the senses ('Go'), He is known as 'Govinda'.

By His divine power, He makes even illusion appear as truth and thus leads the world into delusion.

Lord Madhusudana, ever engaged in righteousness, possesses this nature. The mighty-armed Krishna, unwavering from His divine resolve, has come here to show His grace upon the Kauravas."

Sanjaya said – He never deviates from truth nor from purity; therefore, in relation to pure existence, He is called 'Satvat'. Lord Govinda is firmly established in truth, and truth is established in Him. He Himself is the supreme truth, so He is named 'Satya'. Since He is present everywhere and is the dwelling place of all, He is called 'Purusha'. Among all beings, He is the supreme, hence 'Purushottama'. He is the origin and dissolution of existence and non-existence, and He always holds knowledge of all, thus He is known as 'Sarva'.

Besides these, he had sixteen thousand other wives."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.69.1-6📚

The Verse of Linga purana doesn't give us the context of the story,It just gives brief two verse narration from Shrimad Bhagvata puran 10.59.33 so Account given in Bhagavata puran and mahabharat Should be studied in order understand the context here The english translators have interpreted उपभोग as pleasure and translated the verse – Shri Krishna married 16000 women for his own pleasure. That's utterly ridiculous! Scriptures declare that he rejoices in his own self- आत्मारामस्य कृष्णस्य ।। He is परब्रह्म, and is fully satisfied free of desires. He needn't be satisfied by anyone. The root/dhatu of भोग in उपभोग is भुज् which also refers to possess/obtain. So the verse actually translates as भगवान married 16000 women to obtain them (as wives). For example, in श्रीबृहद्भागवतामृतम् १.१.५०, it's written -महाप्रसादरूपान्नाद्युपभोग सुखाप्तित। Here, उपभोग has been interpreted as obtained.

Refutation-

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.

Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

4. Krishna curses his wives to be abducted by bandits

📚Matsya Purana 70.2-7📚
Siva said:- There will be 16,000 wives of Krisna in the Yuga mentioned before. When once, in the spring time, those ladies, having decorated themselves with ornaments, would be drinking together on the banks of a pond studded with full budded lotus flowers, dancing with the wind and resounding with the melodious notes of the cuckoo and musical tunes of the big black bee, they will see Lord Samba, beautiful like Cupid, having eyes handsome like those of a gazelle, and wearing the garlands of malati, passing by. They will cast on him amorous glances, their hearts being fired with lustful feelings and they being targets of the arrows of Cupid. Lord Krishna will come to know all that with his mental vision, and will curse them as follows: 'Because you cherished the desire of amorous pastime during my absence, all of you will be taken away by bandits."

📚Padma Purana 1.23.78-87a📚
Samba, Jambavatl's son, adorned with all (kinds of ornaments), going along with the path nearby, really of the form of Cupid, will be longingly seen by the ladies and passion will be aroused in the hearts of them who will be tormented by the arrows of Cupid. He, the lord of the world, the omniscient master, having perceived it with his eye of contemplation, will say to them: "The evil being will kidnap you, since you have thus entertained the passion of love (for Samba) in my presence." Then the revered lord, the cause of beings, the holder of the bow made of horn, being propitiated (by the ladies) tormented with the curse, will say this: "(You will observe) the vow, beneficial in the future, which sage Dalbhya, emancipator of the fishermen living in the north and of an unlimited (generosity of) mind will tell you." Saying so and leaving them, the lord vanished. Then after a (long) time when the burden (on the earth as a result of the great Bharatawar) will be lightened and when the fight with clubs (among the Yadavas) will be over, when Kesava will have come back to the heaven, when the entire Yadu-family will be no more, when even Arjuna will be defeated by the thieves, when Krsna's wives will be kidnapped and will be enjoyed by the fishermen for a hundred million years and when they will be (thus) tormented, a devout soul, Dalbhya by name, with great penance (to his credit) will come there."

Regarding Allegations on Varaha Purana Chapter 177

Chapters 152–180 of the Varāha Purāṇa are recognized as later interpolations, as noted by R.C. Hazra in Puranic Records. By the same reasoning, the Matsya Purāṇa and the Skanda Purāṇa section containing this tale should also be treated as spurious, since such accounts are entirely absent from authoritative Vaiṣṇava Purāṇas like the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam and Viṣṇu Purāṇa, as well as from the Mahābhārata. Moreover, no authentic ācārya has ever cited this narrative, while the Bhāgavatam and Mahābhārata themselves provide ample material that contradicts and effectively refutes such fabricated stories.

In the second section (chaps. 113-192), chaps. 140-151 (on the holy places and the duties of women under impurity) and

102 Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs [CH

152-180 (on Mathurā) seem to have been interpolated. Though Kokāmukha, a place sacred to the Boar, is already glorified in chap. 122, there is no reason why it should be repeated by the same author as late as in chap. 140. That chap. 122 was already there when chap. 140 was added is certain, because in Var 140, 4 the Boar refers to Kokāmukha as already described (tava kokāmukhaṃ nāma yan mayā pūrva-bhāṣitam). There are other reasons why chaps. 140-151 can be taken as spurious. Some of the Tīrtha-māhātmyas in these chapters are told in the form of predictions; the stories do not resemble those in chaps. 122 (on Kokāmukha), 125-126 (on Kubjāmraka) and 137-138 (on Saukara-kṣetra); the line 'prabhātāyāṃ tu śarvaryāṃ udite tu divākare' or 'vyuṣṭāyāṃ tu śarvaryāṃ udite ca divākare' which occurs often in other chapters not excepting even the chapters on Kokāmukha, Kubjāmraka and Saukara-kṣetra, and which, consequently, seems to be a favourite expression of the author of this section of the Purāṇa, is not found in chaps. 140-151; and there is no mention of the Chaps. 152-180 (on Mathurā-māhātmya) are ascribed by scholars to Sanātana, a disciple of Caitanya of Navadvīpa[illegible]. Verse 20 of Var 152 is found quoted in the Haribhaktivilāsa of Gopālabhaṭṭa, a contemporary of Sanātana and disciple of Caitanya, with the definite mention that the verse is taken from 'the Mathurā-māhātmya of the Varāha-p'[illegible]. That these chapters on Mathurā-māhātmya are later than the other chapters on holy places in the second section can be little doubted; because the story of the Brahma-rakṣasa in chap. 155 is certainly later than that in chap. 139; the performance of Śrāddha and the offer of rice-balls to the patriarchs in the holy places in Mathurā are highly spoken of in these chapters only; and the name 'Kṛṣṇa', which is rare in other chapters, is used more than once.

There is no account in the Mahābhārata — the most authoritative scripture on Śrī Krishna's life — of Him cursing His wives or of them being kidnapped by bandits. In fact, the Mahābhārata (Swargarohan Parva, Section 5), which holds greater authority than the Purāṇas, clearly records that Śrī Krishna's wives voluntarily entered the Sarasvatī River and, after leaving their mortal forms, approached Vasudeva in Svarga in the form of Apsaras.

Śrīmad Bhāgavatam 10.59.44–45 affirms that Śrī Krishna's 16,000 queens were filled with pure love and unwavering devotion toward Him, their hearts entirely dedicated to Him alone, never even contemplating any man other than the Lord Himself.

Having obtained the consort of goddess Lakshmi as their own spouse whose ways (or approaches to whom) are in-comprehensible even to god Brahma and others, those damsels continuously waited upon him with ever-increasing incessant delight, by means of their affectionate smiles, side-glances in their ever-new meetings and their bashful behaviour and speech.

Although hundreds of maid-servants were in their service, each of them personally rendered service to the Lord by rising up and advancing to receive him, offering him a seat and excellent articles of worship, washing his feet, offering betel-leaves, removing his fatigue and refreshing him by fanning, application of sandalpaste and garlands of flowers, and by comb-ing his hair, arranging his bed, bath and catering to him refreshments (or presents) to him. Regarding Allegations on Padma Purana 1.23.78-87a

According to R.C. Hazra (Puranic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs), chapters 19–28 of the Sṛṣṭi-khaṇḍa of the Padma Purāṇa — including chapter 23 — represent a comparatively late stratum of the text. These portions, in his assessment, were not part of the original Brahma-worshipping redaction but were inserted subsequently by compilers belonging to other sectarian traditions. Their thematic and stylistic character, as well as their divergence from the Brahma-centric orientation of the earlier core chapters, support the conclusion that they are later accretions rather than authentic components of the earliest Sṛṣṭi-khaṇḍa.

A careful study of the chapters of the first part shows that they should be divided again into several groups; viz.,

The chapters in group 2 are different from those in group 1 in general character, some being Vaisnava, some Rämaite and some Saiva. A good number of these chapters have been borrowed from the Matsya-p., but they do not show any traces of the attempt of the Brahma-worshippers to adapt them to their own purpose. Hence it can be little doubted that the chapters of the second group were added to the Srşṭi-kh. by some people other than the Brahmā-worshippers. These chapters, being rooted in those of group 1 and frequently referring to the events and stories in the latter, are certainly later in date. Their comparatively late date is further established by the story of king Sveta (in Srşṭi-kh. 33, 85 ff.) which is different from that in chap. 31 (verses 104 ff.) of the first group.

and group 4—chapters 30 and 31 (verses 1-8a).

The chapters of group 1, which begins with a verse extolling the holy waters of Puṣkara and mentioning Brahmā and the Vipras, constitute the nucleus of the present Sṛṣṭi-kh. This section of the Khaṇḍa was written, or rather compiled, by the Brahmā-

5. Krishna with his concubines

📚Vishnu Purana 5.13.55-61📚
The Gopīs repeatedly exclaimed, "Bravo, Kṛṣṇa!" to his song. When leading, they followed him; when returning, they encountered him; and, whether he went forwards or backwards, they ever attended on his steps. Whilst frolicking thus with the Gopīs, they considered every instant without him a myriad of years; and, prohibited in vain by husbands, fathers, brothers, they went forth at night to sport with Kṛṣṇa, the object of their affection."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.33.16-17📚
In this way Lord Krsna, the original Lord Närãyana, master of the goddess of fortune, took pleasure in the company of the young women of Vraja by embracing them, caressing them and glancing lovingly at them as He smiled His broad, playful smiles. It was just as if a child were playing with his own reflection.- Their senses overwhelmed by the joy of having His physical association, the gopis could not prevent their hair, their dresses and the cloths covering their breasts from becoming disheveled. Their garlands and ornaments scattered, O hero of the Kuru dynasty."

Śrī Kṛṣṇa went with the gopīs to the bank of the Yamunā, where the sand was cooling and the wind, enlivened by the river's waves, bore the fragrance of lotuses. There Kṛṣṇa threw His arms around the gopīs and embraced them. He aroused Cupid in the beautiful young ladies of Vraja by touching their hands, hair, thighs, belts and breasts, by playfully scratching them with His fingernails, and also by joking with them, glancing at them and laughing with them. In this way the Lord enjoyed His pastimes."

📚Skanda Purana 2.3.4.17📚
With the tip of his nail with which he had pierced the neck of hyena, he pinched the breasts of the cowherd lasses. He has been sportingly given many forms by young women. Let this Śeṣa (?) be for (i.e. bring about) calmness and peace."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.3.21📚
The Lord enjoyed His pastimes, both in this world and in other worlds [higher planets], specifically in the association of the Yadu dynasty. At leisure hours offered by night, He enjoyed the friendship of conjugal love with women."

Certainly Kṛṣṇa sat down here with His girlfriend to arrange

Her hair. The lusty boy must have made a crown for that lusty girl out of the flowers He had collected. [Śukadeva Gosvāmī continued:] Lord Kṛṣṇa enjoyed with that gopī, although He enjoys only within, being self-satisfied and complete in Himself. Thus by contrast He showed the wretchedness of ordinary lusty men and hardhearted women."

📚Vishnu Purana 5.13📚
But Kṛṣṇa, observing the clear sky bright with the autumnal moon, and the air perfumed with the fragrance of the wild water-lily, in whose buds the clustering bees were murmuring their songs, felt inclined to join with the Gopīs in sport."

When the Lord moved forward, the Gopis followed him behind; when he turned back, they came in front. Thus, moving with him in direct and reverse motion, they gracefully accompanied Shri Hari. Engaged in such divine Rasa play with the Gopis, every moment of separation from him felt like millions of years for them.Those Rasa-enchanted Gopis, despite being restrained by their husbands, parents, and brothers, still went out at night to enjoy pastimes with Shyamsundar in the forest.Even Shri Madhusudan, the destroyer of enemies and unfathomable soul, joyfully engaged in loving pastimes with them during the nights, honoring his youthful form.That all-pervading Lord Krishna was present within the Gopis, their husbands, and all living beings, just as air pervades everywhere as the soul of all.Just as space, fire, earth, water, air, and the self exist within all beings, in the same way, he too is immanently present in all elements of creation.

"O Parīkṣit! The fortune of the Gopīs surpasses even that of Goddess Lakṣmī.
Having attained the Supreme Beloved — Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the one who is the most cherished by even Lakṣmī herself — the Gopīs began to sing and joyfully sport with Him. Śrī Kṛṣṇa embraced them with His mighty arms, and in that moment, their beauty became divine and unparalleled.
(Verse 15)

Their ears were adorned with lotus-shaped earrings, and curly locks of hair gently hung down over their cheeks. Beads of sweat shimmered on their glowing faces, enhancing their charm. As they danced with Lord Kṛṣṇa in the Rāsa-maṇḍala (circle of divine dance), their bangles and anklets jingled rhythmically. Even the black bees harmonized with their melodies, humming in sync with the musical rhythm. The flowers woven into their braids and hair buns kept falling gracefully as they danced.

(Verse 16)

O Parīkṣit! Just as a small, innocent child plays joyfully with its own shadow, in the same pure and detached manner — Rāma's beloved, Lord Kṛṣṇa — sometimes drew the Gopīs close to His heart and at other times touched their limbs with His hands."

Accurate translation of Srimad Bhagavatam 10.29.45-46

After this, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa arrived with the Gopīs at the sacred bank of the Yamunā River, which sparkled with sand as white and fragrant as camphor. That delightful riverbank was cooled by the gentle waves of Yamunā's flowing waters and perfumed with the natural fragrance of the blooming kumudinī (water lilies). The soothing breeze, scented and refreshing, served them like a celestial attendant. On that blissful shore, the Lord joyfully played with the Gopīs.
(Verse 45)

Stretching out His hands, embracing them, pressing their hands affectionately, touching their braids, thighs, waistbands (nīvī), and bosoms — engaging in playful gestures, gently marking them with His nails, exchanging glances filled with loving mischief, and smiling sweetly — through all these tender, sportive acts, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa stirred the divine rasa (essence) of love within the Gopīs, kindling their supremely radiant feelings of transcendental affection. Thus, through divine play, He brought them immense joy."

Accurate translation of Srimad Bhagvatam 3.3.21

मधुर मुसकान, स्नेहमयी चितवन, सुधामयी वाणी, निर्मल चरित्र तथा समस्त शोभा और सुन्दरताके निवास अपने श्रीविग्रहसे लोक-परलोक और विशेषतया यादवोंको आनन्दित किया तथा रात्रिमें अपनी प्रियाओंके साथ क्षणिक अनुरागयुक्त होकर समयोचित विहार किया और इस प्रकार उन्हें भी सुख दिया ॥ २०-२१ ॥

and His divine form — the very abode of all beauty and auspiciousness —
Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa brought joy to both this world and the next, especially delighting the Yādavas.

During the night, He engaged in timely, gentle pastimes with His beloveds, their hearts momentarily filled with tender affection.
In this way, He bestowed joy upon them as well."

"No doubt — right here, the Lord of Love must have lifted His beloved onto His shoulders.
(Verse 32)

Look, look! Over here, the supremely loving Vrajavallabha (Beloved of Vraja) must have gently helped His beloved down to pick flowers. And here — the dearest Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself picked flowers for her.
Due to stretching high again and again to pluck them,
His toes sank deep into the earth — there's no trace of His heels!
(Verse 33)

Like a passionate lover, the supreme beloved Śrī Kṛṣṇa has arranged His beloved's hair right at this spot.
See — He must have been sitting here to lovingly weave the handpicked flowers into her braid."

पीड़ा को दूर करने के लिये अवतीर्ण हुये हो ? हे आर्तबन्धो ! इसलिये अपने हस्तकमल हम किंकरियों के स्तनों और सिरों पर रखिए ॥४१॥ योगेश्वर भगवान् की इस तरह उन गोपियों का करुणक्रन्दन सुनकर दया आ गई और अपने आप में ही रमण करते हुये भी वे हँसकर गोपियों को रमण कराने लगे ॥४३॥ बाहु फैलाना, लिपटना, नखें लगाना, हाथ, अलक, जंघा, नीवी (कमर के कपड़े की गांठ) और स्तनों को छूना, हँसी मसखरी, नखच्छेद देना, क्रीड़ा, कटाक्ष और मन्द मुस्कान आदि से कामोद्दीपन करते हुये भगवान् गोपियों को रमण कराने लगे ॥४६॥ इस प्रकार महात्मा कृष्ण जी से मान पाकर वे गोपियें अपने आपको भूमण्डल में सर्वाधिक सुन्दरी समझने लगीं ॥४७॥ भगवान् इनके इस सौभाग्य मद और मान को नष्ट करके कृपाभाव दिखाने के लिये तत्काल वहीं अन्तर्धान हो गये ॥ ४८ ॥ (अ) [तब विरहकातर गोपियें रो रो कर कहने लगीं कि—] हे भगवान् ! आप निश्चित ही किसी गोपी के पुत्र नहीं हैं बल्कि समस्त प्राणियों के अन्तरात्मा हैं । हे प्यारे कृष्ण ! आप ही ब्रह्मा जी की प्रार्थना से इस विश्व की रक्षा के लिये सात्वत कुल में अवतीर्ण हुए हो ॥ ४९ ॥ हे भगवन् ! आपके—शरणागत प्राणियों के पापों को दूर करने वाले लक्ष्मी के घर होते हुये भी पतिव्रता गौओं के पीछे भागने वाले और विषधर कालीय सर्प के क्रूर फणों पर नृत्य करने वाले जो चरण कमल हैं उन्हें हमारी कुचकों पर रखकर कामदेव को विनष्ट कर डालिये ॥७॥ (ब) इस तरह गोपियें गाती हुई और अनेक प्रकार के प्रलाप करती हुईं भगवान् के दर्शनों की इच्छा से ऊँची आवाज में रोने लगीं ॥१॥ तब उन सब के बीच में मन्द २ मुस्काते हुये साक्षात् कामदेव को भी लजाने वाले भगवान् आविर्भूत हुये । जो पीताम्बर पहिने और कंठ में माला धारण किये हुये थे ॥ २ ॥ (स) तब वहाँ भगवान् ने अपनी परम भक्त सुन्दरियों गोपियों के हाथों में हाथ डालकर रासक्रीड़ा

हमने उक्त लीला का बार बार मनन करके यह जो अभिप्राय समझा है, पाठकों के लाभार्थ हम उसे यहां प्रकट कर देते हैं । हम यह बात पोद्दे गर्गमाहा सिद्ध कर चुके हैं कि व्रज के समस्त गोप और

गोपियें देवताओं के आंशिक अवतार थे, परन्तु मानव-स्थूल-शरीर की उपाधि से वे अपने देवत्व को भूले हुये थे । श्री भगवान् ने जिस समय रासक्रीड़ा का अभिनय करना चाहा तो वंशी में कामबीज 'क्लीं' मन्त्र का निनाद किया जिससे स्वीभावापन्न दिव्य आत्माएं जग उठीं और वे भगवान् के निकट आ पहुँचीं । यह प्रसङ्ग श्रीमद्भा० (१०।२६।३) के—

'जगौ 'कलं' वामदृशां मनोहरम्'—

—पद से व्यक्त किया है। उक्त पद में—'कलं'—क्लीं = कामबीज का निदर्शक है और 'वामदृशां मनोहरम्' का अभिप्राय—स्त्रीभावापन्न दिव्य आत्माओं पर ही उसका प्रभाव पड़ सकता था—यह बताने के लिए प्रयुक्त हुआ है। इसीलिये वंशी का शब्द सुनकर गोपियें ही भगवान् के निकट आई थीं।

भगवान् ने यह जानने के लिये कि—'उक्त दिव्यात्माओं को अपने वैभव का कुछ स्मरण है—या स्थूल शरीर की उपाधि से वह सर्वथा विस्मृत हो गया उनको वापिस लौट जाने का उपदेश दिया। जिसके उत्तर में गोपियों ने स्पष्ट शब्दों में बतला दिया कि 'हम तो समस्त विषयों को छोड़ कर शरणागत भक्त हैं और मोक्ष की इच्छा से यहां आई हैं' आप ही आदिपुरुष और सबके अन्तरात्मा हो...(यह भाव १० । २६ । ३१-३२) में 'संत्यज्य सर्वविषयान्'—'नाथ—आदिपुरुष' और 'मुमुक्षून्' आदि शब्दों द्वारा अभिव्यक्त किया गया है। जब गोपियों की उक्तियों से भगवान् ने अच्छी तरह जान लिया कि ये सब आत्माएं मेरी वंशी के निनाद से प्रबुद्ध हो गई हैं और इनको अब वैभव का पूरा ज्ञान है तब भगवान् ने उनका विशुद्ध प्रेम और रासक्रीड़ा की अभिलाषा जानकर अपनी योगमाया के प्रभाव से उनके दो दो स्वरूप बनाए। उनमें से पहिले जो कि पांचभौतिक स्थूल शरीरावच्छिन्न स्वरूप थे उन्हें वापिस उन उन के घर में पहुंचा दिया, जिससे गोप

ग्वालों में अपनी २ माता, पत्नी आदि को घर में न देखकर किसी प्रकार की बेचैनी न हो ? और दूसरे योगमायानिर्मित दिव्यात्मापन्न स्वरूपों को वन में ही रहने दिया। इसके बाद जो भी लीला हुई है वह योगमायानिर्मित भगवान् के अपने ही स्वरूपों के साथ हुई है। व्यास जी ने उक्त रहस्य का संकेत करने के लिये मूलग्रन्थ में ही निम्नलिखित पदों का उल्लेख किया है। यथा—

(क) मन्यमानाः स्वपार्श्वस्थान् स्वान्स्वान्दारान्व्रजौकसः ।
(श्री० भा० १० । ३३ । ३८)

(ख) यथार्भकः स्वप्रतिबिम्बविभ्रमः ।
(श्री० भा० १० । ३३ । १७)

(ग) कृत्वा तावन्तमात्मानं यावतीर्गोपयोषितः ।
(श्री० भा० १० । ३३ । २०)

(घ) पुरुषः शक्तिभिर्यथा । (श्री० भा० । १० । ३२ । १०)

अर्थात्—(क) व्रजनिवासियों ने अपनी कुटुम्बिनियों को अपने २ पास माना [अर्थात्—भगवान् की माया से पांचभौतिक स्थूल शरीरावच्छिन्न गोपियें नित्य की तरह विद्यमान रहीं।] (ख) जैसे बालक अपनी परछाईं से खेल करता है [इसी तरह भगवान् ने अपनी योगमाया के निर्माण की हुई दिव्यात्मापन्न गोपियों से रासक्रीड़ा की।] (ग) भगवान् ने अपने उतने ही रूप बना लिये जितनी कि गोपियें थीं। (घ) ब्रह्म जिस तरह अपनी माया शक्तियों से विनोद किया करता है उसी तरह भगवान् ने गोपियों से रासक्रीड़ा की।

उपर्युक्त प्रमाणों से यह प्रमाणित होता है कि जिस तरह ब्रह्मा की द्वारा वत्स और गोप चुराए जाने पर भगवान् ने अपनी योगमाया से उतने और वैसे ही ग्वाले तथा बछड़े बनाकर सर्वत्र काम जारी रखा था

प्रायः देखा जाता है कि जब जिस अंशावतार का कार्य समाप्त हो जाया करता है तो भगवान् किसी बहाने से उसकी वह दिव्य शक्ति को छीन लिया करते हैं, जैसे रामावतार में शिवधनुर्भंग हो जाने के पश्चात् परशुराम जी की अवतारी शक्ति भगवान् रामचन्द्र जी में समा गई थी, तथा भगवान् कृष्ण जी के लीलासंवरण के पश्चात् वीरशिरोमणि अर्जुन साधारण भिल्लों ग्वालों से पराजित हो गया था अर्थात्—नारायणावतार श्रीकृष्ण के तिरोहित होते ही नरावतार अर्जुन भी अपनी उस अपूर्व शक्ति से हीन हो गया था। सो इसी तरह सब देवता भी श्री ब्रह्मा जी की आज्ञानुसार केवल भगवान् कृष्ण की प्रसन्नता के लिये ही अपने २ अंशों से व्रजभूमि में अवतीर्ण हुए थे। जब भगवान् गोकुल वृन्दावन का कार्य प्रायः समाप्त कर चुके और इस दिन के बाद कंस विध्वंसादि का अवसर सामने दिखने लगा तो भगवान् को उन देवांशभूत गोप और गोपियों का व्रज में ठहरना अनावश्यक जान पड़ा अतः भगवान् ने अपने बालसखा गोपों को तो 'ब्रह्मवत्सहरण' लीला के बहाने वापिस ब्रह्मलोक को भेज दिया था और नकली गोप घर में रख दिये थे अर्थात् सब देवता तो इस तरह अपना कार्य समाप्त हो जाने पर पुनः अपने असली पद पर प्रतिष्ठित हो चुके थे और व्रज में नकली ग्वाले रह गये थे। शेष रही थीं—श्रोतीभूत देवाङ्गनायें—सो उन्हें भी भगवान् ने 'रासलीला' के बहाने वंशी के इशारे से सब कुछ समझा कर अपने पास बुला लिया और उनके स्थान में नकली गोपियों

को घर भेज दिया। इस तरह अपनी बाल लीला की समाप्ति के साथ भगवान् ने देवांशभूत गोपियों के अवतार कार्य का उपसंहार कर डाला था।

पूर्णकाम परमात्मा की मायाव्यक्ता से सृष्टि की उत्पत्ति, पालन और संहार आदि करने की क्या आवश्यकता है और सृष्टि-उत्पादक-विधायक रूप 'पूर्णकामता' विरुद्ध ईश्वरेच्छा का क्या अभिप्राय है ? इस जिज्ञासा का उत्तर वेद में इस प्रकार दिया है कि—

न तस्य कार्यं करणं च विद्यते ।
स्वाभाविकी ज्ञानबलक्रिया च ॥ (श्वेताश्वतर ६।८)

अर्थात्—सृष्टि का उत्पादन और विनाश आदि करने में ईश्वर का कोई खास प्रयोजन नहीं है किन्तु यह उसकी स्वाभाविक चेष्टा है।

यहां (वेद में) यह उत्तर दिया गया है कि ईश्वर का स्वाभाविक कार्य 'पूर्णकामता' का बाधक नहीं हो सकता। श्रीमद्भागवत में भी परीक्षित का यही प्रश्न था कि भगवान् को आप्तकाम होते हुये भी [illegible] से अनेक रूप बनाकर खेल करने की क्या आवश्यकता थी ? जिसका वेदानुमोदित यही उत्तर दिया गया है कि ईश्वरावतारों का विनोदार्थ भी [illegible] करना स्वाभाविक है अतएव वह पूर्णकामता का बाधक नहीं हो सकता। जिस प्रकार परमात्मा के लिये स्वेच्छा से उत्पादित सृष्टि की स्थितिलयादि बन्धन के कारण नहीं, इसी प्रकार एतदवतारों के लिये स्वेच्छा से किये हुये क्रीडादि भी बन्धन नहीं हो सकते। यह है परीक्षित के प्रश्न और शुकदेव जी के उत्तर का समन्वय।

(d) Knowing that the nights of the autumn season were full of blooming jasmine, the Lord thought of playing with the shelter of his Yogamaya. ॥1॥ He played the Kaninadini flute which attracts the hearts of women. ॥3॥ (On hearing this, the women of Braja) All the enchanted Gopis whose souls had been stolen by Krishna did move away even after being stopped by their husbands, fathers, brothers and relatives. The Gopis who were confined in their houses who did not get time to go out due to their love for the Lord, immediately left their virtuous bodies and became free. ॥6॥11॥ The eloquent Lord, knowing that the women of Braj had come to Him, said in heart-pleasing words, ॥17॥ O Braj beauties! It is a dark night and many dreadful creatures live in this forest, therefore all of you should return to Braj. No woman should stay here. ॥16॥ Because serving the husband with pure feelings is the ultimate duty of women. ॥24॥ And the kind of love and devotion that is generated in me by listening, watching, meditating and singing, does not happen by staying close. Therefore, return to your homes immediately.

It is not appropriate to speak harsh words to us We are your devotees who have left all the worldly pleasures and have come to your feet for shelter, so do not rebuke us. Rather, just as the Supreme Soul, the Supreme Being, keeps the seekers of liberation under His protection, similarly, you also take us under your protection. ॥31॥ You are certainly the loving soul pervading all the embodied beings. ॥32॥ The fire of lust that is burning in our hearts by seeing you and hearing the sound of your loving flute, please quench it by watering it with the flow of your love. Otherwise, dear Krishna! We all, burnt by the flames of this fire of separation, will merge (die) here at your feet while meditating on you. ॥ 35॥ You are undoubtedly the protector of the gods, the Supreme Being, and you have incarnated to remove the pain of the people of Braj. Oh dear ones! Therefore, please place Your lotus hands on the breasts and heads of us Kikri girls. II 41II Hearing the pitiful cries of the Gopis, the Lord Yogeshwara felt pity and while He was engaged in His own pleasure, smilingly, He began to make the Gopis enjoy His pleasure. II43II Stretching His arms, embracing them, touching their hands, hair, thighs, Nivi (knot of the waist cloth) and breasts, laughing, joking, pinching their nails, caressing, taunting and smiling, etc., arousing them with such grace and sensuality, the Lord began to make the Gopis enjoy His pleasure. 46. Having thus gained respect from the great soul Krishna, the Gopis began to consider themselves the most beautiful women on earth. II47II To destroy their pride and arrogance of good fortune and to show His mercy, the Lord immediately disappeared from there. 48.न खलु गोषिकानन्दनो भवा-,नखिलदेहिनामन्तरात्मदृक् ।। विखनसाथितो विश्वगुप्तये, सख ! उदेयिवान्सात्वतां कुले ।। ४ ।। प्रणतदेहिनां पापकर्शनं, तृणचरानुगं श्रीनिकेतनम् ।।फणिफणार्पितं ते पदाम्बुजं, कृरणु कुचेषु नः कृन्धि हृच्छयम् ।।७।।(श्रीमद्भागवत १० । ३१।४)

Then the lovelorn Gopis started weeping and saying, O Lord! You are definitely not the son of any Gopi but the conscience of all living beings. O dear Krishna! You have incarnated n on the prayers of Lord Brahma to protect this world. 46. O Lord! You are the lotus feet which remove the sins of those who surrender to you, who despite being the husband of Lakshmi run after cows due to devotion and dance on the cruel hoods of the poisonous Kaliya serpent, place them on our shoulders and destroy Kamadev. 7.

The most important part and understanding the real meaning of Rasleela

For the benefit of the readers, we are revealing the meaning of the above mentioned Leela as we have understood it after reciting it repeatedly. We have already proved with evidence that all the gopas and the hermits of Braj were were partial incarnations of the Devas , but they had forgotten their divinity due to the status of human-physical bodies. So when the Lord wanted to perform the Raas Leela, he played the Kaambeej mantra 'Kleem' on the flute, due to which the divine souls with feminine feelings awoke and came near the Lord. This secret is given in Shrimadbhaga (10.26.3) – 'जगौ 'कलं' वामदृशां मनोहरम्' –

It is expressed in a verse. In the said verse 'Kalam' indicates the seed of love and 'Vaamdrisham Manoharam' means that it could have its effect only on the divine souls having feminine feelings. That is why only the gopis came near the Lord on hearing the sound of the flute.

In order to know whether the above mentioned divine souls remember their divinity or have forgotten it completely due to the status of the gross body, Krishna advised them to return. In reply to which the gopis clearly told that 'we are surrendered devotees leaving all worldly pleasures and have come here with the desire of salvation' You are also the original person and the inner soul of all… (This Bhaav 10.26.31-32) has been expressed by the words like 'Santyajya Sarvavishiyan' – 'Bhakt – Original person' and 'Mumukshu' etc. When Krishna understood well from the words of the gopis that all these souls have been enlightened by the sound of my flute and now they have full knowledge of divinity, then knowing their pure love and desire for Raas Leela, Krishna created two forms of them with the effect of his Yogamaya. The first ones who were of the five elements were sent back to their respective homes so that the cowherds may not feel uneasy seeing their mother, wife etc. not at home.

And the other divine soul-like forms created by Yogamaya were allowed to stay at home. After this, whatever Leela happened, it happened with the God's own forms created by Yogamaya. Vyas has mentioned the following words in the original text itself to indicate the above mentioned secret – as – (क) मन्यमानाः स्वपार्श्वस्थान् स्वान्स्वान्दरान्ब्रजौकसः । (थी० भा० १० । ३३।३८) – a) The residents of Braj considered their family members to be with them [meaning – due to the illusion of Krishna the gopis who were of the five elements and had physical bodies remained present as usual . (ख) यथार्भकः स्वप्रतिविम्वविभ्रमः ।

Just like Brahm plays with his magical powers, in the same way Krishna played Raas Leela with the Gopis.

From the above mentioned evidences, it can be seen that just as when Brahma Ji stole the calves and cowherds, Krishna created the same number of cowherds and calves through his Yogmaya and continued the same work. This secret could not be known to anyone even by hearsay. Similarly, during the Raasleela also, the Lord called the divine soul-endowed and divine body-bound Gopis to his Raasleela in order to free them and give them salvation and sent the fake Gopis back to Braj to keep this secret hidden... is often seen that when the work of an incarnation is over, Shri Hari snatches away his divine power on some pretext, like in Rama avatar, after Shiva's Dhanush was broken, the incarnational power of Shri Parashuram ji was absorbed in Lord Ramchandra ji, and after the Leelasamvaran of Lord Krishna ji, Veershiro-Mani Arjun was defeated by ordinary unarmed cowherds, that is – after the departure of Narayan avatar Shri Krishna, Naravatar Arjun also became devoid of his unique power.

So in the same way, all the Devas also incarnated in Braj Bhoomi with their parts only for the happiness of Lord Krishna as per the order of Shri Brahma ji. When Krishna had almost finished the work of Gokul Vrindavan and after ten days the opportunity of destruction of Kansa was visible, then krishna felt that the stay of those gopas and gopis who were the incarnations of Devas in Braj was unnecessary. So Krishna sent his childhood friend gopas back to Brahmaloka on the pretext of 'Brahmavatsahan' leela and kept fake gopas at home, that is, all the Devas were reinstated in their real positions after their work was over and fake cowherds were left in Vraj. What remained were the gopi-based celestial maidens – so Krishna called them to himself on the pretext of 'Raasleela' by explaining everything with the gesture of the flute and in their place fake gopis were kept . He sent them home. In this way, with the end of his childhood leela, Krishna had concluded the period of the incarnation of the gopis who were the incarnations of the deities.

When it was confirmed in the above manner that Krishna did not touch any other woman in Raasleela but played with his own divine forms created by his Yogmaya, then naturally the curiosity arises that in such a situation what will be the relevance of the above question of Parikshit? So, this is also discussed. Parikshit asks that – Krishna has incarnated for the establishment of Dharma and destruction of Adharma, but Raasleela has no connection with the work of establishment of Dharma and destruction of Adharma, i.e. – this is only Babkrida = mere entertainment. So, what is the need to play with the Aptakama 'Purnakama' God by making His many forms? – 'Pardarabhimarshan' of God just for the sake of fun (- (Parasya Paramatmano Dararupinyo or Maya Shaktyasta Sambhimarshanam Baladashrayanmiti 'Brihadbhaktatoshini' Commentator:) 'Pratip' of Aptakamata – is unfavorable – what is the meaning of this? The essence of Parikshit's question is this. Rasleela is Krishna's childhood entertainment, but what was the need of Mayashrayan for the sake of fun?

If Maya-shrayan was done for establishment of Dharma and destruction of Adharma, then it would have been in ccordance with the Dharma of incarnation, but what is the meaning of creating many forms for fun? In answer to this question, Shukdev Ji explained that Brahm taking shelter of Yog-Maya only for destruction is definitely a violation of the Dharma of incarnation in the form of establishment of Dharma and destruction of Adharma, but it has been seen that the incarnations of God do this only for fun, which is not faulty. What is the need for the Paramatma to take shelter of Maya and create, maintain and destroy the universe, etc. and what is the meaning of God's will against 'full-favour' in the form of creation-destruction of the universe? The answer to this question has been given in the Vedas in this way that– न तस्य कार्य करणं च विद्यते । स्वाभाविकी ज्ञानबलक्रिया च ।। (श्वेताश्वतर ६।८) – That is, God has no specific purpose in creating and destroying the universe, but this is his natural effort.

Here (in the Vedas) it is answered that God's natural work cannot be an obstacle to 'purna-kamata'. In Shrimad Bhagwat also, Parikshit had the same question that despite being completely आप्तकाम, what was the need for God to take shelter of Yog-maya and play by taking many forms? To which the Veda-approved answer is given that it is natural for God's incarnations to take shelter of Maya for fun, and hence it cannot be an obstacle to 'purna-kamata'. Just as for God, the existence of the universe created by his own will cannot be a bondage, similarly, for the incarnations of God, the games done by his own cannot be a bondage. This is the coordination of Parikshit's question and Shukdev's answer.

महर्षि वेदव्यास जी ने ब्रह्मवैवर्त पुराण (ब्रहाखण्ड अध्याय ४) में रासलीला का सम्बन्ध सृष्टि रचना के आरम्भिक रहस्यों से भी सम्बद्ध किया है। श्रीकृष्ण जी को केन्द्रीभूत ब्रह्मा और गोगियों को प्रकृति की विभिन्न शक्तियों की प्रतिमूर्ति मानकर इनके संघर्ष से ही सृष्टि का प्रादुर्भाव माना है। हम पीछे इसी अध्याय में 'जल में बीर्यस्खलन' शीर्षक के नीचे – उक्त रूपक पर कुछ पंक्तियें लिख आये हैं अतः पिष्टपेषण करना व्यर्थ है। केवल एतावन्मात्र संकेत करना अनावश्यक न होगा जब स्वयं पुराणकर्ता व्यास जी महाराज ही स्थानान्तर में उक्त लीला का रूपक प्रायः अर्थ लगाते हैं तब सर्वसाधारण को भी अपनी रुचि के अनुसार आध्यात्मिक आदि सुसम्बद्ध तात्पर्थों के मनन करने में क्या हर्ज ही सकता है ?

Maharishi Ved Vyas Ji has also related the Raas Leela to the initial mysteries of the creation of the universe . Considering Shri Krishna Ji as the Param Brahm and the Gopis as the image of various powers of Prakriti , the universe is believed to have originated from their conflict that is Rasleela

For the benefit of the readers, we are revealing the meaning of the above mentioned Leela as we have understood it after reciting it repeatedly. We have already proved with evidence that all the gopas and the hermits of Braj were were partial incarnations of the Devas , but they had forgotten their divinity due to the status of human-physical bodies. So when the Lord wanted to perform the Raas Leela, he played the Kaambeej mantra 'Kleem' on the flute, due to which the divine souls with feminine feelings awoke and came near the Lord. This secret is given in Shrimadbhaga (10.26.3) - 'जगौ 'कलं' वामदृशां मनोहरम्' -
It is expressed in a verse. In the said verse 'Kalam' indicates the seed of love and 'Vaamdrisham Manoharam' means that it could have its effect only on the divine souls having feminine feelings. That is why only the gopis came near the Lord on hearing the sound of the flute.

In order to know whether the above mentioned divine souls remember their divinity or have forgotten it completely due to the status of the gross body, Krishna advised them to return. In reply to which the gopis clearly told that 'we are surrendered devotees leaving all worldly pleasures and have come here with the desire of salvation' You are also the original person and the inner soul of all... (This Bhaav 10.26.31-32) has been expressed by the words like 'Santyajya Sarvavishiyan' - 'Bhakt - Original person' and 'Mumukshu' etc. When Krishna understood well from the words of the gopis that all these souls have been enlightened by the sound of my flute and now they have full knowledge of divinity, then knowing their pure love and desire for Raas Leela, Krishna created two forms of them with the effect of his Yogamaya. The first ones who were of the five elements were sent back to their respective homes so that the cowherds may not feel uneasy seeing their mother, wife etc. not at home.

And the other divine soul-like forms created by Yogamaya were allowed to stay at home. After this, whatever Leela happened, it happened with the God's own forms created by Yogamaya. Vyas has mentioned the following words in the original text itself to indicate the above mentioned secret - as - (क) मन्यमानाः स्वपार्श्वस्थान् स्वान्स्वान्दारान्व्रजौकसः । (श्री० भा० १० । ३३।३८) - a) The residents of Braj considered their family members to be with them [meaning - due to the illusion of Krishna the gopis who were of the five elements and had physical bodies remained present as usual . (ख) यथार्भकः स्वप्रतिबिम्बविभ्रमः । (श्री० भा० १० । ३३ । १७)- Just as a child plays with his shadow [in the same way the Lord played Raas Leela with the divine Gopis created by His Yogamaya].(ग) कृत्वा तावन्तमात्मानं यावतीर्व्रजयोषितः ।

Just like Brahm plays with his magical powers, in the same way Krishna played Raas Leela with the Gopis.
From the above mentioned evidences, it can be seen that just as when Brahma Ji stole the calves and cowherds, Krishna created the same number of cowherds and calves through his Yogmaya and continued the same work. This secret could not be known to anyone even by hearsay. Similarly, during the Raasleela also, the Lord called the divine soul-endowed and divine body-bound Gopis to his Raasleela in order to free them and give them salvation and sent the fake Gopis back to Braj to keep this secret hidden.It is often seen that when the work of an incarnation is over, Shri Hari snatches away his divine power on some pretext, like in Rama avatar, after Shiva's Dhanush was broken, the incarnational power of Shri Parashuram ji was absorbed in Lord Ramchandra ji, and after the Leelasamvaran of Lord Krishna ji, Veershiro-Mani Arjun was defeated by ordinary unarmed cowherds, that is - after the departure of Narayan avatar Shri Krishna, Naravatar Arjun also became devoid of his unique power.

So in the same way, all the Devas also incarnated in Braj Bhoomi with their parts only for the happiness of Lord Krishna as per the order of Shri Brahma ji. When Krishna had almost finished the work of Gokul Vrindavan and after ten days the opportunity of destruction of Kansa was visible, then krishna felt that the stay of those gopas and gopis who were the incarnations of Devas in Braj was unnecessary. So Krishna sent his childhood friend gopas back to Brahmaloka on the pretext of 'Brahmavatsahan' leela and kept fake gopas at home, that is, all the Devas were reinstated in their real positions after their work was over and fake cowherds were left in Vraj. What remained were the gopi-based celestial maidens - so Krishna called them to himself on the pretext of 'Raasleela' by explaining everything with the gesture of the flute and in their place fake gopis were kept . He sent them home. In this way, with the end of his childhood leela, Krishna had concluded the period of the incarnation of the gopis who were the incarnations of the deities.

When it was confirmed in the above manner that Krishna did not touch any other woman in Raasleela but played with his own divine forms created by his Yogmaya, then naturally the curiosity arises that in such a situation what will be the relevance of the above question of Parikshit? So, this is also discussed. Parikshit asks that - Krishna has incarnated for the establishment of Dharma and destruction of Adharma, but Raasleela has no connection with the work of establishment of Dharma and destruction of Adharma, i.e. - this is only Balkrida = mere entertainment. So, what is the need to play with the Aptakama 'Purnakama' God by making His many forms? - 'Pardarabhimarshan' of God just for the sake of fun (- (Parasya Paramatmano Dararupinyo or Maya Shaktyasta Sambhimarshanam Baladashrayanmiti 'Brihadbhaktatoshini' Commentator:) 'Pratip' of Aptakamata - is unfavorable - what is the meaning of this? The essence of Parikshit's question is this. Rasleela is Krishna's childhood entertainment, but what was the need of Mayashrayan for the sake of fun?

If Maya-shrayan was done for establishment of Dharma and destruction of Adharma, then it would have been in accordance with the Dharma of incarnation, but what is the meaning of creating many forms for fun? In answer to this question, Shukdev Ji explained that Brahm taking shelter of Yog-Maya only for destruction is definitely a violation of the Dharma of incarnation in the form of establishment of Dharma and destruction of Adharma, but it has been seen that the incarnations of God do this only for fun, which is not faulty. What is the need for the Paramatma to take shelter of Maya and create, maintain and destroy the universe, etc. and what is the meaning of God's will against 'full-favour' in the form of creation-destruction of the universe? The answer to this question has been given in the Vedas in this way that-- न तस्य कार्यं करणं च विद्यते । स्वाभाविकी ज्ञानबलक्रिया च ॥ (श्वेताश्वतर ६।८) – That is, God has no specific purpose in creating and destroying the universe, but this is his natural effort.

Here (in the Vedas) it is answered that God's natural work cannot be an obstacle to 'purna-kamata'. In Shrimad Bhagwat also, Parikshit had the same question that despite being completely आप्तकाम, what was the need for God to take shelter of Yog-maya and play by taking many forms? To which the Veda-approved answer is given that it is natural for God's incarnations to take shelter of Maya for fun, and hence it cannot be an obstacle to 'purna-kamata'. Just as for God, the existence of the universe created by his own will cannot be a bondage, similarly, for the incarnations of God, the games done by his own cannot be a bondage. This is the coordination of Parikshit's question and Shukdev's answer.

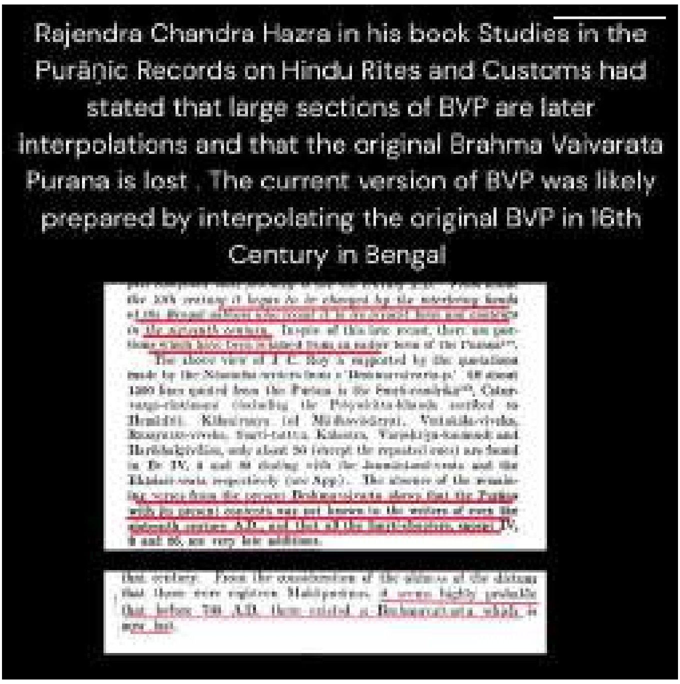
I will take his allegations on Brahma Vaivarata Purana and other Puranas together here

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. CONCLUSION

Moreover, he attempted to show from Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Brahma Purana, and Bhagavata Purana that Bhagwan Shree Krishna engaged in sexual relations with the Gopis. However, Such interpretation is not consistent with the descriptions found in the Mahabharata and Srimad Bhagavatam, which affirm that Bhagwan Shree Krishna does not possess a gross or subtle material human body. Being transcendental, He is beyond all material activities, including acts such as sexual intercourse.

Mahabharat Shanti Parva Adhaya 351 – Narayana does not have a gross Subtle Human like Material body Higher canonical texts such as the Mahabharata refer to Bhagwan Shree Krishna with epithets like Yogeshwara (Lord of Yoga and Senses) and Hrishikesha (Master of the Senses) and Suddhatma (a Pure Soul, free from all impurities, attachments, and worldly illusions who embodies absolute truth, divine consciousness, and eternal bliss, untouched by material limitations or Sexual or any form of impurities) , underscoring His supreme control over the mind and senses. These designations alone are sufficient to refute claims of Bhagwan Krishna's involvement in acts such as illicit sexual relations, which are fundamentally incompatible with His divinely transcendental nature as described in these authoritative scriptures.

Shree Krishna Uvach – "Attachment to women, gambling, fondness for hunting, and drinking Alchohol —these four kinds of indulgences, arising from desire, are said to be causes of suffering, due to which a man is ruined in terms of wealth and prosperity. 6. Krishna with his wives

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.90.10-11📚
Under the drenched clothing of the queens, their thighs and breasts would become visible. The flowers tied in their large braids would scatter as they sprayed water on their consort, and on the plea of trying to take away His syringe, they would embrace Him. By His touch their lusty feelings would increase, causing their faces to beam with smiles. Thus Lord Kṛṣṇa's queens shone with resplendent beauty. Lord Kṛṣṇa's flower garland would become smeared with kuṅkuma from their breasts, and His abundant locks of hair would become disheveled as a result of His absorption in the game. As the Lord repeatedly sprayed His young consorts and they sprayed Him in turn, He enjoyed Himself like the king of elephants enjoying in the company of his bevy of she-elephants."

📚Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 112.32-34 📚
The Brahmanas were served with food adoring Parvati at the same time. Thereafter in an auspicious time he married seven damsels named Kalindi, Satyabhama, Satya, Nagnijiti, Sati, Jambavati and Laksmana; several sons were born to them, ten sons and a daughter were born of each one of the queens."

Refutation-

He accused from Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.90.10-11

9. Śrī Krsna was being drenched with jets of waters discharged through syringes by his consorts who were laugh-ing all the while. He, in return, profusely sprinkled water on them and thus he sported with his spouses like Kubera, King of Yaksas, playing with Yaksa women.

10. Their thighs and breasts became prominent to view through their wet Saris (garments). While they were sprink-ling water on Krsna, they advanced to him on the pretext of snatching away the syringe from him and embraced him. Due to a thrill of passionate desire (at the touch of Krsna's person) their countenances beamed with great pleasure and they appeared brilliant and beautiful.
11. Śrī Kṛṣṇa got his garland (Vanamālā) tinged with saffron from the breasts of his consorts (while they embraced him). The knot of his locks of hair was loosened (during that amorous sport). Sprinkling and being sprinkled with water by his youthful wives, he sported with them like a king-elephant surrounded by she-elephants (spouting jets of water on him).

Whats the problem in this ? If Shree Krishna is spending time with his queens sporting and playing games together whats any problem here . Srimad Bhagvatam 10.61.4 says Shree Krishna lived amongst his queens without any sign of Lust

4. On the contrary, those sixteen thousand wives of Krsna failed to agitate his mind with those shafts of the god of love, and other enticements conveying erotic messages by the movement of their eye-brows charming with the sentiment ex-pressed by their smiles and stealthy side-glances.

As per Garga Samhita 6.17.34 all the 16000 queens of Shree Krishna were forms of Mahalakshmi the eternal consort of Lord Vishnu himself
Whenever in the past I incarnated in the world the goddess of fortune would also incarnate as My queen. This time she will incarnate as My sixteen-thousand queens.

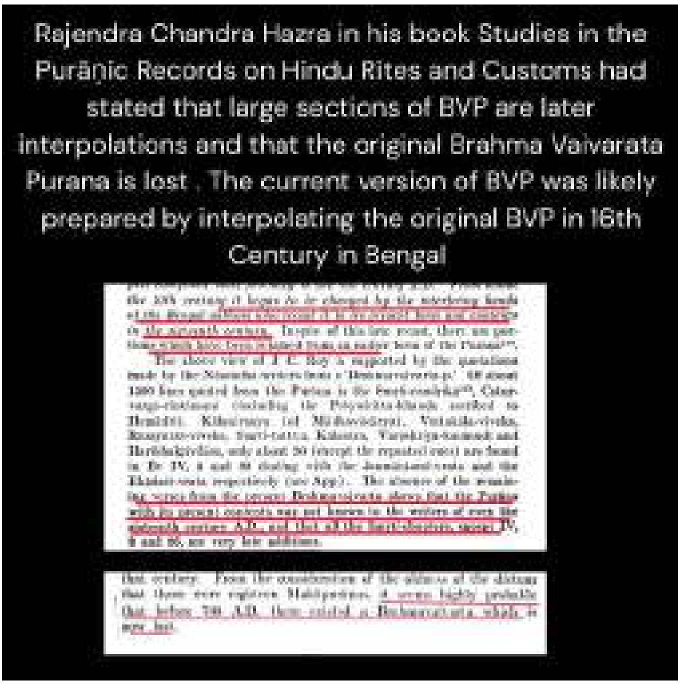
Regarding Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 112.32-34

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

7. Krishna drops his semen after looking at Rati (Goddess of Love)

📚Brahma Viavarta Purana Brahma Khanda 4.23-25📚
Thereafter because of the arrows of love, the semen of Lord Krsna also fell but he placed the same in the water that assembly. After a thousand years it emerged in the form of an egg. From that egg a gigantic universal form came out, which happens to be the base of the entire Universe. His single hair-pit could accommodate a complete universe. It is harder than the hardest and nothing else is bigger than it

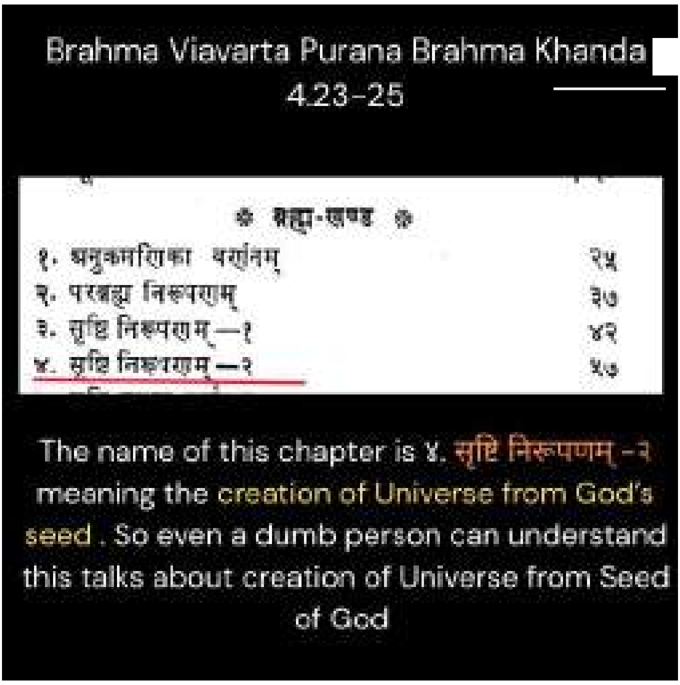
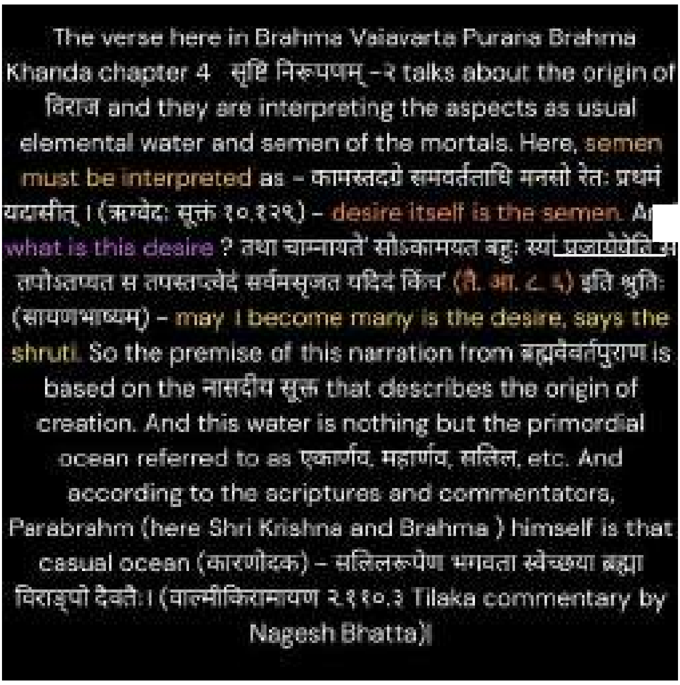
Brahma Viavarta Purana Brahma Khanda 4.23-25

The name of this chapter is ४. सृष्टि निरूपणम् -२ meaning the creation of Universe from God's seed . So even a dumb person can understand this talks about creation of Universe from Seed of God



The verse here in Brahma Vaiavarta Purana Brahma Khanda chapter 4 सृष्टि निरूपणम् -२ talks about the origin of विराज and they are interpreting the aspects as usual elemental water and semen of the mortals. Here, semen must be interpreted as – कामस्तदग्रे समवर्तताधि मनसो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत् । (ऋग्वेदः सूक्तं १०.१२९) – desire itself is the semen. And what is this desire ? तथा चाम्नायते' सोऽकामयत बहुः स्यां प्रजायेयेति स तपोऽतप्यत स तपस्तप्त्वेदं सर्वमसृजत यदिदं किंच' (तै. आ. ८. ६) इति श्रुतिः (सायणभाष्यम्) – may I become many is the desire, says the shruti. So the premise of this narration from ब्रह्मवैवर्तपुराण is based on the नासदीय सूक्त that describes the origin of creation. And this water is nothing but the primordial ocean referred to as एकार्णव, महार्णव, सलिल, etc. And according to the scriptures and commentators,

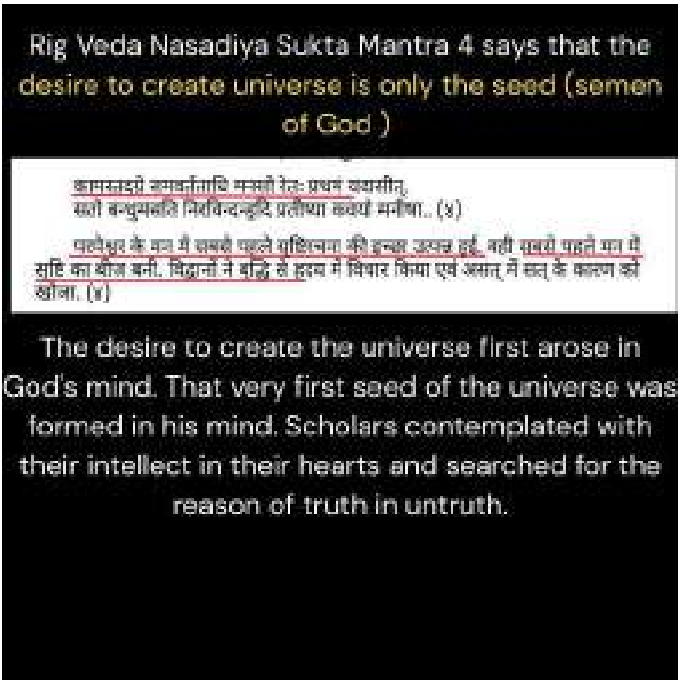
Parabrahm (here Shri Krishna and Brahma) himself is that casual ocean (कारणोदक) – सलिलरूपेण भगवता स्वेच्छया ब्रह्मा विराड्पो दैवतैः। (वाल्मीकिरामायण २.११०.३ Tilaka commentary by Nagesh Bhatta)I



Rig Veda Nasadiya Sukta Mantra 4 says that the desire to create universe is only the seed (semen of God)

परमेश्वर के मन में सबसे पहले सृष्टिरचना की इच्छा उत्पन्न हुई. वही सबसे पहले मन में सृष्टि का बीज बनी. विद्वानों ने बुद्धि से हृदय में विचार किया एवं असत् में सत् के कारण को खोजा. (४)

The desire to create the universe first arose in God's mind. That very first seed of the universe was formed in his mind. Scholars contemplated with their intellect in their hearts and searched for the reason of truth in untruth.



Acharya Sayana explained in his commentary on RIg Veda 10.129.4 as ननूक्तरीत्या यदीश्वरस्य पर्यालोचनं जगतः पुनरुत्पत्तौ कारणं तदेव किंनिबन्धनमित्यत आह कामस्तदग्र इति । "अग्रे अस्य विकारजातस्य सृष्टेः प्रागवस्थायां परमेश्वरस्य मनसि "कामः "समवर्तत सग्यगजायत । सिसृक्षा जातेत्यर्थः । ईश्वरस्य सिसृक्षा वा किंहेतुकेत्यत आह मनस इति । "मनसः अन्तःकरणस्य संबन्धि वासनाशेषेण मायायां विलीनेऽन्तःकरणे समवेतम् । सामान्यापेक्षमेकवचनम् । सर्वप्राण्यन्तःकरणेषु समवेतमित्यर्थः । एतेनात्मनो गुणाधारत्वं प्रत्याख्यातम् । तादृशं "रेतः भाविनः प्रपञ्चस्य बीजभूतं "प्रथमम् अतीते कल्पे प्राणिभिः कृतं पुण्यात्मकं कर्म "यत् यतः कारणात् सृष्टिसमये

Now, if according to the Nānūkta (interpretive method), we consider that the will or contemplation (paryālocanam) of the Lord (Īśvara) is the cause of the creation of the world, then one might ask: “What is the basis or cause of that will?”
To answer this, it is said: “Kāmaḥ tad agre” —
“Desire existed in the beginning.”

That is, before the manifestation of this entire world of modifications (vikāra-jāta), in the primordial state (prāg-avasthā), desire (kāmaḥ) arose in the mind (manas) of the Supreme Lord (Parameśvara). It means: the urge to create (sṛṣṭi-kāmanā) was born in Him.

Now, one might question: “What was the cause of this creative urge in the Lord?”
To this, it is answered: “From the mind” (manasaḥ).

That is, from the internal faculty (antaḥkaraṇa) — in which the latent impressions (vāsanās) were merged within Māyā — the mind took form. The word is singular (manasaḥ), though it refers to all minds collectively, indicating the general principle. Thus, it means that desire arose in the universal mind, merged in Māyā, before manifestation.

By this, the idea that the Ātman (Self) is the substratum of qualities (guṇas) is refuted.

Such a “desire” (kāmaḥ) becomes the seed (bīja) of the future projection of the universe — it is based upon the puṇya (virtuous) actions performed by beings in a previous cosmic cycle (kalpa). That karma (yat) becomes the cause (kāraṇāt) at the time of creation (sṛṣṭi-samaya).

This karma becomes bhūṣṇu — powerful, and vardhiṣṇu — ever-growing; that is, it becomes ripe and ready to bear fruit.

Therefore, due to this cause — the karmic impressions — the Lord (karma-adhyakṣaḥ, the supervisor of karma, and sarva-sākṣī, the witness of all) develops the desire to create. In His mind, the will to manifest arises.

Having formed this intention (sṛṣṭikāmanā), He contemplates on what to create — and then creates the entire universe.

This is also confirmed in the scripture (āmnāya):

(Taittirīya Āraṇyaka 8.6)
- “He desired: ‘May I become many, may I be born.’ He performed tapas (austerity), and having done so, He created all this — whatever exists."

Having thus understood this process, it is further supported by the experience of the wise (vidvat-anubhava), which acts as a further means of valid knowledge (pramāṇa) due to its grace (anugrahakatva).

Now, this entire world (jagat) — experienced now (idānīm anubhūyamānasya) — originates from sat (Being), and the wise seers (kavayaḥ) who are knowers of the three times (past, present, future) and who possess deep yogic insight (krānta-darśanāḥ) — they recognize in their hearts (hṛdi) by concentrated intellect (manīṣayā), that:

The bond or cause (bandhuḥ) of this current world is the collection of karmas performed by beings in previous cycles — karmas that remain even when the subtle cause (avyākṛta) — the unmanifest — exists in a dormant (asat) state distinct from the manifest (sat).

Thus, they discover (niravindan) — that is, extract and realize — the cause by deliberation (pratīṣya), by internal discrimination.

The term "asati sad-vilakṣaṇe avyākṛte kāraṇe niravindan" — means: "In the unmanifest cause (avyākṛta), which is distinct from the manifest (sat), they discern the source."

8. Krishna's intercourse with the hump-back lady

📚Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 72.56-69 📚

Instead of waking all the attendants of Kubja, lord woke her up alone and spoke to the chaste lady. Lord Krsna said, "O virtuous one, O beautiful one, wake up and let me enjoy the love-sport with you because in earlier birth you happened to be Surpanakha, the sister of Ravana. O damsel, during my incarnation as Rama you had performed the tapas for me. Influenced by those tapas I have taken to this form and have come to you as your beloved. Therefore, you serve me. Presently you enjoy all the pleasures with me and then proceed on to Goloka which destroys birth and death. Thus speaking lord Krsna embraced her and unrobing her, enjoyed her passionate advances. With a serene smile on her face, the passionate damsel felt shy at the first union but implanted a kiss on the lord. The lord took her in his lap like Laksmi. O Narada, the lord was well-versed in the art of making love and both of them did not rest during the physical union and they enjoyed the love-sport in various ways. Lord Krsna scratched her breasts and the pelvic region with the nails and also sucked her nectar-like lips. At the end of the night the lord implanted the semen in her womb after which the beautiful damsel fainted. In the lap of lord Krsna she lost the consciousness about day and night, heaven or earth, water or earth."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.48.6-10📚
Calling forward His beloved, who was anxious and shy at the prospect of this new contact, the Lord pulled her by her bangled hands onto the bed. Thus He enjoyed with that beautiful girl, whose only trace of piety was her having offered ointment to the Lord. Simply by smelling the fragrance of Krsna's lotus feet, Trivakrá cleansed away the burning lust Cupid had aroused in her breasts, chest and eyes. With her two arms she embraced between her breasts her lover, Sri Krsna, the personification of bliss, and thus she gave up her long-standing distress. Having thus gotten the hard-to-get Supreme Lord by the simple act of offering Him body ointment, unfortunate Trivakra submitted to that Lord of freedom the following request. [Trivakra said:] O beloved, please stay here with me for a few days more and enjoy. I cannot bear to give up Your association, O lotus- eyed one! Promising her the fulfilment of this lusty desire, considerate Krsna, Lord of all beings, paid Trivakra His respects and then returned with Uddhava to His own supremely opulent residence."

The correct meaning of Reme and Rati

स्थिति में यदि 'रति' और 'रमण' शब्द का अर्थ विषयानन्द किंवा व्यभिचार है तो राम का अर्थ व्यभिचार करना होगा परन्तु वस्तुतः राम शब्द का निर्वचन है- 'रमन्ते योगियो यस्मिन्' अर्थात् – योगीजन जिसमें 'रमण' करते हों, अथवा – आत्मानन्द का अनुभव करते हों वह ईश्वर ।

It need not be stated that the words rati, ramaṇa, ramya, ramaṇīya, Ramā, Rāmā, rātri, and Rāma are all derived from the verbal root "ram" (ram – to delight, to play).Now, if the words rati and ramaṇa were to mean only sensual pleasure or debauchery, then Rāma would also have to mean "one who indulges in debauchery." But in reality, the etymological explanation (nirvacana) of the word Rāma is: "ramante yogino yasmin" – "That in which the yogis find delight," or, "That in which they experience the bliss of the Self" — and that is none other than the Supreme Lord.

From a BrahmaDrushti

Lord Krishna was the embodiment of Brahman, and fulfilling the desires of surrendered devotees was the primary purpose of His incarnation. Kubja, a hunchbacked woman, had been cherishing the hope of embracing and meeting lim with all her heart for a long time. Although her love was not entirely pure, its exclusivity had matured to the point that it gave rise to an intense sense of absorption ("tanmayata") in her heart. Lord Krishna, being aware of this, sought to fulfill the desire of this absorbed devotee. He visited Kubja's home, accompanied by Uddhava.At Kubja's home, her manner of hospitality is described in the original text in detail, Kubja embraced the Lord and quenched her long-held longing. In return, the Lord, to entertain her heart, engaged in all pure acts of play and delight within the bounds of righteousness, leaving no effort spared. Kubja's desires were fulfilled, but unfortunately, she, being less fortunate, failed to take full advantage of this "Ganga come to her home." Instead of asking for liberation, she chose to remain in the world and sought trivial pleasures from the Lord.

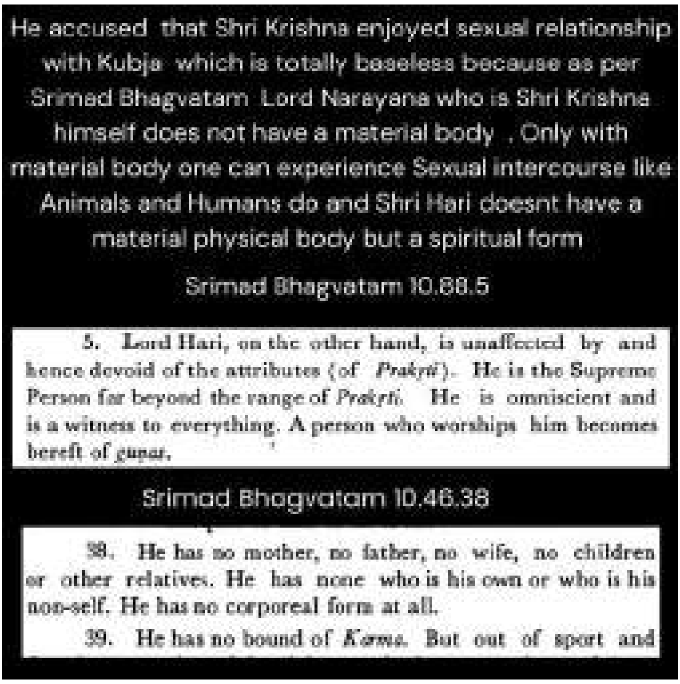
As per His principle of reciprocation, the Lord granted whatever she asked for. Hence, Kubja was granted her wish to remain in her worldly existence, leading Sage Shuka to remark that her decision was short-sighted. Lord Krishna's principle, as expressed in the Bhagavad Gita 4/11

("As people approach Me, I reciprocate with them accordingly.") - Bhagavad Gita 4/11

From the perspective of Brahman, this episode reflects the Lord's ideal of fulfilling the sentiments of His surrendered devotees. Understanding this, King Parikshit felt no need to ask further questions in the original narration.



He accused that Shri Krishna enjoyed sexual relationship with Kubja which is totally baseless because as per Srimad Bhagvatam Lord Narayana who is Shri Krishna himself does not have a material body . Only with material body one can experience Sexual intercourse like Animals and Humans do and Shri Hari doesnt have a material physical body but a spiritual form

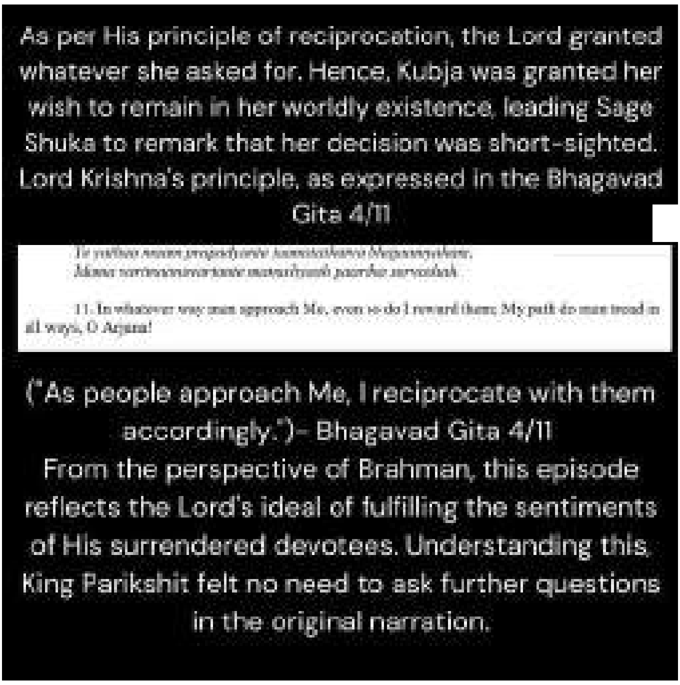
स्थिति में यदि 'रति' और 'रमण' शब्द का अर्थ विषयानन्द किंवा व्यभिचार है तो राम का अर्थ व्यभिचार करना होगा परन्तु वस्तुतः राम शब्द का निर्वचन है—'रमन्ते योगिनो यस्मिन्' अर्थात्—योगीजन जिसमें 'रमण' करते हों, अथवा—आत्मानन्द का अनुभव करते हों वह ईश्वर ।

It need not be stated that the words rati, ramaṇa, ramya, ramaṇīya, Ramā, Rāmā, rātri, and Rāma are all derived from the verbal root "ram" (ram – to delight, to play).Now, if the words rati and ramaṇa were to mean only sensual pleasure or debauchery, then Rāma would also have to mean "one who indulges in debauchery." But in reality, the etymological explanation (nirvacana) of the word Rāma is: "ramante yogino yasmin" – "That in which the yogis find delight," or, "That in which they experience the bliss of the Self" — and that is none other than the Supreme Lord.

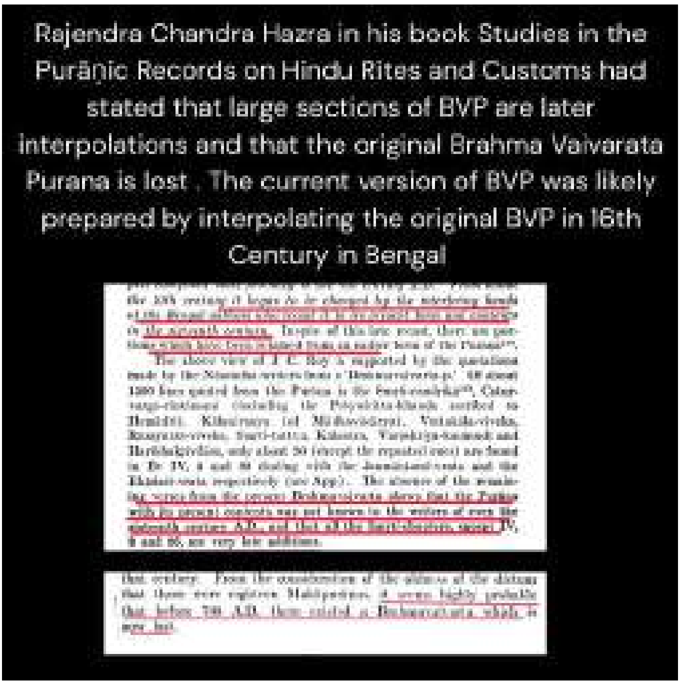
From a BrahmaDrushti

Lord Krishna was the embodiment of Brahman, and fulfilling the desires of surrendered devotees was the primary purpose of His incarnation. Kubja, a hunchbacked woman, had been cherishing the hope of embracing and meeting Him with all her heart for a long time. Although her love was not entirely pure, its exclusivity had matured to the point that it gave rise to an intense sense of absorption ("tanmayata") in her heart. Lord Krishna, being aware of this, sought to fulfill the desire of this absorbed devotee. He visited Kubja's home, accompanied by Uddhava.At Kubja's home, her manner of hospitality is described in the original text in detail. Kubja embraced the Lord and quenched her long-held longing. In return, the Lord, to entertain her heart, engaged in all pure acts of play and delight within the bounds of righteousness, leaving no effort spared. Kubja's desires were fulfilled, but unfortunately, she, being less fortunate, failed to take full advantage of this "Ganga come to her home." Instead of asking for liberation, she chose to remain in the world and sought trivial pleasures from the Lord.



Regarding Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 72.56-69

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

Allegations-

10. Krishna stole Gopis's garments

📚Shrimad Bhagavatham 10.22.9-17📚
Taking the girls' garments, He quickly climbed to the top of a kadamba tree. Then, as He laughed loudly and His companions also laughed, He addressed the girls jokingly. [Lord Krsna said:] My dear girls, you may each come here as you wish and take back your garments. I'm telling you the truth and am not joking with you, since I see you're fatigued from executing austere vows. I have never before spoken a lie, and these boys know it. Therefore, O slender-waisted girls, please come forward, either one by one or all together, and pick out your clothes. Seeing how Krsna was joking with them, the gopis became fully immersed in love for Him, and as they glanced at each other they began to laugh and joke among themselves, even in their embarrassment. But still they did not come out of the water. As Sri Govinda spoke to the gopis in this way, His joking words completely captivated their minds. Submerged up to their necks in the cold water, they began to shiver. Thus they addressed Him as follows. [The gopis said:] Dear Krsna, don't be unfair! We know that You are the respectable son of Nanda and that You are honored by everyone in Vraja. You are also very dear to us. Please give us back our clothes. We are shivering in the cold water. O Syamasundara, we are Your maidservants and must do whatever You say. But give us back our clothing. You know what the religious principles are, and if You don't give us our clothes we will have to tell the king. Please! The Supreme Personality of Godhead said: If you girls are actually My maidservants, and if you will really do what I say, then come here with your innocent smiles and let each girl pick out her clothes. If you don't do what I say, I won't give them back to you. And even if the king becomes angry, what can he do? Then, shivering from the painful cold, all the young girls rose up out of the water, covering their pubic area with their hands

पाठक दोनों स्वरूपों का मनन करके परिणाम निकालें कि वेद भगवान् किस प्रकार खुले बन्दों नग्न स्नान का निषेध कर रहे हैं।

खासकर व्रतनिष्ठ स्त्रियों के लिये तो उपर्युक्त आज्ञा का पालन करना कितना आवश्यक है- यह बात भी पूर्वोक्त वेदमन्त्रों में सुस्पष्ट प्रकट कर दी गई है। किसी प्रकार का आक्षेप करने से पूर्व इस लीला के नीचे लिखे भावों को समझ लेना आवश्यक है।
(१) स्नान करने वाली सब ५ से ८ वर्ष तक की आयु वाली क्वांरी कन्यायें थीं, क्योंकि कात्यायनी व्रत का विधान ऐसी कन्याओं के लिये ही शास्त्रसम्मत है। अतएव पौराणिक-स्वरूप में उन्हें 'कुमारिका' और 'दारिका' शब्द से याद किया है।
(२) ये सब भगवान् की शरणागत होकर यह व्रत कर रही थीं अतएव उनके लिये 'हविष्यं भुञ्जानाः' 'कृष्णं-गायन्त्यः, ऐसा लिखा है। इससे भगवान् को उनकी देख रेख करना आवश्यक था ।
(३) भगवान् की आयु भी इस समय छः साल और तीन महीने की थी क्योंकि गोवर्द्धन उठाने के समय – 'क्व सप्तहायनो बालः' (श्री० भा० १० । २६ १४) आदि शब्दों में भगवान् को सात वर्ष का लिखा है, चीरहरण लोला इससे ठीक ११ मास पूर्व घटी थी श्रतः उतनी छोटी अवस्था के बालक बालिकाओं में किसी प्रकार के कुप्रभाव की सम्भावना नहीं हो सकती ।
(४) यह स्नान प्रायः पौ फटते होता है जबकि एक दूसरे का मुंह भी नहीं ताक सकता । अब भी प्रायः कार्तिक स्नान जो गुर्जर महाराष्ट्र में मार्गशीर्षस्नान कहा जाता है उसी समय किया जाता है।
(५) भगवान् एकले नहीं थे बल्कि – 'वयस्यैरावृतः' के अनुसार अपनी बराबर आयु वाले ग्वालों के झुण्ड सहित थे । कुवसाना वाले व्यक्ति तो दूसरे को कानों कान भी ऐसी बात नहीं पहुंचाना चाहा करते इससे भी भगवान् का विशुद्ध भाव स्पष्ट है।

(६) ये कन्याएं नित्य ही नग्न स्नान किया करती थीं जैसा कि-'तीरे निश्क्षिप्य पूर्ववत्' शब्दों से विदित होता है। इससे यह भी अनुमान किया जा सकता है कि शायद पहिले भी उन्हें एक दो बार नग्न स्नान करने से जबानी हटाया जा चुका हो, परन्तु नहटने पर अन्त में वस्त्र उठाकर शर्मिन्दा करने की नौवत आई हो क्योंकि पिछले दिनों गङ्गा-स्नान के समय नंगी नहाने वाली औरतों को हजार बार समझाने पर भी जब यह कुप्रथा न ही तो महावीर दल के नेताओं ने इसी तरह शभिन्दा करने की ठान ली थी, अतः भगवान् का यह वस्त्रों पर छापा मारना एक कुप्रथा को जड़ से मिटा देना ही हो सकता है।
(७) भगवान् वस्त्र उठाते ही झटपट कदम्ब वृक्ष की सघन पत्तियों में मुंह छिपाकर बैठ गये जैसा कि 'नीपमारुह्य सत्वरः' आदि शब्दों द्वारा प्रकट किया गया है। क्या इससे नग्न-स्नाताओं को न देखने की अभिरुचि ध्वनित नहीं होती ?
(८) भगवान् ने जब लज्जित करने के लिये बाहर आने की बात कही तो वे कन्याएं 'आकण्ठमग्नाः' ही बनी रहीं।
(६) अन्त में- नग्न स्नान से किन कन्याओं का व्रत भङ्ग हुआ है यह जांचने के लिये जब दूसरी बार फिर बाहर आने का आग्रह किया गया तो वे सब आ गई। इसका तात्पर्य है- शास्त्रों में और लोक में भी उसी व्यक्ति को अपराधी ठहराया जाता है जो कि अमुक कार्य को बुरा भला समझने लायक मस्तिष्क रखता हो यह एक नियम है। अबोध बालक या सदसदू-विवेक-हीन पागल द्वारा इत्तिफाकिया पिस्तौल का घोड़ा दब जाने पर किसी व्यक्ति की मृत्यु हो सकती है, परन्तु ऐसी हालत में अज्ञानी होने के कारण उन्हें प्राणदण्ड नहीं दिया जा सकता यह कानून है। ठीक इसी तरह भगवान् भी जानना चाहते थे कि ये कन्याएं सभी धबोध हैं किंवा इनमें से किसी को वस्त्र ढाँपने की

आवश्यकता का भी यौवन-सुलभ परिज्ञान है। इस परीक्षा का साधन उन्हें एकमात्र नंगी दशा में जल से बाहर आ जाने को विवश करना ही हो सकता था। कदाचित् उनमें यदि एक भी सुवारु'न या मुटियार होती तो वह सारे संसार के भी हजार बार चिल्लाने पर भग्न दशा में बाहर आने को तैयार न होती और इस पड़दे के बोध के कारण वह वरुणदेव के अपमान की भी पापभागिनी सिद्ध होती। परन्तु हगारे घरों में अबोध बालिकायें एक समय तक अंग ढांपने की परवाह नहीं करतीं क्योंकि अभी तक उन्हें स्त्री पुरुष की विशेषता का भान ही नहीं होता, अतः शास्त्र में उन्हें ाग्निका' नाम से याद किया है और पड़दे का बोध हो जाने वाली कन्याओं को

'अग्निका' कहा गया है। सो भगवान् भी यह बात जानना चाहते थे कि ये सब की सब नग्निकायें हैं किंवा इना में कोई अनग्निका भी है। सो परीक्षा करने पर विदित हुआ कि सभी नग्निका हैं, अतः भगवान् ने वरुणदेव को नमस्कार मात्र कर देने से नग्न स्नान का प्रायश्चित्त करवा दिया क्योंकि जो अभी अबोध हैं वरुणदेव भी उन्हें सापराध नहीं मान सकते। कदाचित् कोई अनग्निका होकर भी नग्न स्नान करती तो वह जानबूझ कर पाप करने वाली होने के कारण अधिक प्रायश्चित्त की भागिनी होती।

During the first month of Hemanta season, known as Margashirsha, the young girls of Nanda's village in Braj, around five to six years old, observed the Katyayani vrata while consuming simple sacrificial food (Havishya).

One day, as part of their daily ritual, they bathed nude in the Yamuna River, singing devotional songs dedicated to Lord Krishna. Understanding their deep faith and commitment, Yogeshwara Krishna, accompanied by cowherd boys, arrived at the scene. Playfully, he took their clothes and swiftly climbed onto a Kadamba tree.

When the girls, shivering in cold water, humbly requested their clothes back, Lord Krishna teasingly asked them to approach him and reclaim them. They pleaded with him, acknowledging his greatness in Braj, and requested that he kindly return their garments while they stood trembling in the water.

Testing their innocence and sincerity, Krishna repeated his request, urging them to step forward and take their clothes. Overcome by the cold, the young girls covered themselves with their hands and stepped out of the water, displaying pure-hearted devotion. Seeing their genuine humility and unwavering faith, Lord Krishna was greatly pleased.

He then advised them that, although they had observed Katyayani vrata, their act of bathing without clothing disrespected Varuna Deva, the deity of water. Therefore, as a symbolic penance, he asked them to bow down with folded hands and seek forgiveness.

The importance of following the above-mentioned command, especially for devout women observing vows, has been clearly expressed in the earlier Vedic mantras. Before making any interpretations, it is crucial to understand the following aspects of this divine Leela:

1. Young Girls Observing Katyayani Vrata: The girls who bathed were all unmarried virgins aged between five to eight years, as per the scriptural guidelines of Katyayani Vrata. Thus, in the Puranic context, they are referred to as "Kumarika" and "Darika."
2. Their Absolute Devotion to Lord Krishna: These girls were sincerely devoted to the Lord, undertaking the vrata while consuming simple food (Havishya). The scriptures describe them as "Havishyam Bhunjanaah" (consuming sacred food) and "Krishnam Gayantyah" (singing Krishna's praises). Hence, it became Lord Krishna's duty to watch over them.
3. Lord Krishna's Age During the Incident: At that time, Lord Krishna was six years and three months old. According to texts describing the Govardhan lifting, he is stated to be seven years old, meaning this incident took place eleven months earlier. Given such a young age, there is no possibility of any inappropriate or negative implications.

4. The Early Morning Bathing Tradition: This ritual bath typically occurred before dawn, when visibility was extremely low. Even today, Kartika Snana (observed in Gujarat and Maharashtra, also known as Margashirsha Snana) is performed at the same time.
5. Lord Krishna Was Not Alone: As per the scriptures ("Vayasyairavritah"), Lord Krishna was surrounded by his peers, the cowherd boys of similar age. People with impure thoughts would not even attempt to convey such incidents to others, reinforcing Krishna's pure-hearted intentions.
6. The young girls would bathe nude daily, as indicated by the phrase "Teere Nishkshipya Purvavat" (placing their clothes on the shore as usual). This suggests that they might have been verbally instructed earlier to stop this practice. However, since they did not discontinue it, eventually, Lord Krishna had to take their clothes away to make them feel ashamed. A similar approach was once taken by leaders of Mahavir Dal when women continued to bathe nude in the Ganges despite repeated warnings. Thus, Lord Krishna's act of seizing their garments could be understood as an attempt to eradicate an improper custom.
7. As soon as Lord Krishna took their clothes, he quickly climbed up a Kadamba tree and hid himself behind its dense leaves, as indicated by "Neepam Aaruhya Satvarah" (swiftly ascending the tree). This suggests that he had no intention to view them in their exposed state.
8. When Krishna asked them to come out to reclaim their garments and thus feel embarrassed, the girls remained "Aakanthamagnaah" (submerged up to their necks), refusing to expose themselves further.
9. Finally, to ascertain which girls had broken their vow by bathing nude, Krishna insisted once again that they step out. The fact that they eventually did so proves a significant principle: only those capable of discerning right from wrong can be held accountable for their actions.
10. Just as in legal cases, where a child or a mentally unstable person is not punished for accidental wrongdoing, Krishna wished to determine if any of the girls possessed the maturity to recognize modesty and the need for covering themselves. The only way to conduct this test was by compelling them to exit the water in their current state.
11. Had there been even a single suvaruni or mutiyari (mature girl), she would have resisted coming out, even if thousands insisted. This innate sense of modesty would indicate an offense against Varuna Deva, the god of water. However, young children often do not instinctively cover their bodies, as they have no awareness of gender distinctions. In the Shastras, such innocent children are referred to as "Nagnika"

(ignorant of modesty), whereas those aware of bodily decorum are termed "Agnika" (conscious of propriety).

12. Krishna's intention was to distinguish whether all the girls were Nagnikas or if any were Agnikas. Upon conducting the test, he confirmed that they were all still innocent children. Therefore, he allowed them to atone for the act merely by bowing to Varuna Deva, as the god of water would not hold them guilty. However, had any of them been Agnika (aware of modesty) yet still bathed nude, they would have been deliberately sinful and required greater penance.

अर्थात्—हेमन्त ऋतु के प्रथम महीने = मार्गशीर्ष में नन्द व्रज की रहने वाली कुमारिकाएं—लगभग पाँच छः वर्ष की आयु वाली कन्याएं हविष्य अन्न को खाकर कात्यायनी देवी का व्रत किया करती थीं। एक दिन वे नित्य की तरह यमुना के किनारे सब वस्त्र उतारकर नंगी नहाने लगीं और भगवान् कृष्ण के गीत गाने लगीं। योगेश्वर कृष्ण उनका सब अभिप्राय जानकर उस व्रत की पूर्ति के लिए गोपों-ग्वालों सहित वहाँ आये और उनके वस्त्र उठाकर शीघ्र कदम्ब पर चढ़ गए। (कन्याओं के वस्त्र मांगने पर भगवान् ने कहा कि—) हे कन्याओ! यहाँ आकर अपने २ वस्त्र ले लीजिए। (परन्तु वे कन्याएं लज्जित) कण्ठपर्यन्त ठण्डे जल में डूबी हुईं तथा काँपती हुईं कहने लगीं कि हे भगवान्, हम आपको व्रज में प्रशंसनीय जानती हैं अतः इस तरह काँपती हुईं इन अबलाओं के वस्त्र दे दीजिए। (भगवान् ने उनकी बाल्यभाव सुलभ 'नग्निका' अवस्था की परीक्षा के लिए कहा कि—) हे पवित्र मुस्कान वाली कन्याओ! यहाँ आकर अपने २ वस्त्र ले लीजिए। तब शीत से काँपती हुईं वे कन्याएं दोनों हाथों से अपने अङ्गों को ढाँपकर तत्काल जल से निकल आईं। भगवान् उनके इस विशुद्ध भाव को देख कर अतीव प्रसन्न हुवे और कहने लगे कि—हे देवियो! तुमने [illegible] व्रत धारण करते हुवे भी जो नग्न होकर स्नान किया है इससे वरुण देव का अपमान हुआ है, अतः पहिले इस पाप के प्रायश्चित्तार्थ तुम्हें मस्तक पर अंजलि बांधकर नमस्कार करना चाहिए।

पाठक दोनों स्थलों का मिलान करके परिणाम निकालें कि वेद भगवान् किस प्रकार खुले शब्दों नग्न स्नान का निषेध कर रहे हैं।

(१) स्नान करने वाली सब ५ से ८ वर्ष तक की आयु वाली क्वांरी कन्यायें थीं, क्योंकि कात्यायनी व्रत का विधान ऐसी कन्याओं के लिये ही शास्त्रसम्मत है। अतएव पौराणिक-व्यास ने इन्हें 'कुमारिका'—और 'बालिका' शब्द से याद किया है।

(२) वे सब भगवान् की शरणागत होकर यह व्रत कर रही थीं अतएव उनके लिये 'हृदिस्थ भुजमानाः' 'कृष्ण-नामलया', ऐसा लिखा है। इससे भगवान् को उनकी देख रेख करना आवश्यक था।

(३) भगवान् की आयु भी इस समय छः साल और तीन महीने की थी क्योंकि गोवर्द्धन उठाने के समय—'क्व सप्तहायनो बालः' (श्री० भा० १०। २६ १४) आदि शब्दों में भगवान् को सात वर्ष का लिखा है, चीरहरण लीला इससे ठीक ९ मास पूर्व घटी थी अतः उतनी छोटी अवस्था के बालक बालिकाओं में किसी प्रकार के कुभाव की सम्भावना नहीं हो सकती।

(४) यह स्नान प्रायः पौ फटते होता है जबकि एक दूसरे का मुंह भी नहीं ताक सकता। अब भी प्रायः कार्तिक स्नान जो गुर्जर महाराष्ट्र में मार्गशीर्षस्नान कहा जाता है उसी समय किया जाता है।

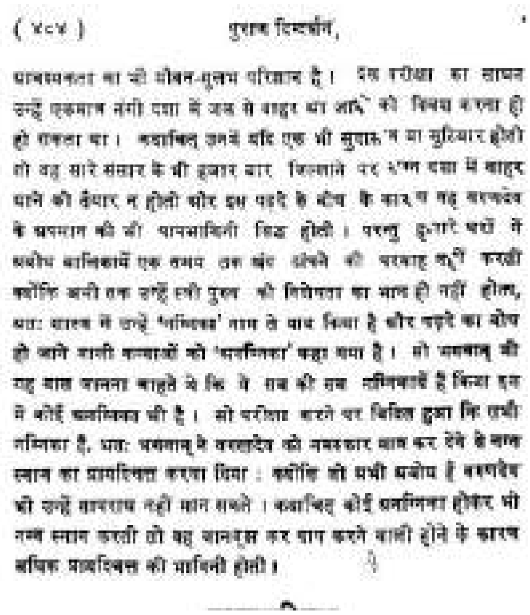
(५) भगवान् एकाकी नहीं थे बल्कि—'वयस्यैरावृतः' के अनुसार अपनी बराबर आयु वाले ग्वालों के झुण्ड सहित थे। कुभावना वाले व्यक्ति तो दूसरे के कानों कान भी ऐसी बात नहीं पहुंचाना चाहा करते इससे भी भगवान् का विशुद्ध भाव स्पष्ट है।

(६) वे कन्याएं नित्य ही नग्न स्नान किया करती थीं जैसा कि—'नीरे निक्षिप्य पूर्ववत्' शब्दों से विदित होता है। इससे यह भी अनुमान किया जा सकता है कि शायद पहिले भी उन्हें एक दो बार नग्न स्नान करने से मनाही [illegible] जा चुका हो, परन्तु न हटने पर अन्त में कष्ट उठाकर शिक्षा देने की नौबत आई हो; क्योंकि पिछले दिनों गङ्गा-स्नान के समय नंगी नहाने वाली औरतों को हजार बार समझाने पर भी जब यह कुप्रथा न हटी तो महावीर दल के सेवकों ने इसी तरह शिक्षा देने की ठान ली थी, अतः भगवान् का यह वस्त्रों पर छापा मारना एक कुप्रथा को जड़ से मिटा देना ही हो सकता है।

(७) भगवान् वस्त्र उठाते ही झटपट कदम्ब वृक्ष की सघन पत्तियों में मुंह छिपाकर बैठ गये जैसा कि 'नीपमारुह्य सत्वरः' आदि शब्दों द्वारा प्रकट किया गया है। क्या इससे नग्न-स्नातकों को न देखने की अभिरुचि ध्वनित नहीं होती?

(८) भगवान् ने जब शिक्षा करने के लिये बाहर आने की बात कही तो वे कन्याएं 'आकण्ठमग्नाः' ही बनी रहीं।

(९) अन्त में—नग्न स्नान से किन कन्याओं का व्रत भङ्ग हुआ है यह जानने के लिये जब दूसरी बार फिर बाहर आने का आग्रह किया गया तो वे सब आ गई। इसका तात्पर्य है—शास्त्रों में और लोक में भी उसी व्यक्ति को अपराधी ठहराया जाता है जो कि अमुक कार्य को बुरा भला समझने लायक मस्तिष्क रखता हो—यह एक नियम है। अबोध बालक या उन्मत्त-विवेकहीन पागल द्वारा [illegible] पिस्तौल का घोड़ा दब जाने पर किसी व्यक्ति की मृत्यु हो सकती है, परन्तु ऐसी हालत में अज्ञानी होने के कारण उन्हें प्राणदण्ड नहीं दिया जा सकता यह कानून है। ठीक इसी तरह भगवान् भी जानना चाहते थे कि ये कन्याएं अभी अबोध हैं किंवा इनमें से किसी को अन्य औरों की



(४८४) पुराण दिग्दर्शन,

आवश्यकता का भी यौवन-सुलभ परिणाम है। इस परीक्षा का साधन उन्हें एकमात्र नंगी दशा में जल से बाहर आ जाने को विवश करना ही हो सकता था। कदाचित् उनमें यदि एक भी सुयोग्य या सुविचार होती तो वह सारे संसार के भी हजार बार खिलाने पर उस दशा में बाहर आने को तैयार न होती और इस पहले के बीच के कारण यह वरुणदेव के अपमान की भी भागभागिनी सिद्ध होती। परन्तु हमारे यहाँ में अबोध बालिकायें एक समय तक अंग ढाँकने की परवाह नहीं करतीं क्योंकि अभी तक उन्हें स्त्री पुरुष की भिन्नता का भान ही नहीं होता, अतः शास्त्र में उन्हें 'नग्निका' नाम से याद किया है और पढ़ने का बोध हो जाने वाली कन्याओं को 'अनग्निका' कहा गया है। सो भगवान् भी यह बात जानना चाहते थे कि ये सब की सब नग्निकायें हैं किंवा इन में कोई अनग्निका भी है। सो परीक्षा करने पर विदित हुआ कि सभी नग्निका हैं, अतः भगवान् ने वरुणदेव को नमस्कार मात्र कर देने से नग्न स्नान का प्रायश्चित्त करवा दिया; क्योंकि जो सभी अबोध हैं वरुणदेव भी उन्हें अपराधी नहीं मान सकते। कदाचित् कोई अनग्निका होकर भी नग्न स्नान करती तो वह जानबूझ कर पाप करने वाली होने के कारण अधिक प्रायश्चित्त की भागिनी होती।

11. Krishna married his own cousin sisters

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.58.56📚
Bhadra was a princess of the Kaikeya kingdom and the daughter of Lord Krsna's paternal aunt Srutakirti. The Lord married Bhadrä when her brothers, headed by Santardana, offered her to Him."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.58.31📚
My dear King, Lord Krsna forcibly took away Princess Mitravinda, the daughter of His aunt Rajädhidevi, before the eyes of the rival kings."

Refutation –

VALIDITY OF MARRIAGE BETWEEN COUSINS!
In the Vedic system of marriage, the importance of the gotra, or family linkage, was stressed. Cousin brothers & sisters were allowed to get married, only if they did not belong to the same gotra, or family.
Gotra is always defined with respect of father's linkage, Hence children are always awarded by the father's gotra, irrespective of what ever the gotra of mother is !

Validity of Marriage between Cousins!

In the Vedic system of marriage, the importance of the gotra, or family linkage, was stressed. Cousin brothers & sisters were allowed to get married, only if they did not belong to the same gotra, or family.

Gotra is always defined with respect of father's linkage, Hence children are always awarded by the father's gotra, irrespective of what ever the gotra of mother is !

वैदिक विवाह की व्यवस्था में गोत्र तथा पारिवारिक संबंध को महत्व दिया गया है। भाई - बहन को विवाह की अनुमति मात्र तभी दी जाती थी, जब वे एक ही गोत्र या परिवार से संबंधित न हों।

गोत्र को सदैव पिता के संबंध (पितृ पक्ष) में परिभाषित किया जाता है, अतः एक मनुष्य (पुरुष या स्त्री) को सदैव पिता के गोत्र से सम्मानित किया जाता है, इसमें माता के गोत्र का स्थान नहीं !

Different Gotras (KUL) ORIGINATED IN Yaduvansh!
YADU
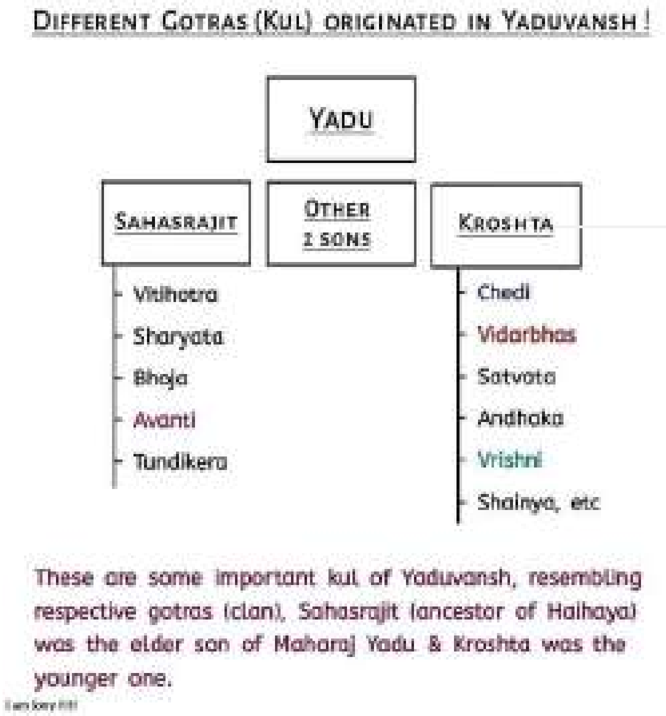
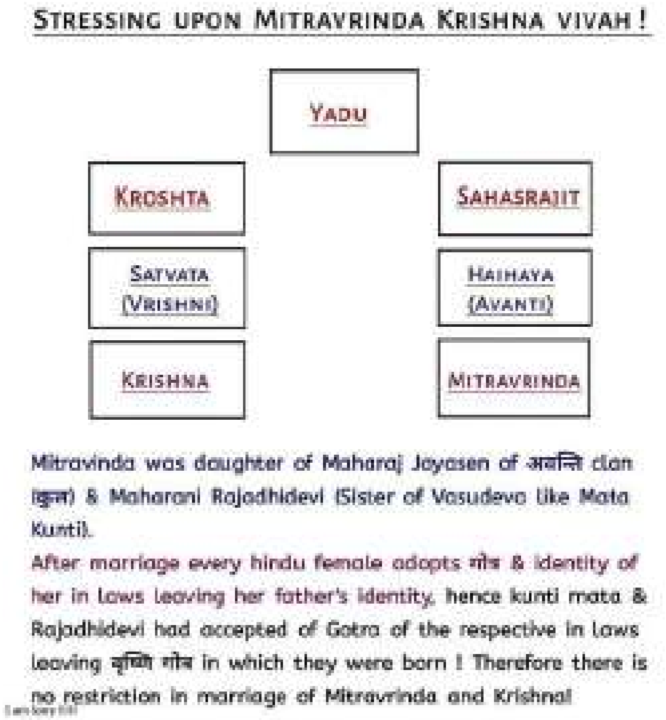
OTHER 2 SONS
KROSHTA
Vitihotra
Chedi
Sharyata
Vidarbhas
Bhoja
Satvata
Avanti
Andhaka
Tundikera
Vrishni
Shainya, etc
These are some important kul of Yaduvansh, resembling respective gotras (clan), Sahasrajit (ancestor of Haihaya) was the elder son of Maharaj Yadu & Kroshta was the younger one.



STRESSING UPON MITRAVRINDA KRISHNA VIVAH!

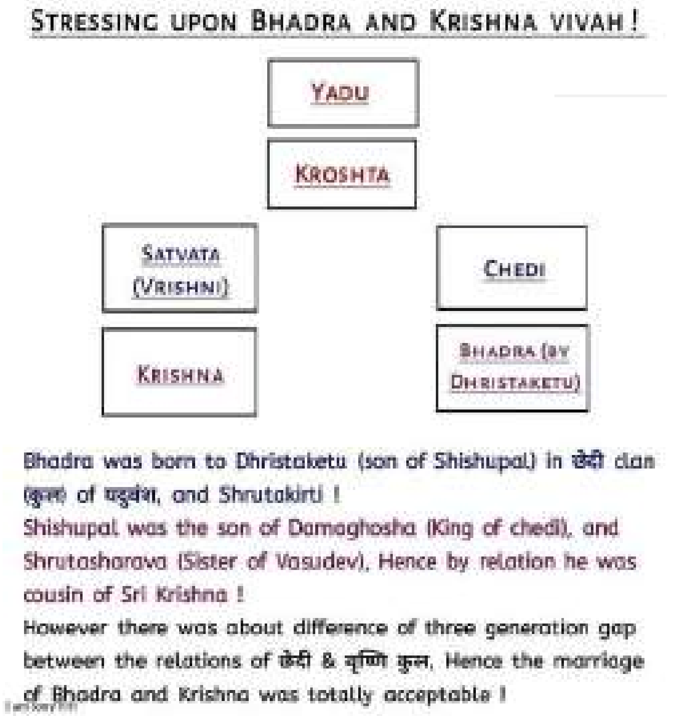
Mitravinda was daughter of Maharaj Jayasen of अवन्ति clan (कुल) & Maharani Rajadhidevi (Sister of Vasudeva like Mata Kunti).
After marriage every hindu female adopts गोत्र & identity of her in laws leaving her father's identity, hence kunti mata & Rajadhidevi had accepted of Gotra of the respective in laws leaving वृष्णि गोत्र in which they were born! Therefore there is no restriction in marriage of Mitravrinda and Krishna!



STRESSING UPON BHADRA AND KRISHNA VIVAH!

Bhadra was born to Dhristaketu (son of Shishupal) in छेदी clan (कुल) of यदुवंश, and Shrutakirti !
Shishupal was the son of Damaghosha (King of chedi), and Shrutasharava (Sister of Vasudev), Hence by relation he was cousin of Sri Krishna !

However there was about difference of three generation gap between the relations of छेदी & वृष्णि कुल, Hence the marriage of Bhadra and Krishna was totally acceptable !



STRESSING UPON ARJUN Subhadra VIVAH!
Maharaj Shursen was from the वृष्णि clan (कुल/गोत्र) of यदुवंश, & so was the gotra of Vasudev, followed by Krishna, Balram & Subhadra ! Vichitraviry (Younger son Shantanu) begotted Dhritrasth & Pandu, Hence Pandav got their gotra in कुरुवंश! Hence Marriage of Shubhadra & Arjun was totally acceptable as they were different kul and gotra !

12. Krishna abducts and marries an 8 year old girl – Rukmini

Krishna's abduction of Rukmini and their subsequent marriage is often considered an example of the Raksasa type of marriage, as stated in the verse mentioned below

(Brahma Purana 91.6-12), The Raksasa marriage is one of the eight types of Hindu marriages mentioned in ancient texts like the Manusmriti and other Dharmashastras. In a Raksasa marriage, the groom forcefully abducts the bride against her will or without the consent of her parents, as elaborated in the Hindu Scriptures

📚Brahma Purana 91.6-12📚
On the eve of marriage day Krsna abducted that virgin even as Rama and other kinsmen were opposed to it...After defeating Rukmin Krsna married Rukmini duly in accordance with the injunctions regarding Raksasa type of marriage."

📚Skanda Purana 5.3.142.8-27📚
The second child born was a daughter named Rukmiṇī. At that time an unembodied etherial voice told him, "O Bhīsmaka, this girl should be given to a Four-armed One (born) on this earth." On hearing these words, he and his beloved became delighted. Along with learned Brāhmaṇas, he entered the lying-in-chamber and made them recite the Svastika prayers and the girl was duly named Rukmiṇī. O descendant of Bharata, she was proclaimed Rukmiṇī by the Brāhmaṇas then because she had a freckle golden in colour congenitally. As time passed on she became a girl of eight years. The king recollected the words of the unembodied being and became worried. 'To whom shall I give this daughter? Who will be the four-armed one?' In the meantime Damaghoṣa, the chieftain of Cedi came there from the excellent mountain Raivata. He entered the royal palace where King Bhīṣmaka was present. On seeing him arrived in the abode, the king duly adored him. He was taken to the Royal Court and given a proper seat. 'This day has dawned meritoriously. I was eager to see you. O great king, my daughter has come to the age of eight years. The ethereal voice of an unembodied being has told that she should be given to a Four-armed One". On hearing the words of Bhīṣmaka, Damaghoṣa said thus: "My son is well known in all the three worlds as Four-armed One (Caturbhujā). O Bhīṣmaka, let this girl be given to Śiśupāla." On hearing the words of Damaghoṣa, O king, Rukmiṇī was betrothed to Śiśupāla by Bhīṣmaka."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.53.51-52📚
Smitten with love kindled (in their breast) by her. the illustrious warriors assembled (there) felt bewildered to behold the princess, who was possessed of a shapely (slender) waist and had not yet attained puberty, and who had a girdle of jewels thrown about her hips and in whom signs of womanhood were (just) manifesting themselves, whose (charming) countenance was graced with ear-rings and whose eyes were moving as though afraid of her curly locks (that overhung her face)."

📚Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 105.1-10
The monarch Bhismaka observed his beautiful daughter engaged in child-like sports and increasing in splendour day by day like a digit of the moon in the midst of clouds. Considering it advisable to marry his youthful and lovely daughter..."

श्रीब्रह्म महापुराण गोवधनतीथवणन नामक इक्यानववाँ अध्याय समाप्त ।।९१॥

Brahma said:
After that, there is the sacred Govardhana Tīrtha which destroys all sins and grants happiness to the ancestors (Pitṛs). Even remembering it destroys all sins. ॥1॥

O Nārada! I have personally seen its glory with my own eyes. It happened like this: There was a Brahmin farmer known by the name Jāvāli. ॥2॥

Even after midday, he would not release his bullocks (oxen), but instead, would beat them on their backs and sides with a stick. ॥3॥

Seeing those bullocks tormented and with tears in their eyes, Kāmadhenu, the divine mother of cows, went to Nandī (the bull of Lord Shiva) and reported everything. ॥4॥

Moved by the suffering of those animals, the sacred river (probably Gautamī/Godāvarī) also went to Lord Śiva and submitted a petition. ॥5॥

Rāma (here, an epithet of Lord Shiva) said to Nandī: "Let everything be accomplished as per your wish." ॥6॥

Then, on Lord Shiva's command, the river hid the entire group of cows. Because of the disappearance of the cows, there was an uproar in both heaven and earth. ॥7॥

The gods came to me (Brahma) in haste and said, "How can we survive without cows?" I replied, "Go to Śiva and pray to him." ॥8॥

Following my advice, those distressed deities worshipped Lord Shiva and expressed their concern to him. Shiva responded, "This matter is known best by my vehicle, landī." ॥9॥

The gods then went to Nandī again and requested, “Please return the beneficent cows to us.” Nandī replied, “You must perform a sacrifice called Go-sava Yajña.” ॥10॥

Only then will all the divine and earthly cows become available again. Thereafter, as per the plan of the gods, the Go-sava Yajña was performed. ॥11॥

As a result of the yajña, the population of cows began to flourish in the sacred region of the Gautamī river’s banks. That Govardhana Tīrtha became a place that greatly pleases the gods. ॥12॥

O best of sages! Bathing at that tīrtha grants the merit of donating a thousand cows. As for the merit of giving donations there—I myself do not fully know it. Therefore, I declare my inability to describe its full glory. ॥13॥

Thus ends the 91st chapter of the Śrī Brahma Mahāpurāṇa, titled “Description of Govardhana Tīrtha.” ॥91॥

Srimad Bhagvatam 10/53/51-53 also tells that Mata Rukmini was 16 years old at time of her marriage and she was a totally grown beautiful lady 51-53. The glorious warriors who assembled there found themselves tormented with the passion of love and became perplexed at seeing her, who like the deluding potency (Māyā) of the Lord, was enchanting to the warriors, with her beauti-ful slender waist, and countenance beautified with the ear-rings; she was sixteen years of age, wore a girdle of precious stones around her waist: had protruding breasts (showing attainment of womanhood); her eyes were unsteady, appearing as if afraid of her over-hanging locks of hair. Beaming with bright smile, her white jasmine-bud like teeth appeared reddish as they were tinged with the splendour of her red lips-red like the Bimba fruit. Her gait was like that of a royal swan and her feet were radiant with the splendour of jingling anklets.

In marriages other than the Brahma and similar approved types—i.e., in Gandharva and others—the children speak harshly and untruthfully.
'Harsh' refers to vulgar or abusive language used toward nother, sister, etc.

'Untruthful' refers to lies and well-known dishonesty.
The etymology of 'nṛśaṁsa-anṛta' (cruel and false) is given as those whose nature is to say such things.
'Brahma-dharma' refers to Vedic dharma and the meaning of the Vedas; these people either hate, criticize, or do not believe in it.
Therefore, such marriages are to be condemned."

This verse presents a summary of the results of various types of marriages.
The children (progeny such as sons) born from those marriages which are scripturally sanctioned (अनिन्दित, unblameworthy) are themselves unblameworthy and praiseworthy.
The ones born from condemned (निन्दित) and prohibited (प्रतिषिद्ध) marriages are blameworthy.
Therefore, since such condemned marriages result in sorrow-bringing progeny, one should avoid such condemned marriages."

From the four lower types of marriage—Asura, Gandharva, Rakshasa, and Paisacha—excluding the approved Brahma and similar ones, children are born who commit cruel deeds, lie a lot, and hate the Vedas and Vedic rituals like yajñas."

This verse is a concise statement about the fruits (results) of marriage.
Through deserving (scripturally appropriate) marriage forms, men obtain an unblameworthy lineage.
But through condemned (गर्हित) marriages, the progeny is also condemned.
Therefore, one should not engage in blameworthy marriages."

"In the four remaining marriage forms, children are born who are cruel, liars, and haters of Brahma-dharma.
These forms are Asura, Gandharva, Rakshasa, and Paisacha.

From marriages that are unblameworthy (अनिन्दितैः), praiseworthy progeny (children like sons) are born — this is the intended meaning.
From condemned marriages such as the Asura type, blameworthy children are born.
Therefore, one should avoid such condemned marriages."

He highlights the defects in the four other forms (excluding Brahma, Daiva, Arsha, and Prajapatya).
The word 'śiṣṭeṣu avaśiṣṭeṣu' refers to the remaining unapproved forms.
'Nṛśaṁsa' means cruel, either by action or by nature.
'Brahma' here refers to the Veda, the Brahmin caste, or Vedic dharma like Agnihotra, all of which these offspring tend to despise."

"Just as the logic of 'A mountain does not cry' implies that a non-mountain does, this verse also implies a prohibition of blameworthy marriages by praising the unblameworthy ones (अनिन्दितैः).
Just as in statements like 'he who sings is blessed', there's an implied directive.
So too, this verse implies that one should undertake only unblameworthy marriages; the prohibition of blameworthy ones is conveyed indirectly (arthavāda — a laudatory or cautionary statement with implied command)."

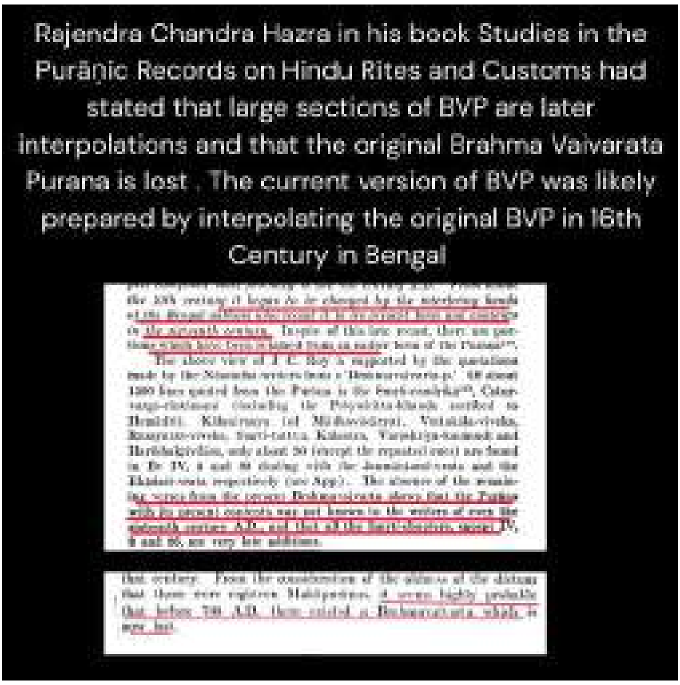
Brahma Vaiavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda Chapter 112 slokas 1-10

Lord Kṛṣṇa beheld the smiling Rukmiṇī in the prime of her youth living in great pleasure and hallazioned with gems. She was not yet fully developed and had just attained puberty. She was just like a bud which had not yet begun to shoot to become a flower. Her body was decked with ornaments. So she was abashed in that hall of the wicked females and just like a she-elephant that is entered by her lord she was clothed, ornaments on her head, she was afraid of shame. Rukmiṇī, the daughter of Bhīṣmaka, of her herself was worthy of marriage. Rukmiṇī cast love-laden longing looks at Shri Kṛṣṇa. Her bashfulness increased. Later on, Lord Kṛṣṇa consoled her and intercourse was consummated between them. The goddess Rukmiṇī was filled with raptures at the act and fainted."

Refutation-

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

📚Padma Purana 5.74.61-74a📚
Then having heard the words, when Arjuna plunged into the water of the lake, which was tinged with the pollen dropped from white lotuses, lotuses opening on moonrise, (other) lotuses and red and blue lotuses, and which was agreeably perfumed with honey-drops, which was shaken by the notes of corpulent swans, whose four banks were decked with jewels, which had ripples due to gentle breezes, she vanished just there. The charmingly smiling one got up and on seeing around, was confused. He instantly saw himself (to be turned into) a wonderful, excellent lady, who had a slim, fair, charming body like the rays of pure gold…"

Arjuniya, having seen in confusion on the left side of the pleasing goddess Radhika, propitiating and offering a tambula to him of a bright smile, was overcome with the passion of love. Then, Sri krsna, who knew everything, knowing her to be like that, seized her hand, and he the lord, the great master of magical art secretly sported with her in the entire pleasure-forest. Then putting his sport-like arm on her should and coming to Sarada, said to her: 'Bathe quickly this slim-bodied lady of a gentle smile, fatigued due to sport, in this western lake.' Then that goddess Sarada (took her) to the western lake, (and) said to her, 'Take bath'. The fatigued one did like that. She who got to the interior of the water, again turned into Arjuna and got up at the place where the lord of gods and the chief of the beautiful Vaikuntha stood. Seeing Arjuna dejected and broken-minded, Krsna kindly touched him with his hand and put him (back) to his nature."

हम उक्त श्लोकों को पूरा पूरा देकर प्रकरणानुकूल वास्तविक अर्थ दिखाते हैं। उक्त प्रकरण में भगवान् श्रीकृष्ण के दिव्य अंगप्रत्यंग से मानसी (अमैथुनी) सृष्टि का वर्णन है। जितने देव पुरुष श्रीकृष्ण के शरीर से उत्पन्न हुए हैं उन उन पुरुषों की स्त्रियां उन २ पुरुषों के बाएं अंग से उत्पन्न हुई हैं। जैसे-

(ब्रह्म वै० ब्रह्म ख० ब्रह्म कल्प अ० ४)

उसी प्रकार-

आविर्बभूव कन्यैका कृष्णस्य वामपार्श्वतः ।
धावित्वा पुष्पमानीय ददावर्ध प्रभोः पदे ।। तेन राधा समाख्याता
पुराविद्भिद्विजोत्तम । प्राणाधिष्ठात्री सा देवी कृष्णस्य परमात्मनः ।।
(२५ । २६ । २घ)

अर्थात् –परमात्मा कृष्ण से बाएं श्रङ्ग से एक कमनीया स्त्री उत्पन्न
हुई । उसने भगवान् कृष्ण के चरणों की धोकर फूल लाकर अर्घ्य दिया, विद्वानों ः
उसका नाम (आराधनात्) राधा कहा है। वह कृष्ण की प्राणाधिष्ठात्री देवी थी।
अन्यत्र कहा है-

योगेनात्मा सृष्टिविधौ द्विधारूपो बभूव सः । पुमांश्च दक्षिणार्द्धाङ्गो वामाङ्गः प्रकृतिः स्मृतः ।।
(ब्रह्म बै० प्रकृ० खं० आ० १२ श्लो० ६)

अर्थात् – परमात्मा श्रीकृष्ण सृष्टि रचना के समय दो रूप वाले हो गये । दाहिना आधा अङ्ग पुरुष और बांया अंग प्रकृति रूपा स्त्री हुई। ब्रह्मवैवर्त पुराण का यह वर्णन वेद एवं उपनिषदों के द्वारा प्रति-पादित है। जैसे-

स वै नैव रेमे तस्मादेकाकी न मैच्छत् स हैतावानास यथा स्त्रीपुमा रमते स द्वितीय-सौ संपरिष्वक्तौ स इममेवात्मानं द्वेधापातयत् ततः पतिश्च पत्नी
(बृहदारण्यक १।४३)

अर्थात् – उस ब्रह्म ने रमण (सृष्टि उत्पादन रूप खेल) नहीं किया
था इस कारण कि वह अकेला रमण नहीं करता। उसने दूसरे की इच्छा की। जिस प्रकार परस्पर ग्रालङ्गित स्त्री पुरुष होते हैं, वैसा उसका स्वरूप हो गया। उसने अपने को ही दो भागों में विभक्त कर डाला । वे पति और पत्नी हुवे। भगवान् श्रीकृष्ण के वामाङ्ग से श्रीराधा की उत्पत्ति का भाव है कि वे एक से दो अर्थात् पति-पत्नी रूप में हो गये ।

विवाहं कारयामास विधिना जगतां विधिः ।।
(ब्रह्म वै० खं० २ अ० ४६ श्लो० ३२ से ४२)

अर्थात् ब्रजभूमि में अवतार लेने पर वह राधा वषभानु वैश्य की कन्या हुई ।।२६।।
वृषभानु की स्त्री कलावती वायुगर्भा (जिसके गर्भ
में केवल वायु मात्र थी) थी उसने वायु प्रसव किया। प्रसव होते ही
श्री राधा देवी अयोनिजा (गर्भ से उत्पन्न न होने वाली) प्रकट हो गई।
।।३७।। बारह वर्ष व्यतीत होने पर उसके पिता ने उसे नवयुवती होने
वाली देख कर रायण वैश्य के साथ उसका सम्बन्ध – सगाई कर
दी ।।३८।। किन्तु राधा जी अपने प्रभाव से अपने ही अनुरूप एक 'छाया'
नाम की कन्या को उत्पन्न कर और उसे घर में स्थापित कर स्वयं
अन्तर्धान हो गई, रायण वैश्य का विवाह उसी 'छाया' नाम की कन्या
के साथ हुआ ।।॥३०॥ श्रीकृष्ण की घायरूप माता जो यशोदा थीं,
रायण उसका भाई था। वह गोलोक में गोप कृष्ण का अंश (अर्थात्–
उन कृष्ण के अंश से गोलोक के सृष्टि प्रकरण में जिस प्रकार अन्य
अनेक व्यक्तियों की उत्पत्ति हुई थी उसी प्रकार उत्पन्न होने वाला)
सखा था। ब्रज में उनकी धाय रूप माता यशोदा का भाई होने के
नाते श्रीकृष्ण जी का वह मामा हुआ। पवित्र वृन्दावन में श्री ब्रह्मा जी
ने कृष्ण जी के साथ श्री राधा जी का विधिपूर्वक दिव्य विवाह
कराया ।।४०11
ऊपर के ब्रह्म० वै० पुराण प्रकरण से स्पष्ट है कि रायण वैश्य के साथ दिव्य 'छाया'
ा विवाह हुआ था और श्रीकृष्ण जी के साथ श्री राधा जी का दिव्य विवाह हुआ।

अतः आक्षेपकर्ताओं का श्रीराधा जी की श्रीकृष्ण जी की पुत्री, पुत्र वधू व माभी कहना सरासर झूठ है।

English

The Malechas claim that in the 'Brahmavaivarta Purana' (Brahma Parva 5), three unusual relationships between Krishna and Radha have been described. According to them, Radha is Krishna's daughter, daughter-in-law, and aunt.

Oh, what an absurd fabrication! By omitting intermediate verses, distorting portions of others, misplacing narratives from different contexts, and constructing arbitrary meanings, they have spun an unreasonable and false tale about Krishna and Radha's supposed relationships! What a despicable attempt to deceive people and sow confusion!

Now, I will present the complete verses with their correct context and meaning. This section describes the divine, non-physical creation (Manasi Srishti) from the sacred body of Lord Krishna. The women associated with the divine beings emerging from Krishna's form originate from the left portion of those male entities. For example:

That means: After that, a male figure emerged from the divine mind of Paramatma Shri Krishna, possessing the radiant brilliance of heated gold. The wise refer to him as Manmatha (Kamadeva). From his left side, a supremely beautiful woman, the most enchanting among all, was created as his consort.

Similarly:

आविर्बभूव कन्यैका कृष्णस्य वामपार्श्वतः । धावित्वा पुष्पमानीय ददावर्ध प्रभोः पदे ।। तेन राधा समाख्याता पुराविद्भिर्द्विजोत्तम । प्राणाधिष्ठात्री सा देवी कृष्णस्य परमात्मनः ।। (२५ । २६ । २घ)

That means: From the left part of Paramatma Shri Krishna, an exquisite maiden was created. She approached the Lord, washed His feet, and offered flowers as a sacred oblation. The learned sages named her Radha due to her act of devotion (Aradhana). She became the divine presiding deity of Krishna's life energy.

Elsewhere, it is stated:

That means: At the time of creation, Paramatma Shri Krishna manifested in a dual form. His right half took the form of a male, while his left half became the female aspect—Prakriti.

The description in Brahmavaivarta Purana aligns with what is established in the Vedas and Upanishads, such as:

स वै नैव रेमे तस्मादेकाकी न मैच्छत् स हैतावानास यथा स्त्रीपुमा रमते स द्वितीय-सौ संपरिष्वक्तौ स इममेवात्मानं द्वेधापातयत् ततः पतिश्च पत्नी चाभवताम् । (बृहदारण्यक १।४३)

That means: That supreme Brahman did not engage in divine play (creation) because He was alone. He desired another. Just as men and women embrace each other, His form transformed similarly. He then divided Himself into two parts. They became husband and wife. This signifies that Shri Krishna manifested Radha from His left side as His eternal consort.

Now, consider the further context:

वृषभानोश्च वैश्यस्य सा च कन्या बभूव ह । अयोनिसम्भवा देवी वायुगर्भा कलावती ॥ सुषुवे मायया वायुं स तत्राविर्बभूव ह । अतीते द्वादशाब्दे तु दृष्ट्वा तां नवयौवनाम् ।। सार्धं रायणवैश्येन तत्सम्बन्धं चकार सः । छायां संस्थाप्य तद्गेहे सान्तर्धानमवाप ह ।। बभूव तस्य वैश्यस्य विवाहश्छायया सह । कृष्ण माता यशोदा या रायणस्तत् सहोदरः ।। गोलोके गोपकृष्णांशः सम्बन्धात्कृष्णमातुलः ।। कृष्णेन सह राधायाः पुण्ये वृन्दावने वने । विवाहं कारयामास विधिना जगतां विधिः ।। (ब्रह्म वै० खं० २ अ० ४६ श्लो० ३२ से ४२)

That means: When Radha took birth in Braj, she was the daughter of the Vaishya, Vrishabhanu. Vrishabhanu's wife, Kalavati, carried only air in her womb (Vayugarbha). When she delivered, Devi Radha, who was Ayonija (not born from a womb), manifested immediately.

After twelve years, upon seeing her radiant youth, her father arranged a marital alliance with Rayana Vaishya. However, due to her divine nature, Radha manifested a shadow-like replica of herself, named 'Chhaya,' and installed it in the household before she disappeared. Thus, Rayana Vaishya married 'Chhaya,' not Radha.

Shri Krishna's foster mother, Yashoda, was Rayana's sister. Therefore, in a worldly sense, Rayana, who was originally a divine manifestation from Goloka, became Krishna's maternal uncle. In the sacred forest of Vrindavan, Lord Brahma solemnized the divine marriage of Shri Radha with Shri Krishna.

Thus, the Brahmavaivarta Purana clearly states that Radha was not married to Rayana Vaishya, but to Krishna Himself in a divine ceremony. Therefore, the false claims that Radha was Krishna's daughter, daughter-in-law, or aunt are completely unfounded.

Thus it must be clear from this that Radha ji did not marry Rayana Gopa . It was A Shadow form of Radha Chayya Radha who married Rayana Gopa . Moreover Rayana Gopa himself was an Amsa of Shree krishna . Radha Rani never married someone other than Shree Krishna . She remained always present with Shree Krishna as his inseparable divine energy .

हम उक्त श्लोकों को पूरा पूरा देकर प्रकरणानुकूल वास्तविक अर्थ दिखाते हैं। उक्त प्रकरण में भगवान् श्रीकृष्ण के भिन्न अंग-प्रत्यंग से मानसी (अमैथुनी) सृष्टि का वर्णन है। जितने देव पुरुष श्रीकृष्ण के शरीर से उत्पन्न हुए हैं उन उन पुरुषों की स्त्रियां उन २ पुरुषों के वाम अंग से उत्पन्न हुई हैं। जैसे—

आविर्बभूव तत्पश्चात् कृष्णस्य परमात्मनः ।
मानसाच्च पुमानेकस्तप्तकांचनसन्निभः ॥६॥
तन्नाम 'मन्मथं' तेन प्रवदन्ति मनीषिणः ।
तस्य पुंसो वामपार्श्वात् कामस्य कामिनी वरा ।
बभूवातीव ललिता सर्वेषां मोहकारिणी ॥७।८॥

(ब्रह्म वै० ब्रह्म ख० ब्रह्म खण्ड अ० ४)

अर्थात्—उसके पश्चात् परमात्मा श्रीकृष्ण के मन से तपे हुए सुवर्ण की कान्ति वाला एक पुरुष उत्पन्न हुआ। उसको बुद्धिमान् लोग मन्मथ (कामदेव) कहते हैं। उस पुरुष कामदेव के वाम पार्श्व से (वाम अङ्ग से अति सुन्दर सब को मोहने वाली उसकी श्रेष्ठ स्त्री उत्पन्न हुई। इसी प्रकार—

आविर्बभूव कन्यैका कृष्णस्य वामपार्श्वतः ।
धावित्वा पुष्पमानीय ददावर्घं प्रभोः पदे ॥
तेन राधा समाख्याता पुराविद्भिर्द्विजोत्तम ।
प्राणाधिष्ठात्री सा देवी कृष्णस्य परमात्मनः ॥

अर्थात्—परमात्मा कृष्ण के वाम अङ्ग से एक कमनीया स्त्री उत्पन्न हुई। उसने भगवान् कृष्ण के चरणों को धोकर फूल लाकर अर्घ्य दिया, विद्वानों ने उसका नाम (आराधनात्) राधा कहा है। वह कृष्ण की प्राणाधिष्ठात्री देवी थी। अन्यत्र कहा है—

योगेनात्मा सृष्टिविधौ द्विधारूपो बभूव सः ।
पुमांश्च दक्षिणार्द्धाङ्गो वामाङ्गः प्रकृतिः स्मृतः ॥

(ब्रह्म वै० ब्रह्म० खं० अ० १२ श्लो० ६)

अर्थात्—परमात्मा श्रीकृष्ण सृष्टि रचना के समय दो रूप वाले हो गये। दाहिना आधा अङ्ग पुरुष और बांया अंग प्रकृति रूप स्त्री हुई। ब्रह्मवैवर्त पुराण का यह वर्णन वेद एवं उपनिषदों के द्वारा प्रतिपादित है। जैसे—

स वै नैव रेमे तस्मादेकाकी न रमते स द्वितीय-
मैच्छत् स हैतावानास यथा स्त्रीपुमांसौ संपरिष्वक्तौ

स इममेवात्मानं द्वेधापातयत् ततः पतिश्च पत्नी चाभवताम् । (बृहदारण्यक १ । ४ ३)

अर्थात्—उस ब्रह्म ने रमण (सृष्टि उत्पादन रूप खेल) नहीं किया था इस कारण कि वह अकेला रमण नहीं करता। उसने दूसरे की इच्छा की। जिस प्रकार परस्पर आलिङ्गित स्त्री पुरुष होते हैं, वैसा उसका स्वरूप हो गया। उसने अपने को ही दो भागों में विभक्त कर डाला। वे पति और पत्नी हुये। भगवान् श्रीकृष्ण के वामाङ्ग से श्रीराधा की उत्पत्ति का भाव है कि वे एक से दो अर्थात् पति-पत्नी रूप में हो गये।

वृषभानोश्च वैश्यस्य सा च कन्या बभूव ह ।
अयोनिसम्भवा देवी वायुगर्भा कलावती ।।
सुषुवे मायया वायुं स तत्राविर्बभूव ह ।
अतीते द्वादशाब्दे तु दृष्ट्वा तां नवयौवनाम् ।।
सार्धं रायणवैश्येन तत्सम्बन्धं चकार सः ।
छायां संस्थाप्य तद्गेहे सान्तर्धानमवाप ह ।।
बभूव तस्य वैश्यस्य विवाहश्छायया सह ।
कृष्णमाता यशोदा या रायणस्तत् सहोदरः ।।
गोलोके गोपकृष्णांशः सम्बन्धात्कृष्णमातुलः ।।
कृष्णेन सह राधायाः पुण्ये वृन्दावने वने ।
विवाहं कारयामास विधिना जगतां विधिः ।।

(ब्रह्म वै० खं० ४ अ० ४९ श्लो० ३५ से ४२)

अर्थात्—ब्रजभूमि में अवतार लेने पर वह राधा वृषभानु वैश्य

की कन्या हुईं ।।३५।। वृषभानु की स्त्री कलावती वायुगर्भा (जिसके गर्भ में केवल वायु मात्र थी) थी उसने वायु प्रसव किया। प्रसव होते ही श्री राधा देवी अयोनिजा (गर्भ से उत्पन्न न होने वाली) प्रकट हो गईं। ।।३६।। बारह वर्ष व्यतीत होने पर उनके पिता ने उन्हें नवयुवती होने वाली देख कर रायण वैश्य के साथ उनका सम्बन्ध—सगाई कर दी ।।३८।। किन्तु राधा जी अपने प्रभाव से अपने ही अनुरूप एक 'छाया' नाम की कन्या को उत्पन्न कर और उसे घर में स्थापित कर स्वयं अन्तर्धान हो गईं, रायण वैश्य का विवाह उसी 'छाया' नाम की कन्या के साथ हुआ ।।३९।। श्रीकृष्ण की पालक माता जो यशोदा थीं, रायण उनका भाई था। वह गोलोक में गोप कृष्ण का अंश (अर्थात्—उन कृष्ण के अंश से गोलोक के सृष्टि प्रकरण में जिस प्रकार अन्य अनेक व्यक्तियों की उत्पत्ति हुई थी उसी प्रकार उत्पन्न होने वाला) बना था। व्रज में उनकी पालक माता यशोदा का भाई होने के नाते श्रीकृष्ण जी का वह मामा हुआ। पवित्र वृन्दावन में श्री ब्रह्मा जी ने कृष्ण जी के साथ श्री राधा जी का विधिपूर्वक दिव्य विवाह कराया ।।४०।।

उक्त के ब्रह्म० वै० पुराण प्रकरण से स्पष्ट है कि रायण वैश्य के साथ दिव्य 'छाया' का विवाह हुआ था और श्रीकृष्ण जी के साथ श्री राधा जी का दिव्य विवाह हुआ। अतः आलोचकों का श्रीराधा जी को श्रीकृष्ण जी की पुत्री, पुत्र वधू व मामी कहना सरासर झूठ है।

What was the relationship between Shri Radha ji and Shree krishna ?

राधा का कृष्णा से क्या नाता है ?
भगवान् श्रीकृष्ण साक्षात् ब्रह्म हैं तो श्री राधिका जी उनकी अभिन्न छाया माया हैं- यह तो हुआ उनका पारमाथिक लोकोत्तर सम्बन्ध ! परन्तु व्यावहारिक सम्बन्धों में- राधा का श्रीकृष्ण से क्या नाता है ? इस विषय पर भी प्रकाश डालना परमावश्यक है, क्योंकि शास्त्र के गहरे स्वाध्याय और समन्वय के बिना इस समस्या का हल होना भी असम्भव नहीं तो अतीव कठिन अवश्य है। हम क्या कोई भी, यदि आर्ष ..न्थों में मिलने वाले राधाकृष्ण सम्बन्धी प्रसंगों का सर्वाङ्गीण समन्वय करेगा तो

वह इसी परिणाम पर पहुंचेगा कि राधा का श्रीकृष्ण से व्यावहारिक न तो कोई भी नाता हैः क्योंकि लोक में

- दादी, नानी, फूफी, मां, ताई चाची बहिन, पत्नी, साली, मामी, भाणजी श्रादि जो रवत से सम्बन्ध रखने वाले नाते रिश्ते हैं, न तो इनमें से कोई नाता श्री राधाजी के साथ कृष्ण का था और नांही–स्वकीया परकीया, गणिका, दासी आदि जो साहित्य-वर्णित स्नेहजन्य सम्बन्ध हैं, उनमें से कोई नाता भगवा से रात्रा का प्रकट होता है। हम पाठकों के सौकर्य के लिये कतिपय संभावित सम्बन्ध के विषय में कुछ कारणावलिपूर्वक विचार करते हैं जिसने हमारी पूर्व प्रर्दाशत स्थापना का तत्त्व जल्दी समझ में आ सके –
(१) श्रीकृष्णचन्द्र जी विशुद्ध क्षत्रिय कुलोत्पन्न थे और श्री राधा जी वृषभानु गोप की कन्या थीं, इसप्रकार धर्मशास्त्र की दृष्टि से उनका कोई भी वर्ण = जातिजन्य परस्पर सम्बन्ध नहीं था ।
(२) कदाचित् भगवान् कृष्ण के बाल्यकालीन पालक पिता श्रीनन्द जी को गोप जातीय होने के कारण भगवान् को भी गोप मान लिया जाय और एतावत राधा के साथ कृष्ण के वैवाहिक सम्बन्ध की कल्पना की जाए तो यह कोरी कल्पना ही रह जाती है, क्योंकि 'गर्ग-संहिता' आदि राधा-चरित्र के मुख्य ग्रन्थों में कही भी राधा कृष्ण के लौकिक विवाह का उल्लेख नहीं। केवल वर-वरण अर्थात् 'सगाई' मात्र का उल्लेख है, और वह भी नन्द के कुछ प्रतिद्वन्द्वी असहिष्णु गोपों द्वारा वृषभानु को बहकाकर उनके वैभव की परीक्षा के लिये ही हुआ है, जैसा कि, 'गर्गसंहिता' (गिरि० अध्याय ५-६) में लिखा है। यथा–
- यदि नन्दसुतः साक्षात् परिपूर्णतमो हरिः ।
- सर्वेषां पश्यतां नस्तत्परीक्षां कारय प्रभो ।। (एर्ग० ६८)
- अर्थ- [गोपों ने राधा के पिता वृषाभानु जी से कहा कि –

यदि नन्द का बेटा साक्षात् परमात्मा है तो हम सब के सामने उसकी महिमा की परीक्षा कीजिये ।
(३) जहां राधा कृष्ण का सर्वजनविदित लौकिक विवाह नहीं हुआ है वहाँ भगवान् की 'स्तनन्धय' दुधमुंही अवस्था में विश्वकर्ता ब्रह्माजी ने भाँडीरक वन में असीम आकाश के निर्मल एवं प्राकृतिक वितान-मण्डप के नीचे, मेघों की गम्भीर गर्जना और बिजली की कोलाहलपूर्ण कड़-कड़ाहट के गाजे बाजों के तुमुल निनाद में, उनके कोकोत्तर विवाह का अभिनय अवश्य किया है, जिसका पता न राधा के माता-पिता कलावती और वृषभानु को हुआ और माहीं कृष्ण के माता-पिता यशोदा और नन्दबाबा को चला, न किसी को भाईचारे की भाजी मिली और नाहीं किसी गोप ग्वाले को बाराती की हैसियत से करण का भर मिठाई मिली। राधा कृष्ण और ब्रह्मा इस त्रयी को छोड़कर संसार के किसी भी अन्य प्राणी को इसका कानों कान पता तक भी नहीं चला। शायद इसी अभूतपूर्व विवाह के कारण 'पूड़ा न पापड़ी- पटाक बहू श्रापड़ी' की लोकोक्ति प्रसिद्ध हुई हो। आइये हम आपको राधाकृष्ण के सदैव जुड़े रहने वाले बेजोड़ एवं बेमिसाल विवाह का गर्ग जी के शब्दों में फोटो दिखाए ः-

What is the relationship between Radha and Krishna? Since Bhagwan Shri Krishna is the Supreme Brahman, Shri Radhika is His inseparable divine energy—this describes their transcendental, spiritual relationship. However, in terms of their practical worldly relationship, what connection does Radha have with Krishna? This question is crucial, as resolving it requires deep study and synthesis of scriptural texts. Without thorough research, arriving at an accurate conclusion is nearly impossible or at least extremely difficult. Anyone who conducts a comprehensive study of the scriptures discussing Radha and Krishna will ultimately conclude that Radha and Krishna do not share any ordinary worldly relationship.

In society, familial and marital relationships like grandmother, aunt, mother, sister, wife, sister-in-law, maternal aunt, niece, and others define interpersonal bonds. However, none of these relationships exist between Shri Radha and Krishna. Similarly, the relationships described in literature—such as wife, beloved, courtesan, or servant—do not apply to Radha and Krishna in a worldly sense. For the convenience of the readers, let us examine some possibilities along with logical reasoning, so that the essence of our earlier statement becomes clear:

1. Shri Krishna was born into a pure Kshatriya lineage, whereas Shri Radha was the daughter of Vrishabhanu, a Gopa (cowherd). Thus, from the perspective of Dharma Shastra (scriptural law), there was no caste-based or lineage-related connection between them.
2. Some may argue that since Shri Krishna was raised by His foster father Nanda, who was also of the Gopa community, Krishna should be considered a Gopa. Based on this, one might imagine a marital connection between Krishna and Radha. However, such speculation remains mere imagination because major texts on Radha's life, such as 'Garga Samhita,' do not mention any worldly marriage between Radha and Krishna. The only reference found is regarding a ceremonial engagement, and even that was orchestrated by a few rival Gopas who misguided Vrishabhanu in order to test his wealth. This is mentioned in 'Garga Samhita' (Chapter 5-6):

यदि नन्दसुतः साक्षात् परिपूर्णतमो हरिः । सर्वेषां पश्यतां नस्तत्परीक्षां कारय प्रभो ।। (गर्ग संहिता ६८)

Meaning: The Gopas said to Radha's father, Vrishabhanu—"If Nanda's son is truly the Supreme Lord, then let Him prove His greatness in front of all of us."

3. While Radha and Krishna did not have a universally recognized worldly marriage, during Krishna's infancy, Lord Brahma performed a mystical wedding ceremony between Radha and Krishna in the sacred Bhaṇḍīraka forest. This divine event took place under the boundless sky, in a natural canopy formed by the heavens themselves, with the roaring thunder and crackling lightning serving as celestial musical instruments. However, Radha's parents, Kalavati and Vrishabhanu, were unaware of this ceremony. Likewise, Krishna's parents, Yashoda and Nanda Baba, had no knowledge of it. No relatives were invited, no Gopas attended as wedding guests, and no sweets were distributed. Except for Krishna, Radha, and Brahma, no living being in the world even heard of this divine event. Perhaps it was due to this unique wedding that the popular folk saying arose: "पूड़ा न पापड़ी – पटाक बहू श्रापड़ी" (loosely meaning "A grand affair witnessed by none").

भगवान् श्रीकृष्ण साक्षात् ब्रह्म हैं तो श्री राधिका जी उनकी अखिल ह्लादा माया हैं—यह तो हुआ उनका पारमार्थिक लोकोत्तर सम्बन्ध ! परन्तु व्यावहारिक सम्बन्धों में—राधा का श्रीकृष्ण से क्या नाता है ? इस विषय पर भी प्रकाश डालना परमावश्यक है, क्योंकि शास्त्र के गहरे स्वाध्याय और समन्वय के बिना इस समस्या का हल होना भी असम्भव नहीं तो अतीव कठिन अवश्य है। हम क्या कोई भी, यदि आर्ष ग्रन्थों में मिलने वाले राधाकृष्ण सम्बन्धी प्रसंगों का सर्वांङ्गीण समन्वय करेगा तो वह इसी परिणाम पर पहुँचेगा कि राधा का श्रीकृष्ण से व्यावहारिक नाते कोई भी नाता है : क्योंकि लोक में

—दादी, नानी, बुआ, मां, ताई, चाची, बहिन, पत्नी, साली, मामी, मौसी आदि जो रक्त से सम्बन्ध रखने वाले नाते रिश्ते हैं, न तो इनमें से कोई नाता श्री राधाजी के साथ कृष्ण का था और नहीं—स्वकीया परकीया, नायिका, दासी आदि जो साहित्य-वर्णित स्नेहजन्य सम्बन्ध हैं, उनमें से कोई नाता भगवान् से राधा का प्रकट होता है। हम पाठकों के सौकर्य के लिये कल्पित सम्भावित सम्बन्ध के विषय में कुछ धारणावलिपूर्वक विचार करते हैं जिससे हमारी पूर्व उल्लिखित स्थापना का तत्त्व अच्छी समझ में आ सके—

(१) श्रीकृष्णचन्द्र जी विशुद्ध क्षत्रिय कुलोत्पन्न थे और श्री राधा जी वृषभानु गोप की कन्या थीं, इसप्रकार धर्मशास्त्र की दृष्टि से उनका कोई भी वर्ण व जातिजन्य परस्पर सम्बन्ध नहीं था।

(२) कदाचित् भगवान् कृष्ण के बाल्यकालीन पालक पिता श्रीनन्द जी के गोप जातीय होने के कारण भगवान् को भी गोप मान लिया जाय और तदनन्तर राधा के साथ कृष्ण के वैवाहिक सम्बन्ध की कल्पना की जाए तो वह कोरी कल्पना ही रह जाती है, क्योंकि 'गर्ग-संहिता' आदि राधा-चरित्र के मुख्य ग्रन्थों में कहीं भी राधा कृष्ण के लौकिक विवाह का उल्लेख नहीं। केवल वर-वरण अर्थात् 'सगाई' मात्र का उल्लेख है, और वह भी नन्द के कुछ प्रतिद्वन्द्वी अपहिष्णु गोपों द्वारा वृषभानु को बहकाकर उनके वैभव की परीक्षा के लिये ही हुआ है, जैसा कि 'गर्गसंहिता' (गिरि० अध्याय ५-६) में लिखा है। यथा—

सर्वेषां पश्यतां नस्तत्परीक्षां कारय प्रभो ॥ (गर्ग० ६०)

अर्थ—[गोपों ने राधा के पिता वृषभानु जी से कहा कि—]

यदि नन्द का बेटा साक्षात् परमात्मा है तो हम सब के सामने उसकी महिमा की परीक्षा कीजिये।

(३) जहां राधा कृष्ण का सर्वजनविदित लौकिक विवाह नहीं हुआ है वहाँ भगवान् की 'बालरूप'=दुधमुंही अवस्था में विश्वकर्ता ब्रह्माजी ने भांडीरक वन में असीम आकाश के निर्मल एवं प्राकृतिक वितान-मण्डप के नीचे, मेघों की गम्भीर गर्जना और बिजली की कोलाहलपूर्ण कड़-कड़ाहट के बाजे बाजों के तुमुल निनाद में, उनके लोकोत्तर विवाह का अभिनय सम्पन्न किया है, जिसका पता न राधा के माता-पिता कलावती और वृषभानु को हुआ और नाहीं कृष्ण के माता-पिता यशोदा और नन्दबाबा को चला, न किसी को भाईचारे की भाजी मिली और नाहीं किसी गोप ग्वाले को बाराती की हैसियत से कण का भर मिठाई मिली। राधा=कृष्ण और ब्रह्मा इन तीनों को छोड़कर संसार के किसी भी अन्य प्राणी को इसका कानों कान पता तक भी नहीं चला। शायद इसी अभूतपूर्व विवाह के कारण 'दूल्हा न बाराती- पटाक बहु भारती' की लोकोक्ति प्रसिद्ध हुई हो। आइये हम आपको राधाकृष्ण के सर्वत्र जुड़े रहने वाले बेजोड़ एवं बेमिसाल विवाह का मर्म भी के शब्दों में फोटो दिखाएं :—

Allegations-

13. Krishna owning and dealing with slaves

📚Mahabharata 4.72.19-26📚
And Krishna gave unto each of the illustrious sons of Pandu numerous female slaves, and gems and robes..."

📚Mahabharata 1.223.48-50📚
He also gave them a thousand mules, all well- trained and possessing the speed of the wind, of white colour with black manes. And he of eyes like lotus-petals also gave unto them a thousand damsels well-skilled in assisting at bathing and at drinking, young in years and virgins all before their first-season, well-attired and of excellent complexion, each wearing a hundred pieces of gold around her neck, of skins perfectly polished, decked with every ornament, and well-skilled in every kind of personal service."

Refutation-

Here is Mahabharat 4.72.19-26 –

भगवान श्रीकृष्ण ने महात्मा पाण्डवों को दहेज या निमन्त्रण में बहुत-सी दासियाँ, नाना प्रकार के रत्न और बहुत-से वस्त्र पृथक-पृथक भेंट किये। तत्पश्चात् मत्स्य और पार्थकुल के वैवाहिक सम्बन्ध का कार्य विधिपूर्वक सम्पन्न होने लगा

"Lord Krishna gave the great Pandavas many maidservants, various kinds of jewels, and numerous garments separately as part of the dowry or invitation gifts. Thereafter, the marriage alliance between the Matsya and Partha families was ceremoniously completed."

Here it is clearly mentioned about dasis which are servants and there is a lot of difference between Slave and servant . You dont have to pay your slaves but you have to pay your servants regularly

Now coming to his allegations on Mahabharat Adi Parva 223.48-50. This Prakaran has occured in Adhaya 220 of Geeta Press Gorakhpur . Here is geeta press translation – स्नान, पान और उत्सवों में जिनका उपयोग किया गया था, जो वयःप्राप्त थीं, जिनके वेष सुंदर और कान्ति मनोहर थी, जिन्होंने सोने के सौ-सौ मणियों की कण्ठियाँ पहन रखी थीं, जिनके शरीर में रोमावलियाँ नहीं प्रकट हुई थीं, जो वस्त्राभूषणों से अलंकृत तथा सेवाके कार्यों में दक्ष थीं, ऐसी एक हजार गौरवर्णा कन्याएँ भी कमलनयन भगवान श्रीकृष्ण ने भेंट की॥४९-५०॥

"In bathing, drinking, and festive occasions, there were one thousand fair-complexioned women who were of marriageable age, beautifully attired, and radiantly charming. They adorned themselves with golden necklaces embedded with hundreds of pearls, their bodies free of any visible body hair, and they were exquisitely decorated with garments and ornaments. These women, who were also skilled in service, were presented as gifts by the lotus-eyed Lord Krishna."

Here Shree Krishna gave gifts to Arjun which includes Chariots, Horses, Trained Army personals and Trained Beautiful Maid Servants to serve the queen. Now notice the description of Dasi. The Dasi were adorned with costly and beautiful Jewellery and Diamond and Gold Ornaments and Beautiful clothes Does it fit the description of a slave? No. And again they were dasi and were paid salary for their work which included taking care of and decorating the Queen. So its ridiculous to compare them with slaves

15. Krishna indulging in gambling

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.69.20-22📚
There he saw the Lord playing at dice with His beloved consort and His friend Uddhava. Lord Kṛṣṇa worshiped Nārada by standing up, offering him a seat, and so on, and then, as if He did not know, asked him, "When did you arrive? What can needy persons like Us do for those who are full in themselves? In any case, My dear brāhmaṇa, please make My life auspicious." Thus addressed, Nārada was astonished. He simply stood up silently and went to another palace."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.56.5📚
As the people looked at Satrājit from a distance, his brilliance blinded them. They presumed he was the sun-god, Sūrya, and went to tell Lord Kṛṣṇa, who was at that time playing at dice."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.66.36📚
Distraught with fear, the people cried out to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who was then playing at dice in the royal court: "Save us! Save us, O Lord of the three worlds, from this fire burning up the city!"

Refutation-

Srimad Bhagvatam 10.56.5

4. Wearing that gem about his neck and effulgent like the Sun-god, he could hardly be visible and recognized due to its dazzling lustre, Oh king.

5. Beholding him even from a distance, people felt blinded with his brilliant splendour and believing him to be the Sun-god, reported it to the Lord who was playing at dice.

He gave refrence of Srimad Bhagavatam to Show that Lord Krishna was a gambler . You can read the translation he gave for these scriptures. Everywhere the word game of dice is used there. Even today children and adults play dice game like ludo which is a direct inspiration of chausar but it can't be referred as gambling. I don't know how this Halala Putra concluded it as gambling.

In Mahabharat Vana Parva Adhaya 13 – Shree Krishna described about the bad effects of Gambling . This is a straight debunk of allegations of gambling on Lord Krishna

This is the actual.sanskrit verse the thing to be noticed is that the word used is पानमासेवते which is foolishly translated as liquor. Same verse is there in Bhavishya Puran Brahma Parv Chapter 73 there we get to know that the word actually means Pan or Fruit. See verse 17

Padma Purana V.89.53-59a says Shree Krishna used to indulge in wine Drinking

Refutation-

Ashoke Chatterjee in his book Padma Purana A Study page number 92/281 mentioned that chapter 69-99 in Patala Khanda of Padma Purana (Including chapter 89) are later interpolations and were inserted later on in Padma Purana between 11-12th Century AD . Thus this chapter 74 which he alleged is an interpolation

This part consists of chaps 69 99 of the Patāla-khanda This portion is neither the work of the Ramaites nor that of the Linga worshippers

This group seems to have come from a very late date We have seen how it depicts a picture of a developed Radha

Some 200 years' time should be given to the group 2 to attain recognition Then obviously this part dates between 1150-1200 AD

Group 3

This part consists of chaps 69 90 of the Pātāla-khaṇḍa. This portion is neither the work of the Rāmaites nor that of the Linga worshippers, but definitely a contribution of the Bhāgavata Vaiṣṇavas who put a stamp of their own sect on it by supplementing it with some new chaps of their own interest. In the discussion of group 2 we have shown how the Linga worshippers of the Pāśupata sect describe Śiva being praised by Rama. The present group, it appears, is a recast by the Bhāgavata-Vaiṣṇavas who have paid back the Linga worshippers in their own coin. In this group it is seen that Pārvatī and Īśvara were glorifying the Māhātmya and celebrity of Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā—His eternal consort, and Vṛndāvana—their eternal blissful abode. Rādhā has been highly eulogised. She is conceived as the eternal Prakṛti. She pervades the whole universe, phenomenal and real and is the prime cause of creation, existence and destruction. She is self-luminous and illumines the external objects. The eternal unity of Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā is the Supreme Truth and this unity must be realised in order to reach the highest goal—the summum bonum of human life. Rādhā is the abode of the highest bliss, and beauty. She is the essence of all fair instincts. She is the concept of love but this love or Prema is high

This group seems to have come from a very late date. We have seen how it depicts a picture of a developed Rādhā cult. Moreover, it abounds in references to Tulasī[39]. Traces of Tāntricism are also vividly observable[40]. Āgama has been admitted as an authority[41]. Tāntric mudrās, nyāsas have been referred to more than once[42]. Mandala and Yantra have been regarded as the medium of worship[43]. All these tend to assign a much later date to this part. We have also shown that it has been contributed later than the group 2, the date of which is c. 950-1000 A.D. Some 200 years' time should be given to the group 2 to attain recognition. Then obviously this part dates between 1150-1200 A.D. And this may be accepted if we keep the fact in view that Gopālabhaṭṭa (of 1400 A.D.) in his Hari-Bhakti-vilāsa has quoted numerous vss from this part[44], and the contents of these chaps are given in the Nāradīya-p. I 93 which is also of a very later origin

In Vana Parva, Adhyaya 13 of the Mahabharata, Shree Krishna explicitly condemns alcohol consumption as a destructive and blameworthy habit that ruins a person morally and socially. This direct statement by Krishna himself serves as a strong refutation against any claims or allegations made by "Malechhas" who try to malign his image by falsely attributing to him indulgence in wine or intoxicants.

Vana Parva Adhaya 13

Shree Krishna Uvach-

स्त्रियोंके प्रति आसक्ति, जुआ खेलना, शिकार खेलनेका शौक और मद्यपान – ये चार प्रकारके भोग कामनाजनित दुःख बताये गये हैं, जिनके कारण मनुष्य अपने धन-ऐश्वर्यसे भ्रष्ट हो जाता है। शास्त्रोंके निपुण विद्वान् सभी परिस्थितियोंमें इन चारोंको निन्दनीय मानते हैं; परंतु द्यूतक्रीडाको तो जूएके दोष जाननेवाले लोग विशेषरूपसे निन्दनीय समझते हैं ।। ७-८ ।।

"Attachment to women, gambling, fondness for hunting, and drinking Alchohol —these four kinds of indulgences, arising from desire, are said to be causes of suffering, due to which a man is ruined in terms of wealth and prosperity. Scholars well-versed in the scriptures consider all four of these to be blameworthy under any circumstance; however, those who understand the evils of gambling regard it as especially reprehensible. Slokas 7-8

Not only this in In the Vanaparva (Book of the Forest) of the Mahabharata, Chapter 15, it is mentioned that Shri Krishna and other Yadava leaders, following the scriptural injunctions, imposed a complete ban on any kind of alcohol consumption in the city of Dwarka.

Hence, it is clear from this that the scriptures indeed prohibit alcohol consumption.

Furthermore, Shri Krishna himself never supported alcohol consumption in any form, nor did he ever partake in it himself.

“O jewel of the Bharata dynasty! The city of Dvārakā was secured with all the best protective measures as prescribed in the scriptures. O best of the Kurus! Many valiant warriors like Gad, Sāmba, and Uddhava—capable of facing enemies—were stationed with numerous chariots for the defense of the city. These warriors were born in renowned lineages and had already proven their strength and valor in times of war. They were positioned in the central fortress (Madhyama Gulma) of the city, fully committed to its defense.

To ensure that everyone remained alert, Ugrasena and Uddhava—along with others—gave flags into the hands of the cavalry who had the power to destroy enemy battalions, and had a proclamation made throughout the entire city: 'No one should consume liquor (madya-pāna).'"

He attacked from everywhere and the battle began. O best of the Bharata lineage! O king! The city was ready everywhere, with flags, gates, troops, fences, machines, miners, barricaded streets, turrets, towers, hair-graspers, catapults that hurled flaming missiles, water vessels, kettledrums, musical instruments, army drums, kindling, straw, grass, shataghnis, ploughs, bhushundis, rocks, clubs, weapons, battleaxes, iron shields and machines that hurled fire and iron. There were warriors from famous lineages, their valour having been witnessed in battle. The middle and upper parts of the fortifications were protected well and the upper parts had cavalry and infantry. Ugrasena, Uddhava and the others announced in the city that no one should drink, so that there should not be carelessness in protection. Knowing that they would be killed by King Shalva if they were intoxicated, all the Vrishnis and the Andhakas remained sober. The guards entrusted with the treasuries of Anarta swiftly drove out all the actors,

Krishna recommended the slaughtering of animals for worshipping Govardhan Mountain and also consumed the flesh of animals that were offered by the people,

📚Vishnu Purana 5.10.36-49📚
Let prayer and offerings then be addressed to the mountain Govarddhana, and kill a victim in due form. Let the whole station collect their milk without delay, and feed with it the Brahmans and all who may desire to partake of it. When the oblations have been presented, and the Brahmans have been fed, let the Gopas circumambulate the cows, decorated with garlands of autumnal flowers. If the cowherds will attend to these suggestions, they will secure the favour of the mountain, of the cattle, and also mine." When Nanda and the other Gopas heard these words of Krishńa, their faces expanded with delight, and they said that he had spoken well. "You have judged rightly, child," exclaimed they; "we will do exactly as you have proposed, and offer adoration to the mountain." Accordingly the inhabitants of Vraja worshipped the mountain, presenting to it curds and milk and flesh; and they fed hundreds and thousands of Brahmans, and many other guests, who came to the ceremony, even as Krishńa had enjoined: and when they had made their offerings, they circumambulated the cows and the bulls, that bellowed as loud as roaring clouds. Upon the summit of Govarddhana, Krishńa presented himself, saying, "I am the mountain," and partook of much food presented by the Gopas; whilst in his own form as Krishńa he ascended the hill along with the cowherds, and worshipped his other self. Having promised them many blessings, the mountain-person of Krishńa vanished; and the ceremony being completed, the cowherds returned to their station."

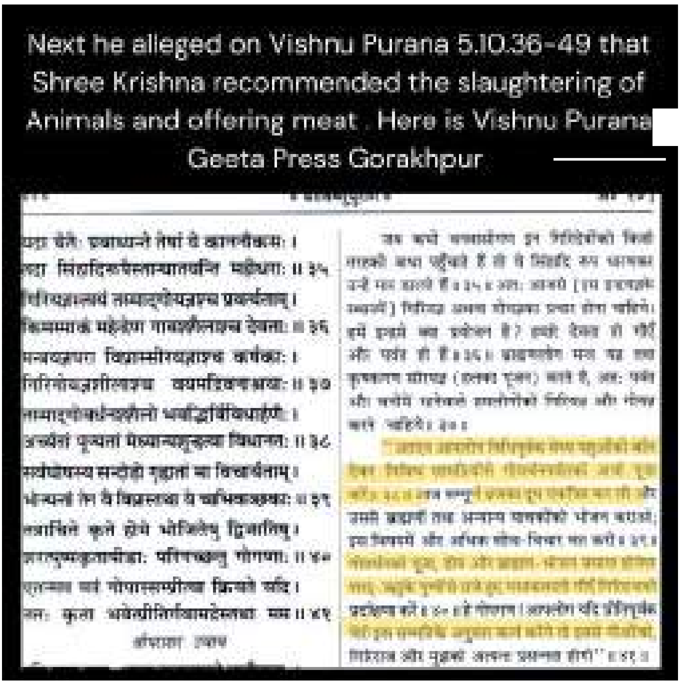
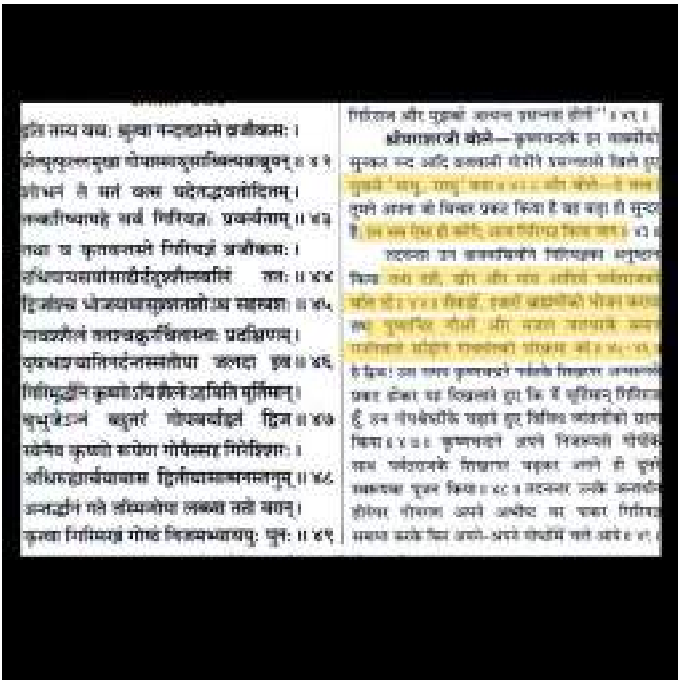
and offering meat . Here is Vishnu Purana Geeta Press Gorakhpur



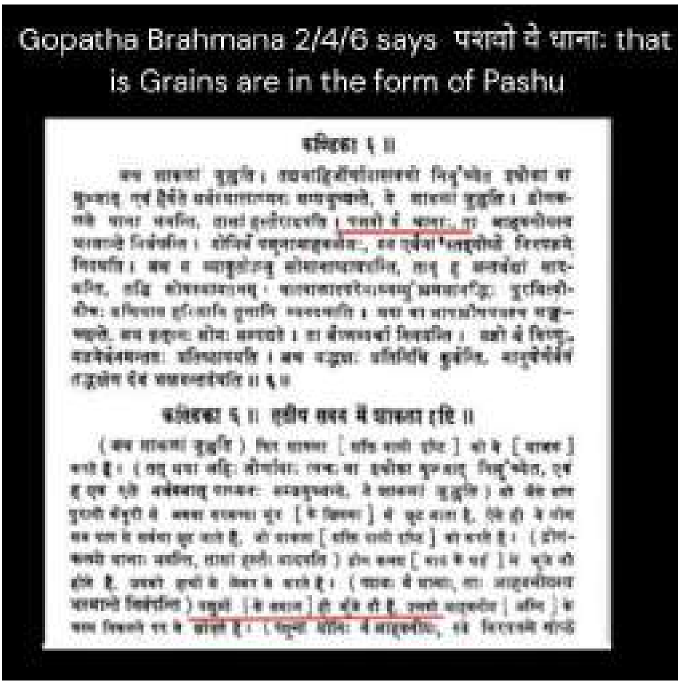


Here use of Pashu and Mans is mentioned but what is Pashu and Mans as per Shruti

Taittriya Brahmana 1/8/6/1-3 says पशवो वै पुरोडाशाः which means "Purodāśa [Sacrificial cake made up of Rice and Barley] is also called a Pashu (Animal) "

Taittriya Samhita 2.3.2.8 says दधि मधु घृतम् आपो धाना भवन्ति एतद् वै पशूनाः रूपम् which means The curd, honey, butter, water, and grains are forms of Pashu

Gopatha Brahmana 2/4/6 says पशवो वे धाना: that is Grains are in the form of Pashu



Thus keeping this Shruti Vakya in Mind here too Pashu should be interpreted as Purodosa .

[Verse 30]
The beautiful women of the royal palace of King Virata, led by Queen Sudeshna, came to visit Queen Draupadi. All of them had exceedingly attractive features and wore pure gemstone-studded earrings.

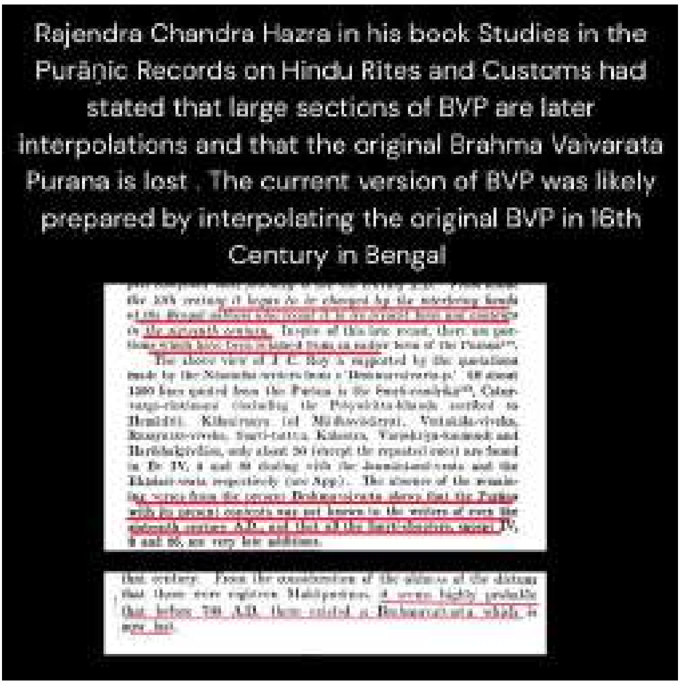
63 Make them cooked meat and food.
Make the ingredients for the perfect dishes, O lord of the earth.

Refutation-

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

17. What happened to the wives of Krishna after his death?

16,100 wives of Krishna were abducted by bandits,

📚Devi Bhagavatam Purana 2.8.1-23📚
The high-souled descendants of Yadu, intoxicated by drinking wine, fought against each other and were extirpated in the presence of Kṛṣṇa and Balarām. Balarām then quitted his mortal coil; the lotus-eyed Bhagavān Kṛṣṇa quitted his life, struck by the arrows of a hunter, to payrespect to a Brāhmin's curse. Vasudeva heard of Hari's quitting his mortal coil, and meditated the Goddess of the Universe within his heart and left his holy life. Arjuna became very sorry; he went to Prabhāsa and performed the funeral obsequies of all duly. Seeing the dead body of Hari, Arjuna collected fuel and burnt his body together with his eight principal wives; he burnt also Balarām's body with that of his wife Revatī. Arjuna, then, went to the Dvārakā city and removed all the inhabitants of the city when the whole Dwārkā city of Vāsudeva was drowned in the waters of the ocean. While Arjuna was taking all the persons with him after getting out of Dwārkā, he felt himself very weak on the way; and therefore a band of robbers, known by the name of Ābhīras plundered all the wealth and all the wives of Kṛṣṇa. Arjuna, of indomitable valour, after his arrival at Indraprastha made Vajra, Aniruddha's son, the king of the place."

📚Linga Purana 1.69.86-87📚
Kṛṣṇa abandoned the human form under the pretext of the arrow of the hunter Jaraka, and after blessing that hunter he returned to heaven. Due to the curse of Aṣṭāvakra as also due to his own Māyā (power) the wives of lord Kṛṣṇa were abducted by thieves."

📚Devi Bhagavatam Purana 4.25.58-64📚
"he good-looking S'amkara saying these words remained silent; then S'rî Krisna bowed down at the feet of Girijâ, the wife of S'amkara. Then the Goddess Pârvatî addressed repeatedly to Vâsudeva and said:– O mighty armed! O Krisna! O best of human beings! You will be the typical exemplary householder; (all people will try to follow you). When one hundred years will pass away, your race will be extinct, due to the curse of the Brâhmana and Gândhâri. Your sons and the other Yâdavas will lose their senses on drinking liquor; they will kill each other in the battle field and thus will be extirpated. You should know that there can be no remedy to what will inevitably come to pass; therefore no one is to grieve for them; this is all along my view. O Madhusûdana! After Your death, due to the curse of Astâvakra Muni, your wives will be forcibly stolen away by indomitable robbers. There is no doubt in this."

Refutation-

Now coming to the allegations on what happened to his wives after his departure back to Vaikuntha Mahabharata Swargarohan Parva Section 5 which is more authoritative over Linga Purana and Devi Bhagvatam and other Puranas

वे जो नारायण नामसे प्रसिद्ध सनातन देवाधिदेव हैं उन्हींके अंश वसुदेवनन्दन श्रीकृष्ण थे, जो अवतारका कार्य पूरा करके पुनः अपने स्वरूपमें प्रविष्ट हो गये ।।

इस प्रकार उस महाभारत नामक महायुद्धमें जो-जो वीर महारथी घटोत्कच आदि मारे गये थे वे देवताओं और यक्षोंके लोकोंमें गये ।। २७ ।।

He was Vasudevanandan Sri Krishna, a part of the eternal Lord of the Devas known as Narayana, who completed the work of incarnation and re-entered his form

O Janamejaya! The sixteen thousand wives of Lord Krishna, having got the opportunity, jumped into the Saraswati river and gave up their lives. 25.

After renouncing their bodies there, they all went back to Swarga and became Apsaras and again appeared in the service of Lord Krishna

In this way, the brave warriors like Ghatotkacha etc. who were killed in the great war called Mahabharata, went to the worlds of Devas and Yakshas.

Lets see Shripad Vallabhacharya explanation on Srimad Bhagavatam 10.52.5 in his Subodhini

सुबोधिनी – नीयमाने इति । वृथैव धनं न परित्याज्यमिति, राज्ञे देयमिति, यवनधनं च न ग्राह्यमित्युभय साधयितुं किञ्चिद्दूरं गृहीत्वा गतवानित्यर्थः । तत्कटकस्था एव वाहकाः पदा तयो बलोवर्दाश्च । ते सर्वे भगवता प्रेरिताः जरा सन्धस्य सुखार्थम् । जये हि किञ्चित्प्राप्यत इति।

ाख्यार्थ-धन को फिजूल छोड़ना नहीं चाहिए फिजूल जावे उससे वह राजा को देना

चाहिए अर्थात् यों ही पड़ा हुआ घन राजा का है और यह धन यवन का है वह ग्रहण करने के बोल नहीं है अब भगवान् को दोनों बात सिद्ध करनी है इसलिए वह धन लेकर कुछ दूर गए भार उठाते वाले प्यादे और बैल उसकी सेना में ही स्थित थे वे सब जरासन्ध के सुख के लिए भगवान् के भेरे हुवे थे जोत होने पर कुछ मिलता ही है वह मिला हुआ धन उन भेजे हुवे को देने के लिए ही आए थे इस वक्त ही भगवदिच्छा से तेवीस अक्षोहिणी सेना को साथ ले कर जरासन्ध आ गया तेवौर ही क्यों लाया ? इसलिए इतनी लाया जो विशेष लाता तो समग्र प्रजा नष्ट हो जाती अतः प्रजा से न ला कर केवल प्राकृत हो लाए अतः सर्वत्र तेवीस अक्षोहिणी ही कहा है ।।६।

Subodhinī explains:
"We should not abandon wealth needlessly. If left unused, it should be given to the king. Likewise, the wealth belonging to a Yavana (foreigner) should not be accepted.
To establish both points, Bhagavān (the Lord) took the wealth a short distance away.
The bearers of the load and the oxen (used for transport) were already stationed in the camp of the army.
All of them had been appointed by the Lord for the welfare of Jarāsandha.
(As the saying goes:) 'In plowing, one always gains something.' So, the gained wealth was to be given to those sent by Him.
At that very time, Jarāsandha arrived—by divine will—with a force of 23 Akṣauhiṇī divisions.
Why only 23? Because had he brought more, the entire populace might have been destroyed. So, rather than conscripting common citizens (prakṛti), he brought only non-civilian (prākṛta) warriors.
That is why, in all references, it is said that 23 Akṣauhiṇīs were brought."

Allegations-

Srimad Bhagvatam 10.8.31 says When Krishna used to get angry he used to pass stool and poop in others houses

Text 31: "When Kṛṣṇa is caught in His naughty activities, the master of the house will say to Him, 'Oh, You are a thief,' and artificially express anger at Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa will then reply, 'I am not a thief. You are a thief.' Sometimes, being angry, Kṛṣṇa passes urine and stool in a neat, clean place in our houses. But now, our dear friend Yaśodā, this expert thief is sitting before you like a very good boy." Sometimes all the gopīs would look at Kṛṣṇa sitting there, His eyes fearful so that His mother would not chastise Him, and when they saw Kṛṣṇa's beautiful face, instead of chastising Him they would simply look upon His face and enjoy transcendental bliss. Mother Yaśodā would mildly smile at all this fun, and she would not want to chastise her blessed transcendental child.

Are Woman , Shudras and Vaishyas included in Papyoni ? No –

An Explanation by Geeta Press Gorakhpur

Special Point In this verse, the term pāpayonayaḥ appears as an independent expression. It cannot be taken as a qualifier for women, Vaiśyas, or Śūdras—because doing so leads to several contradictions. Women belong to all four varṇas. Among them, Brahmin, Kṣatriya, and Vaiśya women have the right to participate with their husbands in yajñas and other Vedic rituals. So how can they be called pāpayonayaḥ? Clearly, they cannot be.

Although women are included in all four varṇas, the Lord has mentioned them separately. This implies that women are not restricted to reaching Him only through their husbands. They can attain the supreme goal independently by taking exclusive refuge in the Lord. Therefore, women should take shelter in the Lord alone, without mentally relying on anyone else.

If the term pāpayonayaḥ is applied to Vaiśyas, that too does not hold, because according to the śruti, Vaiśyas are not considered pāpayoni. In fact, Vaiśyas have full authority to study the Vedas and perform Vedic rituals like yajñas.

If it is applied to Śūdras, that also does not hold. Śūdras are included within the four varṇas. So, those outside the varṇic system—such as Yavanas, Hūṇas, Khasas, and other socially marginalized groups—should be considered within the scope of pāpayonayaḥ.

Just as no child is forbidden from going into a mother's lap—because all are her children—similarly, since all beings are parts of the Divine, no one is denied approach to God.

Animals, birds, trees, and vines do not possess the understanding or aptitude to seek the Lord; yet, due to past karmic impressions or other reasons, they may still come before Him. Therefore, the term pāpayonayaḥ can also be extended to include animals and birds in exceptional cases. In fact, even among animals and birds, devotees like Gajendra and Jaṭāyu have attained the Lord.

इस श्लोकमें 'पापयोनयः' पद स्वतन्त्ररूपसे आया है। इस पदको स्त्रियों, वैश्यों और शूद्रोंका विशेषण नहीं माना जा सकता; क्योंकि ऐसा माननेपर कई बाधाएँ आती हैं। स्त्रियाँ चारों वर्णोंकी होती हैं। उनमेंसे ब्राह्मणों, क्षत्रियों और वैश्योंकी स्त्रियोंको अपने-अपने पतियोंके साथ यज्ञ आदि वैदिक कर्मोंमें बैठनेका अधिकार है। अतः स्त्रियोंको पापयोनि कैसे कह सकते हैं? अर्थात् नहीं कह सकते। चारों वर्णोंमें आते हुए भी भगवान्‌ने स्त्रियोंका नाम अलगसे लिया है। इसका तात्पर्य है कि स्त्रियाँ पतिके साथ ही मेरा आश्रय ले सकती हैं, मेरी तरफ चल सकती हैं—ऐसा कोई नियम नहीं है। स्त्रियाँ स्वतन्त्रतापूर्वक मेरा आश्रय लेकर परमगतिको प्राप्त हो सकती हैं। इसलिये स्त्रियोंको किसी भी व्यक्तिका मनसे किंचिन्मात्र भी आश्रय न लेकर केवल मेरा ही आश्रय लेना चाहिये।

अगर इस 'पापयोनयः' पदको वैश्योंका विशेषण माना जाय, तो यह भी युक्तिसंगत नहीं बैठता। कारण कि श्रुतिके अनुसार वैश्योंको पापयोनि नहीं माना जा सकता*। वैश्योंको तो वेदोंके पढ़नेका और यज्ञ आदि वैदिक कर्मोंके करनेका पूरा अधिकार दिया गया है।

If one who is given to vile conduct propitiates Me without any distraction then he-should, indeed, be considered noble, he having rightly resolved. Swiftly does he become a man of righteousness and attains eternal peace. O Kaunteya, know for certain that My devotee shall never perish. Having taken refuge in Me alone, O Partha, the ones born in unmeritorious wombs, the women, the traders and similarly the menials also attain the Supreme Goal. What then of the pure men of Wisdom and of devoted royal sages having attained this world of impermanent pleasures, propitiate Me.. (Therefore) be mentally attuned to Me be devoted to Me, propitiate Me, bow down to Me and you shall, verily, disciplining yourself towards Me with equanimous mind come to Me.

Krishna killed an innocent Washerman (Dhobi) for no reason in Srimad Bhagavatam 10.41.37: As the washerman thus spoke brazenly, the son of Devaki became angry, and then merely with His fingertips, He separated the man's head from his body.

Refutation-

There was a genuine reason for killing the washerman. Krishna killed the washerman to stop his blasphemy and then to give Moksha. In his Previous Birth The washerman talked bad words regarding Rama's relationship with Sita during his previous birth and incurred a huge sin for talking bad words about Maa Sita but Rama didn't choose to punish the washerman for that big Sin but instead he chose to punish the Washerman in Dwaparyug and free him from his big Sin and grant him Moksha

Sri Garga Samhita Geeta Press Gorakhpur Canto 5 (Shri Mathurakhanda) Chapter 10

बहुलाश्वने पूछा- देवर्षे ! आपके मुखसे मैंने
भगवान् श्रीकृष्णके पावन चरित्रका श्रवण किया, किंतु पुनः अधिकाधिक सुननेकी इच्छा हो रही है। जैसे प्यासा प्राणी जलकी इच्छा करता है, उसी तरह मेरा मन आज श्रीकृष्ण-चरित्रको सुनना चाहता है। आपने कंसके जन्म-कर्मोंका वर्णन किया और मैंने सुना। केशी आदि बड़े-बड़े दैत्योंके पूर्वजन्मकी बातें भी मैंने सुनीं। अब यह जानना चाहता हूँ कि अहो ! जिसकी महती ज्योति श्रीकृष्णमें लीन हुई, वह धोबी
पूर्वजन्ममें कौन था? और श्रीहरिने उसका वध क्यों किया ? ॥ १-३॥
नारदजीने कहा – विदेहराज ! त्रेतायुगकी बात है, अयोध्यापुरीमें श्रीरामचन्द्रजी राज्य करते थे। उनके राज्यकालमें प्रजाकी मनोवृत्ति एवं दुःख-सुख जाननेके लिये गुप्तचर घूमा करते थे। एक दिन उन गुप्तचरोंके सुनते हुए किसी धोबीने अपनी भार्यासे कहा-'तू दुष्टा है और दूसरेके घरमें रहकर आयी है; इसलिये अब तुझे मैं नहीं रखूँगा। स्त्रीके लोभी राजा राम भले ही सीताको रख लें, किंतु मैं तुझे नहीं स्वीकार करूँगा।' इस प्रकार बहुत से लोगोंके मुखसे आक्षेपयुक्त बात सुनकर श्रीराघवेन्द्रने लोकापवादके भयसे सहसा सीताको वनमें त्याग दिया। रघुकुल-तिलक श्रीरामने उस धोबीको दण्ड देनेकी इच्छा नहीं की। वही द्वापरके अन्तमें मथुरापुरीमें फिर धोबी ही हुआ। उसने सीताके प्रति जो कुवाच्य कहा था, उस दोषकी शान्तिके लिये श्रीहरिने स्वयं ही उसका वध किया, तथापि उन श्रीकरुणानिधिने उस धोबीको मोक्ष प्रदान किया। राजन् ! दयालु श्रीकृष्णचन्द्रका यह परम अद्भुत चरित्र मैंने तुमसे कहा। अब पुनः क्या सुनना चाहते हो ? ॥४-९ ॥
बहुलाश्वने पूछा- मुनिश्रेष्ठ ! पूर्वजन्ममें वह दर्जी कौन था, जिसे भगवान् श्रीकृष्णने अपना सारूप्य प्रदान किया ? ॥ १० ॥

अपने हाथोंसे इनके अङ्गोंमें वस्त्र पहिनाऊँ। श्रीरघुनाथजी सर्वज्ञ हैं। उन्होंने मन-ही-मन उसे वर दे दिया कि 'द्वापरके अन्तमें भारतीय व्रज मण्डलमें तुम्हारा मनोरथ पूर्ण होगा।' श्रीरामचन्द्रजीके वरदानसे वही यह दर्जी मथुरामें प्रकट हुआ था, जिसने उन दोनों बन्धुओंकी वेष-रचना करके उनका सारूप्य प्राप्त कर लिया ॥ ११-१६ ॥

Bahulāśva asked: "O divine sage! I have heard the sacred stories of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa from your lips, yet my desire to hear more continues to grow. Just as a thirsty soul longs for water, so too does my heart yearn to hear more of Kṛṣṇa's divine deeds. You have narrated the birth and actions of Kaṁsa, and I have listened. I've also heard about the previous births of great demons like Keśī. Now I wish to know—O wonder!—the washerman whose brilliance merged into Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who was he in his past life? And why did the Lord slay him?"

Nārada replied: "O King of Videha! This tale belongs to the Tretā Yuga, when Lord Śrī Rāma ruled in Ayodhyā. During his reign, secret agents roamed to understand the thoughts and well-being of the people. One day, while listening to the people, a washerman was heard saying to his wife: 'You are impure, having lived in another man's house. I will not keep you. Though King Rāma may accept Sītā, I will not accept you.'

Hearing such accusations from many mouths, Śrī Rāma, fearing public reproach, sent Sītā to the forest. The noble scion of the Raghu dynasty did not wish to punish the washerman. That same washerman was reborn in Mathurā at the end of the Dvāpara Yuga. Because of his harsh words toward Sītā, Lord Hari Himself slew him to cleanse that sin. Yet, the compassionate Lord granted him liberation. O King! This is the wondrous tale of merciful Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Now, what else would you like to hear?"

पौराणिक-स्वरूप
(क) स्तेयं स्वाद्वत्त्यथ दधिपयः कल्पितैः स्तेययोगैः ।२६।
(ख) हस्ताग्राह्य रचयति विधि पीठकोलूखलाद्यैः ।

(श्रीमद्भागवत १० । ८ । २६-३०)
अर्थात् (क) भगवान् कृष्ण बनावटी चोरी के अनेक ढंग बनाकर स्वादिष्ट दही दूध माखन आदि चुरा कर खा जाते थे । (ख) कदाचित् माखन ऊंचे छींके पर रक्खा हो और वहाँ तक हाथ न पहुंचता हो तो भगवान् पीढ़े ऊखल आदि चीजों का मचान बाँध लेते थे। यदि यह वस्तुवें भी न मिलें तो लठिया के साथ छींके पर लटकती हुई माखन की हंडिया में छेद करके ही अपना काम निकाल लिया करते थे ।
विस्कुटभोजी मौजी महाशयों को इस बालकेलि में भी चोरी की दफा आयद होती नजर आती है, परन्तु उन्हें यह मालूम नहीं कि जब घर का स्वामी हाथ बांध कर निरन्तर अपनी किसी वस्तु को उड़ा ले जाने की प्रार्थना करता रहा हो, तब कभी एक दिन बड़े नाजो नखरे के साथ नन्दकिशोर चोर ने भक्त की ओर कृपा कोर को हो और

नीतं यदि नवनीतं, नीतं नीतं च कि तेन । आतपतापितभूमौ माधव ! माधाव ! माधाव !!
अर्थात् – [माखन उठाकर भागते हुए कृष्ण को देखकर घर की मालकिन गोपी प्रेमविह्वल होकर कहती है कि] प्यारे कृष्ण! यदि तैने माखन ले लिया तो ले लिया, इससे क्या हुआ, हे माधव ! तू नंगे पाँवों इस धूप से तपी हुई भूमि पर मत भाग! बिल्कुल मत दौड़ !
कभी लुटे हुवे व्यक्ति चोरों के लिये भी इस तरह हमदर्दी दिखाया करते हैं ? और सुनिये एक दिन भगवान् यशोदा जी से कह रहे थे कि-
(क) मैय्यारो मोही माखन भावे । जो मेवा, पकवान कहत तू मोहि नहीं रुचि आवे ।

- वहां एक ग्वालिन खड़ी यह बात सुन रही थी, वह मन ही मन सोचने लगी कि-
  (ख) ब्रज युवती इक पाछे ठाड़ी सुनत श्याम की बात ।। मन में कहत कभू अपने घर देखू माखन खात ।। बैठें जाय मथनिया के ढिग तब मैं रहौं छिपानी । सूरदास प्रभु अन्तर्यामी ग्वालिन मन को जानी ॥
- एक दूसरी ग्वालिन तो साफ ही कह उठी कि –
  (ग) धेनु के चरैया प्यारे भय्या बलभद्र जू के, नन्द के ललैया मोरे अंगना मे आउरे ।

दही दूध बहुत प्याऊं माखन धनो सो लाऊं, मीठी मीठी तान नेक गाय के सुनाउरे ।।
नन्द जू के किशोर ! मेरे चितहू के चोर, नेक तो अधर धर बांसुरी बजाउरे । या छवि ऊपर कोटि काम वार डारे, दया सखी प्रेमवश हिय में समाऊ रे ॥

- इस तरह लंबी चौड़ी प्रार्थना के बाद तब कभी हमारे चोरराज ने चोरी करनी स्वीकार की-
  (ब) गए श्याम तिहि ग्वालिन के घर ।
  हरि आवत गोपी जब जान्यो आपन रही छिपाई । सूने सदन मथनिया के डिग बैठि गए अरगाई ।।
  माखन भरी कमोरी देखी लै लै लागे खान ।
  चिते रही मणि खंभ छाहिं तन तासों करें सयान ।।
  प्रथम आज मैं चोरी आये भलो बन्यो है संग । आप खात प्रतिबिम्ब खवावत गिरत कहत का रंग ।।
  सुन सुन बात श्याम के मुख की उमग हंसी सुकुमारी । सूरदास प्रभु निरखि ग्वालिन मुख तब भजि चले मुरारी ।।
  यदि इतने पर भी महाशयों की तसल्ली न हो तो उनके लिये अदालत का दरवाजा खुला पड़ा है, जाकर हम कृष्णभक्तों को नालिश कर दें कि 'सनातनर्धामयों के इष्टदेव ने हमारे नक्कड़ दादा का सवा सात मन माखन चुरा खाया, हर्जाना मिलना चाहिए। फिर देखिये कि पौने पाँच साल की आयु वाले दूधमुंहे कृष्ण पर कौन सी दफा कायम होती है।
  जिस नाखन-लीला के चिन्तन से रसखान सरीखे अहिन्दू कवियों का भी चित्त गद्गद हो उठता था, यदि उसी लीला पर हिन्दुत्व का दम भरने वाले अधकचरे महाशय कुछ बकवास करें तो यह उनकी हिमाकत ही समझनी चाहिए ।
- ऊपर के पद्यों के अनुसार एक तो हमारे कृष्ण भगवान् हैं कि जिन्हें हम सौ सौ बार अपना दही माखन खिलाने को पुकारते हैं तब कभी वे एक आध बार अपनी कृपा दिखाते हैं। उधर दयानन्दियों का भूखड़ निराकार है कि जो 'मानः प्रिया०' आदि मन्त्र की व्याख्यानुसार स्वामी दयानन्द जी द्वारा हजार बार झिड़का जाने पर भी सूखे बिस्कुटों पर दलबल सहित छापा मारे बिना नहीं मानता ! यदि सुज्ञ पाठक दोनों सम्प्रदायों की भावना और उनके इष्टदेवों की सभ्यता का तुलनात्मक दृष्टि से विचार करेंगे तो उन्हें विदित हो जायगा कि एक ओर प्रार्थना है तो दूसरी ओर फटकार ! इधर प्रेमरस की उमंगें हैं तो उधर हाहाकार !! यहाँ हाथी की तरह भूमते हुवे नखरे से मलीदा खाना, तो वहां 'देख बिगानी चोपड़ी गिर पड़ वेईमान' कहावत का इजहार !

यह सर्व विदित बात है, कि हिन्दू जाति सदा से निरामिष भोजी रही है। हमारे पूर्वज ऋषि महर्षि राजा रङ्क सभी सात्विक अन्न खाकर ही जीवन बिताया करते थे । शारीरिक शक्ति की अभिवृद्धि के लिए वे दुग्ध घृतादि का पर्याप्त सेवन करते थे। मानव जीवन के लिए नितान्त उपयोगी इस प्रकार के पदार्थों जीवन की आधारमय वस्तुओं – यहाँ तक की शरीर और प्राणों तक का भी, चाँदो तांबे की ठीकरियों से मोल करने वाले स्वार्थान्ध मनुष्य कहीं विक्रय न करने लग जावें, एतदर्थं उन्होंने इनका विक्रय अपने आदेशों द्वारा सर्वथा रोक रक्खा था ।
किन्तु समय के प्रभाव से आधुनिक काल की भाँति उस समय भी समाज में भी इस आज्ञा की अवहेलना की जाने लगी थी। गोप गोपियां सहस्रों की संख्या में मथुरा के बाजारों में दुग्ध घूतादि बेचने जाने लगे ये । आवश्यकता ते अधिक घन को इकट्ठा कर घर में जमा रखने की प्रवृत्ति ने उनको इस पाप की और ढकेला। चांदी के चमकते टुकड़ों का लोभ दिखाकर नागरिकों ने उन बेचारे भोले भाले ग्रामीणों के रक्त को चूसना प्रारम्भ कर कर दिया। कंस के काले कानून भी इस प्रथा को पर्याप्त प्रोत्साहन देते थे क्योंकि इस तरह बिकने वाले गोरस पर जजिया ‾र द्वारा राजसत्ता को प्रभूत लाभ होता था ।

भगवान् कृष्ण को यह कुरीदियां बहुत अखरों। उनकी दृष्टि में यह प्रथा समाज के लिए कलङ्क थी और भावी सन्तान को निर्बल बनाने वाली थी। इन वस्तुओं के विक्रय का समाज पर क्या दुष्प्रभाव पड़ता है, वर्तमान समय के करुण चित्र को देखकर यह भली भांति समझा जा सकता है। आज भारत के उन लाखों मनुष्यों को, जो कि ठेठ देहातों में बैठे घी दूध पैदा करने के लिये खून पसीना एक करते हैं दुग्ध घृतादि के दर्शन भी नहीं होते। कंस जैसे शासक की राजधानी के नागरिकों के संसर्ग से, गोपियों के आचरण पर दूषित प्रभाव पड़ने का पूरा अन्देशा भी था । अतः उनका इस प्रकार खुले आम वहां जाना भला उस समाज-सुधारक को कैसे सह्य हो सकता था ?

एक बात और, भारत सर्वदा से कृषि प्रधान देश रहा है। यहाँ के प्राचीन निवासी अपने अमूल्य गोधन पर सदा गर्व करते रहे हैं, किन्तु उस समय नागरिकों ने अपनी इस अमूल्य निधि की उपेक्षा करनी प्रारम्भ कर दी थी। आज की तरह घन के बल पर संसार की सम्पूर्ण वस्तुओं को सुलथ समझने की प्रवृत्तिकी ओर से भी बालकृष्ण के हृदय में घृणा उत्पन्न हो गई थी। फल यह हुआ कि इन कारणों के उपस्थित होने पर उन्होंते इस कुरीति को बन्द करने के लिये पग बढ़ाया । पहिले वे गोपों को समझाते और शिक्षा देते रहे, किन्तु लोभ तथा कंस के भय के कारण वे इस ओर कुछ ध्यान नहीं देते थे। अब विवश होकर उन्हें क्रियात्मक पग उठाना पड़ा ! सर्व प्रथम अपनी अवस्था के बाल-ग्वालों का एक मण्डल बनाया। जब जिसके घर में माखन की मटकी भर जाती थी और अगले रोज इसके मथुरा ले जाने की सम्भावना होती थी तो बारी बारी से संघ का प्रत्येक सदस्य इस दल को अपने घर में निमन्त्रित करता था और जमा किया हुआ गोरस सदस्यों को भर पेट खिलाता था। कुछ समझदार गोपियाँ भी इस आन्दोलन से सहानु-भूति रखती थीं और वे अपने घर माखन पर छापा मारने के लिये स्वयं भगवान् को संकेत करती थीं। इस बात का आभास श्रीमद्भागवत के श्लोकों और सूरदास जी के पद्मों में खूब मिलता है। इस तरह गोप ग्वालों को माखन खाने की काफी चाट लगी और लोकमत बहुत कुछ इस आन्दोलन के अनुकूल हो गया, परन्तु अभी तक गोपियों द्वारा मथुरा में गोरस का बेचा जाना सर्वथा बन्द न हो पाया था। इसके लिये भगवान् ने सुधार के अन्तिम शस्त्र सविनय प्रतिरोध (पिकेटिङ्ग) क प्रयोग किया । भगवान् दल-बलसहित मथुरा के रास्ते रोकर खड़े हो गये । जो ग्वालिन समझाने बुझाने पर भी वापिस न लौटती थीं तो उनकी मटकियें छीन ली जातीं और गोरस लुटा दिया जाता था। यहीं तक नहीं, बल्कि अडङ्गा नीति से काम लेने के लिये मटकियो को फोड़ भी दिया जाता था । भगवान् की सेना में सभी किशोरावस्था के बालक अ और लोकमत पर्याप्त जागृत हो चुका था इसलिये कुछ दिन की पिकेटिंग के बाद इस विनाशकारी प्रथा का सर्वथा नाश हो गया और भगवान् अपने मिशन में सफल हुए ।

Paurāṇika Form

(a) Lord Krishna, through various playful tricks that mimic stealing, would enjoy delicious curd, milk, and butter.

(b) Sometimes, when the butter was kept high up on a hanging shelf and was beyond reach, he would assemble a makeshift platform using stools, mortars, and other objects. If such items weren't available, he would use a stick to pierce the hanging pot that held the butter and accomplish his task skillfully.

The humorous, light-hearted devotees who enjoy snacks see even these divine childhood pranks as criminal acts. But they don't understand that when the master of the house folds his hands and persistently pleads for his belongings to be taken away, and when one day that beloved thief Nandakishora glances mercifully at the devotee—

The very person whose butter was taken feels so blessed that he runs around distributing sīraṇī (a butter-based sweet) to others. So, then what's the point of any outsider needlessly worrying about justice or fences?

Just see how ancient poets have woven this divine play into such heartfelt words:

"नीतं यदि नवनीतं, नीतं नीतं च कि तेन । आतपतापितभूमौ माधव ! माधाव ! म धाव !!"

Meaning: Upon seeing Krishna running away with the stolen butter, the mistress of the house, overwhelmed with love, calls out—Sweet Krishna! If you've taken the butter, then so be it—what's the harm? O Mādhava! Don't run barefoot on this sun-scorched ground, don't run at all! Does a robbed person ever show such compassion toward the thief? Listen—one day Bhagavān Shri Krishna was telling Yashodā Ji:

(क) "Mayyāro mohi mākhan bhāve. Jo mevā, pakvān kahat tū mohi nahīṁ ruchi āve." ("Mother, I love butter. Things like dry fruits and rich food that you speak of—I don't enjoy them.")

Nearby, a gopī was standing and overhearing this. She thought to herself:

(ख) "Braj yuvatī ik pāchhe ṭhāṛī sunat śyām kī bāt. Man meṁ kahat kabhū apne ghar dekhū mākhan khāt. Baiṭhe jāya mathaniyā ke ḍhig tab maiṁ rahauṁ chhipānī. Sūradās prabhu antaryāmī gwālin man ko jānī." ("A young woman of Braj stood behind listening to Shyam's words. She thought, 'Someday I'll see him eat butter in my house.' She planned to sit near the churn and hide. Surdas, the omniscient Lord, understood her intent.")

Another gopī spoke openly:

(ग) "Dhenu ke caraiyā pyāre bhayya Balabhadra jū ke, Nand ke lalaiyā more aṅganā meṁ āure. Dahi dūdh bahut pyāūṁ mākhan dhanō so lāūṁ, mīṭhī mīṭhī tān nek gāy ke sunāure. Nand jū ke kiśor! Mere citahū ke cor, nek to adhar dhar bānsurī bajāure. Yā chavi ūpar koṭi kām vār ḍāre, dayā sakhī premvaś hiy meṁ samāū re." ("My beloved, who grazes the cows with Balabhadra, son of Nand, please come to my courtyard. I will feed you curd, milk, and bring butter like wealth. I will sing sweet melodies to you from my cows. O prince of Nanda! Thief of my heart! Place your flute to your lips and play! Even millions of love gods would surrender before your beauty. O friend, in the flood of love, let him enter our hearts.")

After such long, heartfelt prayers, the thief-king finally accepted the offer:

fed his reflection and laughed over the colors. Hearing Shyam's playful words, the gopī laughed with joy. Surdas watched their faces as Murari departed with delight.")

And if even after all this someone is still unsatisfied, they're welcome to go to court and file a complaint against Krishna's devotees—claiming "the deity of Sanātana Dharm stole seven-and-a-quarter maunds of our butter, we demand compensation!" Then let's see what charges apply to a milk-drinking Krishna of just four-and-three-quarters years old.

The butter-stealing leela that made even non-Hindu poets like Rasakhān emotional—if it's ridiculed by self-proclaimed defenders of Hindutva, it simply reflects their arrogance.

According to these poetic verses, our Lord Krishna is such that we lovingly call him again and again to eat our butter, and only occasionally does he bestow his mercy. On the other hand, the Dayānandīs' famished Nirākāra, based on Swami Dayānand's commentary on the "mānaḥ priyā..." mantra, even after being sternly dismissed a thousand times, still insists on raiding dry biscuits with an entourage!

If thoughtful readers compare the sentiment and civility of both traditions—their prayers and their deities—they'll see: on one side is affection, on the other, rebuke; here, waves of loving bliss, there, cries of complaint; here, the divine child relishing crushed sweets like a playful elephant, there, the spirit of the saying: "Dekh bigānī chopaṛī gir paṛ veīmān"—a dishonest being snatching butter they weren't even offered.

National Perspective

It is a widely known fact that the Hindu community has traditionally adhered to a vegetarian diet. Our ancestors—rishis, sages, kings, and even the humble—lived by consuming pure, wholesome vegetarian food. To enhance physical strength, they regularly took dairy products like milk and ghee.

These items, considered fundamentally essential to human life—even to the very body and soul—were never meant to be traded away for trivial bits of silver or copper by self-serving individuals. Hence, the elders strictly prohibited their sale through explicit orders.

However, with the passage of time, just like in today's modern age, society began to ignore this command. Thousands of cowherds—men and women—started going to Mathurā's markets to sell milk and ghee. The tendency to hoard more wealth than necessary pushed them toward this moral decline.

By enticing them with glinting silver coins, city dwellers began exploiting the poor, simple villagers. The dark laws of Kaṁsa further encouraged this practice, since these dairy products—once sold—were taxed under jaziya, generating substantial revenue for the royal authority.

These corrupt practices deeply troubled Bhagavān Krishna. In his view, this custom was a stigma on society and one that could weaken future generations. The harmful impact of selling such essential items can be clearly understood by looking at the distressing realities of today. Millions of people in rural India, who sweat and toil to produce milk and ghee, don't even get to see these products themselves.

Given the influence of citizens from Kaṁsa's capital city, there was strong concern about the moral degradation of the gopīs. How could a social reformer like Krishna accept their public movement and trade in such settings?

Another point: India has always been an agriculturally driven nation. Its ancient people were proud of their precious cattle wealth. But during Kaṁsa's rule, city dwellers began to neglect this invaluable treasure. Just like today, the growing mentality of reducing all things to monetary value instilled a sense of repulsion in young Krishna's heart.

And so, when these trends took hold, he stepped forward to abolish this harmful practice. First, he tried to explain and educate the cowherds, but greed and the fear of Kaṁsa kept them inattentive. Eventually, Krishna had to take direct action.

He formed a group of children—cowherd boys of his age. Whenever a pot of butter was filled and was to be taken to Mathurā the next day, each member of the group would take turns inviting the gang to his home. They would eat their fill of stored dairy products. Some wise gopīs even sympathized with this movement and would intentionally signal to Krishna to raid their butter stock. This sentiment is clearly reflected in the verses of the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam and the poetry of Surdās.

As the boys developed a strong taste for butter, public opinion turned increasingly favorable toward the movement. However, the sale of milk and ghee in Mathurā by the gopīs hadn't stopped entirely.

For this, Krishna resorted to the final weapon of reform—civil resistance (picketing). He and his group stood blocking the road to Mathurā. If any gopī refused to turn back after being lovingly persuaded, their butter pots were seized and the dairy was distributed. At times, to intensify the resistance, the pots were broken altogether.

His army consisted of spirited adolescent boys, and public sentiment had grown strong. Within a few days of picketing, the destructive tradition collapsed entirely, and Bhagavān Krishna succeeded in his mission.

This is the philosophical essence of the "butter-stealing" episode, which is celebrated in texts like the Bhāgavatam from a devotional perspective. Any criticism of this divine play carries as much weight as criticizing Mahatma Gandhi's sacred purpose behind breaking the salt laws during the Dandi March and using tactics like raids and picketing.

श्रीमद्भागवतादि पुराणों में लिखा है कि 'भगवान् विष्णु ने कृष्णावतार में बाललीलायें करते हुये कई बार माखन भी चुराया था'—यह सार्वजनीन प्रसिद्ध बात है। कई महाशयों के पेट में इस माखन लीला से बेतरह दर्द उठा करता है अतः इस पर भी विचार किया जाता है।

वैदिक-स्वरूप

(क) घृतं पीत्वा मधु चारु गव्यं पितेव पुत्रानभिरक्षतादिमम् ॥ (अथर्व २।१३।१)

(ख) मा नः प्रिया भोजनानि प्रमोषीः। (ऋग्वेद १।१०४।८)

(ग) तस्कराणां पतये नमो नमः। (यजु: १६।२१)

अर्थात्—(क) [ग्वालन प्रार्थना करती है कि—] हे भगवान्! ताजा, मीठा जो गाय का माखन = घृत है आप उसे ग्रहण कीजिए और

पौराणिक-स्वरूप

(क) स्तेयं स्वाद्वत्त्यथ दधिपयः कल्पितैः स्तेययोगैः ।२९।

(ख) हस्ताग्राह्ये रचयति विधिं पीठकोलूखलाद्यैः ।
छिद्रं ह्यन्तर्निहितवयुनः शिक्यभाण्डेषु तद्वित् ॥३०॥
(श्रीमद्भागवत १०।८।२९-३०)

अर्थात्—(क) भगवान् कृष्ण बनावटी चोरी के अनेक ढंग बनाकर स्वादिष्ट दही दूध माखन आदि चुरा कर खा जाते थे। (ख) कदाचित् माखन ऊँचे छींके पर रक्खा हो और वहाँ तक हाथ न पहुँचता हो तो भगवान् पीढ़े ऊखल आदि चीजों का मचान बाँध लेते थे। यदि यह वस्तुयें भी न मिलें तो लठिया के साथ छींके पर लटकती हुई माखन की हँडिया में छेद करके ही अपना काम निकाल लिया करते थे।

जिसका माखन चुरा हो वह स्वयं अपने अहोभाग्य मानकर प्रीतिरी अंकित किया हो तो फिर किसी 'ऐरे गैरे नत्थू खैरे' को ख्वाहमख्वाह बाद में कोहिया खुदवाने की क्या जरूरत? पढ़िये प्राचीन कवियों ने इस लीला को किन हृदयस्पर्शी शब्दों में गूंथा है—

नीतं यदि नवनीतं, नीतं नीतं च किं तेन।
आतपतापितभूमौ माधव! मा धाव! मा धाव!!

अर्थात्—[माखन उठाकर भागते हुए कृष्ण को देखकर घर की मालकिन गोपी प्रेमविह्वल होकर कहती है कि—] प्यारे कृष्ण! यदि तैंने माखन ले लिया तो ले लिया, इससे क्या हुआ, हे माधव! तू नंगे पाँवों इस धूप से तपी हुई भूमि पर मत भाग! बिल्कुल मत दौड़!

कभी सुने हुये व्यक्ति चोरी के लिये भी इस तरह हमदर्दी दिखाया करते हैं? और सुनिये एक दिन भगवान् यशोदा जी से कह रहे थे कि—

(क) मैय्या री मोहि माखन भावे।
जो मेवा, पकवान कहत तू मोहि नहीं रुचि आवे।

—वहां एक ग्वालिन खड़ी यह बात सुन रही थी, वह मन ही मन सोचने लगी कि—

(ख) ब्रज युवती इक पाछे ठाढ़ी सुनत श्याम की बात ॥
मन में कहत कबहुं अपने घर देखूं माखन खात ॥
बैठे जाय मथनिया के ढिग तब मैं रहौं छिपानी।
सूरदास प्रभु अन्तर्यामी ग्वालिन मन को जानी ॥

—एक दूसरी ग्वालिन तो साफ ही कह उठी कि—

(ग) धेनु के चरैया प्यारे भय्या बलभद्र जू के, नन्द के ललैया मोरे अंगना में आइरे।

दही दूध बहुत प्याऊं माखन घनो ही खाऊं,
मीठी मीठी तान नेक गाय के सुनाइ रे ॥
नन्द जू के किशोर ! मेरे चितहू के चोर,
नेक तो अधर धर बांसुरी बजाइ रे ।
या छवि ऊपर कोटि काम वार डारे, दया हाली प्रेमवश हिय में दुराऊं रे ॥

—इस तरह नंबी चौड़ी अर्चना के बाद तब कहीं हमारे चोरराज ने चोरी अपनी स्वीकार की—

(घ) गए श्याम तिहि ग्वालिन के घर ।
हरि माखन गोपी जब जान्यो माखन रह्यो छिपाई ।
सूने सदन मथनिया के ढिग बैठि गए अरगाई ॥
माखन भरी कमोरी देखी लै लै लागे खान ।
चितै रहे मणि खंभ छाहिं तन तासों करें सयान ॥
प्रथम आज मैं चोरी आये भलो बन्यो है संग ।
आप खात प्रतिबिम्ब खवावत गिरत कहत का रंग ॥
सुन सुन बात श्याम के मुख की उलग हंसी सुकुमारी ।
सूरदास प्रभु निरखि ग्वालिन मुख तब भजि चले मुरारी ॥

यदि इतने पर भी महात्माओं की तसल्ली न हो तो उनके लिये अदालत का दरवाजा खुला पड़ा है, जाकर हम कृष्णभक्तों को नालिश कर दें कि—"सनातनधर्मियों के इष्टदेव ने हमारे नवकद दादा का सवा सात मन माखन चुरा खाया, हर्जाना मिलना चाहिए। फिर देखिये कि तीन पांच साल की आयु वाले दुधमुहे कृष्ण पर कौन सी दफा कायम होती है।

जिस माखन-लीला के चिन्तन से रसखान जैसे अहिन्दू कवियों का भी चित्त गद्गद हो उठता था, यदि उसी लीला पर हिन्दुकुल का दम भरने वाले अधकचरे महानुभाव कुछ बकवास करें तो यह उनकी हिमाकत ही समझनी चाहिए।

राष्ट्रीय दृष्टिकोण

यह सर्व विदित बात है, कि हिन्दू जाति सदा से निरामिष भोजी रही है। हमारे पूर्वज ऋषि महर्षि राजा रङ्क सभी सात्विक अन्न खाकर ही जीवन बिताया करते थे। शारीरिक शक्ति की अभिवृद्धि के लिए वे दुग्ध घृतादि का पर्याप्त सेवन करते थे। मानव जीवन के लिए नितान्त उपयोगी इस प्रकार के पदार्थों—जीवन की आधारभूत वस्तुओं—यहां तक की शरीर और प्राणों तक का भी, चांदी तांबे की ठीकरियों से मोल करने वाले स्वार्थान्ध मनुष्य कहीं विक्रय न करने लग जावें, एतदर्थ उन्होंने इनका विक्रय अपने आदेशों द्वारा सर्वथा रोक रखा था।

किन्तु समय के प्रभाव से आधुनिक काल की भांति उस समय भी

समाज में भी इस प्रथा की अवहेलना की जाने लगी थी। गोप गोपियां राहगीरों की संख्या में मथुरा के बाजारों में दुग्ध घृतादि बेचने जाने लगे थे। आवश्यकता से अधिक धन को इकट्ठा कर घर में जमा रखने की प्रवृत्ति ने उनको इस पाप की ओर ढकेला। चांदी के चमकते टुकड़ों का मोह दिखाकर नागरिकों ने उन बेचारे भोले भाले ग्रामीणों के रस को चूसना प्रारम्भ कर कर दिया। कंस के शासन कानून भी इस प्रथा को पर्याप्त प्रोत्साहन देते थे क्योंकि इस तरह बिकने वाले गोरस पर अधिक कर द्वारा राजसत्ता को प्रचुर लाभ होता था।

भगवान् कृष्ण को यह कुरीति बहुत अखरी। उनकी दृष्टि में यह प्रथा समाज के लिए कलङ्क थी और आगे समाज को निर्बल बनाने वाली थी। इन वस्तुओं के विक्रय का समाज पर क्या दुष्प्रभाव पड़ता है, वर्तमान समाज के कष्ट चित्र को देखकर यह भली भांति समझा जा सकता है। आज भारत के उन लाखों मनुष्यों को, जो कि देहातों में बैठे भी दुग्ध सेवन करने के लिये खून पसीना एक करते हैं दुग्ध घृतादि के दर्शन भी नहीं होते। कंस जैसे शासक की राजधानी के नागरिकों के संसर्ग से, गोपियों के वातावरण पर दूषित प्रभाव पड़ने का पूरा अन्देशा भी था। अतः कन्हैया इस प्रकार चुप्पी साध नहीं सकता भला उस समाज-सुधारक को कैसे सह्य हो सकता था?

पहिले वे गोपों को समझाते और शिक्षा देते रहे, किन्तु लोग तथा कंस के भय के कारण वे इस ओर कुछ ध्यान नहीं देते थे। अब विवश होकर उन्हें क्रियात्मक पग उठाना पड़ा! सर्व प्रथम अपनी अवस्था के बाल-ग्वालों का एक मण्डल बनाया। जब जिसके घर में माखन की मटकी भर जाती थी और अगले रोज इसके मथुरा ले जाने की सम्भावना होती थी तो बारी बारी से दल का प्रत्येक सदस्य इस दल को अपने घर में निमन्त्रित करता था और जमा किया हुआ गोरस सदस्यों को भर पेट खिलाता था। कुछ समझदार गोपियाँ भी इस आन्दोलन से सहानुभूति रखती थीं और वे अपने घर माखन पर छापा मारने के लिये स्वयं भगवान् को संकेत करती थीं। इस बात का आभास श्रीमद्भागवत के श्लोकों और सूरदास जी के पदों से खूब मिलता है। इस तरह गोप ग्वालों को माखन खाने की काफी चाट लगी और लोकमत बहुत कुछ इस आन्दोलन के अनुकूल हो गया, परन्तु अभी तक गोपियों द्वारा मथुरा में गोरस का भेजा जाना सर्वथा बन्द न हो पाया था। इसके लिये भगवान् ने सुधार के अन्तिम शस्त्र सविनय प्रतिरोध (पिकेटिङ्ग) का प्रयोग किया। भगवान् दल-बलसहित मथुरा के रास्ते रोककर खड़े हो गये। जो ग्वालिन समझाने बुझाने पर भी वापिस न लौटती थी तो उनकी मटकियें छीन ली जातीं और गोरस लूटा दिया जाता था। यहीं तक नहीं, बल्कि कट्टर नीति से काम लेने के लिये मटकियों को फोड़ भी दिया जाता था। भगवान् की सेना में सभी किशोरावस्था के बालक थे और लोकमत पर्याप्त जाग्रत हो चुका था इसलिये कुछ दिन की पिकेटिंग के बाद इस विनाशकारी प्रथा का सर्वथा नाश हो गया और भगवान् अपने मिशन में सफल हुए।

यह है माखन चोरी का तात्त्विक रहस्य, भागवतादि में जिसका वर्णन भक्ति-दृष्टिकोण से किया गया है। भगवान् की [illegible]

Shree Krishna was killed by a hunter

📚Vishnu Purana 5.37📚

..especting the words of the Brahman, the imprecation of Durvásas, the illustrious Krishńa sat engaged in thought, resting his foot upon his knee. Then came there a hunter, named Jará, whose arrow was tipped with a blade made of the piece of iron of the club, which had not been reduced to powder; and beholding from a distance the foot of Krishńa, he mistook it for part of a deer, and shooting his arrow, lodged it in the sole. Approaching his mark, he saw the fou armed king, and, falling at his feet, repeatedly besought his forgiveness, exclaiming, "I have done this deed unwittingly, thinking I was aiming at a deer! Have pity upon me, who am consumed by my crime; for thou art able to consume me!" Bhagavat replied, "Fear not thou in the least. Go, hunter, through my favour, to heaven, the abode of the gods." As soon as he had thus spoken, a celestial car appeared, and the hunter, ascending it, forthwith proceeded to heaven. Then the illustrious Krishńa, having united himself with his own pure, spiritual, inexhaustible, inconceivable, unborn, undecaying, imperishable, and universal spirit, which is one with Vásudeva, abandoned his mortal body and the condition of the threefold qualities."

Refutation-

Did Bhagwan Shree Krishna face birth and death in his Avatar ?

Mahabharat Anushasan Parva Adhaya 149 – Bhimsa Pitamah says that Bhagvan Shree Hari (Shree krishna) is devoid of Birth and death
अनादिनिधनं विष्णुं सर्वलोकमहेश्वरम् । लोकाध्यक्षं स्तुवन् नित्यं सर्वदुःखातिगो भवेत् ।। ६ ।।
उस जन्म-मत्य आदि छः भाव-विकारोंसे रहित, सर्वव्यापक, सम्पूर्ण लोकोंके महेश्वर, लोकाध्यक्ष देवकी निरन्तर स्तुति करनेसे मनुष्य सब दुःखोंसे पार हो जाता है ।। ६ ।।
"By ceaselessly praising that Lord of all worlds – who is free from the six modifications like birth and death, who is all-pervading, and the Supreme Lord of all realms and beings a person transcends all sorrows."

Mahabharat Anushashan Parva Adhaya 1 says Bhagvan Shree Krishna is Narayana (Ishwar) Himself

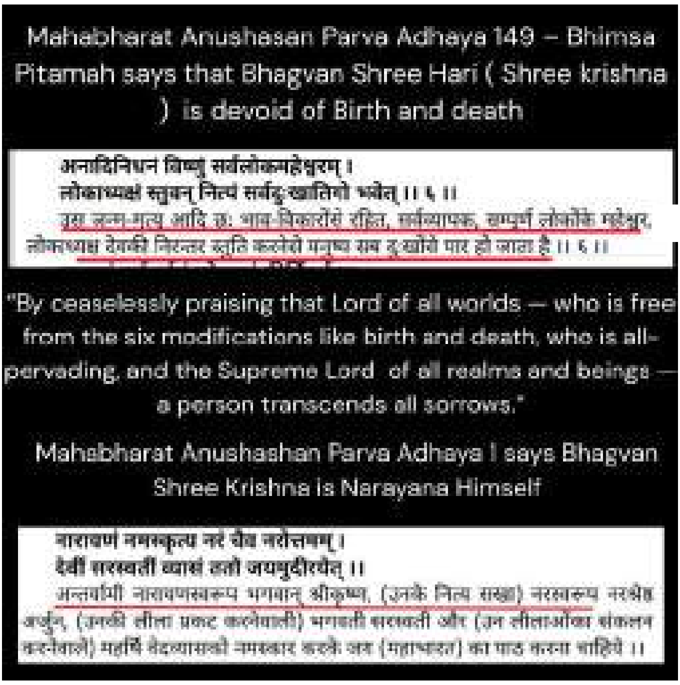
अन्तर्यामी नारायणस्वरूप भगवान् श्रीकृष्ण, (उनके नित्य सखा) नरस्वरूप नरश्रेष्ठ अर्जुन, (उनकी लीला प्रकट करनेवाली) भगवती सरस्वती और (उन लीलाओंका संकलन करनेवाले) महर्षि वेदव्यासको नमस्कार करके जय (महाभारत) का पाठ करना चाहिये ।

One should begin the reading of the Mahabharata by bowing to Lord Shri Krishna, the omnipresent Narayana, Arjuna, his eternal friend in human form, Goddess Saraswati who reveals his divine plays, and Sage Vedavyasa who compiled them.



Subaala Upanishad, Khanda 7 says Shri Hari (Shree Krishna) is death and life himself. Death cannot touch him यस्य मृत्युः शरीरं यो मृत्युमन्तरे संचरन् यं मृत्युर्न वेद ॥ स एष सर्वभूतान्तरात्मापहतपाप्मा दिव्यो देव एको नारायणः
Mrtyu (death) is His body. Though He moves in Mṛtyu, Mrtyu does not know Him. Such an one is the Mind within all creatures, the remover of all sins and the Divine Deva, the one Nārāyaṇa

Same thing repeated in Yajur Veda 40.8 that Narayana is birthless Sinless and uninjurable and deathless so its impossible to accuse that Lord Krishna got injured or died by arrow

6. By the technical Yogic process called Agneyi whereby the Yogi concentrates his mind on fire and burns down his body, the Lord did not consume with fire his world-enchanting form which was very auspicious for concentration and meditation (and was the support of the world) but entered with his body his own realm[1]

Now, one may think that in the Mausala Parva of the Mahaabhaarata, and the Vishnu Puraana (Khanda 5, Adhyaaya 38) and Srimad Bhagvatam Arjuna is said to have found the bodies of Shri Krshna and Shri Balaraama, and performed their funeral rites. However, it is not so, because this too has been explained by Shripaada Madhvacharya Mahabharat Tatparya Nirnaya Adyaya 2

He is not born to anybody. Therefore where is the question of death for Him? He cannot be slayed by anyone. He cannot be made unconscious and he cannot be bound by anybody. How can there be any sorrow for Him who is independent and who is blissful always.

He is not born to anybody. Therefore where is the question of death for Him? He cannot be slayed by anyone. He cannot be made unconscious and he cannot be bound by anybody. How can there be any sorrow for Him who is independent and who is blissful always.

He falls unconscious by getting hurt with weapons; His skin ruptures and begins to bleed; due to ignorance He enquires from others; He leaves His body and reaches heavenly abode. These have been enacted by Sri Hari, who is omnipotent, as a magician showing things that do not exist. Devatas were aware they were was playacts.

Shri Hari does not have a material body. He is birthless deathless and cannot be injured by anyone. When he falls uncounsious his skin ruptures he leaves his body and reaches Vaikuntha these things have been enacted by Hari as a magician showing magic. In Spite of possessing a spiritual body, He created another physical body and, after giving it up, rested it on the ground and left for Vaikunta. Arjuna arrived there as per the words of Daruka (Sri Krishna's charioteer) and cremated it.

Sri Hari is not son of Vasudeva and others

'naayam dasharathaajjaato na caapi jamadagnita:
The Lord who is master of all is not the son of Vasudeva; He never grows in the womb; In Rama roopa He was not born from Dasaratha neither was He born from Jamadagni as Parasurama.
Special Notes:

He is not born to anybody. Therefore where is the question of death for Him? He cannot be slayed by anyone. He cann be made unconscious and he cannot be bound by anybody. How can there be any sorrow for Him who is independent and who is blissful always.

Special Notes:

1. We read several descriptions such as Sri Hari is born to Vasudeva. He grows in the womb of Devaki. As Rama he is born to Dasharatha. He was killed by the arrow of the hunter in Krishnavatara. He fell unconscious to Narakasura's arrows. However Lord Hari is independent. None is independent to harm Him in anyway. He is also always full of bliss. There is no question of sorrow for Him. Therefore all these happenings are only to deceive the wicked souls and to bring joy to the good souls.
2. God is stated as born in His avataras in the Puranas. Really speaking He is not born in the ordinary sense. He manifests. His births are 'aavirbhaava' and not called birth.

About Hari's misleading ways

Although the Lord is the master of the entire creation, He keeps working constantly like a helpless man.

Special Notes:

1. During His avataras it is found that God was charioteer to Arjuna, begged alms from Bali, bowed to Narada, performed sandhyavandana etc. as though he was an ordinary human. He also pined for Sita and went in search for her. However He is the indweller of all and controls all. He protects the good from the evil. He is not bound by any 'karmas'. Thus these are only play acts which are performed by him to mislead the evil minded persons.
2. The word 'hi' is used here indicating that the Lord is not bound by any karmas as emphasized by the shruthis etc.
   The way Lord Hari misleads evil minded demons

The way Lord Hari misleads evil minded demons

He does not recognise Himself. He experiences sorrows like falling unconscious; goes in search for Sita; He gets bound by Indrajith's Nagapasha are all play acts for misleading asuras.

Special Notes:

1. Sri Krishna fell unconscious to Narakasura's arrow. He was hurt by Bheeshma's arrows and blood flowed out of his ruptured skin. In order to run away from Jarasandha he enquired about an hiding place from Parasurama. He made things appear as real like a magician although He is omnipotent. Asuras got deceived. They thought Krishna to be an ordinary human and went to 'tamas.' However devatas knew it was a playact of the Lord. Lord's every manifestation is 'aprakruta' Beyond the qualities of Prakruthi

Sri Hari's manifestations never have 'prakruthik' body. It is blemishless and complete with all positive attributes. It only appears to be otherwise to mislead the evil minded. Sometimes good people also get misled for special reasons. It is intended to equalize their merits according to their capacity. It is only a play for the Lord.
Special Notes:

1. This sloka establishes the fact that the Lord's manifested forms are 'aprakruta' like His original Moola roopa.
2. The earlier sloka said that devatas do not get misled by Sri Hari's playact. It is true. However sometimes devatas also get mis guided. It is done intentionally by Sri Hari. This is because they would have performed meritorious deeds which fetch those merits beyond their innate capacity. This has to be cut because they can be blessed with Mukti only at the appropriate time. Therefore their merits get dissolved by their wrong conception of Sri Hari's misleading acts. Vishnu Tatva Vinirnaya says,
   Asuraanaamatyantam tama: praaptaye pareshaam vilambhaaya
   Asuras attain 'tamas' quickly by wrong conception about God. For those who have earned more religious merits than their innate capacity, to delay their 'moksha.'

Origin of Cows as per Taittriya Brahmana

वेदमें गौकी बहुत महिमा बतायी गयी है । गौकी उत्पत्ति भी इसकी महिमाकी कम अभिव्यञ्जक नहीं है । तैत्तिरीय ब्राह्मणमें एक आख्यायिका आती है— 'ब्रह्माजीने प्रजाकी सृष्टिमें अपनी सारी शक्ति लगा दी । अब वे अपनेको अशक्त पा रहे थे । प्रजाओंके भरण-पोषण आदिकी समस्या उनके सामने खड़ी थी । इसके लिये उन्होंने फिर तपस्या प्रारम्भ कर दी । इसबार ब्रह्माजीकी इस तपश्चर्यामें इतनी शक्ति उमड़ी कि उसका धारण कर पाना उनके लिये कठिन हो गया । अन्तमें वह असीम शक्ति उनके देहसे बाहर निकलकर गौके रूपमें परिणत हो गयी । वह इतनी मनोरम थी कि उसे लेनेकेलिये सभी देवता लालायित हो गये ।' (तैत्तिरीयब्राह्मण १।३।१०)

इस आख्यायिकासे व्यक्त होता है कि प्रजाओंके भरण-पोषणकेलिये गौका आविर्भाव हुआ । इसके दूध, दही और घीसे देवता, पितर और मनुष्योंका आहार मिलने लगा और इसके गोमय तथा गोमूत्रसे अन्नकी उत्पादनक्षमता बढ़ गयी । इस प्रकार गौसे विश्वभरका कल्याण हो गया । इसीलिये वेदने गौको विश्वरूप और सर्वरूप भी कहा है— 'एतद्वै विश्वरूपं सर्वरूपं गोरूपम् ।'

बाद एक गौ उत्पन्न हुई- 'तेभ्यः हुतादजायत गौरिति' (तैत्तिरीयब्राह्मण २।१।६)। उसे देखकर तीनों देवताओंने उसे प्राप्त करना चाहा। प्रत्येकका कहना था कि मेरे होमसे यह गौ उत्पन्न हुई है, इसलिये यह मेरी है। निर्णयकेलिये तीनों देवता ब्रह्माजीके पास गये। ब्रह्माजीने उनसे पूछा कि आप तीनोंमेंसे किसने किस देवताको आहुति दी? अग्निदेवताने बताया कि मैंने प्राणदेवताकेलिये आहुति दी। वायुदेवताने शरीराभिमानी देवताको और आदित्यने नेत्राभिमानी देवताको आहुति देनेकी बात कही। तब प्रजापतिने निर्णय लिया कि शरीर और चक्षु: प्राणके अधीन हैं, इनमें प्राण ही मुख्य है, इसलिये प्राणदेवताके होमसे ही गौ उत्पन्न हुई और वह गौ अग्निको समर्पित कर दी गयी। तभीसे गौ का नाम 'अग्निहोत्र' पड़ गया। 'गौर्वा अग्निहोत्रम्' (तैत्तिरीयब्राह्मण ३।१।६)। इसके बाद इसी श्रुतिने बताया है कि इस अग्निहोत्री धेनुकी जो पूजा करता है, वह इस लोकमें अभ्युदय तो प्राप्त करता ही है, मरनेके बाद भी उसे स्वर्गलोककी ही प्राप्ति होती है-

'इष्यति प्रजया पशुभिः। प्र सुवर्गं लोकं जानाति। पश्यति पुत्रम्। पश्यति पौत्रम्।' (३।१।८) 'देहपातादूर्ध्वं स्वर्गं प्रजानाति। ततः पूर्वं दीर्घायुष्येण युक्तः पुत्रं पौत्रं च पश्यति।' (सायणभाष्य)

वेदके इस प्रमाणसे स्पष्ट हो जाता है कि पुण्यभारतमें जो दैवीशक्तिकी धारा बहती रही है, उससे पृथक् तो प्रकाशित हो ही जाता है, किन्तु अज्ञानरूपी तिमिररोग लग जानेसे अपौरुषेय वेदके इस दिव्यातिदिव्य प्रकाशको मनुष्य देख नहीं पाता।

In the Vedas, great significance has been attributed to the cow. Its origin itself is deeply expressive of its divine importance. The Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa narrates a story:

"Brahmā, having expended all his energy in creating the beings of the world, found himself powerless. He was confronted with the dilemma of sustaining and nourishing creation. To resolve this, he commenced intense penance. From this penance, an immense force arose—so vast that Brahmā could no longer contain it within himself. Ultimately, this boundless energy emerged from his body and assumed the form of a cow. The form was so enchanting that all the gods desired to possess it."

(Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 1.1.10)

This story reveals that the cow appeared for the nourishment of creation. Its milk, curd, and ghee became food for gods, ancestors, and humans. Its dung and urine enhanced agricultural productivity. Thus, the cow became a source of universal welfare. For this reason, the Vedas refer to the cow as viśvarūpa (form of the universe) and sarvarūpa (all-encompassing form): "etad vai viśvarūpam sarvarūpam gorūpam."

The Vedas state that worshiping the cow leads to prosperity in this life and the next.

Another legend in the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa recounts: "Once Brahmā created the inert world. He then desired to bring forth conscious beings endowed with the soul. He performed a sacrificial offering. From that homa, three sentient deities were born—Agni (fire), Vāyu (wind), and Āditya (sun). These deities then also performed homa to expand the sentient world. As a result of their offering, a cow was born: 'teṣāṁ hutād ajāyata gaur eva.' (Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 2.1.6)

All three gods claimed ownership, asserting that the cow was born from their offering. Seeking judgment, they approached Brahmā. He asked each whom they had offered sacrifice to: Agni answered he had offered to the deity of prāṇa (life-force), Vāyu to the deity of the body, and Āditya to the deity of sight. Brahmā concluded that both the body and sight are subordinate to prāṇa and thus, the cow was born of the offering to prāṇa. Consequently, the cow was assigned to Agni. From that moment, the cow earned the name 'Agnihotra.' 'Gaur vā agnihotram.' (Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 3.1.6)

The same śruti further declares that whoever worships this Agnihotra cow attains both worldly prosperity and heavenly reward after death: 'Tripyati prajāya paśubhiḥ. Pra suvarga lokaṁ jānāti. Paśyati putram. Paśyati pautram.' (3.1.8) 'Dehapātād ūrdhvaṁ svargaṁ prajānāti. Tataḥ pūrvaṁ dīrghāyuṣyeṇa yuktaḥ putraṁ pautraṁ ca paśyati.' (Sāyaṇa Bhāṣya)

From this Vedic evidence, it becomes clear that the divine current flowing through objects of worship enlightens the worshipper, but due to the affliction of disbelief—like a dark disease—humans are often unable to perceive the radiant truth of the apauruṣeya (Divine) Vedas.

Prajāpati, after creating living beings, felt depleted of his own vital energy and thought, “I am now emptied.” To regain his vigor, he performed penance. In the course of that, he perceived a small amount of energy within himself. That energy grew over time, expanding so greatly that Prajāpati was unable to contain it. Ultimately, it burst forth from him and emerged in some form, which, once fully developed, took on various majestic appearances—one of which was a cow.

Seeing her, both gods and demons began quarreling, each claiming, “We alone shall take her.” To resolve the dispute, Prajāpati declared: “This cow belongs solely to me. To you, only her milk is granted for use.” Thus, the cow was accepted by Prajāpati for his own purpose and assumed a sovereign form (virāṭ).

From Prajāpati, she proceeded forward. Then, through the invocation “O Atharvan,” Prajāpati enclosed her (the virāṭ) from all sides. “O Atharvan,” who is the revered founder of the fourth Veda and symbolic of the southern fire (Dakṣiṇāgni), or alternatively: “Protect my non-violent food —my nourishment.”

In the same way, this idea is to be extended to the other four fires:

- Gārhapatya (household fire), auspicious to men
- Āhavanīya, praised by sacrificial priests
- Sabhyā, linked with fame and presence in the assembly
- Avastahya, symbolizing non-violence and primordial origin
- Bhāntṛ, represented by the Ṛg and other Vedas

Thus, this virāṭ form split these fires into five distinctions through five invocations. Prajāpati accepted these five fires in full. Whether due to their sequential arrangement or simply their grouping in fives, he established them accordingly.

Importance of Cows in Sanatan Dharma

Mahabharat Anushashan Parva Adhaya 78

महातेजस्वी पुरुषप्रवर ! प्रातःकाल और सायंकाल सदा होमके समय ऋषियोंको गौएँ ही हवनीय पदार्थ (घृत आदि) देती हैं ।। ९ ।।

'राजन् ! गौओंके शरीरसे अनेक प्रकारकी मनोरम सुगन्ध निकलती रहती है तथा बहुतेरी गौएँ गुग्गुलके समान गन्धवाली होती हैं। गौएँ समस्त प्राणियोंकी प्रतिष्ठा (आधार) हैं और गौएँ ही उनके लिये महान् मंगलकी निधि हैं ।। ५ ।।

गौएँ ही भूत और भविष्य हैं। गौएँ ही सदा रहनेवाली पुष्टिका कारण तथा लक्ष्मीकी जड़ हैं। गौओंको जो कुछ दिया जाता है, उसका पुण्य कभी नष्ट नहीं होता ।। ६ ।।

'गौएँ ही सर्वोत्तम अन्नकी प्राप्तिमें कारण हैं। वे ही देवताओंको उत्तम हविष्य प्रदान करती हैं। स्वाहाकार (देवयज्ञ) और वषट्कार (इन्द्रयाग) – ये दोनों कर्म सदा गौओंपर ही अवलम्बित हैं ।। ७ ।।

'गौएँ ही यज्ञका फल देनेवाली हैं। उन्हींमें यज्ञोंकी प्रतिष्ठा है। गौएँ ही भूत और भविष्य हैं। उन्हींमें यज्ञ प्रतिष्ठित हैं, अर्थात् यज्ञ गौओंपर ही निर्भर है ।। ८ ।।

Verse 9: O most radiant and noble one! Every morning and evening, during sacrificial offerings (homa), it is the cows that provide the oblation materials (such as ghee) to the sages.

Verse 5: O King! Various delightful fragrances continuously emanate from the bodies of cows, and many cows possess a scent akin to gum-resin (guggul). Cows are the foundation and support of all living beings, and they are a treasure trove of auspiciousness for them.

Verse 6: Cows are both the past and the future. They are the everlasting source of nourishment and the root of prosperity (Lakṣmī). Whatever is offered to cows results in merit (puṇya) that never perishes.

Verse 7: Cows are the cause of obtaining the best food. They alone provide the finest offerings (haviṣya) to the gods. The utterances of svāhā (used in divine sacrifices) and vaṣaṭ (used in offerings to Indra) are both eternally dependent on cows.

Verse 8: Cows are the givers of the fruits of sacrifice. In them lies the sanctity of sacrifices. Cows are both the past and the future. Within them the sacrifices are established—meaning that the very foundation of sacrificial rites rests upon cows.

Verse 10 (last): The cow is the holiest, the foundation of the universe, and the mother of the gods. Her glory is boundless. One should respectfully touch her, walk keeping her to the right, and offer her as a donation to a worthy Brāhmaṇa at the proper time.

Verse 2: Bhīṣma said, “O King! Cows are supremely pure and fulfill great purposes. They uplift humanity and protect life through their milk and ghee.”

Verse 3: O scion of the Bhārata lineage! There is no other object holier than cows. They are auspicious, sacred, and the highest in all three worlds.

Verse 4: Cows reside in realms higher than those of the gods. Wise men who donate cows liberate themselves and attain heaven.

Verse 53: King Māndhātā, son of Yuvanāśva, and the Soma-lineage rulers Nahusha and Yayāti—these kings regularly donated hundreds of thousands of cows, which led them t attain exalted realms even rare for the gods.

Verses 31–32: O monarch! The worlds ruled by the mighty Sun, the powerful Wind, and King Varuṇa—all are attainable by humans through cow donations. Cows are named Yugandharā, Surūpā, Bahurūpā, Viśvarūpā, and are mothers of all. O Śukadeva! A man should recite these names of the cows daily with discipline and reverence.

Verse 33: He who serves cows and follows them in every way—pleased by such devotion, cows grant him exceedingly rare boons.

Verse 34: One should never harbor enmity toward cows even in thought. Always give them comfort, treat them respectfully, and worship them through salutations and offerings.

Verse 41 (): The man who, with self-control and cheerful heart, serves cows daily becomes blessed with prosperity. Cows are supremely sacred, holy, and embodiments of merit. They are great deities. By giving cows to Brāhmaṇas, one enjoys the bliss of heaven.

Cows and Bulls are Aghanya in Sanatan Dharma

In Sanātana Dharma, only cows and bulls have been accorded the sacred status of "Aghanya" — beings that must never be harmed and no other Animal has been given such Status

Unadi Sutra 4/113 – Meaning of Word Aganya . In the Uṇādi-sūtra (4/113), the cow is given the adjective "Aghnyā", a term that also appears in several Vedic mantras for the cow.

Its grammatical meaning is:
"yo na hanyate – aghnyāḥ",
i.e., "One who is not to be killed" or "That which is not deserving of violence or slaughter."

Thus, the word Aghnyā signifies that the cow is inviolable and should not be subjected to harm.

I invite this cow, one who yields milk well.
With a blessed hand, the cowherd (milker) is also to milk her.
May Savitṛ grant us the best extract (sava), indeed.
This — water or milk imbued with yajurvedic energy — is the best of all offerings.
This is the unhurt heat of the Gharma (sacrificial vessel or essence). That I now clearly explain.
This (cow) is the medium of speech (Vāk, or the middle path of expression).
She is called Gharma-dhug (milker of sacrificial heat) by the ritualists.
She is Aghnyā — not to be killed.This cow is such (sacred and inviolable)."

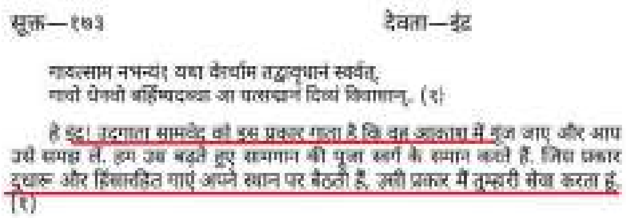
Rig Veda 1.173.1 – Cows are Aghanya – One who is not to be killed

हे इंद्र ! उद्गाता सामवेद को इस प्रकार गाता है कि वह आकाश में गूंज जाए और आप उसे समझ लें. हम उस बढ़ते हुए सामगान की पूजा स्वर्ग के समान करते हैं. जिस प्रकार दुधारू और हिंसारहित गाएं अपने स्थान पर बैठती हैं, उसी प्रकार मैं तुम्हारी सेवा करता हूं.

O Indra! The chanter sings the Sāma Veda in such a way that it echoes through the sky, and may You understand it. We worship that ascending song of the Sāma as if it were heaven itself. Just as the milk-giving and Inviolable cows sit peacefully in their place, in the same manner, I serve You."



सूक्त—१७३ देवता—इंद्र

Sayanacharya Bhasya on Rig Veda 1.173.1 too said the same thing about Cows

किंच "धेनवः दोग्ध्यः "अदब्धाः अहिंसिताः "गावः "यत् "बर्हिषि

"धेनवः" — milch cows "दोग्ध्यः" — suitable for milking "अदब्धाः" — unhurt and faultless "अहिंसिताः" — Not to harmed , Killed ,

Inviolable “गावः” — cows “यत् बर्हिषि” — who are placed upon the barhis (sacrificial grass)

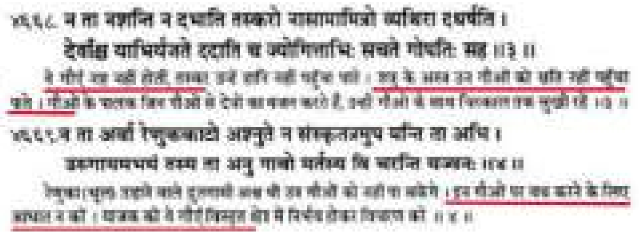
Rig Veda 6/28/3-4 – Cows are Aghnaya – One who is not to be killed

वे गौएँ नष्ट नहीं होतीं, तस्कर उन्हें हानि नहीं पहुँचा पाते। शत्रु के अस्त्र उन गौओं को क्षति नहीं पहुँचा पाते । गौओं के पालक जिन गौओं से देवों का यजन करते हैं, उन्हीं गौओं के साथ चिरकाल तक सुखी रहें ॥ ३ ॥

रेणुका (धूल) उड़ाने वाले द्रुतगामी अश्व भी उन गौओं को नहीं पा सकेंगे। इन गौओं पर वध करने के लिए आघात न करें। याजक की वे गौएँ विस्तृत क्षेत्र में निर्भय होकर विचरण करें ॥ ४ ॥

Those cows are never harmed—thieves cannot steal them, and enemy weapons cannot injure them. May the keeper of those cows—who offers them in divine sacrifices—live joyfully with those very cows for a long time. (Verse 3)

Even swift horses that kick up clouds of dust shall not be able to overtake those sacred cows. Let no one be able to kill these Inviolable cows . May the priest’s cows roam freely and fearlessly across wide pastures. (Verse 4)



Sayanacharya’s commentary on Rig Veda 6.28.3-4 too said that Cows are Inviolable not to killed nor harmed at any circumstances

Rig Veda 8.101.15 – Cows are Aghanya – Not to be Killed

हम विद्वान् लोगों से यही कहते हैं कि वे अपराधरहित तथा न मारने योग्य गौओं को न मारें, क्योंकि गौ-रुद्रों की माँ, वस्‌ओं की पुत्री, आदित्यों की बहिन तथा अमृत की मूल हैं ॥१५

We say this to the learned: do not harm the innocent and inviolable cows—because the cow is the mother of the Rudras, daughter of the Vasus, sister of the Ādityas, and the source of ambrosia (amṛta). (Verse 15)

Once upon a time, the sages and ascetics approached King Nahusha and respectfully submitted: "You have committed the unforgivable sin of killing Mother Cow and Prajāpati Bull. Nahusha! This is a heinous act unfit for a king. Because of this misdeed, great sorrow has befallen all of us."

O Jājali! After saying this, those revered sages—once praised by Nahusha himself—transformed the sin into one hundred and one diseases, casting them upon all living beings. They branded King Nahusha as a feticide (bhruṇahatyārī) and declared with firm resolve: "We shall not offer sacrificial oblations in your yajña.

O Cow-Mother! Into your right ear, the sacrificer softly chants sacred verses. O Iḍā, O Radiant One! You, daughter of Manu's lineage, are invoked with the name Iḍā and likened to the divine cow. You indeed are Iḍā. You are called Rantā because you delight others. You are Havyā, for your transformations—like milk and ghee—are offered in sacrifices. You are Kāmyā, as human desires are fulfilled through your offerings. You are Candrā, pleasing like moonlight. You are Jyotā, the source of luminous radiance. You are Aditī, the undivided and infinite one. You are Sarasvatī, filled with nourishing essence like water. You are Mahī, the great. You are Viśruti, renowned through many voices.

"By saying 'sa yam' ('he who…'), it indicates—just as before—though the singular form 'sa' is used, it actually refers to a plural subject, i.e., 'the Devas (te devāḥ). 'Of these' refers to the animals (horse and the ox and sheep , camel , goat , Sharabha and Man) (beginning with the Kimpuruṣa (kimpuruṣādi-paśūnām). The phrase 'na aśitavyam' means 'should not be eaten', i.e., their meat should not be consumed.

The reason is given: 'apakrānta'—meaning, since their sacrificial qualification (medhā) has departed, i.e., they are no longer fit for sacrifice (ayajñīyatva), therefore they are unfit to be eaten (abhakṣyatva)."

यह तो प्रतिपादन किया गया पूर्व मन्त्र में कि उक्त पुरुष, अश्व, गो, भेंड, एवं बकरा में से यज्ञीय तत्त्व निकलकर व्रीहि एवं जौ में प्रविष्ट हो गया जिसे देवताओं ने कृषिकर्म द्वारा प्राप्त किया। अब उन पशुओं के अयज्ञीय होने की बात को स्पष्ट करते हुए भगवान् याज्ञवल्क्य कहते हैं कि-देवताओं ने जिस पुरुष का आलभन किया था, उसमें से जब मेध निकला तो वह पुरुष किम्पुरुष अर्थात् "किं क्षपे" (अष्टा. 2.1.64) सूत्र से निन्दित पुरुष हो गया। जिस अश्व का आलभन किया, उस अश्व में से जब मेध निकल गया तो वह गौरमृग हो गया। जिस गाय का आलभन किया, उस गाय में से जब मेध निकल गया तो वह 'गवय' अर्थात गाय जैसा जंगली पशु (नीलगाय) हो गया। जिस भेंड का आलभन किया था, उस भेंड़ में से जब मेध

निकल गया तब वह भेंड ऊँट हो गया। इसी तरह जिस बकरा का आलभन किया था उसमें से जब मेध निकल गया तब वह बकडा 'शरभ' हो आलभन किया था उसमें से जब मेध निकल गया तब वह बकड़ा 'शरभ' हो गया। शरभ शब्द का अर्थ आचार्य महीधर ने अपने शुक्लयजुर्वेदीयमाध्यन्दिन संहिता के भाष्य में "शरभोऽष्टापदो मृगविशेषः सिंहघाती" (शु.य.सं.-13-51 मन्त्रभाष्य) किया है। अर्थात् आठ पैरों वाला ऐसा मृग जो सिंह को भी मार देता है। तात्पर्य यह हुआ कि सिंह सबसे उग्र हिंसक जानवर है। परन्तु शरभ जो अष्टपाद जानवर है वह उस सिंह की भी हत्या कर देता है। अतः सिंह से भी अधिक उग्र एवं क्रूर हिंसक पशु यह शरभ है।
चयनयाग के प्रसङ्ग में इन पाँचों पशुओं की हिंसा का निषेध करते हुए शुक्लययजुर्वेदीय माध्यन्दिन संहिता के 13वें अध्याय के 47 मन्त्र से 51 मन्त्र तक इस प्रसङ्ग का उल्लेख किया गया है। इस प्रकार ये पाँचों पशु जिनका आलभन किया गया वे सब मेध के निकल जाने पर विकृत (निन्दित) हो गये। उनमें से यज्ञीय तत्त्व खो चुका है। इसलिए इन पाँचों पुरुष, अश्व, गो, अवि एवं अज के मांस नहीं खाने चाहिए।
आजकल मांसभक्षण कहीं-कहीं परम्परा का रूप धारण कर चुका है। उसके अन्तर्गत शुभ एवं अशुभ कार्यों में कहीं-कहीं बलिप्रदान की प्रथा जोरों पर है। ऐसे समाज को सचेत होकर यह जान लेना चाहिए कि यज्ञ के नाम पर जो हिंसा (समाज में) प्रचलित है, वह वेदनिन्दित है। अतः उसका सर्वथा परित्याग करना चाहिए।।9।।

In the previous mantra, it was stated that from the said Purusha (cosmic man), the sacrificial essence (yajña-tattva) emerged from the horse, cow, sheep, and goat, and entered into rice (vrīhi) and barley (yava), which the Devas acquired through agriculture. Now, to clarify the non-sacrificial nature of those animals, the sage Yājñavalkya explains:

When the Devas performed ālambana upon the Purusha, and the medha (sacrificial essence) emerged from him, that Purusha became a Kimpurusha—a "degraded or criticized man," derived from the grammatical rule "kiṁ kṣape" (Aṣṭādhyāyī 2.1.64), indicating a contemptible form of man.

When the horse was subjected to ālambana and the medha departed from it, it became a gaura-mṛga, a type of wild forest animal (wild horse). When the same happened with the cow, it turned into a gavaya, a wild cow-like animal (such as the nīlagāy, or blue bull).

When the sheep underwent ālambana and lost its medha, it transformed into a camel. Similarly, when the goat lost its sacrificial essence, it became a Sharabha. According to Āchārya Mahīdhara in his commentary on the Śukla Yajurveda Mādhyaṃdina Saṁhitā (Mantra 13.51), the word Sharabha refers to a "special eight-legged beast that even kills lions."

This implies that although the lion is considered the most ferocious and violent animal, Sharabha—an eight-legged creature—surpasses it in violence and power, even capable of slaying lions. Therefore, Sharabha is even more fierce and destructive than a lion.

In the context of chayana-yāga (a particular Vedic sacrificial rite), from mantras 47 to 51 of Chapter 13 of the Śukla Yajurveda Mādhyaṃdina Saṁhitā, the prohibition of violence against these five animals is mentioned. Hence, after the sacrificial essence (medha) had exited these five beings—man, horse, cow, sheep, and goat—they became corrupted (vikṛta) or condemned (nindita). Their yajña-tattva was lost. Hence these five beings –man, horse, cow, sheep, and goat should not be used in Yagya . Therefore, their flesh is considered unfit for consumption and should not be eaten.

In modern times, meat consumption has, in some places, become a cultural tradition. In certain auspicious and inauspicious rituals, animal sacrifice is still vigorously practiced. Such societies must become aware that violence in the name of sacrifice is condemned by the Vedas. Therefore, such practices should be completely abandoned.

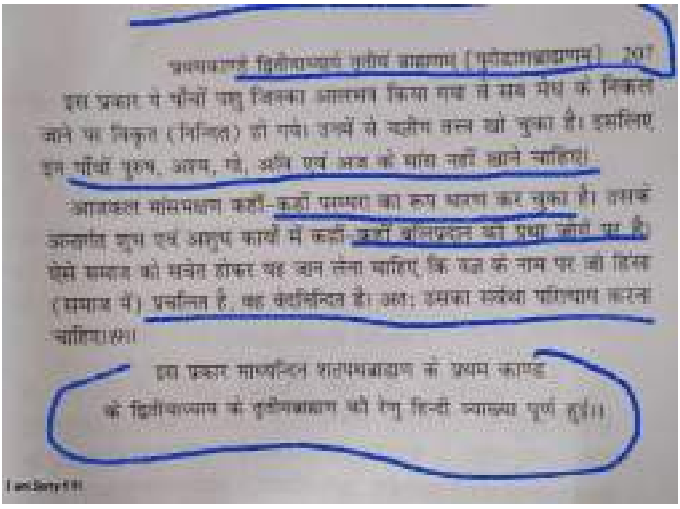
शरभ शब्द का अर्थ आचार्य महीधर ने अपने शुक्लयजुर्वेदीयमाध्यन्दिन संहिता के भाष्य में "शरभोऽष्टापदो मृगविशेषः सिंहघाती" (शु.य.सं.-13-51 मन्त्रभाष्य) किया है। अर्थात् आठ पैरों वाला ऐसा मृग जो सिंह को भी मार देता है। तात्पर्य यह हुआ कि सिंह सबसे उग्र हिंसक जानवर है। परन्तु शरभ जो अष्टपाद जानवर है वह उस सिंह को भी हत्या कर देता है। अतः सिंह से भी अधिक उग्र एवं क्रूर हिंसक पशु यह शरभ है।

यज्ञयाग के प्रसङ्ग में इन पाँचों पशुओं की हिंसा का निषेध करते हुए शुक्लयजुर्वेदीय माध्यन्दिन संहिता के 13वें अध्याय के 47 मन्त्र से 51 मन्त्र तक इस प्रसङ्ग का उल्लेख किया गया है।



प्रथमकाण्डे द्वितीयाध्याये तृतीयं ब्राह्मणम् [पुरोडाशब्राह्मणम्] 207

इस प्रकार से पाँचों पशु जिनका आलभन किया गया तो सब मेध के निकल जाने पर विकृत (निन्दित) हो गये। उनमें से यज्ञीय तत्त्व खो चुका है। इसलिए इन पाँचों पुरुष, अश्व, गौ, अवि एवं अज के मांस नहीं खाने चाहिए।

आजकल मांसभक्षण कहीं-कहीं परम्परा का रूप धारण कर चुका है। उसके अन्तर्गत शुभ एवं अशुभ कार्यों में कहीं-कहीं बलिप्रदान की प्रथा जोरों पर है। ऐसे समाज को सचेत होकर यह जान लेना चाहिए कि यज्ञ के नाम पर जो हिंसा (समाज में) प्रचलित है, वह वेदनिन्दित है। अतः उसका सर्वथा परित्याग करना चाहिए।।8।।

इस प्रकार माध्यन्दिन शतपथब्राह्मण के प्रथम काण्ड के द्वितीयाध्याय के तृतीयब्राह्मण की रेणु हिन्दी व्याख्या पूर्ण हुई।।

O enemy! If you harm or kill our cow—our companion and source of nourishment—then know this: The verb "हंसि" (you kill) comes from the root "हन्" (to strike or kill), and its rammatical form here implies intentional violence. The use of the present tense (Laṭ lakāra) and causative mood (śap pratyaya) suggests deliberate aggression, not accidental harm. Therefore, we shall strike you down with lead, empowered by the might described earlier. The verb "व्यध" (to pierce or strike) is used here in the sense of forceful retaliation. The grammatical derivation from the root "दिव्" (to shine or act) with the suffix "श्यन्" implies a renewed emergence of action—a justified response to aggression.

(3) Kullūka:

"The Ācārya is one who teaches the Vedas following the ritual of upanayana (initiation). The Pravaktā is the one who explains the meaning of the Vedas. The Guru is the one who has done even a little or much for someone — as stated.

As for Ācārya and others, they should not be harmed. However, in the case of acting contrary to them (pratikūla-ācaraṇa), the term hiṁsā (violence) does not apply strictly.

Govindarāja, however, interprets the general prohibition on violence to mean that even if such persons (like teachers, etc.) were ātatāyins (criminal aggressors), they should not be harmed.

Kullūka disagrees, saying: this is inappropriate (tad ayuktam), as it contradicts the verse: "guruṁ vā bāla-vṛddhau vā" (Manu 8.350), which allows punishment even of gurus or elders under certain grave circumstances."

(4) Rāghavānanda:

"He further says: One should never torment any of these eight types of persons, not even at any time.

The Ācārya is the one who initiates (upanetā), the Pravaktā is the teacher (adhyāpaka), the Guru is the one who gives wise counsel or guidance (hitopadeṣṭā)."

(5) Nandana:

"One should neither harm nor behave in opposition (pratikūlaṁ na kuryāt) toward such persons."

(6) Rāmacandra:

"The Ācārya is the initiator (upanetā), the Pravaktā is the Upādhyāya, and the Vyākhyātā is the one who gives explanations.
One should not harm the following:

- Father,
- Mother,
- Guru,
- Brāhmaṇas,
- Cows,
- All ascetics,
- Those engaged in expiatory acts (prāyaścitta),
- And especially the Ācārya and such persons.

Not only should one not harm them physically, but one should not even cause emotional pain through words.
Even hostile behavior (pratikūla-ācaraṇa), which is a form of injury, should not be done."

(7) Maṇirāma:

"The Pravaktā is the expounder of the Vedas and imilar texts.

He should not be harmed, and one must not commit any form of violence, including oppositional conduct."

(8) Govindarāja:

"Regarding 'Ācārya' etc., he says:
The Ācārya is the one who teaches the Vedas or merely performs the upanayana.
This includes worldly figures like father, mother, guru, as per the expression 'alpaṁ vā bahu vā yasya' (Manu 2.149).

Even if such individuals — cows, brāhmaṇas, ascetics — become ātatāyins (aggressors), they still must not be harmed.

Otherwise, if general prohibition against violence (sāmānya-hiṁsā-niṣedha) already exists, then this specific statement would become redundant (anarthaka)."

A yajamāna (sacrificer) devoid of Intellect , who performs Yagyas using the limbs of animals like dogs and cows, engages in an actionless, foolish, and condemnable act. Only those great souls who understand the profound process of inner sacrifice through the mind — the knowers of the self-sacrifice — can truly reveal the nature of the Supreme Being

Historical Evidences that Cows were always Aghanya in Ancient Bharat

Ibn Battuta: "Killing or eating a cow was strictly forbidden; anyone caught doing it should be punished with death"

Oue thing alone is forbidden, namely to kill a cow or to eat its flesh; whosoever should be discovered slaughtering or eating one of these animals would be immediately punished with death."

In other parts a strange practice is adopted. When a vessel sets sail for a certain point, and is suddenly driven by a decree of Divine Providence into another roadstead, the inhabitants, under the pretext that the wind has driven it there, plunder the ship. But at Calicut every ship, whatever place it may come from or where it may be bound, when it puts into this port is treated like other vessels and has no trouble of any kind to put up with." In another place the Persian ambassador remarks "In this harbour one can find everything that can be desired. One thing alone is forbidden, namely to kill a cow or to eat its flesh; whosoever should be discovered slaughtering or eating one of these animals would be immediately punished with death."

Manu needhi Cholan ran a chariot on his own son to give justice to a cow whose calf his son killed mistakenly. Hindus haven't spared their own children when it came to the protection of cows. That's how much Hindus Rever cows.

Acting as legislature, prosecutor and judge the king decreed that the retributive theory of punishment (still the basis of criminal jurisprudence) would apply with no exception. "An eye for an eye," said the law. So the king pronounced judgment and ran his chariot over his son: a calf for a calf. He had no option — live up to responsibility or abdicate public office.

While Ellalan cholan sacrificed his son, Bira Gowda gave his own life to protect cows.

256 THE NEVER TO BE FORGOTTEN EMPIRE.

An inscription dated Sarvari, S. 1343 (November A.D. 1420), states that when Vira Deva Raya was ruling a peaceful kingdom, Bira Gowda in protecting the cows, died, and his wife made "sati" and obtained vira svarga.

The only condition a Muslim was allowed to settle in this land was that he wont harm a cow. Hindus revered cows before these mussalmans were born.

The association between the kings of Malabar and the Muslim merchants, while founded on an economic basis, was also manifest in the protection and patronage of cults and local institutions of Hindus and Muslims.[78] A fifteenth-century Chinese observer says that the two communities had agreed to abstain from the consumption of beef and pork, and that respect for the cow was a condition for settlement of the Muslims. A 15th century Chinese observer said that RESPECT FOR COW was the only condition for settlement of the Muslims in the land that we call Kerala today. In return they were allowed to practice their religion.

him again, and the scribes write down the condition in which his hand is, and they tie it up with a cloth whether it is burned or not, and put seals on the fastenings of the cloth, and send him back to prison. And three days later, all return to the same place where the oath was taken, and they untie his hand before the governor and party, and if they find it burned they kill him, but first give him so many torments that they make him confess where he has got the stolen property, or that he did it. And even if he does not confess, all the same he suffers the penalty because his hand was burned; and if they find his hand not burned, then they let him go, and he who accused him pays a certain sum as a fine to the governor. And they have the same method for him who kills another, or for him who kills a cow, or raises his hand in anger against Bramans or noblemen. And this is to be understood as amongst the Gentile peasants and low people. And if it is a Moor who does such things, he passes through the same examinations, only that instead of putting his fingers in oil, they make him lick with his tongue a red-hot axe, and if he does not burn himself he remains free, and if he burns his tongue he suffers death.

The nobles enjoy exemption and the privilege, that they cannot be taken and put in irons for anything which they do. And if a noble were to rob or kill any one, or kill a cow, or were to sleep with a woman of low caste, or of the Bramans, or if he eat or drank in the house of a low caste man, or spoke ill of his king—this being established by his own words—they call three or four honourable gentlemen in whom the king places confidence, and he bids them go and kill this noble wherever they may meet with him, and they give them a warrant[1] signed by the king for them to kill him without penalty. They then kill him with daggers or spears, or shoot him with arrows, because at times these men who are accused are such that before being put to death, they wound two or three of the slaughterers, if they have been forewarned. And after he is dead they lay him on his back and place that king's warrant upon his breast. And if they kill

There is another sect of Gentiles who are called Bramans, who are priests and directors of the houses of prayer. These do not eat meat or fish, they marry only one wife, and if she dies they do not marry again: their children inherit their property. They

The Zamorin goes to him and performs Sashtaagam [7] or prostration with the eight limbs. In slow and measured terms the Tamprakkal pronounces three times his benediction in the following words :— "Protecting cows and Brahmins, reign as Kunnalakkonathiri".[8]

As soon as he returns to the palace, he proceeds to the "dressing room" for Chamayam charittal [9] or putting on the ornaments. He is helped by Naaluvaunattil Nampi[10] who was in former times the keeper of the crown jewels. These were worn Hindus of Vijayanagar Empire made it the mission of their life to protect cows. When Muhammad Shaw was approaching Bukkraya's kingdom, his army used to get motivated to slaughter Mohammedans by constantly reminding them through Brahmins how their cows were butchered & temples destroyed by the muhamedans.

"Roy Kishen Roy (i.e. Bukka), on receiving the intelligence (that Muhammad had crossed), called together all the first nobles of his court, and consulted on the best mode of opposing the mussulmauns. It was agreed that Hoje Mul,[2] a maternal relation to the roy and commander of his armies, should have the conduct of the war. Hoje Mul, vain to excess, on receiving his command, asked the roy if he should bring the prince of the mussulmauns alive a prisoner into his presence, or present him only his head upon a spear. Kishen Roy replied, that a living enemy, in any situation, was not agreeable, therefore he had better put him to death as soon as he should take him. Hoje Mul, having received his dismission, marched to oppose Mahummud Shaw with forty thousand horse and five hundred thousand foot. He commanded the Bramins to deliver every day to the troops discourses on the meritoriousness of slaughtering the mahummedans, in order to excite zeal for expelling them. He ordered them to describe the butchery of cows,[1] the insults to sacred images, and destroying of temples, practised by the true believers.

When reports reached to the brave Rajput king Maharana Kumbha that Mohammedans were slaughtering cows in Nagor, He started with 50,000 horsemen to attack Nagor putting 1000s of Mohamedans to sword.

In S. 1524 (A.D. 1467) reports reached the Maharana that the Mussalmans had begun to kill cows in Nagor. He therefore started with fifty thousand horsemen to attack Nagor. After putting thousands of the enemy to the sword, he captured the fort and carried away a number of elephants, horses and other valuables as spoils of war. The Governor of Nagor fled to the Court of the Sultan of Ahmedabad, who advanced in the direction of Sirohi with a large army, and, after plundering that part of the country, turned towards Kumbhalgarh. The Maharana also advanced with his Rajputs and defeated the Sultan, who turned towards Malwa, and, through that country, returned to his capital.[2]

As per Elalinga Mahatmya he defeated the Musalman king of shakas, fought with mujahids & slew the moslems of Nagor. He saved a whooping 12 lakh cows from the Mohamedans & made the land a pasture for cows.

He took away from the treasury of Shams Khan a large store of precious stones, jewels and other valuable things. The Eklinga Mahatmya composed during Kumbhá's lifetime, says that he "defeated the King of the Shakas (Mussalmans), put to flight Mashiti (Mujahid?), slew the heroes of Nágpur (Nagor), destroyed[1] the fort, filled up the moat round the fort, captured elephants, imprisoned Shaka women and punished countless Mussalmans. He gained a victory over the King of Gujrat, burnt the city[2] (Nagor) with all the mosques therein, liberated twelve lakhs of cows from the Moslems, made the land a pasture for cows and gave Nagor for a time to Bráhmans."[3] He carried away the gates of the fort and an image of Hanumán from Nagor, which he placed at the principal gate of the fortress of Kumbhalgarh, calling it the Hanumán Pol.

Vijaynagara Empire: Two kings who were once forcefully converted to by Musalaman, reconverted back to form one of the biggest Hindu Empire & the nightmare for Mohamedans. Epigraphic inscriptions shows that the kingdom was formed for the the protection of Gods, Cows & Brahmans. Vidyaranya Sripada for the protection of cows, Gods Brahmins had put Harihara Raya to the throne.

The ruler of the kingdom was a prince known as the rāya, and under the leadership of a series of remarkable rāyas and still more remarkable ministers, the state of Vijayanagar became the cynosure of the East, and one of the most wealthy kingdoms of Asia. Travellers were unanimous in extolling its grandeur, its magnificent temples, the opulence of its sovereigns. The Portuguese traveller Domingo Paes (c. 1520) estimated that the city was as large as Rome, with a population countless in number, 'so much so that I do not wish to write it down for fear it should be thought fabulous'. Its overflowing markets displayed wares from Lisbon to Peking; cinnabar, camphor, musk, and pepper came from Malabar; silk from China; ivory from Alexandria; rubies from Pegu; Ormuz horses were imported by the Portuguese who also supplied velvets, damasks, satins and taffetas. Much of its wealth was in fact due to trade with the Portuguese. It was described as the most opulent and best provided kingdom in the world, and in the words of the Muslim envoy Abdur Razzāq, 'such that the pupil of the eye hath never seen a place like it'.

The rāyas, notably Krishna Rāya (1509–29), also known as Krishnadeva Rāya, were great builders and patrons of the arts. They ushered in the Augustan Age of Tamil literature through their patronage of Tamil poets; they were responsible for the efflorescence of Telugu and Kanarese poetry, and donated large sums for Sanskrit studies. They encouraged scholars, musicians, philosophers, religious teachers and saints.

But they also encouraged the priests. An epigraphic inscription of 1652 preserves the legend that the empire had been founded 'for the protection of gods, cows and brahmins'. Vijayanagar became the centre of orthodoxy and was thus implanted with the seeds of its own decay. Ritualists were given full scope for their endless ceremonial. On religious festivals there was a mass slaughter of animals, and sometimes even human sacrifices, such as when sixty men were slain to ensure the security of a dam near Hospet. Enormous gifts were conferred on brahmins whose mantras were believed to protect the realm. Both inside and outside Vijayanagar the Deccan's religious life was being guided by pandits whose prescriptions were strangling the free exercise of the religious spirit.

Vijayanagar's splendour was the type of barbaric magnificence that Rome knew in the days of her decline. While the rāyas and nobles revelled in luxury and maintained armies of women in their harems; while the priests battened on the unparalleled feast of power bestowed on them by the kings and made a mockery of religion at their sybaritic festivities with hordes of dancing girls, the people suffered terrible hardships, and the serfs and labourers lived in abject squalor. The wonderful monuments that were built 'rose out of the sweat of slaves and prisoners of war'. Taxes were exorbitant, and methods of collecting them ruthless in the extreme. Punishments included mutilation of hands and feet, beheading, impaling alive, hanging by a hook, and casting to elephants to be trampled and torn.

Formerly, Vidyāraṇya Śrīpāda, who was the teacher (guruguḷe) of our line [i.e. the Śṛṅgeri maṭha] and the author of the Veda Bhāṣya, had, out of mercy to the world ([illegible]), founded Vidyānagara using the power obtained from the god Virūpākṣa by virtue of his penance ([illegible]). Then he, for the protection of cows, gods and Brahmins, put Harihara Mahārāya on the lion throne (siṃhāsana) and performed the anointing ceremony (paṭṭābhiṣeka) at his coronation.

Nayars of Shudra origin: These bravehearts, armed with daggers and swords, were known to have taken oath of protecting cows.

As in Vijayanagar, the royal entourage was marked by the presence of Brahmins and warriors. The turmoil that had followed the fall of the Chera Empire had favoured the fortune of the priestly caste, and prompted the legitimisation of the rajahs of adventure who bestowed on them donations of territories respected by all the Hindu armies, even by enemies. Another caste emerged from the shadows: the Nayars, of shudra origin, whose military qualities had covered with privileges. Portuguese narrators have left behind vivid descriptions of these warriors who walked semi nude, armed with a dagger and a sword, which never left their side. Protected by a round shield and at times by a silk coat, they fought on foot and knew how to handle the spear and how to shoot with a bow and a harquebus. Trained from an early age in military academies, they had taken an oath to protect cows and Brahmins. There were several thousand of them in each court. Their families lived outside the city, in vast rural properties, under the authority of mothers and aunts, custodians of the matriarchal tradition which gave them total freedom to choose their way of life.

Kerala did not escape the influence of two external powers — the belligerence of Vijayanagar and the commercial hegemony of Gujarat. Even though the kings of Malabar were independent, the rajah of Vijayanagar intruded very often on their affairs and inspired a respectful fear in them. Only the kings of Venad dared to [illegible]

📚Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6.4.18📚
And if a man wishes that a learned son should be born to him, famous, a public man, a popular speaker, that he should know all the Vedas, and that he should live to his full age, then, after having prepared boiled rice with meat and butter, they should both eat, being fit to have offspring. The meat should be of a young or of an old bull

"Anyone who desires a son who is a renowned scholar, who can enter assemblies of learned people without fear, who speaks pleasantly and is delightful to listen to, who studies all the Vedas, and lives for a hundred years — such a man and his wife should cook rice with the pulp of medicinal herbs and mix it with ghee before consuming it. "The one whose greatness is praised in many ways is called 'Vigeet' — meaning 'renowned.' 'Samitigama' refers to one who fearlessly or confidently enters assemblies of scholars. It's not interpreted as merely a scholar or pundit here because scholarly expertise is addressed separately in the mantra. 'Shushrushita' describes a speaker whose words are pleasing to hear — refined, cultured, and meaningful in tone.

The pulp of herbs or fruits is referred to as 'meat' (mamsa); rice mixed with such pulp is called 'mamsaudana' in this context. That herb's pulp is the intended ingredient.

'Rishabha' is an older and more powerful bull than 'Uksha'; a potent herb named after this mighty bull is also called 'Rishabha.' The pulp of this herb should be understood as the one referred to as 'Aarshabha' here."

Explanation of Brihadaranyak Upanishad 6.4.18 by Gita press in its book A Review of Beef eating in Ancient India eaters should have all acquired this learning. Let us examine the interpretation of this verse in its appropriate context. The four verses immediately preceding the said controversial verse in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad read as follows :—

स य इच्छेत् पुत्रो मे शुक्लो जायेत वेदमनुब्रुवीत सर्वमायुरियादिति
क्षीरौदनं पाचयित्वा सर्पिष्मन्तमश्नीयातामीश्वरौ जनयितवै ॥१४॥

अथ य इच्छेत् पुत्रो मे श्यामो लोहिताक्षो जायेत त्रीन् वेदाननुब्रुवीत

अथ य इच्छेद् दुहिता मे पण्डिता जायेत सर्वमायुरियादिति
तिलौदनं पाचयित्वा सर्पिष्मन्तमश्नीयातामीश्वरौ जनयितवै ॥१७॥

These four verses, according to all the translators, give dietary prescriptions for begetting progeny which is well versed in one or more Vedas as follows :—

for a son, proficient in one Veda, diet of rice cooked in milk, mixed with ghee ;

for a son, proficient in two Vedas, diet of rice cooked with curd, mixed with ghee ;

for a son, proficient in three Vedas, diet of rice cooked in water, mixed with ghee ; and for a learned daughter, diet of rice cooked in til (sesamum), mixed with ghee.

According to Western scholars, the chronological order of the four Vedas is as follows :—

(i) Ṛg-Veda ; (ii) Yajur-Veda ; (iii) Sāma-Veda ; and (iv) Atharva-Veda.

If the sequence of the Vedas in the above-quoted verses of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad is taken to correspond to the order in which the respective Vedas have appeared, then the diet prescribed for a couple to acquire a son well versed in one or more of the Vedas will be as follows :—

(i) For Ṛg-Veda, diet of rice and milk, mixed with ghee ;

(ii) For Ṛg. and Yajur-Vedas } " " curd, " "

(iii) For Ṛg, Yajur & Sāma Vedas } diet of rice and water, mixed with ghee ;

(iv) For Ṛg, Yajur, Sāma & Atharva Vedas } diet of rice and beef, mixed with ghee.

If the above interpretation is accepted, beef diet has been enjoined for the acquisition of the knowledge of the Atharva-Veda only.

The above verses do not indicate a diet of the meat of smaller animals like goat, sheep or others for acquiring a child proficient in one or two or three of the Vedas. Then how can it be justified that beef diet has been prescribed for begetting a son learned in the four Vedas, particularly for the Atharva Veda. Let us consider the question further and in greater details.

Just as the English word 'flesh', besides meaning 'muscular tissues of an animal', also means 'soft pulpy part of fruits and vegetables' and 'meat', besides meaning 'flesh of an animal', also means 'anything eaten as food for nourishment', the Sanskrit word Māṁsa also means 'soft pulpy part of fruits and vegetables, etc.' The readers can consult any Sanskrit dictionary. Similarly, the peel of a fruit is called skin ; its hard part is called bone and fibres are called ligament or nerves etc.

'PRASTHAM KUMĀRIKĀ-MĀMSAM ĀNAYA' in Sanskrit could mean 'bring a seer of girl's flesh', but it means only 'bring a seer of the fleshy pith of the medicinal plant called kumārī (Hindi—ghikvār).

There are several words in Sanskrit which mean a particular animal or which refer to parts of their body, but primarily they are the names of medicinal plants.

Go-danti cow's-teeth ; a kind of medicinal plant ; yellow orpiment (Monier-Williams) ; a white mineral substance (Monier-Williams)

Go-kṣura cow's hoof ; a medicine called gokharu ; Tribulus lanuginosus, mirieta (Monier-Williams).

Go-jihvā cow's tongue ; Ayurvedic medicine called gojwan or gojivan (its leaf is rough like cow's tongue) ; name of a plant Phlomis or Premna esculenta (Monier-Williams).

Ajā karṇa goat's ear ; asana arjuna (आसन अर्जुन) tree whose parts are used in the preparation of medicine ; the tree Terminalia Alata Tomentosa (Monier-Williams).

Ajā she-goat ; plant whose bulb resembles the udder of a goat (Monier-Williams)

goat (Monier-Williams)

It would be blasphemy if one interprets these words only as parts of the body of a cow or goat or the animal itself.

The chapter VI-4 of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad deals with the subject of begetting learned progeny according to one's own desire. The very first verse of this chapter is :—

एषां वै भूतानां पृथिवी रसः, पृथिव्या आपोऽपामोषधयः, ओषधीनां पुष्पाणि, पुष्पाणां फलानि, फलानां पुरुषः, पुरुषस्य रेतः ॥१॥ which means—

"Verily, of all created things here, earth is the essence ; of earth, water is the essence ;
of water, medicinal plants are the essence ;
of medicinal plants, flowers are the essence ;
of flowers, fruits are the essence ;
of fruits, man is the essence ;
of man, semen is the essence.

In this chain from earth to semen (seed of the human species), no mention has been made of anything connected with animal flesh. The specification of the plant kingdom clearly indicates that high class semen needed to beget high class progeny, can be produced by fruits of medicinal plants only and not from any kind of animal flesh.

The word 'aukṣeṇa' is from 'Ukṣa'. It will be relevant here to quote the various meanings of this word from the famous Sanskrit-English Dictionary compiled by Monier-Williams. They are as follows :—

(i) a bull (as impregnating the flock) ;
(ii) name of 'soma' (as sprinkling or scattering small drops) ;
(iii) one of the eight chief medicaments (ṛṣabha).

The word 'ārṣabheṇa' is derived from the word 'ṛṣabha'. The said Dictionary renders this word as follows :—

(i) a bull (as impregnating the flock) ;
(ii) a kind of medicinal plant (Suśruta, Bhāva-Prakāśa) ;
(iii) Carpopogon Pruriens (Caraka).

The well-known Sanskrit-German Dictionary under the title Sanskrit-Worterbuch published by the Imperial Academy of Sciences, St-Petersburg in 1855, explains the word 'ukṣā' as dripping or trickling soma. The Dictionary has cited the word from various mantras 1.135.9, 9.83.2, 9.85.10, 9.86.43, 9.89.2, 9.95.4 of the Ṛg-Veda.

A few more meanings are ascribed to these two words, but they are not relevant here.

'SOMA' in Monier Monier-Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary is 'Juice of soma plant' where soma plant itself is said to be a climbing plant Sarcostema Viminalis or Asclepias Acida ; a drug of supposed magical property. 'Soma' is interpreted as 'nectar' as well. Almost similar interpretations of the soma plant are given in other indigenous dictionaries also.

The concluding words of the above verse are 'aukṣeṇa vā ṛṣabheṇa vā', which stand for 'either ukṣā or ṛṣabha'. As such ukṣā and ṛṣabha must be two different things and not one and the same thing. According to the dictionaries, ukṣā does not mean 'go-vatsa' or calf, while both words ukṣā and ṛṣabha, if interpreted as an animal of the bovine species, will mean bull (as impregnating the flock) i.e. one and the same thing. Hence the word ukṣā and ṛṣabha, with the conjunctions 'either' and 'or', cannot mean one and the same thing i.e. bull (as impregnating the flock). By adding the conjunctions 'either ... or' to 'ukṣā' and 'ṛṣabha' the seer of the verse must have intended to represent two different things. In the field of medicine 'ukṣā' may also mean 'ṛṣabha', but with the words 'either and 'or' added with the words 'ukṣā' and 'ṛṣabha', ukṣā' cannot mean 'ṛṣabha'. As such 'ukṣā' stands for 'soma' (as sprinkling or scattering small drops) and 'ṛṣabha' signifies a medicinal plant as described in the Caraka-Saṁhitā, Suśruta-Saṁhitā and Bhāva-Prakāśa.

In Caraka-Saṁhitā, Volume I, Chapter IV. 13, the first mahākaṣāya consisting of ten medicines, among which 'ṛṣabhaka' is one, are termed as 'jīvanīya' or energy-increasing. The text is as follows :—

1 2 3 4 5 6 7-8
जीवकर्षभकौ मेदा महामेदा काकोली क्षीरकाकोली मुद्गमाषपर्ण्यौ
9 10
जीवन्ती मधुकमिति दशेमानि जीवनीयानि भवन्ति।

In the 38th Chapter of the sūtra-sthāna of the Suśruta-Saṁhitā, which is named as dravya-saṅgrahāṇīya, ṛṣabhaka' is one of several items.

In Bhāva-Prakāśa, Purva-khand 'ṛṣabhaka' is one of the eight medicaments. The text is as follows :—

1 2 3-4 5-6 7 8
जीवकर्षभकौ मेदे काकोल्यौ ऋद्धिवृद्धिके ॥१२४॥

Among the various qualities of aṣṭa-varga or the eight medicaments, the most important are : bṛṁhaṇa aphrodisiac ; śukra-janaka—semen-producing ; and bala-vardhaka—tonic.

It is further mentioned there that the 'ṛṣabha' medicine is found on Himalayan peaks. It is shaped like the horn of a bull.

From the several references quoted above as well as from verses 1, 14, 15, 16 and 17 of the same chapter of Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, it is amply clear that 'ukṣā' and 'ṛṣabha' in verse 18 can mean only two different medicinal plants referred to in Ayurvedic texts and not the meat of a calf or an ox (whether full-grown or old) in any case.

Clarification and Explanation on Shankaracharya commentary on Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6/4/18

Jagadguru Ādi-Śaṅkarācārya's Sanskrit Commentary on controversial kaṇḍikā 6.4.18 of Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, is often cited in favour of the prescription of beef. Some contend that it is evident from this commentary that even Jagadguru Ādi-Śaṅkarācārya has accepted the prescription of partaking of rice cooked with beef for a couple desirous of begetting progeny well-versed in the four Vedas. The wording of the commentary is as follows :

"विविधं गीतो विगीतः प्रख्यात इत्यर्थः। समितिंगमः सभां गच्छतीति प्रगल्भ इत्यर्थः। पाण्डित्यस्य पृथग्ग्रहणात्। शुश्रूषितां श्रोतुमिष्टां रमणीयां वाचं भाषिता संस्कृताया अर्थवत्या वाचो भाषितेत्यर्थः। मांसमिश्रमोदनं मांसौदनम्। तन्मांसनियमार्थमाह–औक्षेण वा मांसेन। उक्षा सेचनसमर्थः पुंगवस्तदीयं मांसम्। ऋषभस्ततोऽप्यधिकवयास्तदीयमार्षभं मांसम्।"

There is no difference of opinion about the translation of the first part of the commentary which is as follows :

"One whose importance is sung in varied ways is called vigīta. Vigīta i.e., renowned. Samitiṅgama i.e., a fearless or undaunted person who attends the assembly of the learned. As learned has been specified separately in the text, the word samitiṅgama has not been taken in the sense of a scholar or learned person. Suśrūṣā is affable in speech, speaker of charming expression, i.e., a coherent speaker endowed with saṁskāras".

The meaning of the latter part is as follows :

"Cooked rice mixed with māṁsa is māṁsaudana. The māṁsa is further specified as : that of ukṣā, ukṣā is a puṅgava potent in impregnation ; or that of a ṛṣabha of vayas exceeding that of ukṣā".

This is the literal meaning. Jagadguru Ādi-Śaṅkarācārya has not clarified whether it is the meat of an animal or whether it is the māṁsa i.e., fleshy part of medicinal fruits. In such a situation it has to be considered in the light of its context, whether the meat of an animal is appropriate here or the fleshy part of medicinal fruits. This will be clear by considering the signification of secana-samarthaḥ puṅgavaḥ and of 'a ṛṣabha exceeding in vayas than that of ukṣā'. There is no difference of opinion about the meaning of secana-samarthaḥ which is potent in impregnation. The meanings of the words ukṣā, puṅgava, ṛṣabha and vayas will have to be considered.

The meaning of ukṣā has been discussed earlier in this chapter.

The meanings of the word puṅgava are given by Monier Williams in his Sanskrit-English Dictionary p. 630, column 3 (lines 8-11 from bottom) as follows :

"a bull, a hero, eminent person, chief of, a kind of drug".

On their basis, the meaning of secana-samarthaḥ puṅgavaḥ can be :

(i) a stud-bull potent in impregnation.
(ii) a hero potent in impregnation.
(iii) an eminent person potent in impregnation.
(iv) a chief potent in impregnation.
(v) a kind of drug potent in impregnation.

The herb potent in impregnation has been termed as vājīkaraṇa or aphrodisiac in Āyurveda. Soma is also an aphrodisiac herb (a drug of supposed magical property) which is a favourite of the gods. According to Hindu scriptures one attains birth among the gods for enjoying the fruits of one's meritorious deeds. These include all enjoyments according to one's inclination or longing. The Purāṇas recount a number of legends of the amours of the gods enjoying the fruits of their meritorious deeds. Therefore, it is not surprising that the herbal juice of soma which is potent in impregnation, should have been such a favourite of the gods enjoying the fruits of their meritorious deeds. Now, the readers should themselves consider as to which of the five meanings mentioned above will be more appropriate and in accordance with the context for 'ukṣā secana-samarthaḥ'. Taking the contextual propriety into consideration, the meaning 'a herb (ukṣā, i.e. soma juice) potent in impregnation' will be the most appropriate and relevant.

The meaning of 'tataḥ api adhika-vayāḥ' is 'one exceeding in vayas than that'. The base of vayāḥ is vayas. The meanings of the word vayas are given as under in Monier-Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary, page 920, columns 2, 3 :

(i) enjoyment, food, meal, oblation ;
(ii) energy (both bodily and mental), strength, health, vigour, power, might ;
(iii) vigorous age, youth, prime of life, any period of life, age.

Accordingly, tataḥ api adhika-vayāḥ will mean :
(i) more enjoyable than that ;
(ii) more energetic than that ;
(iii) more invigorating than that.

The meanings of ṛṣabha as given by Monier-Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary have been cited already. In the section on plants and herbs in the Amarakośa 2.116 it is rendered as ṛṣigī tu ṛṣabho vṛṣaḥ. The plant ṛṣigī is also called ṛṣabha and vṛṣa. This plant ṛṣigī is an aphrodisiac.

If we take it as the flesh of the bovine ṛṣabha (bull) here, then the meaning of 'ṛṣabhaḥ tataḥ api adhika-vayāḥ' will be 'the bovine ṛṣabha who is older in age than the ukṣā capable of impregnating the bovine species'. But the reality of the situation is that the vigorous age for impregnation is growing youth and not the advancing age (declining youth). So this meaning does not fit in the context.

Taking the context into account ṛṣabhaḥ tataḥ api adhika-vayāḥ will mean, 'a medicine of aṣṭavarga called ṛṣabha which is more invigorating even than soma juice'. This medicine is often prescribed by Āyurvedic practitioners for frequent use by the rich to keep their sexual powers undiminished. The medicine of the apāmarga is an aphrodisiac which increases semen.

The prescription of beef is impossible, particularly because the bovine species is declared as inviolable in Vedas. There is no mention of meat in this section from its very first kaṇḍikā among the items which ultimately result in the best, purest sāttvika semen. And only the purest sāttvika semen is required for begetting progeny proficient in the Vedas. Therefore, in the present passage ukṣā and ṛṣabha can never signify the meat of animals, but they can only mean the fleshy part of pulp of pure medicinal fruits.

In none of the dictionaries do we find that the word ukṣā means 'a stud-bull of younger age, potent in impregnation' or that the word ṛṣabha means 'an older stud-bull potent in impregnation'. If we take that according to Jagadguru Ādi-Śaṅkarācārya, both the words ukṣā and ṛṣabha mean stud bulls potent in impregnation, and one of them be younger while the other be older, then the words ukṣā and ṛṣabha taken collectively, will mean, a bull of any age potent in impregnation.

If, in the odanapāka, the meat of a bull of any age, potent in impregnation had been intended then in the original Upaniṣad the wording would have been gavatsa aukṣeṇa (bovine ukṣā) or gavatsa ārṣabheṇa (bovine ṛṣabha) and Jagadguru Ādi-Śaṅkarācārya, to make it clear beyond doubt that the meat of the stud-bull is intended, would also have written, secana-samarthaḥ govatsa-puṅgavaḥ tadīyaṃ māṃsam'.

Stud-bulls potent in impregnation are of a very high breed and also very rare. Their slaughter will never be desirable. Moreover, the original words in the text are aukṣeṇa vā ārṣabheṇa vā, that is, either of an ukṣā or of a ṛṣabha'. The use of the conjunctions 'vā ...... vā' i.e. 'either...... or' itself indicates that ukṣā and ṛṣabha are not the same, but distinctly different. Therefore, it is impossible that a highly learned personality like the Jagadguru Ādi-Śaṅkarācārya would interpret as a tautology the words ukṣā and ṛṣabha signifying 'a stud-bull as long as it is potent in impregnation', when the contradistinctive conjuction 'vā,......vā' i.e. 'either......or' is used to contrast the words ukṣā and ṛṣabha. It is certain that 'ukṣā secana-samartha puṅgavaḥ' as used in the commentary of Jagadguru Ādi-Śaṅkarācārya means an aphrodisiac drug, i.e. soma juice, and 'tataḥ api adhika-vīryaḥ' means 'the drug ṛṣabha of the apāmarga, which is supposed to be more invigorating even than ukṣā i.e. soma juice'.

Allegations-

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 4.5.1.5-6📚
Thereupon he slaughters a barren Anubandhya cow for Mitra and Varuna. And this indeed is performed as a different sacrifice, and that an animal offering: for the Samistayajus form the end of the sacrifice. The reason why there is a barren cow for Mitra and Varuna is this. Whatever part of his (sacrifice) who has offered is well-offered that part of his Mitra takes, and whatever is ill- offered that Varuna takes.

Sayanacharya explained in his commentary on Satapatha Brahmana 4.5.1.5-6

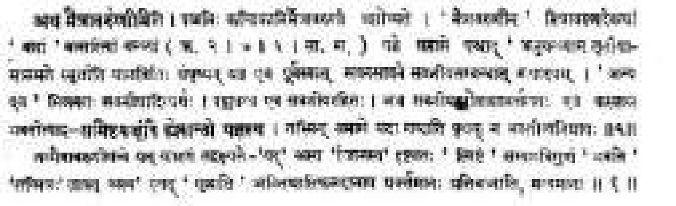
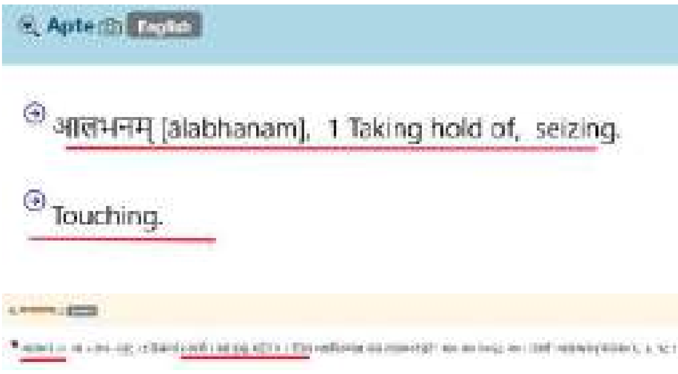
"Now begins the section on the Maitrāvaruṇī rite. The sacrificial animal known as 'Maitrāvaruṇī' is described in five verses. It is dedicated to the deities Mitra and Varuṇa and is a cow that has calved but is barren (as per ritual code 2.7.1 Śrauta Bhāṣya). After the completion of the main sacrifice, this animal is touched (alabhan) and offered in the concluding rite known as 'Anubandhyā' — the third offering, as prescribed in the Smṛti texts.

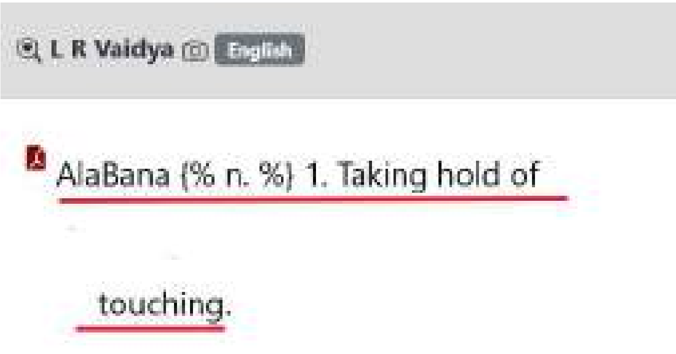
This ritual is performed in connection with the previous Savana (libation) and is considered distinct from the regular Savana rites. It is not part of the Satra (extended sacrificial session) and is instead a standalone offering. The question arises: why is it performed this way? The answer lies in the nature of the Samishtayajus — the final oblations of the sacrifice. When these are performed in the same context, they are not considered separate.

The reason for the Maitrāvaruṇī designation is explained thus: when the sacrifice (ījana) is performed properly and without flaw (sviṣṭa), then Mitra — the deity — accepts it. He binds the sacrificer to the fruit of the ritual, ensuring its truth and efficacy. This act of touching (alabhan) symbolizes the divine connection and the sealing of the ritual's success."



Here actually Alabhan is mentioned which means touching or receiving that has been mistransted by Julius Eggeling as sacrificing





In Srimad Bhagvatam 11.5.13 Alabhan means touching and not sacrificing

The smelling of wine (in the Sautrāmaṇi sacrifice) is laid down as its intake (and no drinking of liquor is permitted); a beast is to be (symbolically) offered to the deities (by touching it) in sacrifices, but no killing for meat-eating is allowed; similarly, sexual intercourse (with one's wife) is to be indulged in for procreation but not for sexual enjoyment. Primary Meaning of the word Alabhan as touching as Explained by Geeta Press Gorakhpur

In the Smrtris, Grhyasūtras, and allied texts alambhana and alabhate mean 'touching'; for example:
(i) In the Subodhini commentary on 'Mīmāṁsā-darśana' 2.3.17 it is stated: आलम्भः स्पर्शो भवति, that is ālambha is sparśa 'touching'.
(ii) In the duties of a Brahmacāri-
वर्जयेत् स्त्रीणां च प्रेक्षणालम्भम्
"the brahmacārī should avoid looking at a woman or touching her." (Manu 2.179).
(iii) In the Upanayana ceremony-
अथास्य (ब्रह्मचारिणः) दक्षिणासं अधिहृदयं आलभते
"the teacher touches the heart of the brāhmacārī (Pāraskara-grhyasūtra 2.2.16).
(iv) In the marriage ceremony-
घरो वध्या दक्षिणांसम् अधिहृदयं आलभते

"the bridegroom touches the heart of the bride with his hand over her right shoulder". (Pāraskar-grhyasūtra 1.8.8) etc. etc.
(v) The Bhagavata-Mahāpurāṇā 11.5.13 also clearly testifies that in yajña, paśu-ālambhana does not convey the meaning of 'killing' :-
यदु घ्राणभक्षो विहितः सुरायास्तथा पशोरालभनं न हिंसा ।
(श्रीमद्भागवत ११.५.१३)
"In yajña, the smelling of wine is prescribed, not its drinking. In yajña, the touching of an animal is enjoined not its killing."
(vi) The word स्पर्श that is 'touching' is used for दान gift as well. The great poet Kālidāsa has गाः कोटिश स्पर्शयता घटोध्नीः in Raghuvamsa 2.49 where sparśayatā (स्पर्शयता) means dānam दानं)-gift'.

In the Smṛtis, Gṛhyasūtras, and allied texts ālambhana and ālabhate mean 'touching' ; for example :

(i) In the Subodhinī commentary on 'Mīmāṁsā-darśana' 2.3.17 it is stated : आलम्भः स्पर्शो भवति, that is ālambha is sparśa 'touching'.

(ii) In the duties of a Brahmacārī—

वर्जयेत् स्त्रीणां च प्रेक्षणालम्भम्

"the brahmacārī should avoid looking at a woman or touching her." (Manu 2.179).

(iii) In the Upanayana ceremony—

अथास्य (ब्रह्मचारिणः) दक्षिणांसं अधिहृदयं आलभते

"the teacher touches the heart of the brāhmacārī" (Pāraskara-gṛhyasūtra 2.2.16).

(iv) In the marriage ceremony—

वरो वध्वा दक्षिणांसम् अधिहृदयं आलभते

"the bridegroom touches the heart of the bride with his hand over her right shoulder". (Pāraskar-gṛhyasūtra 1.8.8) etc. etc.

(v) The Bhāgavata-Mahāpurāṇa 11.5.13 also clearly testifies that in yajña, paśu-ālambhana does not convey the meaning of 'killing' :—

यद् घ्राणभक्षो विहितः सुरायास्तथा पशोरालभनं न हिंसा।

(श्रीमद्भागवत ११.५.१३)

"In yajña, the smelling of wine is prescribed, not its drinking. In yajña, the touching of an animal is enjoined not its killing."

(vi) The word स्पर्श that is 'touching' is used for दान gift as well. The great poet Kālidāsa has गा कोटिशः स्पर्शयता घटोध्नीः in Raghuvaṁśa 2.49 where sparśayatā (स्पर्शयता) means dānam (दानं)—gift'.

Primary Meaning of the word Alabhan as touching as Explained by Acharya Gangadhar Pathal Maithil

(क) In the Mahābhārata, Udyoga Parva: "ṛṣabhaṁ pṛṣṭha ālabhya brāhmaṇān abhivādya ca" (83.10) Here, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa touches the back of the bull—ālambhana clearly means "touch," not "strike."

(ख) In Manu Smṛti (5.87): "gām ālabhya viśuddhyati" Even a person rendered impure by contact with a corpse becomes purified by touching a cow—again, ālambh means "touch."

(ग) Similarly, in Manu Smṛti (2.173): "strīṇāṁ ca prekṣaṇālambhe" Here too, ālambhana refers to touching women—not harming them.

(घ) In Yajurveda (20.4), the Uvaṭa Bhāṣya says: "yajamānam ālabhate—ko'si" And in Mahīdhara Bhāṣya: "yajamānam ālabhata, adhvaryur yajamānaṁ spṛśati" Also, in Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra (19.4.19), the ālambhana of the yajamāna is interpreted as "touch," not "strike."

(ङ) In Gautama Dharma Sūtra (1.2.22), Śrī Haradatta writes: "ālambhanaṁ—sparśanam" Confirming that ālambhana means "touch."

(च) From "brahmaṇe brāhmaṇaṁ" (Yajur. 30.5) through 21 mantras, the term "ālabhate" is repeated. In "brahmaṇe brāhmaṇam ālabhate" (Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 3.4.1–19), ālabhate clearly means bringing or touching the Brāhmaṇa—not harming him. They are brought to the yūpa (sacrificial post), tied, and then released.

(छ) In marriage rites, the bride's heart is touched: "athāsyai hṛdayam ālabhate" (Pāraskara 1.8.5) And in upanayana, th boy's heart is touched: "athāsya hṛdayam ālabhate" (2.2.16) Here, ālambhana means reaching or touching the heart—not striking.

(ज) "ālabetāsakṛd dīnaḥ kareṇa ca śiroruhān" This too implies gentle touching of the hair with the hand.

Atharva Veda 7/5/5 condemns killing Cows in Yagyas

विवेकरहित यजमान, श्वान और गौ आदि पशुओं के अवयवों के द्वारा यजन करता है, तो यह अकर्म मूर्खतापूर्ण और निन्दनीय है। जो मन के द्वारा यज्ञ की महान् प्रक्रिया को जानते हैं, ऐसे आत्म-यज्ञ को जानने वाले परमज्ञानी महापुरुष ही परमात्मा के स्वरूप को बतलाएँ ॥५ ॥

A yajamāna (sacrificer) devoid of Intellect , who performs Yagyas using the limbs of animals like dogs and cows, engages in an actionless, foolish, and condemnable act. Only those great souls who understand the profound process of inner sacrifice through the mind — the knowers of the self-sacrifice — can truly reveal the nature of the Supreme Being

"The connection by which this offering (havis) becomes hospitality is now explained through definition and demonstration. The phrase 'atha yasmād ātithyaṁ nāma' means: because of a certain cause, this offering is called hospitality. The implication is that the offering (havis) is named so due to its purpose.

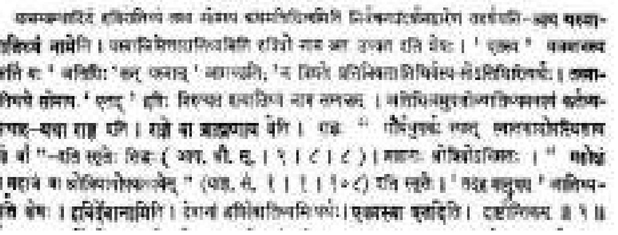
'Etasya yajamānasya vasatiṁ yaḥ atithiḥ san yasmāt āgacchati' — the one who arrives at the sacrificer's residence without a fixed date is called an atithi (guest). Since his arrival is not predetermined, he is termed 'atithi'. Therefore, this offering is designated for Soma as a guest — this is the fulfillment of hospitality.

The necessity of honoring a guest is emphasized: 'Atithitvaṁ upajīvyātithyam avaśyaṁ kartavyam' — hospitality must be performed. Just as one honors a king or a Brāhmaṇa, so too must Soma be honored.

According to Smṛti texts (Āpastamba Śrauta Sūtra 2.8.8), a cow and madhuparka (honeyed offering) are given to a king or a Brāhmaṇa who arrives as a guest. A Brāhmaṇa is ideally a śrotriya (versed in the Vedas). As per Yājñavalkya Smṛti (1.1.108), one should offer a great ox or a large animal to a śrotriya.

'Tadaha mānuṣam ātithyam' — this is human hospitality. But for the gods, the offering itself becomes hospitality. Thus, the havis offered to the gods is their form of ātithya.*

'Evam asmā etad iti' — in this way, this offering is rightly designated for Soma as a guest.



Here actually gifting a big bull or an Ox is mentioned and not that we should kill and cook a big Ox or Goat for the Atithi . Sayanacharya Quoted Yajnavalkya Smriti 1.1.108 here explaining Satapatha Brahmana 3/4/1/2 so lets see Yajnavalkya Smriti 1.1.108 as well

भाषा-श्रोत्रिय (वेदपाठी) अतिथि के लिए बढ़ा बैल या बड़ा बकरा उसके सम्मुर प्रस्तुत करे (उसके उपरान्त) उसका (पायाये, आचमन आसन आदि से) स्वागत करे; (उसके बैठने पर) निकट बैठे, मधुर भोजन करावे और प्रिय वचन बोले ॥ १०९ ॥

"A Vedic scholar (a Śrotriya guest) should be respectfully welcomed with a gift — a large bull or a big goat placed before him. Thereafter, he should be honored with offerings such as water for washing feet (pāyāya), water for sipping (ācamana), and a proper seat (āsana). Once he is seated, the host should sit nearby, serve him sweet and delicious food, and speak pleasing, affectionate words."

Even Commentary on Yajnavalkya Smriti 1.1.108 says same –

महान्तसुक्षाणं धौरेयं महाजं वा श्रोत्रियायोक्तलक्षणायोपकल्पयेत् 'मवदर्भ-मयमस्माभिः परिकल्पितः' इति । तत्प्रीत्यर्थं, नतु दानाय व्यापादनाय वा, यया सर्वमेतद्भवदीयमिति, प्रतिश्रोत्रियसुखासम्भवात्, अस्वर्ग्य लोकविद्विष्टं धर्म्यमप्याचरेन्नतु' (आ. १५३) इति निषेधाच। तस्मात्सत्क्रियांचेव कर्तव्यम् । सत्क्रिया स्वागतवचनासनपाद्यार्थ्याचमनादिदानम् । तस्मिन्नुपविष्टे पश्चादुष वेशनमन्वासनम्, स्वादु भोजनं मिष्टमनम्, सुनुत दचः 'धन्या वयमय भवदागमनात्' इत्येवमादि। अश्रोत्रिये पुनः 'अश्रोत्रियस्योदकालने' (५१११) इति गौतमोक्तं वेदितव्यम् ॥ १०९ ॥

One should offer a well-nourished bull or a large goat to a Śrotriya (a Vedic scholar possessing the prescribed qualities), saying: 'This has been thoughtfully prepared by us for you.' This is done out of reverence and affection — not as a gift for personal gain or destruction, nor with the sentiment that 'all this now belongs to you.' Such exaggerated generosity may not bring true happiness to the Śrotriya and is discouraged by the injunction: 'Even if righteous, one should not perform acts that are disliked by the wise and lead to unsavory worlds' (Āpastamba 1.5.3).

Therefore, proper hospitality must be performed. This includes: welcoming words, offering a seat, water for washing feet, and water for sipping (ācamana). Once the guest is seated, the host should sit nearby, offer delicious and sweet food, and speak kind words such as: 'We are blessed by your arrival.'

For a non-Śrotriya guest, however, Gautama's rule applies: 'For one who is not a Śrotriya, only water should be offered' (Gautama Dharma Sūtra 5.11.1).

“The meaning of pacet in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa is not 'cooking', but it is 'presenting; offering' (vyakṭīkuryāt व्यक्तीकुर्यात्). Here the root is paci vyaktikarane (पचि व्यक्तीकरणे) of the first conjugation, set, and ātmane pada. In the Balamanoramā commentary (editions of Guruprasad Shastri and of the Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office) it is said :- pacetyeke (पचेत्येके) i.e., there is also the variant pac (पच्) of the root paci (पचि). It signifies to present vyaktikarana. This meaning proves the identical intention of the Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa and the Yājñavalkya-Smrti.

Allegations-

Satapatha Brahmana 3/1/2/21 says Yajnvalka used to eat Beef

21. He (the Adhvaryu) then makes him enter the hall. Let him not eat (the flesh) of either the cow or the ox; for the cow nd the ox doubtless support everything here on earth. The gods spake, 'Verily, the cow and the ox support everything here: come, let us bestow on the cow and the ox whatever vigour belongs to other species[13]!' Accordingly they bestowed on the cow and the ox whatever vigour belonged to other species (of animals); and therefore the cow and the ox eat most. Hence, were one to eat (the flesh) of an ox or a cow, there would be, as it were, an eating of everything, or, as it were, a going on to the end (or, to destruction). Such a one indeed would be likely to be born (again) as a strange being, (as one of whom there is) evil report, such as 'he has expelled an embryo from a woman,' 'he has committed a sin[14];' let him therefore not eat (the flesh) of the cow and the ox. Nevertheless Yājñavalkya said, 'I, for one, eat it, provided that it is tender.'

Refutation –

"The context of Satapatha Brahmana 3/1/2/21 is as follows:

When the yajamāna (sacrificer) completes his purification and dons ritual garments, the adhvaryu (ritual priest) leads him into the sacrificial hall. Thereafter, the yajamāna observes a fast until the completion of the initiation (yajña-dīkṣā) and refrains from consuming any products derived from cows and other animals.

At this point, Sage Yājñavalkya remarks: 'As the officiating priest, I am permitted to consume these nourishing and strength-giving substances (i.e., products derived from cows and similar animals).'"

"Now, after shaving and bathing, wearing clean clothes, the yajamāna (sacrificer) is led into the sacrificial hall."
This is indicated by "atha enam iti" – then the adhvaryu

(officiating priest) leads him – as stated in Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra 7.51: prapādayati (he makes him proceed).

Since this is a time before the yajamāna eats, there is a certain dietary restriction mentioned here: "sa dhenve ve ti." That is, he should not consume anything derived from dhenu (milking cows) or aṇḍuha (unmilked or draft cows), because those are attained through ploughing (kṛṣi) or milking.

Thus, both types of products should not be eaten (nāśnīyāt), because dhenu and aṇḍuha are greatly beneficial to the entire world – the restriction on consuming their produce arises due to this.

This idea is further explained by the Vedic quote "te devāḥ" etc. – the gods, recognizing the extraordinary usefulness of these two (dhenu and aṇḍuha), extracted the strength and essence (vīrya, sāra) from all other animals and placed it in these two. So, consuming their products is like consuming all food types together.

If one eats such food and a child is conceived by his wife, that total consumption becomes transformed into semen and would enter the womb as the embryo. Thus, the embryo becomes a product of such total consumption, which is sinful (pāpakīrtiḥ).

Hence, it is concluded: "He should not eat food derived from dhenu and aṇḍuha."

Here, the view of Yājñavalkya is mentioned: "Tadu hovāca" – "He (Yājñavalkya) said…"

"Ceti" – i.e., because of this reason. Because consuming food from both types causes the body to become amsala (thick, fleshy, heavy), therefore he says:

"I, like a horse (strong and robust), do indeed eat food from those two (dhenu and aṇḍuha)."

Cows aged from one to five years are called vayāṃsi (young), and this has also been confirmed by Āpastamba's teaching.

Kātyāyana comments on this:
"One should not eat food from dhenu or aṇḍuha; or it may be allowed if done as part of male (ritual) duty; or one may do so understanding the amsala-bodied result (heaviness/fleshiness)."
(Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra 7.11–13)

*Ācārya Sāyaṇa has explained that 'dhenuḥ kṣīrādikam' refers to products derived from the cow, such as milk, and*

'anaḍuhaḥ sambandhi karṣaṇa-sādhyam' refers to agricultural produce obtained through the labor of bulls.

Now, let's understand the meaning of the term 'aṁsala' (often misinterpreted as 'soft').

The Real Meaning of अंसल

"By adding the suffix 'lach' to the root 'aṁs', the word 'aṁsala' is derived. It is established in the senses of effort and strength according to Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī 5/2/98."

उदा.—वत्स लच्–वत्सल: ।

अंस लच्–अंसल: ।

Kāśikā Vṛtti commentary on Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī says –

"'Aṁsala' refers to someone with well-developed muscles — a strong and robust person." Thus, the word 'aṁsala' signifies strength or muscularity.

"Similarly, 'aṁsavān' indicates someone who is weak." So, 'aṁsavān' is used to denote frailty or lack of strength, despite its literal connection to shoulders.

The real meaning of aṁsala

According to the Nāmalingānuśāsanam (Amarakosha) 2/6/44, the phrase 'balavān māṁsalo'salaḥ' means that 'aṁsala' refers to someone who is stout, muscular, or strong.

It's obvious that if the text were referring to meat, there would be no need to describe it as muscular or strong. The Kaṇḍikā (ritual verse) could have simply used the word 'māṁsa' (meat) directly. Moreover, the term 'aṁsala' is nowhere used in the context of soft cow meat, as claimed by the opposing view.

[illegible]

६ अमांसो दुर्बलश्छातो ७ बलवान्मांसलोऽंसलः ।

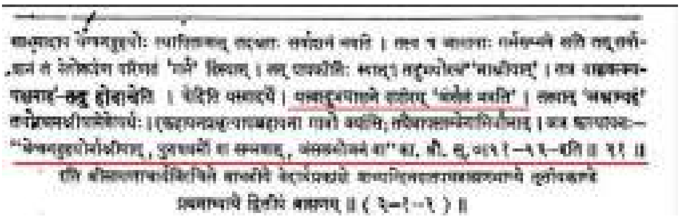
७ बलवान् (= बलवत्), मांसलः, अंसलः (३ त्रि), 'बलवान्, मज़बूत या मोटे' के ३ नाम हैं ॥

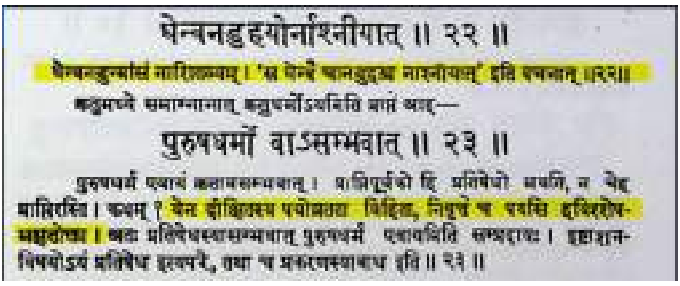
Now, let us understand the contextual meaning of this term through the commentary of Ācārya Sāyaṇa."

Ācārya Sāyaṇa writes: "यस्मादुभयाशने शरीरम् अंसलं भवति" — meaning, by consuming both of these food sources, the body becomes aṁsala, that is, muscular or strong."

Since Ācārya Sāyaṇa has already clarified the contextual meaning of dhenu (milking cow) and anaḍvāna (non-milking bull), it is evident that the reference is to the consumption of their respective products. Naturally, milk and agriculturally produced grains possess all these nourishing qualities.



"Even in Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra 7/2/22–23, we find a refutation of meat consumption. While interpreting this passage, the earlier commentator Ācārya Karka writes in his commentary:"



धेन्वनडुहयोर्नाश्नीयात् ॥ २२ ॥

पुरुषधर्मो वाऽसम्भवात् ॥ २३ ॥

धेन्वनडुन्मांसं नाशितव्यम् । येन दीक्षितस्य पयोव्रतता विहिता, निवृत्ते च पयसि हविश्शेषभक्षतोक्ता । "

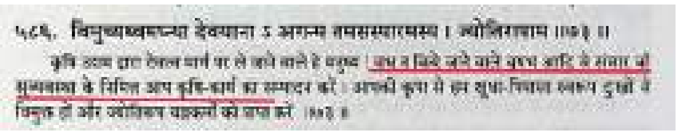
"Consumption of cow and bull meat is prohibited. The initiate (dīkṣita) is prescribed to observe a milk-based vow (payovrata), and after the milk vow concludes, he may consume the remaining sacrificial food (haviṣ)."

This clearly indicates a direct prohibition on eating the meat of cows and bulls, especially for someone undergoing a Vedic initiation. The payovrata — a vow of subsisting on milk — is a mark of ritual purity and discipline. Once the vow ends, the initiate is permitted to eat only the leftover sacrificial offerings, not any form of meat

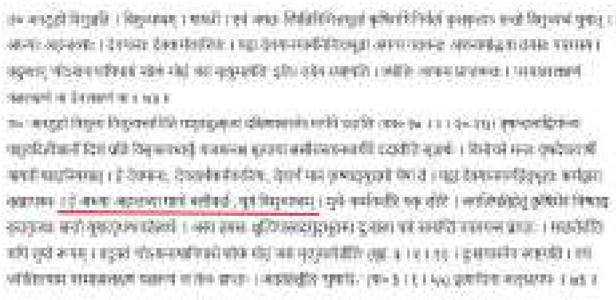
Satapatha Brahmana is a text of Yajur Veda . The Same Yajur Veda 12/73 says Bulls are Aghanya – Inviolable

कृषि उद्यम द्वारा देवत्व मार्ग पर ले जाने वाले हे मनुष्य ! वध न किये जाने वाले वृषभ आदि से संसार की सुव्यवस्था के निमित्त आप कृषि-कार्य का सम्पादन करें। आपकी कृपा से हम क्षुधा-पिपासा स्वरूप दुःखों से विमुक्त हों और ज्योतिरूप यज्ञकर्मों को प्राप्त करें ॥७३

O noble soul, who walks the path of divinity through agricultural endeavor! May you perform your farming duties with the help of Inviolable bulls and other sacred beings, for the harmonious order of the world. Through your grace, may we be freed from the sufferings of hunger and thirst, and attain the radiant fruits of sacrificial deeds.



Acharya Mahidhar even extended this by saying । हे अघ्या अहन्तव्या गावो बलीवर्दाः, यूयं विमुच्यध्वम् meaning "O Aghnyā (inviolable) cows and bullocks you not to be killed, You all should be set free." – That all Cattle and Bull Species are Aghanya – Inviolable



Allegations-

Aitreya Brahmana 3.9 mentions that one should kill a cow or a bull to give it to a guest as part of Madhupark

Refutation-

Geeta Press Gorakhpur explained in its Book " Review of Beef Eating in Ancient India " Page 144

The citation of Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa III.4 in a footnote by P. V. Kane is the 15th pada and the whole reads:
अग्निं मन्थन्ति सोमे राजन्यागते तद्यथैवादो मनुष्यराज आगतेऽन्य-स्मिन्वा हेत्युक्षाणं वा वेहतं वा क्षदन्त एवमेवास्मा एतत्क्षदन्तं यदग्निं मन्थन्त्यग्निर्हि देवानां पशुः ॥
Earlier, it has been established that the word pacet (पचेत्) occurring in a similar context in the Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa corresponds to upakalpayet in the Yājñavalkya-smrti. Now we have to consider if kşadante occurring in this context of the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa also corresponds to it. In his Hindi book, 'Śri-Sanātana-Dharmāloka', Vol. 6, pages 360-374, Pandit Dinanath Sharma Shastri has discussed it at length. Hereunder are a few quotations :-
"Now we have to consider the root kşad. The cited Brāhmaṇa passage means : "If a king or a celebrated śrotriya comes, then the kşadana of a bull or cow should be effected in his honour." The root kşad does not occur in Pāṇini's Dhatupātha. So we cannot know its meaning therefrom. But we find it in the Unādi (Pañcapadi) sūtra, trn-trcau samsi-kşad-ādibhyaḥ samjñāyām cănițau.
(तृन्तृचौ शंसि-क्षदादिभ्यः संज्ञायां चानिटी)
(2.94; 25.1)
So it is clearly a root derived from the sūtras. But its meaning is not clear even from the sūtras.

It is translated below in extenso :
"The meaning of pacet in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa is not 'cooking', but it is 'presenting; offering (vyaktikur yāt व्यक्तीकुर्यात्). Here the root is paci vyaktikarane (पचि व्यक्तीकरणे) of the first conjugation, set, and ātmane pada. In the alamanorama commentary (editions of Guruprasad Shastri and of the Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office) it is said- pacetyeke (पचेत्येके) i.e., there is also the variant pac (पच्) of the root paci (पचि). It signifies to present vyaktikarana. This meaning proves the identical intention of the Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa and the Yājñavalkya-Smrti. Now the question arises that while the aforesaid root is ātmanepada, in the Satapatha it is not ātmanepada. In this context it should be noted that the ātmanepada is not obligatory by the rule anudatte ṭvalakṣanam atmanepadam anityam (अनुदात्ते त्वलक्षणमात्मनेपदमनित्यम्). Hereby it is not ātmanepada in the Śatapatha or it can also be an ārṣa or aberrational usage. Our meaning is attested by other texts also. In the mantra ukṣāṇam prṣnim apacanta (उधाणं पृश्निम् अपचन्त) (Rgveda 1.164.43) the root pac has been commented upon by Sayaṇa as

उक्षाणं फलस्य सेक्तारं सोमम् ऋत्विजः अपचन्त.. पचधात्वर्थानादद्रेण तिङ्प्रत्ययः करोत्यर्थः । स च क्रियासामान्यवचनः । अत औचित्यात् सम्पादितवन्तः इत्यर्थः ।

*This interpretation of the root pac (पच) is confirmed by the Madhavi ya-dhātu-vrti of Sayaṇācarya (Pracyabharati Prakashan, Varanasi, 1964, root no. 107 of the bhvadi-gana (म्वादिगण) 1.86-87 paci vyaktikarne (पचि व्यक्तीकरणे). At the end it is stated:

पच इति दुर्गः तथा बर्धमानोऽपि, यदाह । अनिविधौ पच्यादिसूत्रो ठुपचष् पाके, पच व्यक्तीकरणे इति। सम्मातार्यो तु वर्धमानवद् उक्त्वा 'अन्यैस्त्वयभिदित् पठ्यते' इत्युक्तम् । 'तिन्नो गोत्रादीनि' इत्यत्र पचति गोत्रमित्युपादाय' 'पच व्यक्तीकरणे' इति पठन् न्यासकारः परस्मैपदिनं च मन्यते ।

Here the root pac signifies 'to effect; to accomplish'. Simllariy in, Din-nāga's drama 'Kundamālā' too :

इक्ष्वाकूणां च सर्वेषां क्रियाः पुंसवनादिकाः। अस्माभिरेव पच्यन्ते (१.३१)

the root pac means 'to effect'. Likewise, in the famous Purāṇic hymn Deva-stotra there is the sentence:

नमो मत्स्यकूर्मादिनाना स्वरूपे मखा दिक्रियापाककत्रेऽघहन्त्रे

where pāka-kartre means 'one who effects or accomplishes'. So in the passage in Yājñavalkya's Śatapatha also the meaning of the pac is 'to effect; to accomplish' etc. and not to cook'. This very meaning is intended by Yājñavalkya, as it has been expressed by him in his Yājñavalkya-smrti.

"In the Nighantu 2.8 where roots signifying 'to eat' are listed, there is no mention of kşad this fact should be noted. In 2.19, which is a list of roots meaning 'to kill', the root kşad is not mentioned-it should also be noted." (page 363)

"Now we should look into the usage of the root kşad in the mantras of the Rgveda Samhitā and also consult the commentary of Sayaṇa on the relevant passage. We should explore the meaning assigned to it by ancient scholars."

"The following passage of the Mahābhāṣya 1.3.1 is well known:

अनेकार्था अपि धातवो भवन्ति । तद् यथा- वपिः प्रकिरणे (वीर्याधाने) दृष्टः, छेदने चापि वर्तते ।...... करोतिरभूत प्रादुर्भावे दृष्टौ निर्मलीकरणे चापि वर्तते, निक्षेपणे चापि वर्तते । एवमिहापि तिष्ठतिरेष व्रजिक्रियामाह, तिष्ठतिरेव व्रजिक्रियाया निवृत्तिम् ।

So it is possible that a single root can have two opposite meanings, e.g., the root stha means 'to stay' and 'to move'. Then, if for contextual propriety we take an unspecified meaning of a root, then it will not be against grammatical considerations." (pages 363-364)

"Thus, bhakşana (consuming) also means 'to make use of', 'to employ', or 'to accept," (page 364)

.n Rgveda 1.25.18 Acārya Sayana has written: हवि क्षदसे-अश्नासि

where, after having translated kşadase as 'you eat', he goes on to take aśana to mean 'to accept' हवि – स्वीकाराद् ऊर्ध्वम् । If the root kşad means 'to eat', does this meaning apply to the Rgvedic Brāhmaṇa passage उक्षाणं वेहतं वा क्षदन्ते। Then it will mean: 'They eat a bull or a vehata on the arrival of a king or a śrotriya. But is this meaning applicable here? If we translate it this way, then it will refer not to its partaking by the guest but the eating of the vehata by the host himself. Haridatta has prohibited its eating by anyone other than the guest. If we take kşad in the meaning 'to accept', then it will mean 'they accept the cow or the bull', i.e. 'they bring them for the guest' this is a relevant meaning. (pages 364-365)
'In the Unādi, where a Rgvedic Brāhmaṇa passage is cited to illustrate the usage of the root kşad, there kşadanta means neither 'to hack to pieces' nor 'to eat'. The meaning 'to hack to pieces' would be most inappropriate." (page 365)
"Himsā also refers to 'goading' (ताडन). In the Nirukta 1.3.2 hasta has been explained as (हन्ते प्राशुर्हनने). Here the meaning of han is 'to goad' and not to kill or deprive of life. Kşattā in the sense of 'a chariotteer' (Atharva-veda 5.7.14; 9.11.1) also refers to the goading of the chariot's horse, and not to its killing. While bringing a cow or bull to a guest, it had to be goaded and this was its himsā." (Page 366)

"When the root kşad can have a third meaning besides 'to hack to pieces', 'to eat' as pointed out above, then this sūtra-occurring root can have other meanings too. Views of other learned people should also be taken into consideration in this context." (Page 366)
"While explaining the word kşadma Skandaswami writes: "बद स्थैर्ये (सौ०)". The same view is held by Devarāja-yajvā on Nirukta 1.12.3 स्वकार्ये स्थिरं भवति, जलाशयं व्याप्य स्थिरीभवतीति वा. Thus the passage can mean-'When the guest comes, he should steady the cow or the bull'; this meaning is also relevant here. The author of the Subodhini derives kşadma meaning 'water' from the root क्षद गति हिंसनयोः, In क्षदति- हिनस्ति पिपासामुष्णतां वां अभीप्सितं वा पुरुषम्, the root signifies 'going', as the killing of the un-killable cow (aghnya) was not possible. Kşadanti can mean अतिथिपार्श्वे गां गमयन्तीति, i.e., 'they take the cow near the guest'-a meaning which is also relevant here. One who is dearly loved is never killed, and he certainly is brought near." (Page 367)
"While explaining the word kşattā in his Sudhā-Vyākhyā on the Amarakośa, Bhānuji-Dīkṣita, the son of Bhattoji-Dīkṣita, writes: क्षद् संवरणे सौत्रः (2.8.59). Here the root kşad has been rendered as 'closing'-samvarana. He accepts the same meaning in the word ksatriyah (2.8.1). Swami Dayananda has also accepted the same meaning in his Uṇādi-kośa." (pages 367-368)
"Bhānuji-Dīkşita has explained kşattā in Amarakośa 2.10.3 as बदति, वदते वा, क्षद सम्मृतौ. Here the meaning of the root kşad is indicated as 'bringing up'. As the killing of the unkillable cow (aghnyā) and of the unkillable bull (aghnya) is impossible, the cow and bull were brought up for being donated to a guest-this can also be relevant. In the Brahmana sentence, the locative case can be considered to be used in the meaning of 'by reason of', 'for'.

"The foregoing investigations prove that the root kşad has many meanings, and it does not mean only 'to kill' or 'to eat'.

A meaning that is appropriate to the context and one which does not go against the accepted principles, that meaning alone is correct in that context, and not any other meaning. If गङ्गायां घोषः is a case of transferred meaning, then in गङ्गायां महिषास्तरन्ति, it would not be correct to take it in a transferred sense as in the previous case, though there is no technical impropriety. In the Kusumāñjali 3.12, Udayana ācārya holds the same view :

श्रुतान्वयाद् अनाकाङ्क्ष न वाक्यं ह्यन्यदिच्छति । पदार्थान्षय-वैधुर्यात् तदाक्षिप्तेन सङ्गतिः ॥ (कुसुमाठञ्जली ३१.२)

i.e. in the case of a logical connection no other signification is required; in the event of an incongruity another meaning appropriate to the context has to be sought. Hence, when the incongruity of killing an aghnyā or one who is not to be killed arises, we have to seek a meaning that suits the context." (pages 368-369)

"The readers should consider another piece of evidence from the Vedas and Sāyaṇa's commentary thereon, which clearly fortifies our interpretation. In the Rgveda 6.13.2 क्षत्ता वामस्य देव । भूरे, kşattā is a derivative of the root kşad. Sāyana comments:

ऋतस्य उदकस्य वा क्षत्ता- क्षदतिरत्र दानकर्मा, दाता भवसि ।

Here Sayaṇa has clearly stated that the root kşad means 'to give', It merits consideration as to why Sayaṇa has translated the root kşad as 'to give' against his own statement that kşad is primarily used in the sense of 'killing'. It is clear that here 'killing' is not pertinent, hence the meaning 'giving away'. If it is so, then in the passage of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa too, the 'giving of a cow or of a bull (aghnyā-not to be killed) is intended. It is but natural, as the killing of one who is not to be killed is a contradiction. On setting out for a journey, the meaning of saindhavam ānaya as 'bring salt' would be unwise; 'bring a horse' alone would be the relevant meaning.

Hence, in the sentence उक्षाणं वेहतं वा क्षदन्ते of the Rgvedic Brahmaṇa, the meaning 'he gives a bull or a cow' alone is proved and pertinent. Thus its identity with the महोक्षं वा महाजं वा श्रोत्रियायोपकल्पयेत् of the Yājñavalkya-smrti (1.5.199) is established. Upakalpana also means 'donating'.

The Mitākṣarā realised the impossibility of such a big donation, and hence it interpreted it as a polite offer by words alone, in honour of the guest. It is indeed impossible to donate bulls every time. How can a person have so many of them? But here an ordinary cow and an ordinary bull are enjoined hence there is no incongruity even in donating. The meaning of vehata as a miscarrying cow is not appropriate here, because such cows cannot always be obtained,"

"In this way, by these authoritative proofs it has been settled that in महोक्षं पचेत्, it means 'he should present' and in उक्षाणं क्षदन्ते it means 'he should donate'. Here the root kşad means 'to donate'. When the root kşad in the sense of 'to donate' is attested by the Vedas, Sāyaṇa also corroborates it, and all the scriptures from the Vedas downwards are replete with the glorious praises of 'donating a cow', then this meaning alone is correct from all points of view; it alone is appropriate." (pages 370-371)

"Scholars mis-understood the root kşad as 'to kill', 'to eat' because they did not find it in the Dhatupātha where the meaning of roots are given. Instead, they came across khad (खद स्थैर्ये हिंसायां च, चाद् भवणे) and they imposed the meanings of khad on the root kşad. Whatever be the meaning of the root khad of the Dhatupāṭha, it does not follow that the sautra root with ks means the same. When the root kşad is attested in the meaning 'to donate', and this meaning is also appropriate; when the eating or killing of a cow and bull is prohibited and censured in the Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa; whe. . Vedas and other scriptures are full of the glories of donating a cow; when Sage Yājñavalkya of the Śatapatha Brahmana and the Yājñavalkya-smrti desires the donation or presenting of a cow or bull in madhuparka; when in the Brhādāranyaka which is the 14th book (kānda) of the Śatapatha, Yājñavalkya clearly wants to perpetuate the cows गोकामा एवं वयं स्मः (14.6.1.4; 11.6.3.2), then the unanimity of all these authorities proves that in the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa passage too kşadana means 'the donation' of a cow or a bull." (pages 371-372)

In the reception to a guest, after the offering of padya, arghya etc., several Grhya-sūtras and Dharma-sūtras prescribe the madhu-parka and alongwith it the giving of a cow is also enjoined. The offering of a big bull or a big goat occurs only in the Yājñavalkya-smrti and Vasistha-dharma-sūtra, but there is no reference to a miscarrying cow (vehata). Its relevance is not clear. In the Satapatha and Aitareya Brāhmaṇas, there is no imperative injunction, but there it is stated as an illustration that as on the arrival of a human king or of a learned Brāhmaṇa, one would महोक्ष वा महाजं वा पचेत् (Satapatha) or उक्षाणं वेहतं वा वदन्ते (Aitareya), likewise one should duly offer all the courtesies to King Soma who has arrived as a guest. It means that the followers of Yājñavalkya used to present a mahokşa or a a mahāja in the reception to a guest alongwith padya, arghya, madhu-parka, etc. If this is correct, then the intention of the Satapatha and Aitareya Brāhmaṇas regarding the mahokşa or mahāja is probably the same as that of Yājñavalkya-smrti or the Vasistha-dharma-sūtra; for such a reference has not been found in any other book. Then how can it be that the word pacet in the Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa and kşadante in the Aitareya-Brahmaṇa carry the sense of killing (himsā) when the meaning of Yājñavalkya-smrti is clearly of non-killing ? Hence those who impart the sense of killing to pacet or kşadante, they do so without considering the context, which is altogether inappropriate.

Another point also deserves consideration. Uksā is a bull for breeding. High pedigree stud bulls are very few in number. Everyone does not own such a bull. One stud bull suffices for a village. If a śrotriya guest does not own several cows, the presentation of a stud bull will be of no use to him, and the host giver will render great disservice to the community of cows. Thus, bringing a big stud-bull for presentation to a guest in his reception, does not make sense, and much less so killing it. Bringing a stud-bull to receive a king also makes no sense, because the king normally owns several cows along with proportionate number of bulls in a royal cow-stall. If we try to translate uksā as a draught bull, then such a meaning is not attested by usage. The word for a draught bull is anaduh. Secondly, if one does not present so many and such heavy things to a guest as to require a bull to carry them, then one cannot understand the propriety of such a presentation. If the bull presented is intended for gricultural purposes, it may be appropriate for a śrotriya, but not for a king.

The presentation of a big goat can be only for carrying burden, but that too does not seem to be proper.

It is likely that महोक्षं वा महाजं वा has a spiritual signification, which has not been elucidated so far. Scholars should investigate it.

It is certain that the महोक्षं वा महाजं वा are not intended to be slaughtered. Those who try to force such a meaning, they are in the wrong.

The citation of Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa III.4 in a footnote by P. V. Kane is the 15th pada and the whole reads :

अग्निं मन्थन्ति सोमे राजन्यागते तद्यथैवादो मनुष्यराज आगतेऽन्य-
स्मिन्वाऽर्हत्युक्षाणं वा वेहतं वा क्षदन्त एवमेवास्मा एतत्क्षदन्ते
यदग्निं मन्थन्त्यग्निर्हि देवानां पशुः ॥

Earlier, it has been established that the word pacet (पचेद्) occurring in a similar context in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa corresponds to upakalpayet in the Yājñavalkya-smṛti. Now we have to consider if kṣadante occurring in this context of the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa also corresponds to it. In his Hindi book, 'Śrī-Sanātana-Dharmāloka', Vol. 6, pages 360-374, Pandit Dinanath Sharma Shastri has discussed it at length. Hereunder are a few quotations :—

"Now we have to consider the root kṣad. The cited Brāhmaṇa passage means : "If a king or a celebrated śrotriya comes, then the kṣadana of a bull or cow should be effected in his honour." The root kṣad does not occur in Pāṇini's Dhātupāṭha. So we cannot know its meaning therefrom. But we find it in the Uṇādi (Pañcapadī) sūtra, tṛn-tṛcau śaṁsi-kṣad-ādibhyaḥ saṁjñāyāṁ cāniṭau.

(तृन्तृचौ शंसि-क्षदादिभ्यः संज्ञायां चानिटौ) (2.94 ; 25.1)

So it is clearly a root derived from the sūtras. But its meaning is not clear even from the sūtras. (page 362)

It is translated below in extenso :

"The meaning of pacet in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa is not 'cooking', but it is 'presenting ; offering' (vyaktīkuryāt व्यक्तीकुर्यात्). Here the root is paci vyaktīkaraṇe (पचि व्यक्तीकरणे) of the first conjugation, seṭ, and ātmanepada. In the Bālamanoramā commentary (editions of Guruprasad Shastri and of the Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office) it is said :—pacetyeke (पचेत्येके) i.e., there is also the variant pac (पच्) of the root paci (पचि). It signifies to present vyaktīkaraṇa. This meaning proves the identical intention of the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa and the Yājñavalkya-Smṛti. Now the question arises that while the aforesaid root is ātmanepada, in the Śatapatha it is not ātmanepada. In this context it should be noted that the ātmanepada is not obligatory by the rule anudātte tvalakṣaṇam ātmanepadam anityam (अनुदात्तेत्त्वलक्षणमात्मनेपदमनित्यम्). Hereby it is not ātmanepada in the Śatapatha or it can also be an ārṣa or aberrational usage.

Our meaning is attested by other texts also.* In the mantra ukṣāṇam pṛśnim apacanta (उक्षाणं पृश्निमपचन्त) (Ṛgveda 1.164.43) the root pac has been commented upon by Sāyaṇa as उक्षाणं फलस्य सेक्तारं सोमम् ऋत्विजः अपचन्त'''

पचत्रात्मपर्यायान्तरेण शिक्षुरत्रचयः करोत्यर्थः ।
स च क्रियासामान्यवचनः । अत्र गौणिकत्वात् सम्पादितवन्त इत्यर्थः ।

---

*This interpretation of the root pac (पच्) is confirmed by the Mādhavīya-dhātu-vṛtti of Sāyaṇācarya (Pracyabharati Prakashan, Varanasi, 1964, root no. 107 of the bhvādi-gaṇa (भ्वादिगण) 1.86-87 paci vyaktīkaraṇe (पचि व्यक्तीकरणे). At the end it is stated :

पच इति दुर्गः तथा क्षीरस्वामीऽपि, गदह । अनिदितौ पचादिषु कृतम् पचि.
पच व्यक्तीकरणे इति । सम्मतावर्षौ तु कांमानाद् कृतवा 'अर्थस्वर्गमिदितु
पचमरि' इत्युक्तम् । 'शिक्षो गीतादीनि इत्यत पचति गीतमित्युदाहरत्'
'पच व्यक्तीकरणे' इति पठन् न्यासकारः परस्मैपदिन न मन्यते ।

Here the root pac signifies 'to effect ; to accomplish'. Similarly in, Diṅ-nāga's drama 'Kundamālā' too :

इक्ष्वाकूणां च सर्वेषां क्रियाः पुंसवनादिकाः । अस्माभिरेव पच्यन्ते (१.३१)

the root pac means 'to effect'. Likewise, in the famous Purāṇic hymn Deva-stotra there is the sentence :

नमो मन्त्रयजुर्मार्जिनाय ······ प्रजारक्षिक्रियायाः पककर्त्रे प्रजहन्ते

where pāka-kartre means 'one who effects or accomplishes'. So in the passage in Yājñavalkya's Śatapatha also the meaning of the pac is 'to effect ; to accomplish' etc. and not 'to cook'. This very meaning is intended by Yājñavalkya, as it has been expressed by him in his Yājñavalkya-smṛti.

"In the Nighaṇṭu 2.8 where roots signifying 'to eat' are listed, there is no mention of kṣad—this fact should be noted. In 2.19, which is a list of roots meaning 'to kill', the root kṣad is not mentioned—it should also be noted." (page 363)

"Now we should look into the usage of the root kṣad in the mantras of the Ṛgveda Saṁhitā and also consult the commentary of Sāyaṇa on the relevant passage. We should explore the meaning assigned to it by ancient scholars." (page 363)

"The following passage of the Mahābhāṣya 1.3.1 is well known :

अनेकार्था अपि धातवो भवन्ति। तद् यथा—वपिः प्रकिरणे (बीजधाने) दृष्टः, छेदने चापि वर्तते ।......करोतिरभूत प्रादुर्भावे दृष्टो निर्मलीकरणे चापि वर्तते, निक्षेपणे चापि वर्तते । एवमिहापि तिष्ठतिरेव व्रजिक्रियामाह, तिष्ठतिरेव व्रजिक्रियाया निवृत्तिम् ।

So it is possible that a single root can have two opposite meanings, e.g., the root sthā means 'to stay' and 'to move'. Then, if for contextual propriety we take an unspecified meaning of a root, then it will not be against grammatical considerations." (pages 363-364)

"Thus, bhakṣaṇa (consuming) also means 'to make use of', 'to employ', or 'to accept'," (page 364)

"In Ṛgveda 1.25.18 Ācārya Sāyaṇa has written : हवि क्षदसे—अदनासि where, after having translated kṣadase as 'you eat', he goes on to take adana to mean 'to accept' हवि —स्वीकरोतु सर्वम् । If the root kṣad means 'to eat', does this meaning apply to the Ṛgvedic Brāhmaṇa passage उक्षाणं वेहतं वा क्षदन्ते। Then it will mean : 'They eat a bull or a vehata on the arrival of a king or a śrotriya'. But is this meaning applicable here ? If we translate it this way, then it will refer not to its partaking by the guest but the eating of the vehata by the host himself. Haridatta has prohibited its eating by anyone other than the guest. If we take kṣad in the meaning 'to accept', then it will mean 'they accept the cow or the bull', i.e. 'they bring them for the guest'—this is a relevant meaning. (pages 364-365)

'In the Uṇādi, where a Ṛgvedic Brāhmaṇa passage is cited to illustrate the usage of the root kṣad, there kṣadante means neither 'to hack to pieces' nor 'to eat'. The meaning 'to hack to pieces' would be most inappropriate." (page 365)

"Hiṁsā also refers to 'goading' (ताडन). In the Nirukta 1.3.2 hanti has been explained as (हन्तो : प्रहर्तने). Here the meaning of han is 'to goad' and not to kill or deprive of life. Kṣatā in the sense of 'a charioteer' (Atharva-veda 5.7.14 ; 9.11.1) also refers to the goading of the chariot's horse, and not to its killing. While bringing a cow or bull to a guest, it had to be goaded and this was its himsā." (Page 366)

"When the root kṣad can have a third meaning besides 'to hack to pieces', 'to eat' as pointed out above, then this sūtra-occurring root can have other meanings too. Views of other learned people should also be taken into consideration in this context." (Page 366)

"While explaining the word kṣadma Skandaswāmi writes: "क्षद स्थैर्ये (सौ०)". The same view is held by Devarāja-yajvā on Nirukta 1.12.3 : क्षदकर्मा स्थिरं भवति. क्षदार्थं स्थाप्य स्थिरीभवतीति वा. Thus the passage can mean—'When the guest comes, he should steady the cow or the bull' ; this meaning is also relevant here. The author of the Subodhinī derives kṣadma meaning 'water' from the root क्षद गति हिंसनयोः. In क्षदति—हिनस्ति छिनत्ति गच्छति वा उपसिद्धं वा पुरुषम्, the root signifies 'going', as the killing of the un-killable cow (aghnyā) was not possible. Kṣadanti can mean अतिथिसमीपं गां गमयन्तीति, i.e., 'they take the cow near the guest'—a meaning which is also relevant here. One who is dearly loved is never killed, and he certainly is brought near." (Page 367)

"While explaining the word kṣattā in his Sudhā-Vyākhyā on the Amarakośa, Bhānuji-Dīkṣita, the son of Bhaṭṭoji-Dīkṣita, writes : क्षदृ संवरणे सौत्रः (2.8.59). Here the root kṣad has been rendered as 'closing'—saṁvaraṇa. He accepts the same meaning in the word kṣatriyaḥ (2.8.1). Swami Dayananda has also accepted the same meaning in his Uṇādi-kośa." (pages 367-368)

"Bhānuji-Dīkṣita has explained kṣattā in Amarakośa 2.10.3 as क्षदति. क्षदते वा. क्षद सम्भृतौ. Here the meaning of the root kṣad is indicated as 'bringing up'. As the killing of the unkillable cow (aghnyā) and of the unkillable bull (aghnya) is impossible, the cow and bull were brought up for being donated to a guest—this can also be relevant. In the Brāhmaṇa sentence, the locative case can be considered to be used in the meaning of 'by reason of', 'for'. (page 368)

"The foregoing investigations prove that the root kṣad has many meanings, and it does not mean only 'to kill' or 'to cut'. A meaning that is appropriate to the context and one which does not go against the accepted principles, that meaning alone is correct in that context, and not any other meaning. If मञ्चाः क्रोशन्ति is a case of transferred meaning, then in मञ्चाः महिषमस्तकं it would not be correct to take it in a transferred sense as in the previous case, though there is no technical impropriety. In the Kusumāñjali 3.12, Udayana Ācārya holds the same view :

श्रुतान्वयादनाकाङ्क्षं न वाक्यं ह्यन्यदिच्छति।
पदार्थान्वय-वैधुर्यात् तदाक्षिप्तेन सङ्गतिः॥ (कुसुमाञ्जली ३१२)

i.e. in the case of a logical connection no other signification is required ; in the event of an incongruity another meaning appropriate to the context has to be sought. Hence, when the incongruity of killing an aghnyā or one who is not to be killed arises, we have to seek a meaning that suits the context." (pages 368-369)

"The readers should consider another piece of evidence from the Vedas and Sāyaṇa's commentary thereon, which clearly fortifies our interpretation. In the Ṛgveda 6.13.2 क्षत्ता वामस्य देव भूरेः. kṣattā is a derivative of the root kṣad. Sāyaṇa comments :

ऋतस्य उदकस्य वा क्षत्ता — क्षदतिरत्र दानकर्मा, दाता भवसि।

Here Sāyaṇa has clearly stated that the root kṣad means 'to give'. It merits consideration as to why Sāyaṇa has translated the root kṣad as 'to give' against his own statement that kṣad is primarily used in the sense of 'killing'. It is clear that here 'killing' is not pertinent, hence the meaning 'giving away'. If it is so, then in the passage of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa too, the 'giving of a cow or of a bull (aghnyā—not to be killed) is intended. (pages 369-370)

"In this way, by these authoritative proofs it has been settled that in महोक्षं पचेत्, it means 'he should present' and in उक्षाणं क्षदन्ते it means 'he should donate'. (pages 370-371)

"Scholars mis-understood the root kṣad as 'to kill', 'to eat' because they did not find it in the Dhātupāṭha where the meaning of roots are given. Instead, they came across khad (खद स्थैर्ये हिंसायां च. खद् भक्षणे) and they imposed the meanings of khad on the root kṣad. Whatever be the meaning of the root khad of the Dhātupāṭha, it does not follow that the santra root with kṣ means the same. When the root kṣad is attested in the meaning 'to donate', and this meaning is also appropriate ; when the eating or killing of a cow and bull is prohibited and censured in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa ; when Vedas and other scriptures are full of the glories of donating a cow ; when Sage Yājñavalkya of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa and the Yājñavalkya-smṛti desires the donation or presenting of a cow or bull in madhuparka ; when in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka which is the 14th book (kāṇḍa) of the Śatapatha, Yājñavalkya clearly wants to perpetuate the cows गोकामा एवं कर्म ध्यः (14.6.1.4 ; 11.6.3.2), then the unanimity of all these authorities proves that in the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa passage too kṣadana means 'the donation' of a cow or a bull." (pages 371-372)

In the reception to a guest, after the offering of pādya, arghya etc., several Gṛhya-sūtras and Dharma-sūtras prescribe the madhuparka and alongwith it the giving of a cow is also enjoined. It means that the followers of Yājñavalkya used to present a mahokṣa or a a mahāja in the reception to a guest alongwith pādya, arghya, madhuparka, etc. If this is correct, then the intention of the Śatapatha and Aitareya Brāhmaṇas regarding the mahokṣa or mahāja is probably the same as that of Yājñavalkya-smṛti or the Vasiṣṭha-dharma-sūtra ; for such a reference has not been found in any other book. Then how can it be that the word pacet in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa and kṣadante in the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa carry the sense of killing (hiṃsā) when the meaning of Yājñavalkya-smṛti is clearly of non-killing ? Hence those who impart the sense of killing to pacet or kṣadante, they do so without considering the context, which is altogether inappropriate.

Another point also deserves consideration. Ukṣā is a bull for breeding. High pedigree stud bulls are very few in number. Everyone does not own such a bull. One stud bull suffices for a village. If a śrotriya guest does not own several cows, the presentation of a stud bull will be of no use to him, and the host giver will render great disservice to the community of cows. Thus, bringing a big stud-bull for presentation to a guest in his reception, does not make sense, and much less so killing it. Bringing a stud-bull to receive a king also makes no sense, because the king normally owns several cows along with proportionate number of bulls in a royal cow-stall.

If we try to translate ukṣā as a draught bull, then such a meaning is not attested by usage. The word for a draught bull is anaḍuh. Secondly, if one does not present so many and such heavy things to a guest as to require a bull to carry them, then one cannot understand the propriety of such a presentation. If the bull presented is intended for agricultural purposes, it may be appropriate for a śrotriya, but not for a king.

The presentation of a big goat can be only for carrying burden, but that too does not seem to be proper.

It is likely that महोक्षं वा महाजं वा has a spiritual signification, which has not been elucidated so far. Scholars should investigate it.

It is certain that the महोक्षं वा महाजं वा are not intended to be slaughtered. Those who try to force such a meaning, they are in the wrong.

“For the purpose of offering Soma, a vehicle (vahatuh) was dispatched for Sūryā’s daughter (symbolically a maiden). This vehicle, filled with cows and other such items, was to be gifted for the sake of pleasing the maiden.

This vahatuh (cart or chariot) departed even before she (the maiden) arrived. The one who was to carry her — Savitṛ, her father — sent it forth, meaning he released or donated it.

When did she come, and when did the cart come — this timing is specified: ‘aghāsu’ and ‘maghāsu’, meaning during the Maghā constellation (Maghā Nakṣatra).

In the Maghā star, the cows given by Savitṛ are driven towards the Soma-house. They are not beaten, but urged forward with sticks, to encourage movement.

During the Arjunyau (i.e., Pūrvaphalgunī and Uttaraphalgunī constellations), from Savitṛ’s command, the cows are transported toward the Soma-house in a chariot.”

Here it mentions giving cows and bulls as gift for Maiden and urging them to move forwards with Sticks and not killing them . How could the Same Rig Veda which says Gau are Aghanya (R.V 1.173.1 , 1.164.40 , 1,164.27) mention killing cows here it says to discipline them and make them forwards with Sticks and not to kill them

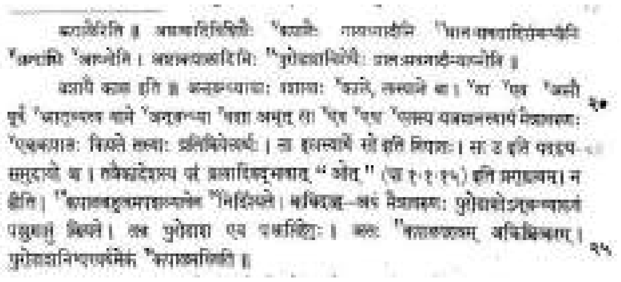
Using bowls (kapālas) marked by characteristics such as being eight in number, the sacrificer attains the metres like Gāyatrī and others that are associated with the morning Soma pressing (Prātaḥ Savana). By performing offerings such as the eight-bowl Pūroḍāśa (rice-cake offering), the morning Soma ritual and others are accomplished. The phrase "for the cow named Vashā, the time" refers to the time or place associated with the Anubandhyā cow—specifically, the same cow that was used earlier in a rival's sacrifice as the Anubandhyā is now symbolically represented in this sacrificer's ritual. Instead of actually offering the cow, a Maitrāvaruṇa offering is made using a single kapāla (bowl), serving as a counter-ritual or response to that previous act. The word "sā" (she) is emphasized with the particle "so," and the phrase "sā u" is treated grammatically as a fixed expression according to Panini's rule due to partial retention of form. Importantly, this does not imply that many kapālas are required. Some may claim that this Maitrāvaruṇa Pūroḍāśa is meant to substitute for the Anubandhyā animal offering, but here, the rice-cake (Pūroḍāśa) alone is the means of attaining the same result. Therefore, the number of kapālas used is not significant—just one bowl is sufficient to fulfill the ritual properly.



Sayanacharya commentary clarifies that its not an actual cow that is being offered here but Pudorosa (Rice or Barley Cake)

Sayanacharya explanation on Krishna Yajur Veda 2.5.5.3-4

पूर्णमास इति ॥ तत्रोत्तरस्यां पौर्णमास्यामुत्तरस्याममावास्यायां चैकैकं विधत्ते- 'पूर्णमासे सं नयेन्मैत्रावरुण्याऽऽमिक्षयाऽमावास्यायां यजेत' इति ॥

"Paurṇamāsa iti" —
In this context, a prescription is given for the later (second) Paurṇamāsī and Amāvāsyā offerings. For each of these, one specific ritual is prescribed:

> "On the full moon (Paurṇamāsī), one should offer the Maitrāvaruṇa oblation with sweet porridge (āmikṣā); on the new moon (Amāvāsyā), one should sacrifice accordingly."

"Paurṇamāsa iti" —
Now, about the offering of curds for Indra (Indra-dadhi) in the later Paurṇamāsī, it is especially praised. It says:

> "On the full moon, the Soma for the gods is pressed; this forms half a month's offering for them."

This means: when the Indra-dadhi offering is performed, Soma is pressed for the gods specifically on the Paurṇamāsī (full moon).

It has already been mentioned earlier that:

> "Milk is indeed Soma; milk is sānnāyya (a mixture of milk and curds)."
> (Taittirīya Saṁhitā 2.5.5)

So, why is this significant? Because from the full moon (Paurṇamāsī) to the next new moon (Amāvāsyā), for the gods, Soma is vigorously and continuously pressed throughout half the lunar month.

Through the daily Soma-related variants (vikṛtis) performed during this time, the delight and satisfaction of the gods is especially attained — and that joy becomes fully realized through this sānnāyya (curd-milk mixture) offered to Indra.

Allegations-

Rig Veda 10/86/13- 14

"[Indra speaks]: The worshippers dress for me fifteen (and) twenty bulls; I eat them and (become) fat,they fill both sides of my belly; Indra is above all (the world)."

Refutation-

Lets begin with Rig Veda 10/86/13-14 .

This hymn revolves around the anguish of Vṛṣākapāyi, who feels upset with the ritualists because Indra is not receiving the Soma offering. In Mantra 13, she is reassured that Indra will now partake of a substantial amount of Soma, especially since the ritual context is that of a Soma pressing ceremony (Somābhiṣava).

The entire discussion centers around a single word — "Ukṣā." In Mantra 13, Many English and Hindi translators interprets "Ukṣā" as "bull," which disrupts the thematic continuity of the passage. Thus, if we take "Ukṣā" to mean "bull" instead of "Soma," the flow and coherence of the ritual narrative are disturbed.

The anguish of Vṛṣākapāyi"

Based on the first mantra of the hymn, Indra had instructed certain chanters to perform the Soma pressing (Somābhiṣava), but instead of praising Indra during the ritual, they directed their adoration toward Vṛṣākapi.

From the context of the passage, it becomes evident that the term "Ukṣā" originally did not refer to a bull or any edible animal, but rather symbolized Soma itself — the sacred ritual drink. Interpreting "Ukṣā" as a bull disrupts the thematic and ritual consistency, whereas viewing it as Soma aligns with the flow of the Soma pressing ceremony.

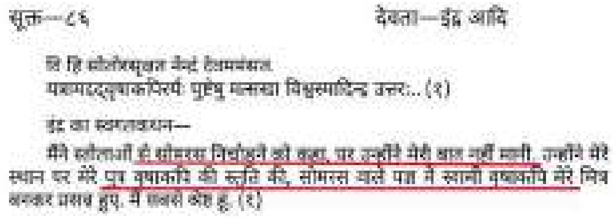
Rig Veda 10/86/1

इंद्र का स्वागतकथन—
मैंने स्तोताओं से सोमरस निचोड़ने को कहा, पर उन्होंने मेरी बात नहीं मानी। उन्होंने मेरे स्थान पर मेरे पुत्र वृषाकपि की स्तुति की, सोमरस वाले यज्ञ में स्वामी वृषाकपि मेरे मित्र बनकर प्रसन्न हुए। मैं सबसे श्रेष्ठ हूं। (१)

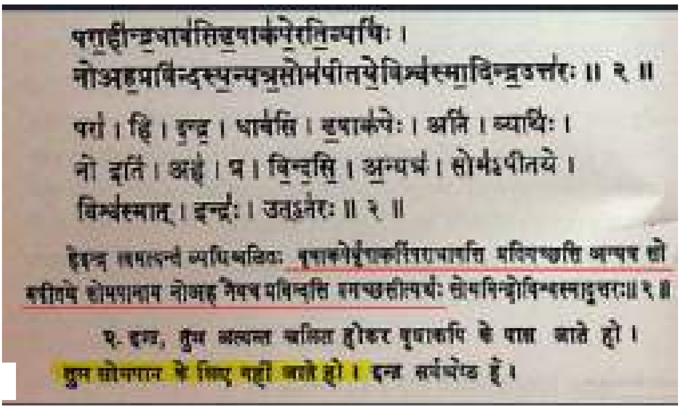
Indra's Welcome Statement — "I instructed the chanters to extract the Soma nectar, but they did not heed my command. Instead of praising me, they offered their hymns to my son, Vṛṣākapi. In the Soma-filled sacrifice, Lord Vṛṣākapi became pleased as my companion. Yet, I am the supreme among all."



According to the second verse of the hymn, Vṛṣākapāyi's anguish arises from the fact that Indra is not offered Soma respectfully through praise, and therefore he does not come to partake of it. As a result, all the Soma is consumed by Vṛṣākapi alone.

This makes one thing abundantly clear — Vṛṣākapāyi wishes for Indra to be properly offered Soma, with fitting hymns of praise. She wants him to be honored during the Soma pressing ceremony and given precedence over Vṛṣākapi.

"Now you tell me — in a hymn related to Soma consumption, how logical is it to kill and eat a bull?"



Rig Veda 10/86/2

From Maharshi Pāṇini – Dhātupāṭha and Uṇādi Sūtras:

- "Ukṣ" is the root (dhātu), and with the addition of the affix "kanin", the word "Ukṣā" is derived.
- The term "Ukṣan" formed from the root Ukṣ is associated with strength (bala), virility (vīrya), and insemination or discharge (niṣecanā).
- This derivation is based on Uṇādi Sūtra 1/159, which supports this linguistic formation.

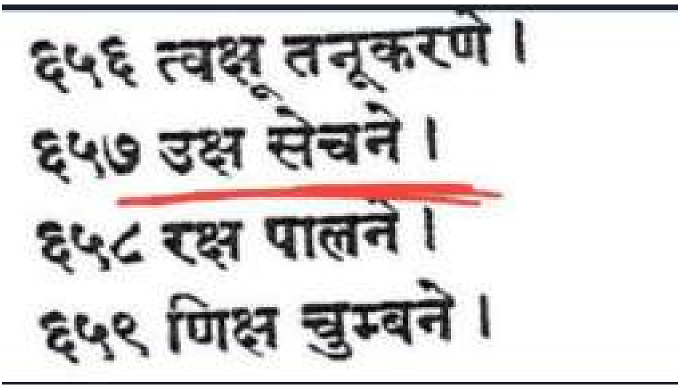
From the Dhātupāṭha and the Uṇādi Sūtras:

The root "Ukṣ", which means to sprinkle, to flow, or to discharge, is semantically linked to the actions of secretion, flowing, or insemination.

In Pāṇini's Dhātupāṭha, root number 657, Ukṣ is understood in this very context of sprinkling or streaming.



६५६ त्वक्षू तनूकरणे ।

६५७ उक्ष सेचने ।

६५८ रक्ष पालने ।

६५९ णिक्ष चुम्बने ।

Likewise, Maharshi Kāśakṛtsna, in his version of the Dhātupāṭha (1/295), also interprets Ukṣ in connection with sprinkling or flowing.

२९४. भष भर्त्सने--निन्दायाम् । भषति--गालिं ददाति, निन्दति3 । भषिता--निन्दिका । भषकः--निन्दकः । भषणम्--निन्दा । भषितम्--निन्दितम् ।

From Yāska's Nirukta–Nighaṇṭu and Durgavṛtti:

In the Nighaṇṭu, the terms "Ukṣā" and "Ukṣit" are derived from the root "mahat", which means great or vast.

Let us now examine their contextual significance according to the principles of Nirukta (Vedic etymology and semantic analysis).

To clarify this further, you've also referred to Durgavṛtti, the classical commentary, which helps deepen the understanding and interpretive clarity.

Maharshi Yāska on "Ukṣan" To begin with, Maharshi Yāska interprets the word "Ukṣan" as deriving from the root Ukṣ, meaning "that which causes growth" or "promotes increase."

He further classifies "Ukṣan" under the category of secondary compounds (madhyamikasaṁstyāyān) — a grammatical nuance we'll explore shortly.

Indra as the Sun In this context, Indra is also equated with the Sun, as expressed in the phrase "Indram brūma ādityam" (Let us call Indra the Sun). Commentator Durgācārya reinforces this view by stating: "Eṣa Indra Ādityaḥ" — "This Indra is the Sun."

Indra and the Essence (Rasa) Durgācārya further analyzes the passage by explaining that, contextually, Indra appropriates the essence (rasa), after which that essence becomes collected together in a unified form. Expanding upon this, he notes that since Ukṣ also means sprinkling or flowing, the essence/Soma absorbed by Indra is then diffused and sprinkled throughout.

May Indra, the invigorator (ukṣaṇaḥ), partake of these noble offerings and praises from the middle ones (mādhyamikān), those who are moderate and balanced in speech and conduct."

- Ukṣaṇaḥ derives from ukṣ, meaning to nourish or to sprinkle—symbolizing growth and vitality.
- The offering (haviḥ) is described as pleasing and joy-bestowing, suitable for all beings.
- The phrase "Indra uttaraḥ" reaffirms Indra's supreme status among the gods.

"Ukṣaṇaḥ" is derived from "udhṛti," meaning growth or nourishment. The plants indeed grow due to rain, and because of their abundance, they are considered to have increased. Alternatively, it comes from "ukṣ,"

"Now the question arises: What is the meaning of this 'Ukṣa', considered a madhyamika-saṁstyāyān (secondary compound), as mentioned in the Vedas — which Indra, in the form of Āditya (the Sun), is said to be consuming? According to Nirukta and Durgavṛtti, its meaning is vaporized water or cloud. Since the Sun absorbs the water present on Earth through its rays and lifts it skyward by evaporation, metaphorically the Sun appears to be drinking the water of the Earth. This is the poetic sentiment that emerges."

May Indra arise at dawn and nourish his own beings—these balanced, moderate ones (mādhyamikān), invigorated by rain and strengthened by seasonal showers. Indra, the solar deity (Ādityaḥ), drinks the Soma after uplifting them. The offering (haviḥ) is called priyam—beloved and desirable. It is also termed kācitkaraṁ, meaning "delightful," because it brings joy (kama, happiness) and fulfills what has been gathered (ācitaṁ).

What is this offering? It is water, which you should prepare as a rain-marked food (avashyāya-lakṣaṇaṁ annaṁ)—nourished and produced by rainfall.

Why so? Because Indra, the solar deity, is supreme over all (viśvasmāt uttaraḥ).

In the Saṁvāda Sūkta, Indra says:

"He Vṛṣākapāyin!"
The word Revati is derived from raya (meaning wealth), which is predominantly used in the sense of wealth according to the grammatical rule:

> "Rayer matau bahulam" (Aṣṭādhyāyī 6.1.34) – i.e., raya can frequently mean "mental wealth" or "blessing." Due to extension (prasāraṇa) and substitution of matup (vatu in vocative), it becomes "O Dhanavati" (O wealthy one).

Suputre – (in reference to) her good son.
Due to their association or due to the common reception (e.g., in food), the medium-status daughter-in-law (snuṣā) is also included.
Hence: suputre (good son) and susnuṣe (good daughter-in-law).

Āditi – this is a pāda-pūraṇa (a metric filler or completion of the verse).

Or alternatively, it connects with the term ghasad (a poetic or Vedic form).

Here, ghaṣ is replaced with ghas in the fifth conjugation (laṅ, aorist tense), due to its Chandasic (Vedic poetic) usage.
Thus āghasat means "let him consume," "let him drink," or "let him dry up by approaching".

Te tava svabhūtān – "those who are yours by nature."
Who is this being? Indra, the supreme overlord, identified as Āditya (the sun god).
When should he drink?
Ukṣaṇaḥ – in this Vedic usage, there is no elision of l due to its Chandasic form.

Ukṣaṇaḥ – from the root "ukṣ – secane" (Dhātu 1.658) meaning to sprinkle or to moisten — refers to those intermediate water drops (etān madhyamikān) arising from moisture concentration on the ground, i.e., raindrops or dew.

So, those drops that fall at that time are meant here.

You too should do some beneficial act, some blissful collection, something pleasing – meaning: "Do something that results in great happiness or accumulation of joy."

What is that?
Havis – an oblation, here referring to water.

Udaka (water) is here called havis, identified with avashyāya (dew, or atmospheric moisture).
From the second half of the verse: "kurusva" (do it), the remainder must be supplied contextually.

Indra, superior to all, and endowed with other superior qualities, is thus meant here.

Despite the word ghasad being placed far away in the verse, the connection still applies, as the Bhāṣyakāra (commentator) also states:

> "Among all, Indra is the most superior — this is what we declare as Āditya."

With the word "etat" (this), the reference is to ghasad — hence: "this (ghasad) we declare (brūmaḥ)".
Despite being separated (in the verse), the relation is to ghasad.

If the meaning is "something dear or pleasing," i.e., some delightful oblation, then that refers to havis, and this also is linked with ghasad, even if it's separated in the verse.

So "Avashyāyaṁ ghasat" – let it consume (drink, dry up) the dew-like offering (havis).

This offering, characterized as avashyāya (dew), is identified as the Soma-juice located on riverbanks, ponds, etc.

Thus "ghasat" – let it consume that — and "kurusva" (do it) — is the rest of the sentence that must be contextually supplied.

Now, the phrase "viśvasmād indraḥ uttaraḥ" (Indra is superior to all) – though seemingly distant – should not break this connection.

Now, why is snushā (daughter-in-law) mentioned?

Because she is one who is well-behaved or praiseworthy (sādhu-sādinī) — either:

- "sādhau" (in a good/virtuous way), "śobhane arthe" (in a graceful sense),
- or defined by relationship to the father-in-law's offspring, or defined by service.

Alternatively, "sādhu-sāninī" — one who associates with the virtuous — that's how she behaves.

Or the word “snu” may also denote offspring (apatyanāma) — i.e., “she produces progeny”.

So the word snushā could refer to one who generates (sanoti) that child.
The one for whom the designation snushā is used — the offspring (child) — is thus the recipient of the offering or service.

Meaning of Ukṣa (उक्षा) in Vedas

In Rig Veda Indra in the form of Āditya (the Sun), is said to be consuming Uksha . Then whats the meaning of Uksha

In Rigveda 9.83.3, Soma is clearly referred to as Ukṣa (one who showers or rains), indicating its form as vaporized water. The fundamental meaning of Ukṣa relates to rainfall and is also associated with the Sun.

अरूरुचदुषसः पृश्निरग्रिय उक्षा बिभर्ति भुवनानि वाजयुः. मायाविनो ममिरे अस्य मायया नृचक्षसः पितरो गर्भमा दधुः.. (३)

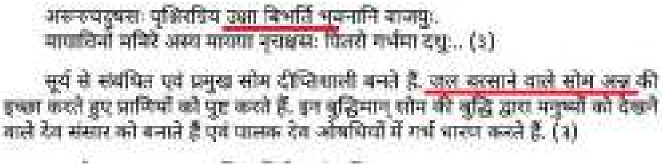
“The radiant Soma, associated with the Sun, becomes luminous. The Soma that brings rain desires food and nourishes living beings. Through the wisdom of these intelligent Soma deities, the gods who observe humanity shape the world, and the nurturing deities conceive within medicinal herbs.”



अरूरुचदुषसः पृश्निरग्रिय उक्षा बिभर्ति भुवनानि वाजयुः.

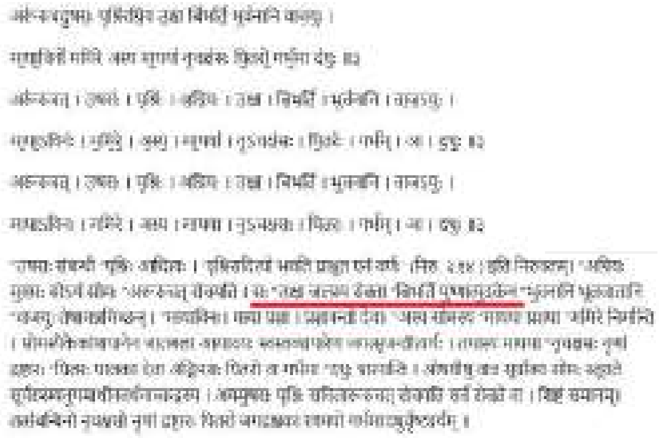
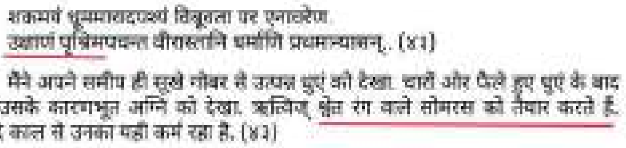
Sayancharya commentary on Rig Veda 9/83/3 too says “उक्षा जलस्य सेक्ता “बिभर्ति पुष्णात्युदकेन “ meaning “Ukṣā, the sprinkler of water, bears and nourishes with water.”



In Rig Veda 1/164/43 too Uksha means Soma Rasa

शकमयं धूममारादपश्यं विषूवता पर एनावरेण. उक्षाणं पृश्निमपचन्त वीरास्तानि धर्माणि प्रथमान्यासन्.. (४३)
मैंने अपने समीप ही सूखे गोबर से उत्पन्न धुएं को देखा. चारों ओर फैले हुए धुएं के बाद मैंने उसके कारणभूत अग्नि को देखा. ऋत्विज् श्वेत रंग वाले सोमरस को तैयार करते हैं. आदि काल से उनका यही कर्म रहा है. (४३)

"I saw the smoke rising near me from dried cow dung. After the smoke spread all around, I saw the fire that caused it. The ṛtvij (sacrificial priests) prepare the white-colored Soma juice. This has been their sacred duty since ancient times."



शकमयं धूममारादपश्यं विषूवता पर एनावरेण.

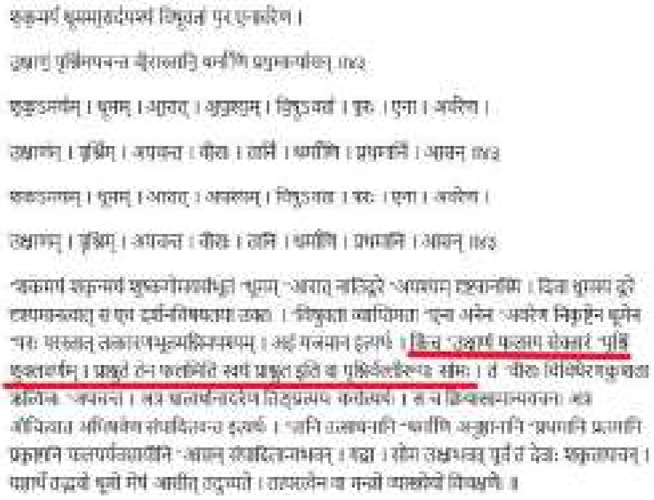
Sayancharya commentary on Rig Veda 1/164/43 – किंच "उक्षाणं फलस्य सेक्तारं "पृश्निं शुक्लवर्णम् । प्राश्नुते तेन फलमिति स्वयं प्राश्नुत इति वा पृश्निर्वल्लीरूपः सोमः

Furthermore, 'Ukṣāṇaṁ' means the sprinkler or nourisher of Soma. 'Pṛśniṁ', the white-colored one, is said to enjoy the fruit through it—or perhaps enjoys it directly. Thus, 'Pṛśni' refers to Soma in the form of a creepe



Some other meanings of Uksha

Rig Veda 3.52.1 – In the morning Soma ritual (prātaḥ savana), Indra is offered a savanīya puroḍāśa—a sacred cake prepared with roasted barley, curd, and sattū (a flour made from roasted grains).

हे इंद्र ! भुने हुए जौ वाले, दही से मिले सत्तुओं से युक्त, पुरोडाश सहित एवं उक्थ मंत्रों के उच्चारणपूर्वक प्रातःकाल के यज्ञ में दिए गए सोम का तुम सेवन करो.

O Indra! Partake of the Soma offered in the morning sacrifice—prepared with roasted barley, mixed with curd and sattu, accompanied by puroḍāśa (sacrificial cakes), and chanted with uktha mantras.

सूक्त—५२ देवता—इंद्र

हे इंद्र! भुने हुए जौ वाले, दही से मिले सत्तुओं से युक्त, पुरोडाश सहित एवं उक्थ मंत्रों के उच्चारणपूर्वक प्रातःकाल के यज्ञ में दिए गए सोम का तुम सेवन करो. (१)

In Mantra 4, it is stated that the haviṣyānna (sacrificial food) mentioned in Mantra 1 is to be offered to Indra, and a prayer is made to Indra requesting him to accept this offering.

O Indra, renowned as ancient and eternal! In this morning sacrifice, partake of our puroḍāśa (sacrificial cake). By doing so, your divine actions shall become even more exalted. (Verse 4)

पुरोळाशं सनश्रुत प्रातःसावे जुषस्व नः. इन्द्र क्रतुर्हि ते बृहन्.. (४)

हे पुराण होने के नाते प्रसिद्ध इंद्र! इस प्रातःकालीन यज्ञ में हमारे पुरोडाश का भक्षण करो. इससे तुम्हारा कर्म महान् होगा. (४)

In Mantra 5, there is mention of the midday Soma ritual (mādhyandina savana) in which a puroḍāśa (sacrificial cake) is offered. This cake is prepared using roasted barley, and the Sanskrit word "dhāna" appears in the mantra, signifying grain or cereal.

The mantra also describes Indra as being pleased by the puroḍāśa offered to him with praise and devotion.

O Indra! Come here and partake of the splendid puroḍāśa (sacrificial cake) made from roasted barley, offered in the midday sacrifice. When your devoted chanter—eager to serve you and swift like a bull—wanders restlessly to sing your praises, and recites your finest hymns, then you delight in consuming the puroḍāśa.

माध्यन्दिनस्य सवनस्य धानाः पुरोळाशमिन्द्र कृष्वेह चारुम्.
प्र यत्स्तोता जरिता तूर्ण्यर्थो वृषायमाण उप गीर्भिरीट्टे.. (५)

हे इंद्र! दोपहर के यज्ञ में भुने हुए जौ के शोभन पुरोडाश का यहां आकर भक्षण करो. तुम्हारी सेवा में तत्पर, तुम्हारी स्तुति करने के लिए बैल के समान इधर-उधर शीघ्रता से घूमने वाला स्तोता तुम्हारी उत्तम स्तुति जब करता है, तब तुम पुरोडाश खाते हो. (५)

According to Mantra 6, during the third Soma ritual (tṛtīya savana), which takes place in the evening, Indra should consume a puroḍāśa (sacrificial cake) that is combined with "dhāna", meaning grain—interpreted by translators as roasted barley.

This puroḍāśa is considered the havi (sacrificial offering) specifically prescribed for Indra in the Vedic texts.

हे बहुतों द्वारा स्तुति किए गए इंद्र ! तृतीय सवन अर्थात् संध्याकालीन यज्ञ में हमारे भुने हुए जौ एवं हवन किए गए पुरोडाश को भक्षण द्वारा महान् बनाओ. हे ऋभुओं से युक्त, धनयुक्त पुत्रों वाले तथा कवि इंद्र ! हम हव्य हाथ में लेकर स्तुतियों द्वारा तुम्हारी सेवा करते हैं. (६)

O Indra, praised by multitudes! In the third Soma pressing—the evening sacrifice—make yourself great by partaking of our roasted barley and consecrated puroḍāśa (sacrificial cakes). O Indra, accompanied by the Ṛbhus, blessed with wealthy sons, and revered as a poet! With offerings in hand and hymns on our lips, we serve you in devotion. (Verse 6)

तृतीये धानाः सवने पुरुष्टुत पुरोळाशमाहुतं मामहस्व नः।
ऋभुमन्तं वाजवन्तं त्वा कवे प्रयस्वन्त उप शिक्षेम धीतिभिः॥ (६)

According to Mantra 7, a preparation of sattū mixed with curd is made for Indra, and a puroḍāśa (sacrificial cake) of roasted barley is also offered to satisfy him along with the Maruts.

Following this, Indra is invited to partake in Soma with reverent praises, being addressed as heroic (śūra), wise (vidvān), and slayer of Vṛtra (vṛtrahā).

हे सूर्य सहित इंद्र ! हम तुम्हारे लिए दही मिला सत्तू तैयार करते हैं. हे हरि नामक एवं हरे रंग के घोड़ों वाले इंद्र ! तुम्हारे लिए हम जौ भूनते हैं. भूनते हैं. तुम मरुतों के साथ आकर पुरोडाश खाओ. हे वृत्रनाशक, शूर एवं विद्वान् इंद्र ! तुम सोम पिओ. (७)

O Indra, accompanied by the Sun! We prepare for you a mixture of curd and sattu (roasted flour). O Indra, named Hari and rider of green-colored horses! We roast barley for you—again and again, with devotion. Come with the Maruts and partake of the puroḍāśa (sacrificial cakes). O slayer of Vṛtra, brave and wise Indra! Drink the sacred Soma. (Verse 7)

"We worship Agni, the fire god, with great hymns—he who accepts as offerings the grain produced by oxen through agriculture, the milk yielded by cows, the essence of ghee and other juices, and the sacred Soma."

Here, the term ukṣānna refers to nourishing food, and vaśānna is also described as a distinct type of grain, both of which are used in the preparation of haviṣyānna—the sacrificial food offered in Vedic rituals.

The mention of animal-like food (paśurūpa anna) does not imply animal sacrifice. Rather, it symbolically refers to food items that resemble or represent the qualities of animals, such as strength or nourishment, without involving actual meat or slaughter.

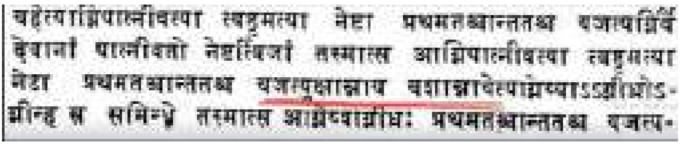
In Kauṣītaki/Śāṅkhāyana Brāhmaṇa 28.3, the terms Ukṣā and Vaśā are also interpreted as types of food grains.

यजत्युक्षान्नाय वशान्नायेत्याग्नेय्याऽऽग्नीध्रोऽ



In Taittirīya Saṁhitā 1.3.14.7, Bhattabhāskara offers a spiritual interpretation of the term ukṣānna, identifying it with Gāyatrī, the sacred Vedic meter. The word vedhase is understood to signify intellect or wisdom (medhā).

However, Bhattabhāskara also acknowledges a material meaning of ukṣa—as edible or nourishing food—since later in the passage, he interprets somapṛṣṭha (the back/support of Soma) as havi, the sacrificial offering.

🔥 The central theme here is the invigoration of Agni (fire deity) through Soma, implying a spiritual energizing rather than a literal physical offering. The phrase "somenārādhyata" suggests that Agni is worshipped or nourished by Soma.

🪔 Key Insight: Where Soma is the focus—symbolizing purity, divinity, and cosmic rhythm—the idea of offering bulls or barren goats seems incongruent. Such interpretations likely stem from misreadings or later ritualistic interpolations, not from the original Vedic intent, which emphasizes symbolic and non-violent offerings.

Refutation-

Here is Rig Veda 10/28/3 mool Mantra

Here the whole fuss is about the word वृषभान् पचन्ति which is mistranslated as consuming Bull

Nirukta 4/8 states वृषभो means वृषभः जलों को बरसाने वाला है

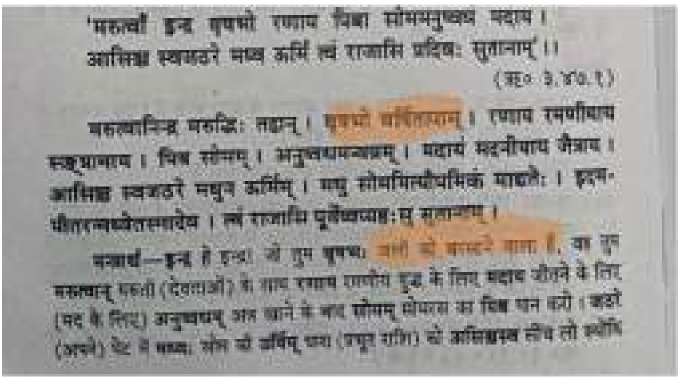
वृषभः which causes the waters to rain.



An Acharya Swami Brahmamuni Parvrachak also quoted Nirukta 4/8 to explain the meaning of वृषभान् पचन्ति as वृषभः यो वर्षति सुखानि सः वृषभः वर्षिताऽपाम् Rained upon by water

Rig Veda 3.47.1 – Meaning of वृषभः is causing the water to rain

Sayanacharya commentary on Rig Veda 3.47.1 says – वृषभः अपां वर्षिता

वृषभः that has caused the waters to rain

त्र्यर्यमा मनुषो देवताता त्री रोचना दिव्या धारयन्त.

मनु के यज्ञ के तीन तेजों एवं अंतरिक्ष में होने वाले तीन प्रकाशयुक्तों को मरुतों ने धारण किया है. हे इंद्र! पवित्र-शक्ति वाले मरुत् तुम्हारी स्तुति करते हैं. हे धीर इंद्र! तुम इन्हें देखने वाले हो. (१)

जब मरुतों ने निचोड़े हुए सोमरस को पीकर प्रसन्न इंद्र की स्तुति की, तब इंद्र ने वज्र उठाया, शत्रु का नाश किया एवं वृत्र द्वारा रोकी गई विशाल जलराशि को बहने के लिए छोड़ा. (२)

उत ब्रह्माणो मरुतो मे अस्येन्द्रः सोमस्य सुषुतस्य पेयाः.

हे महान् मरुतो! तुम इंद्र के साथ मिलकर इस भली प्रकार निचोड़े गए सोम को पिओ. इसी हव्य ने यजमान को गाएं दिलाई हैं एवं इसी को पीकर इंद्र ने अहि को मारा था. (३)

इंद्र ने सोमरस पीने के बाद ही विस्तृत धरती-आकाश को स्तंभित किया था एवं गतिशील बनकर हिरन के समान भागते हुए वृत्र को डराया था. इंद्र ने छिपे हुए एवं सांस लेते हुए वृत्र को आच्छादनरहित करके मारा. (४)

हे धनस्वामी इंद्र! तुम्हारे इस कार्य के बदले सभी देवों ने तुम्हें पीने के लिए सोम दिया था. तुमने एतश ऋषि के कल्याण के लिए सामने से आते हुए सूर्य के घोड़ों को रोक दिया था. (५)

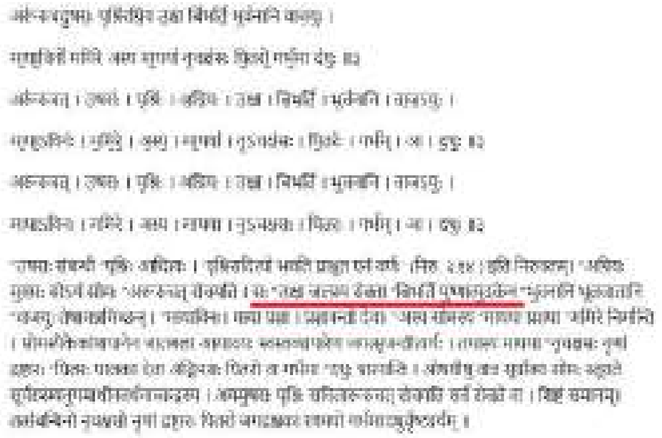
In Rig Veda Indra in the form of Āditya (the Sun), is said to be consuming Uksha . Then whats the meaning of Uksha . As per Acharya Sayana the meaning of Uksa is Atmospheric Water in the form of Soma Rasa which Indra is said to be be consuming . So here as well the meaning of महिष which Indra in the form of Aditya is said to be consuming must be taken as Soma Rasa and not Buffaloes based on the context of this Mantra

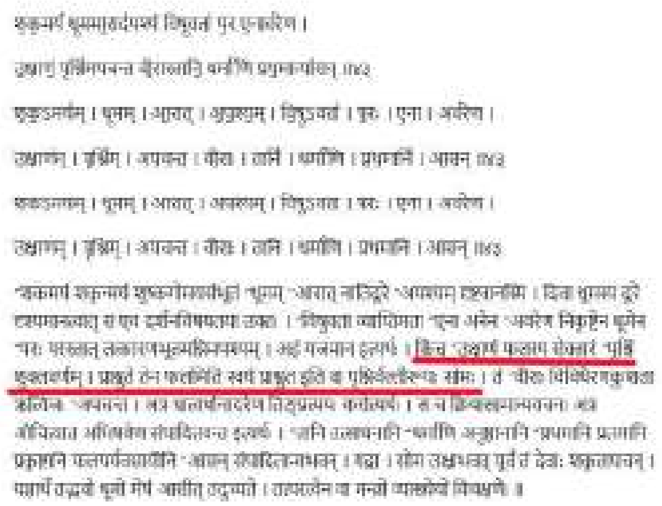
The Meaning of Uksha

Sayancharya commentary on Rig Veda 9/83/3 too says "उक्षा जलस्य सेक्ता "बिभर्ति पुष्णात्युदकेन " meaning "Ukṣā, the sprinkler of water, bears and nourishes with water."



Sayancharya commentary on Rig Veda 1/164/43 – किंच "उक्षाणं फलस्य सेक्तारं "पृश्निं शुक्लवर्णम् । प्राश्नुते तेन फलमिति स्वयं प्राश्नुत इति वा पृश्निर्वल्लीरूपः सोमः

Furthermore, 'Ukṣāṇaṁ' means the sprinkler or nourisher of Soma. 'Pṛśniṁ', the white-colored one, is said to enjoy the fruit through it—or perhaps enjoys it directly. Thus, 'Pṛśni' refers to Soma in the form of a creepe



Maharshi Yāska on "Ukṣan" To begin with, Maharshi Yāska interprets the word "Ukṣan" as deriving from the root Ukṣ, meaning "that which causes growth" or "promotes increase."

He further classifies "Ukṣan" under the category of secondary compounds (madhyamikasaṁstyāyān) — a grammatical nuance we'll explore shortly.

Indra as the Sun In this context, Indra is also equated with the Sun, as expressed in the phrase "Indram brūma ādityam" (Let us call Indra the Sun).

Commentator Durgācārya reinforces this view by stating: "Eṣa Indra Ādityaḥ" — "This Indra is the Sun."

Indra and the Essence (Rasa) Durgācārya further analyzes the passage by explaining that, contextually, Indra appropriates the essence (rasa), after which that essence becomes collected together in a unified form. Expanding upon this, he notes that since Ukṣ also means sprinkling or flowing, the essence/Soma absorbed by Indra is then diffused and sprinkled throughout.

May Indra, the invigorator (ukṣaṇaḥ), partake of these noble offerings and praises from the middle ones (mādhyamikān), those who are moderate and balanced in speech and conduct."

- Ukṣaṇaḥ derives from ukṣ, meaning to nourish or to sprinkle—symbolizing growth and vitality.
- The offering (haviḥ) is described as pleasing and joy-bestowing, suitable for all beings.
- The phrase "Indra uttaraḥ" reaffirms Indra's supreme status among the gods.

"Ukṣaṇaḥ" is derived from "udhṛti," meaning growth or nourishment. The plants indeed grow due to rain, and because of their abundance, they are considered to have increased. Alternatively, it comes from "ukṣ,"

“Now the question arises: What is the meaning of this ‘Ukṣa’, considered a madhyamika-saṁstyāyān (secondary compound), as mentioned in the Vedas — which Indra, in the form of Āditya (the Sun), is said to be consuming? According to Nirukta and Durgavṛtti, its meaning is vaporized water or cloud. Since the Sun absorbs the water present on Earth through its rays and lifts it skyward by evaporation, metaphorically the Sun appears to be drinking the water of the Earth. This is the poetic sentiment that emerges.”

May Indra arise at dawn and nourish his own beings—these balanced, moderate ones (mādhyamikān), invigorated by rain and strengthened by seasonal showers. Indra, the solar deity (Ādityaḥ), drinks the Soma after uplifting them. The offering (haviḥ) is called priyam—beloved and desirable. It is also termed kācitkaraṁ, meaning “delightful,” because it brings joy (kama, happiness) and fulfills what has been gathered (ācitaṁ).

What is this offering? It is water, which you should prepare as a rain-marked food (avashyāya-lakṣaṇaṁ annaṁ)—nourished and produced by rainfall.

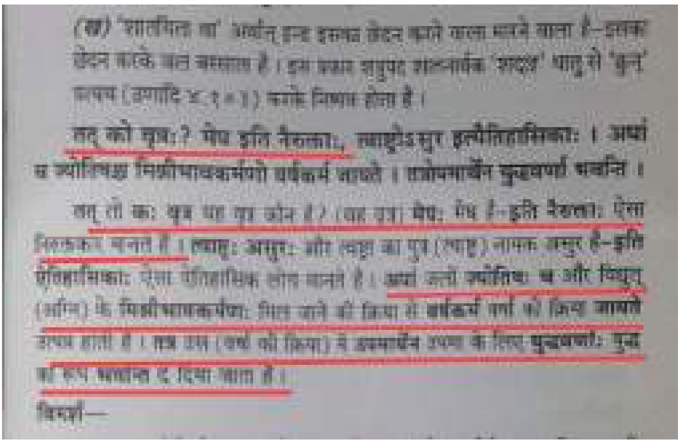
Why so? Because Indra, the solar deity, is supreme over all (viśvasmāt uttaraḥ).

Maharishi Yaska also explained in his Nirukta Vedanga 2.16-17 Indra – Vritasur Sangram as a Natural Phenomenon

So then, who is this Vṛtra?

According to the etymologists (Nairuktas), "Vṛtra is a cloud (megha)."
But according to the historicists, "Vṛtra is a demon (asura), the son of Tvaṣṭṛ (Tvāṣṭra)."

Rain is produced through the combination (or interaction) of water (apām) and lightning (jyoti/agni).
In that process (i.e., the formation of rain), the description of a battle is presented metaphorically (upamārthena) — i.e., the battle is symbolic, not real.



Thus based on the context of Rig Veda 5.29 and the meaning of महिष as Uksha/Soma Rasa here is the correct translation of Rig Veda 5.29.7-8 based on Sayana Bhasya

सखा इन्द्रस्य मित्रभूत् अग्निः महिषा महिषाणां पशूनां त्री त्रीणि शतानि शतसंख्या- कानि सख्ये सख्युर्मित्रभूतस्य अस्य इन्द्रस्य क्रत्वा कर्मणा निमित्तभूतेन तूयं क्षिप्रम् अपचत् पपाच । किंच इन्द्रः परमैश्वर्ययुक्तः मनुषः मनोः संबन्धीनि त्री त्रीणि सरांसि पात्राणि । अत्र सरःशब्देन पूतभृदाधवनीयद्रोणकलशसंज्ञानि पात्राण्युच्यन्ते । तेषु स्थितं सुतम् अभिषुतं सोमं साकं युगपदेव वृत्रहत्याय वृत्रहननाय पिबत् अपिबत् पपौ ।।

Agni, the companion and friend of Indra, swiftly prepared and offered the Soma rasas—three sets of one hundred in number—on behalf of Indra, who was his friend in the sacrificial act and its purpose. These mahīṣas (Soma rasas) were prepared as part of the ritual offering.

Moreover, Indra, endowed with supreme sovereignty, drank from three sacred vessels associated with Manu and mankind. Here, the word saras refers to ritual containers such as the pūtabhṛt, ādhavanīya, and droṇa-kalaśa. In these vessels was placed the well-purified Soma, which Indra drank simultaneously for the purpose of slaying Vṛtra.

O Indra, whenever you consumed the essences of the Soma rasas—three sets of one hundred in number—you did so with great vigor. The term aghah here implies intensity or potency, and ghasa is taken in the sense of consuming or absorbing.

And when you, O Maghavan, the wealthy one, drank the Soma-filled three vessels, and when you slew the serpent Vṛtra, then all the gods, filled with the power of Soma, summoned you—Indra—for battle. The analogy here is like a servant being called by his master to perform a task.

In Rig Veda Indra in the form of Āditya (the Sun), is said to e consuming Uksha . Then whats the meaning of Uksha .

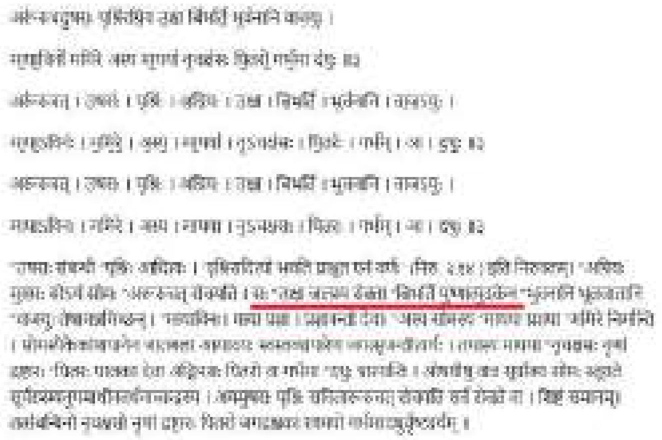
As per Acharya Sayana the meaning of Uksa is Atmospheric Water in the form of Soma Rasa which Indra is said to be be consuming . So here as well the meaning of महिष which Indra in the form of Aditya is said to be consuming must be taken as Soma Rasa and not Buffaloes based on the context of this Mantra

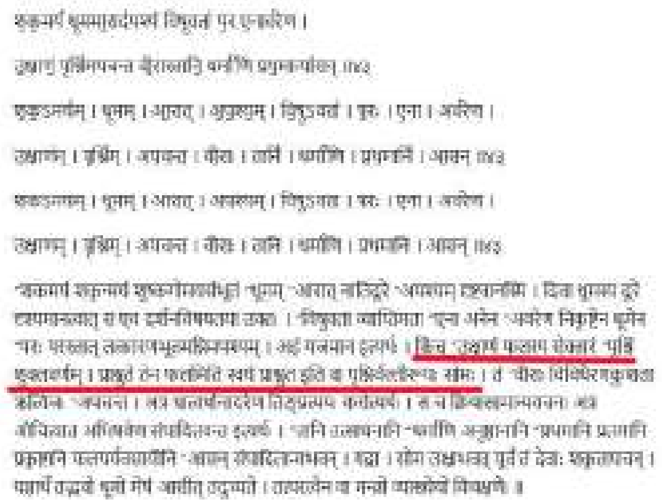
The Meaning of Uksha

Sayancharya commentary on Rig Veda 9/83/3 too says "उक्षा जलस्य सेक्ता "बिभर्ति पुष्णात्युदकेन " meaning "Ukṣā, the sprinkler of water, bears and nourishes with water."



Sayancharya commentary on Rig Veda 1/164/43 – किंच "उक्षाणं फलस्य सेक्तारं "पृश्निं शुक्लवर्णम् । प्राश्नुते तेन फलमिति स्वयं प्राश्नुत इति वा पृश्निर्वल्लीरूपः सोमः

Furthermore, 'Ukṣāṇaṁ' means the sprinkler or nourisher of Soma. 'Pṛśniṁ', the white-colored one, is said to enjoy the fruit through it—or perhaps enjoys it directly. Thus, 'Pṛśni' refers to Soma in the form of a creepe



Maharshi Yāska on "Ukṣan" To begin with, Maharshi Yāska interprets the word "Ukṣan" as deriving from the root Ukṣ, meaning "that which causes growth" or "promotes increase."

He further classifies "Ukṣan" under the category of secondary compounds (madhyamikasaṁstyāyān) — a grammatical nuance we'll explore shortly.

Indra as the Sun In this context, Indra is also equated with the Sun, as expressed in the phrase "Indram brūma ādityam" (Let us call Indra the Sun).

Commentator Durgācārya reinforces this view by stating: "Eṣa Indra Ādityaḥ" — "This Indra is the Sun."

Indra and the Essence (Rasa) Durgācārya further analyzes the passage by explaining that, contextually, Indra appropriates the essence (rasa), after which that essence becomes collected together in a unified form. Expanding upon this, he notes that since Ukṣ also means sprinkling or flowing, the essence/Soma absorbed by Indra is then diffused and sprinkled throughout.

- Ukṣaṇaḥ derives from ukṣ, meaning to nourish or to sprinkle—symbolizing growth and vitality.
- The offering (haviḥ) is described as pleasing and joy-bestowing, suitable for all beings.
- The phrase "Indra uttaraḥ" reaffirms Indra's supreme status among the gods.

"Now the question arises: What is the meaning of this 'Ukṣa', considered a madhyamika-saṁstyāyān (secondary compound), as mentioned in the Vedas — which Indra, in the form of Āditya (the Sun), is said to be consuming? According to Nirukta and Durgavṛtti, its meaning is vaporized water or cloud. Since the Sun absorbs the water present on Earth through its rays and lifts it skyward by evaporation, metaphorically the Sun appears to be drinking the water of the Earth. May Indra arise at dawn and nourish his own beings—these balanced, moderate ones (mādhyamikān), invigorated by rain and strengthened by seasonal showers. Indra, the solar deity (Ādityaḥ), drinks the Soma after uplifting them. The offering (haviḥ) is called priyam—beloved and desirable. It is also termed kācitkaraṁ, meaning "delightful," because it brings joy (kama, happiness) and fulfills what has been gathered (ācitaṁ).

What is this offering? It is water, which you should prepare as a rain-marked food (avashyāya-lakṣaṇaṁ annaṁ)—nourished and produced by rainfall.

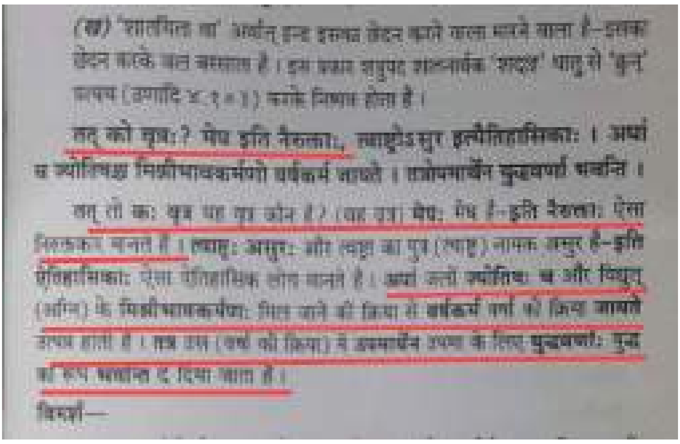
Why so? Because Indra, the solar deity, is supreme over all (viśvasmāt uttaraḥ).

Maharishi Yaska also explained in his Nirukta Vedanga 2.16-17 Indra – Vritasur Sangram as a Natural Phenomenon

So then, who is this Vṛtra?

According to the etymologists (Nairuktas), "Vṛtra is a cloud (megha)."
But according to the historicists, "Vṛtra is a demon (asura), the son of Tvaṣṭṛ (Tvāṣṭra)."

Rain is produced through the combination (or interaction) of water (apām) and lightning (jyoti/agni).
In that process (i.e., the formation of rain), the description of a battle is presented metaphorically (upamārthena) — i.e., the battle is symbolic, not real.



Thus based on the context of Rig Veda 6.17 and the meaning of महिष as Uksha/Soma Rasa here is the correct translation of Rig Veda 6.17.11 based on Sayana Bhasya

"सजोषाः सह प्रीयमाणाः "विश्वे "मरुतः सर्वे देवा हे "इन्द्र "यं त्वां "वर्धान् स्तोत्रैर्वर्धयन्ति हे इन्द्र तस्मै "तुभ्यं "पूषा एतन्नामको देवः "विष्णुः एतन्नामकश्च "शतं शतसंख्याकान् "महिषान् पुंपशून् "पचत् पचेत् । अपि च "अस्मै तुभ्यं "सरांसि द्रोणकलशपूतभृदाधवनीयाख्यानि "त्रीणि पात्राणि "अंशुं सोमं "धावन् अगच्छन् । सोमैः पात्राणि पूर्यन्त इत्यर्थः । कीदृशं सोमम् । "मदिरं मदकरं "वृत्रहणं वृत्राणां शत्रूणां हन्तारम् । अत्र वृत्रहञ्छब्देन सोमोऽभिधीयते । पीते हि सति सोमे वृत्राणि हन्तुमिन्द्रः समर्थो भवतीति यावत् ॥

United in joy, all the deities and Maruts together glorify Indra with hymns, exalting him through praise. To him—O Indra—deities like Pūṣan and Viṣṇu offer hundreds of Soma offerings . These Soma offerings are ritually prepared and presented with devotion.

Moreover, for Indra, sacred waters contained in ritual vessels—such as the Droṇa-kalaśa and Ādhavanī—are poured into three cups (trīṇi pātrāṇi), into which flows the Soma essence (aṁśuṁ). These cups become filled with Soma during the ritual.

What kind of Soma is it? It is exhilarating and potent—empowering Indra to slay demons, symbolized by vṛtra-han, the destroyer of obstruction (Vṛtra). In this context, Soma itself is referred to as vṛtra-han, because upon drinking it, Indra becomes strong enough to defeat his enemies.

The strong, noble bulls who long for and devour the branch of the reddish tree with reddish hue, bellow passionately. Just as flesh-eating predators and carnivores produce distinct sounds over well-cooked meat, so too do these pressing stones (grāvāṇaḥ) produce sound.
Moreover, without a mouth, they attain or discover the honey-like Soma.

Here with the example of an example that just like Flesh Eating predators produce sounds over cooked meat similarly the stones which are used to make soma make a similar sound

However just by giving an example of meat eating animals it does not mean that Vedas allow meat eating

What is meant by the Offering of Pashu in the yagya and Drinking of Sura in Sautrāmaṇī Ritual ?

Ved Vyas ji explained in Srimad Bhagavatam 11.5.13 that the touching of the Pashu to the Yagya Altar and then releasing it is accepted as its Offering and not its real killing . Similarly in Sautrāmaṇī Ritual the symbolic smelling of Sura is accepted as its intake and not real drinking of Sura

Srimad Bhagvatam 11/5/13 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

The smelling of wine (in the Sautrāmani sacrifice) is laid down as its intake (and no drinking of liquor is permitted); a beast is to be (symbolically) offered to the deities (by touching it) in sacrifices, but no killing for meat-eating is allowed; simi-larly, sexual intercourse (with one's wife) is to be indulged in for procreation but not for sexual enjoyment. Yajur Veda 12.73 – Bulls are Aghanya – Inviolable

कृषि उद्यम द्वारा देवत्व मार्ग पर ले जाने वाले हे मनुष्य ! वध न किये जाने वाले वृषभ आदि से संसार की सुव्यवस्था के निमित्त आप कृषि-कार्य का सम्पादन करें। आपकी कृपा से हम क्षुधा-पिपासा स्वरूप दुःखों से विमुक्त हों और ज्योतिरूप यज्ञकर्मों को प्राप्त करें ॥७३

The valiant ones — the Aṅgirasas — are the sons of Prajāpati. They offered a fat and bulky ram and goat, endowed with marrow and flesh, for the purpose of Indra, who embodies the form of Prajāpati — meaning, they engaged in the act of paśuyajña as an offering, as a spiritual presentation. Moreover, this act is expressed through an elliptical simile (luptopamā). Just as the dice (akṣāḥ) of the gods, cast and placed in the divine dice-hall, follow one of the two players during their game, similarly all the Aṅgirasas become followers (anugatāḥ) of Prajāpati. Among them, two Aṅgirasas are mentioned as Dhanu, where the word dhanu can either be synonymous with dhanus (bow), an instrument of destruction, or dhana (wealth), indicating either the weapon that destroys ignorance or something delightful like wealth. They are described as tawny (kapila) in nature, nurturing the expansive Bṛhatī nature by the command of Prajāpati. Dwelling in the subtle element of water, the essence of nature, they moved about according to Prajāpati’s command, engaging in devotional acts. They were endowed with pavitra (purity), which refers to mantra — specifically, the mantra of praṇava used in meditation. Thus, through meditative absorption in the sacred syllable, they sanctified themselves, purifying their inner being through contemplative realization.

Basically here pacet word has been used which has been mistranslated as cooking . Pandit Nath Sharma Shastri Saraswat had clarified in his book "Sanatan Dharma Loka" that the meaning of Pacet is to Offer and not to cook (This is a Reference of the Book " The Review of Beef Eating in Ancient India " where they quoted Pandit Dinanath Sharma Shastri to explain the meaning of word Pacet)

"The meaning of pacet in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa is not 'cooking', but it is 'presenting; offering' (vyakṭīkuryāt व्यक्तीकुर्यात्). Here the root is paci vyaktikarane (पचि व्यक्तीकरणे) of the first conjugation, set, and ātmane pada. In the Balamanoramā commentary (editions of Guruprasad Shastri and of the Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office) it is said :- pacetyeke (पचेत्येके) i.e., there is also the variant pac (पच्) of the root paci (पचि). It signifies to present vyaktikarana. This meaning proves the identical intention of the Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa and the Yājñavalkya-Smrti.

It is translated below in extenso :

Then, O Indra, I, along with the priests and others, offer to you the vigorous, strong, and nourishing bull—meaning a male animal capable of sprinkling (semen). Furthermore, I offer the intense, intoxicating juice, the well-purified Soma called 'pañcadaśa' (fifteenfold). From the first lunar day onward, in the bright fortnight, leaves grow by one each day, and in the dark fortnight, they decrease similarly. Because of this nature, it is called 'pañcadaśa Soma.' Or, it refers to the midday Soma pressing accompanied by the fifteenfold chant. I pour it—into the tenfold strainer, the droṇa vessel, the ladle cup, or into the fire—meaning I cast it in."

Basically here pacet word has been used which has been mistranslated as cooking . Pandit Nath Sharma Shastri Saraswat had clarified in his book “Sanatan Dharma Loka” that the meaning of Pacet is to Offer and not to cook (This is a Reference of the Book ” The Review of Beef Eating in Ancient India ” where they quoted Pandit Dinanath Sharma Shastri to explain the meaning of word Pacet)

“The meaning of pacet in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa is not ’cooking’, but it is ’presenting; offering’ (vyakṭīkuryāt व्यक्तीकुर्यात्). Here the root is paci vyaktikarane (पचि व्यक्तीकरणे) of the first conjugation, set, and ātmane pada. In the Balamanoramā commentary (editions of Guruprasad Shastri and of the Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office) it is said :- pacetyeke (पचेत्येके) i.e., there is also the variant pac (पच्) of the root paci (पचि). It signifies to present vyaktikarana. This meaning proves the identical intention of the Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa and the Yājñavalkya-Smrti.

It is translated below in extenso :

"The meaning of pacet in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa is not 'cooking', but it is 'presenting ; offering' (vyaktīkuryāt व्यक्तीकुर्यात्). Here the root is paci vyaktikarane (पचि व्यक्तीकरणे) of the first conjugation, set, and ātmane pada. In the Bālamanoramā commentary (editions of Guruprasad Shastri and of the Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office) it is said :—pacetyeke (पचेत्येके) i.e., there is also the variant pac (पच्) of the root paci (पचि). It signifies to present vyaktikarana. This meaning proves the identical intention of the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa and the Yājñavalkya-Smṛti.

In Painini Dhatupatha 174 too Pacet means Offering

१००७. पचि व्यक्तीकरणे (१७४)

But does offering of वृषभं for Indra means its Killed and Sacrificed – NO !

Ved Vyas ji explained in Srimad Bhagavatam 11.5.13 that the touching of the Pashu (Here वृषभं) to the Yagya Altar and then releasing it is accepted as its Offering and not its real killing .

Srimad Bhagvatam 11/5/13 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

The smelling of wine (in the Sautrāmani sacrifice) is laid down as its intake (and no drinking of liquor is permitted); a beast is to be (symbolically) offered to the deities (by touching it) in sacrifices, but no killing for meat-eating is allowed; simi-larly, sexual intercourse (with one’s wife) is to e indulged in for procreation but not for sexual enjoyment.

But people do not understand this pure course of their own dharma.

Moreover the Same Vedas say that Bulls (वृषभं) are aghanya then how could they mention killing and cooking of Bulls

Yajur Veda 12.73 – Bulls are Aghanya – Inviolable

कृषि उद्यम द्वारा देवत्व मार्ग पर ले जाने वाले हे मनुष्य ! वध न किये जाने वाले वृषभ आदि से संसार की सुव्यवस्था के निमित्त आप कृषि-कार्य का सम्पादन करें। आपकी कृपा से हम क्षुधा-पिपासा स्वरूप दुःखों से विमुक्त हों और ज्योतिरूप यज्ञकर्मों को प्राप्त करें ॥७३

O noble soul, who walks the path of divinity through agricultural endeavor! May you perform your farming duties with the help of Inviolable bulls and other sacred beings, for the harmonious order of the world. Through your grace, may we be freed from the sufferings of hunger and thirst, and attain the radiant fruits of sacrificial deeds.

Acharya Mahidhar even extended this by saying । हे अघ्या अहन्तव्या गावो बलीवर्दाः, यूयं विमुच्यध्वम् meaning "O Aghnyā (inviolable) cows and bullocks you not to be killed, You all should be set free." – That all Cattle and Bull Species are Aghanya

विवेकरहित यजमान, श्वान और गौ आदि पशुओं के अवयवों के द्वारा यजन करता है, तो यह अकर्म मूर्खतापूर्ण और निन्दनीय है। जो मन के द्वारा यज्ञ की महान् प्रक्रिया को जानते हैं, ऐसे आत्म-यज्ञ को जानने वाले परमज्ञानी महापुरुष ही परमात्मा के स्वरूप को बतलाएँ ॥५ ॥

A yajamāna (sacrificer) devoid of Intellect , who performs Yagyas using the limbs of animals like dogs and cows, engages in an actionless, foolish, and condemnable act. Only those great souls who understand the profound process of inner sacrifice through the mind — the knowers of the self-sacrifice — can truly reveal the nature of the Supreme Being

Allegations-

The Anushasan Parv (Book 13); section 88 mentions many animal sacrifices which are can be done to please the Pitris (fathers). I will quote the significant sholkas

"Yudhishthira said, 'O you of great puissance, tell me what that object is which, if dedicated to the Pitris, becomes inexhaustible! What Havi (oblation), again, (if offered) lasts for all time? What, indeed, is that which (if presented) becomes eternal?'"

Bhishma said, "With fishes offered at Sraddhas, the Pitris remain gratified for a period of two months. With mutton they remain gratified for three months and with the flesh of the hare for four. With the flesh of the goat, O king, they remain gratified for five months, with bacon for six months, and with the flesh of birds for seven. With venison obtained from those deer that are called Prishata, they remain gratified for eight months, and with that obtained from the Ruru for nine months, and with the meat of the Gavaya for ten months. With the meat of the buffalotheir gratification lasts for eleven months. With beef presented at the Sraddha, their gratification, it is said, lasts for a full year. Payasa mixed with ghee is as much acceptable to the Pitris as beef. With the meat of the Vadhrinasa the gratification of the Pitris lasts for twelve years. The flesh of the rhinoceros, offered to the Pitris on the anniversaries of the lunar days on which they died, becomes inexhaustible.

Here is Mahabharat Anushashana Parva Adhaya 88 Geeta Press Gorakhpur . You can read the whole section nowhere written such thing – No Cow Sacrifice nor Beef Eating

युधिष्ठिरने पूछा-पितामह ! पितरोंके लिये दी हुई कौन-सी वस्तु अक्षय होती है? किस वस्तुके दानसे पितर अधिक दिनतक और किसके दानसे अनन्त कालतक तृप्त रहते हैं? ।। १ ।।

भीष्मजीने कहा- युधिष्ठिर! श्राद्धवेत्ताओंने श्राद्ध-कल्पमें जो हविष्य नियत किये हैं, वे सब-के-सब काम्य हैं। मैं उनका तथा उनके फलका वर्णन करता हूँ, सुनो ।।

नरेश्वर ! तिल, ब्रीहि, जौ, उड़द, जल और फल-मूलके द्वारा श्राद्ध करनेसे पितरोंको एक मासतक तृप्ति बनी रहती है ।। ३ ।।

मनुजीका कथन है कि जिस श्राद्धमें तिलकी मात्रा अधिक रहती है, वह श्राद्ध अक्षय होता है। श्राद्ध-सम्बन्धी सम्पूर्ण भोज्य पदार्थोंमें तिलोंका प्रधानरूपसे उपयोग बताया गया है ।। ४ ।।

यदि श्राद्धमें गायका दही दान किया जाय तो उससे पितरोंको एक वर्षतक तृप्ति होती बतायी गयी है। गायके दहीका जैसा फल बताया गया है, वैसा ही घृतमिश्रित खीरका भी समझना चाहिये ।। ५ ।।

युधिष्ठिर! इस विषयमें पितरोंद्वारा गायी हुई गाथाका भी विज्ञ पुरुष गान करते हैं। पूर्वकालमें भगवान् सनत्कुमारने मुझे यह गाथा बतायी थी ।। ६ ।।

पितर कहते हैं- 'क्या हमारे कुलमें कोई ऐसा पुरुष उत्पन्न होगा, जो दक्षिणायनमें आश्विन मासके कृष्णपक्षमें मघा और त्रयोदशी तिथिका योग होनेपर हमारे लिये घृतमिश्रित खीरका दान करेगा? ।। ७ ।।

पितरोंकी क्षय-तिथिको जल, मूल, फल, उसका गूदा और अन्न आदि जो कुछ भी मधुमिश्रित करके दिया जाता है, वह उन्हें अनन्तकालतक तृप्ति देनेवाला है' ।। १० ।।

1. Yudhishthira asked: "O Grandfather! What offerings made to the ancestors are everlasting? Which gifts satisfy them for a long time, and which ones grant them eternal contentment?"

2. Bhishma replied: "O Yudhishthira! The offerings prescribed by the knowers of Śrāddha in the Śrāddha Kalpa are all desirable. I shall describe them and their fruits—listen carefully."

3. "O King! When Śrāddha is performed using sesame seeds, rice, barley, black gram, water, and fruits or roots, the ancestors remain satisfied for one month."

4. "According to Manu, a Śrāddha that contains a greater quantity of sesame seeds becomes inexhaustible. Among all food items used in Śrāddha, sesame is considered the most important."

5. "If curd made from cow's milk is offered during Śrāddha, the ancestors are said to be satisfied for one full year. The same result is attributed to offering milk-rice (kheer) mixed with ghee."

6. "O Yudhishthira! Wise men also sing a hymn composed by the ancestors on this subject. In ancient times, Lord Sanatkumara revealed this hymn to me."

7. The ancestors say: "Will a man ever be born in our lineage who, during the southern solstice, on the dark fortnight of the month of Ashwin, when Maghā and Trayodashi coincide, will offer us milk-rice mixed with ghee?"

8. "Or, will someone observe a vow with discipline, and on the day of Maghā Nakshatra, sit under the shadow of an elephant, cooled by its ear-fan, and perform our Śrāddha with rice pudding or iron-rich greens?"

9. “One should desire many sons, for even if one among them travels to the sacred site of Gaya—where the famous Akṣayavaṭa tree stands—he can make the fruits of Śrāddha eternal.”

10. “On the death anniversary of the ancestors, if water, roots, fruits, their pulp, and grains are offered mixed with honey, it grants them satisfaction for eternity.”

Srimad Bhagvatam 7.15.7-8

7. A person who knows the essence of dharma should not give (serve) flesh (non-vegetarian food), nor should eat it at the time of Sraddha, for there is no real gratification in slaughter of animals (flesh); for there is supreme satisfaction with the type of food proper for sages.

8. For those persons who desire to follow the right course of conduct, there is no supreme dharma other than abstinence from violence to living beings caused by thought, word and deed.

Hindi translation of Geeta Press Gorakhpur

देवकार्यमें दो और पितृकार्यमें तीन अथवा दोनोंमें एक-एक ब्राह्मणको भोजन कराना चाहिये। अत्यन्त धनी होनेपर भी श्राद्धकर्ममें अधिक विस्तार नहीं करना चाहिये ॥३॥ क्योंकि सगे-सम्बन्धी आदि स्वजनोंको देनेसे और विस्तार करनेसे देश-कालोचित श्रद्धा, पदार्थ, पात्र और पूजन आदि ठीक-ठीक नहीं हो पाते ॥४॥ देश और कालके प्राप्त होनेपर ऋषि-मुनियोंके भोजन करनेयोग्य शुद्ध हविष्यान्न भगवान्‌को भोग लगाकर श्रद्धासे विधिपूर्वक योग्य पात्रको देना चाहिये। वह समस्त कामनाओंको पूर्ण करनेवाला और अक्षय होता है ॥५॥ देवता, ऋषि, पितर, अन्य प्राणी, स्वजन और अपने-आपको भी अन्नका विभाजन करनेके समय परमात्मस्वरूप ही देखे ॥६॥

धर्मका मर्म जाननेवाला पुरुष श्राद्धमें मांसका अर्पण न करे और न स्वयं ही उसे खाय; क्योंकि पितरोंको ऋषि-मुनियोंके योग्य हविष्यान्नसे जैसी प्रसन्नता होती है, वैसी पशु-हिंसासे नहीं होती ॥७॥ जो लोग सद्धर्मपालनकी अभिलाषा रखते हैं, उनके लिये इससे बढ़कर और कोई धर्म नहीं है कि किसी भी प्राणीको मन, वाणी और शरीरसे किसी प्रकारका कष्ट न दिया जाय ॥८॥ इसीसे कोई-कोई यज्ञतत्त्वको जाननेवाले ज्ञानी ज्ञानके द्वारा प्रज्वलित

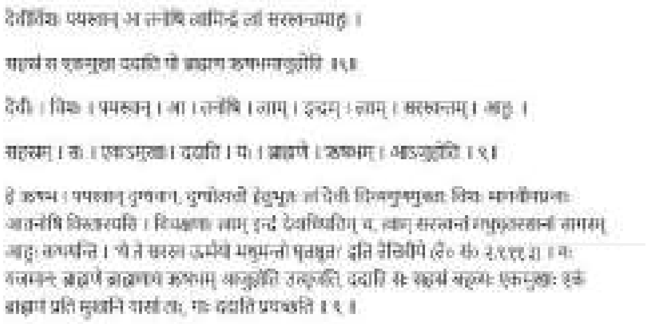
"O Ṛṣabha (the noble bull)! You are rich in milk, the cause of milk production; you expand the divine, virtuous human clans. The wise proclaim you as Indra, the lord of the gods, and also as Sarasvant (the flowing one), the ocean of sweet and ghee-laden juices. As said in the Taittiriya Saṁhitā (2.1.11.3): 'O Sarasvat, your waves are sweet and flow with ghee.'

That Yajamana who offers you, O Ṛṣabha, unto a Brāhmaṇa — he gives away a thousand cows, many in number, each with a single calf, to a single Brāhmaṇa."

Here it does not say to kill Bull but to donate cows to Brahmanas



Allegations-

📚Atharva Veda 9.4.18📚

Refutation-

Here is Sayanacharya commentary on Atharva Veda 9.4.18

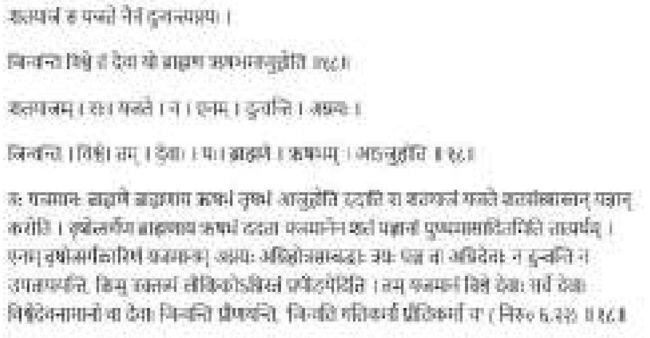
"That yajamāna (sacrificer) who offers (donates) a Ṛṣabha (bull) to a Brāhmaṇa — he performs a 'Śatayāja', i.e., it is considered as though he has performed a hundred Yagyas . By the act of releasing (donating) a bull to a Brāhmaṇa, the sacrificer attains the merit (puṇya) equivalent to that of a hundred Yagyas — this is the intended meaning.

The sacrificial fires (Agnis) — those associated with the Agnihotra, whether three or five in number — do not burn or trouble that yajamāna who performs the donation of Bulls . What then to say of the ordinary, worldly fire — it surely cannot afflict him.

All the Viśve Devāḥ (universal Devas), or all the deities collectively known as 'Viśvedevāḥ', invigorate and please that yajamāna (sacrificer).
As stated in Nirukta 6.22: 'Jinvati' means one who causes movement or joy (gati-karma and prīti-karma)."
(Verse 18)

Here also it asks to donate bulls to Brahmanas and not to kill them



Allegations-

Acharya Sayana explicitly mentions about sacrificing a bull in the introduction to Atharvaveda 9/4/1 as follows

“The Brahman after killing the bull, offers its meat to the different deities. In this hymn, the bull is praised, detailing which parts of the bull are attached to which deity as well as the importance of sacrificing the bull and the rewards of doing the same.”

Atharva Veda 6.71.1 What food I eat of varied form and nature, food whether horse, sheep, goat, or bullock…

Here is Acharya Sayana commentary on Atharva Veda 9/4/1

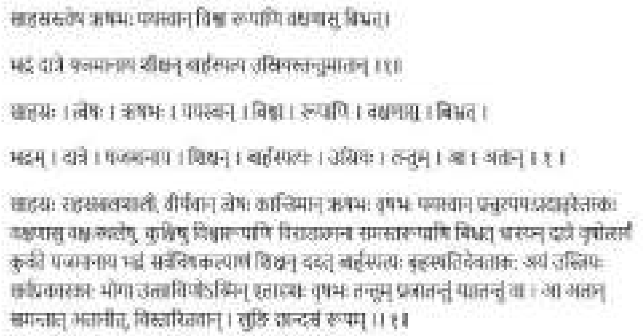
साहस्रः सहस्रबलशाली, वीर्यवान् त्वेषः कान्तिमान् ऋषभः वृषभः पयस्वान् प्रचुरपयःप्रदातृरेतस्कः वक्षणासु वक्षःस्थलेषु, कुक्षिषु विश्वारूपाणि विराडात्मना समस्तरूपाणि बिभ्रत् धारयन् दात्रे वृषोत्सर्गं कुर्वते यजमानाय भद्रं सर्वविधकल्याणं शिक्षन् ददत् बार्हस्पत्यः बृहस्पतिदेवताकः अयं उस्त्रियः सर्वप्रकारकाः भोगा उत्स्राविणोऽस्मिन् एतादृशः वृषभः तन्तुम् प्रजातन्तुं यज्ञतन्तुं वा । आ अतान् समन्तात् अतानीत्, विस्तारितवान् । लुङि छान्दसं रूपम् ।। १॥

The Ṛṣabha — the bull — is mighty like a thousand, powerful, full of vigor, and radiant in splendor. He is rich in milk, a source of abundant nourishing essence and virile seed. On his chest and sides (vakṣaḥsthaleshu, kukṣīṣu), he bears all universal forms — as the cosmic being (Virāṭ-Ātman), he holds all forms within himself.

To the yajamāna (sacrificer) who donates such a bull, this Ṛṣabha — of the nature of Bṛhaspati (the deity of wisdom and divine speech) — teaches (bestows) all auspiciousness, welfare, and complete excellence.

This Ṛṣabha is the source of all enjoyments, including women and pleasures of every kind, for he is the outpouring source (utsrāvi) of all prosperity. Such a Ṛṣabha is the very thread (tantuḥ) — whether it be of progeny (prajā-tantuḥ) or sacrifice (yajña-tantuḥ).

He has extended, or spread out, (root √tan) everything in all directions — this is an example of a Vedic luṅ form (past tense, poetic usage).”
(Verse 1)



Here also this Mantra talks about the benefits of donating bulls and the significance and glory of Bulls

He claimed that Acharya Sayana mentioned about killing bulls in his introduction to Atharva Veda 9/4/1 which is totally false if you read Sayancharya Bhasya

In the Vrishotsarga (ceremonial release of a bull), the Sāhasraḥ sūkta (Atharva Veda 9.4) is used. A bull is released after being consecrated and chanted over with this sūkta. The mantra "Retodhāya" (Kauṣītaki Sūtra 24.20) and six other Sautra mantras are recited during this process. Additionally, the verse "Etaṁ vo yuvānam" (Atharva Veda 9.4.24) is used to perform the consecration (abhimantraṇa) and sprinkling (prokṣaṇa) of a calf.

In the Pariśiṣṭa (appendix) texts as well, the application of this sūkta is specified for Vrishotsarga. As it is stated:

> "By the mantra Sāhasras taveṣaḥ, having let loose a consecrated bull..." (Atharvaveda Pariśiṣṭa 18.1.7)

Therefore, we firmly state without doubt that this sūkta is indeed prescribed for Vrishotsarga (the consecrated release of a bull).

In this rite, a strong, healthy, and well-nourished bull is released by the yajamāna (sacrificer) with the intention of promoting the prosperity of cattle herds. Although after the release no individual holds ownership over the bull, it is still referred to as a Bārhaspatya bull (i.e., connected to Bṛhaspati).

Here is the reasoning:

- Bṛhaspati is the lord of expansive Vedic speech, the source of Brahmins, and the head of forest-dwelling Gurukulas. He holds the status of Ācārya (teacher/master).
- In the Gurukula system, the teacher and students (brahmacārins) require many milking cows for producing milk and other offerings needed for Agnihotra, yajñas, and other Vedic rituals.
- Moreover, milk and its derivatives are vital for the nourishment of the students' bodies, minds, and souls.
- Therefore, even though the bull is released and not possessed by anyone specifically, if it is utilized by the heads of Gurukulas to help increase the number of milking cows (i.e., for breeding), it is not considered improper.

The Vrishotsarga is clearly referred to in the mantras of this sūkta as well, for example:

- "Sahasraṁ sa ekamukhā dadāti yo brāhmaṇa ṛṣabham ājuhoti" (Atharva Veda 9.4.9)
  — "He gives a thousandfold, who offers a bull to a Brahmin."
- "Brāhmaṇebhyaḥ ṛṣabhaṁ dattvā varīyaḥ kṛṇute manaḥ" (Atharva Veda 9.4.19)
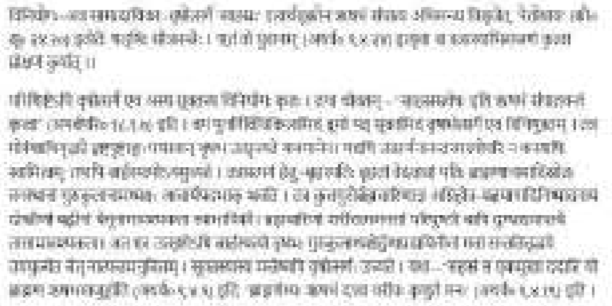
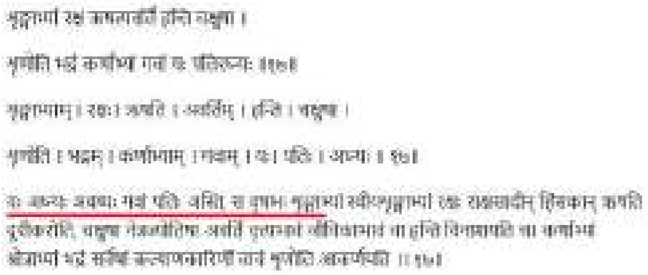
  — "Having given a bull to the Brahmins, he ennobles his mind."



He tried to show that Acharya Sayana mentioned Sacrificing Bull where as the Same Acharya Sayana in his commentary on Atharva Veda 9.4.17 said

यः अघ्न्यः अवध्यः गवां पतिः अस्ति, स वृषभः

"He who is inviolable, not to be killed, and the husband of cows — he is the bull."



Coming to Atharva Veda 6/71/1

Sayancharya commentary on Atharva Veda 6/71/1 says

Whatever food (anna) of various forms and appearances — of diverse kinds — I (the sacrificer) have eaten, possibly without distinguishing between what is fit to eat and what is unfit, due to the compulsion of hunger or suffering (duḥkha, need), that is the intended meaning (of the confession).

Or, whatever wealth — gold and such, or any kind of material possession — I have accepted out of poverty or dire need, all that (food and wealth) may this Agni (the fire), who is the Hotā (the priest/fire who carries offerings), make into a well-offered oblation (suhutam = properly sacrificed).

May he (Agni) transform it such that no sin or fault remains from my improper consumption of food or from improper acceptance of gifts. That is the meaning.”

“Overcome by the pain of hunger, the various kinds of food that I consume in many forms, and beyond food, the gold, horses, and cows that I accept due to poverty — may Agni Deva (the fire god) transform all of that — the food, the gold, and other such items — into properly offered oblations for me, the sacrificer.”

Allegations-

Maitrayana Brahmana 6.36 … Therefore (to the former) sacrifice must be offered on the house-altar with hymns, herbs, ghee, meat, cakes, sthalipaka, and other things; to the latter, with meat and drinks (belonging to the great sacrifices) thrown into the mouth, for the mouth is the Ahavaniya-fire; and this is done to increase our bodily vigour, to gain the world of purity, and for the sake of immortality.

Refutation-

There is no Such text by the name of Maitrayana Brahmana in Sanatan Dharma . Maybe this Halala Putra Pedophile followers Mullas wrote a new text on their own and calling it Maitrayana Brahmana

Allegations-

There is Cow and Bull Sacrifice in Vedic Gaumedha Yagya just in Ashwamedha Yagya a Horse is Sacrificed

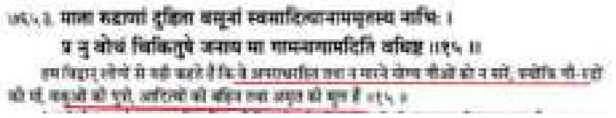
Refutation-

When Scriptures declare Cows and Bulls as Aghanya (Inviolable/Not to killed) then how could the Same scriptures contain injections to kill Cows and Bulls in Yagya

Rig Veda 8.101.15 – Cows are Aghanya – Not to be Killed

हम विद्वान् लोगों से यही कहते हैं कि वे अपराधरहित तथा न मारने योग्य गौओं को न मारें, क्योंकि गौ-रुद्रों की माँ, वस्ओं की पुत्री, आदित्यों की बहिन तथा अमृत की मूल हैं ॥१५

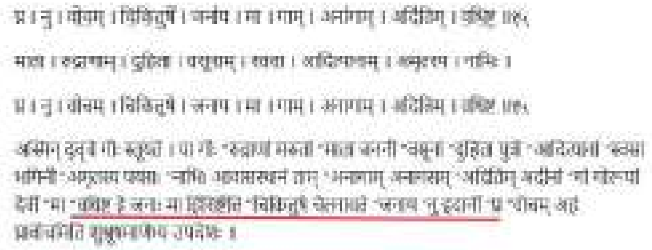
We say this to the learned: do not harm the innocent and inviolable cows—because the cow is the mother of the Rudras, daughter of the Vasus, sister of the Ādityas, and the source of ambrosia (amṛta). (Verse 15)



Sayanacharya in his commentary on Rig Veda 8.101.15 too said that Cows are Inviolable not to killed nor harmed at any circumstances

गां गोरूपां देवीं "मा "वधिष्ट हे जनाः मा हिंसिष्टेति "चिकितुषे चेतनावते "जनाय "नु इदानीं

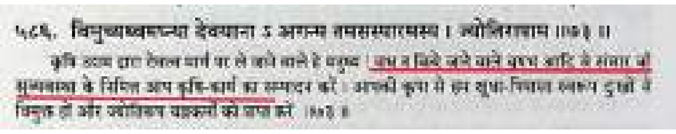
"Do not slay the cow, the divine being in the form of a cow. O people, do not harm her! This is a message for the intelligent and conscious human of today."



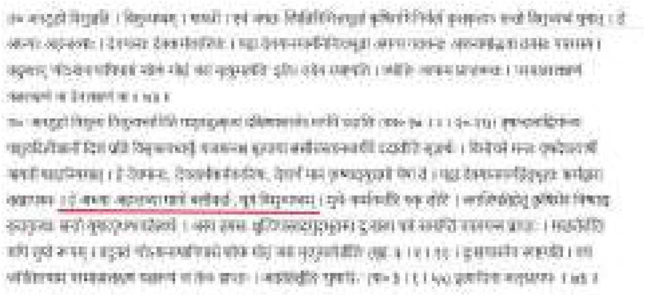
Yajur Veda 12.73 – Bulls are Aghanya – Inviolable

कृषि उद्यम द्वारा देवत्व मार्ग पर ले जाने वाले हे मनुष्य ! वध न किये जाने वाले वृषभ आदि से संसार की सुव्यवस्था के निमित्त आप कृषि-कार्य का सम्पादन करें। आपकी कृपा से हम क्षुधा-पिपासा स्वरूप दुःखों से विमुक्त हों और ज्योतिरूप यज्ञकर्मों को प्राप्त करें ॥७३

O noble soul, who walks the path of divinity through agricultural endeavor! May you perform your farming duties with the help of Inviolable bulls and other sacred beings, for the harmonious order of the world. Through your grace, may we be freed from the sufferings of hunger and thirst, and attain the radiant fruits of sacrificial deeds.



Acharya Mahidhar even extended this by saying । हे अघ्या अहन्तव्या गावो बलीवर्दाः, यूयं विमुच्यध्वम् meaning "O Aghnyā (inviolable) cows and bullocks you not to be killed, You all should be set free." – That all Cattle and Bull Species are Aghanya



Acharya Gangadhar Pathal Maithil explained in his book "Gavo Janmantara" the meaning of Gaumedha Yagya and its false comparison with Ashwamedha Yagya

Question Section: "The Veda describes the cow as aghnyā. Is this declaration meant only for outside the yajña-karma, or does it apply everywhere? If the cow is called aghnyā outside the yajña, then all animals are considered inviolable outside yajña because of 'mā hiṁsyāt sarvā bhūtāni'. If the cow is inviolable in the yajña, then how should we understand gomedha—which is also a Vedic yajña? In aśvamedha, the horse is killed; so wouldn't a cow be killed in gomeda? Then how can one claim that cow slaughter did not happen in ancient India?"

Response Section: "Although 'mā hiṁsyāt sarvā bhūtāni' makes all animals inviolable outside the yajña, yet by not calling other animals aghnyā and applying that term only to the cow, the special status of the cow is shown: other animals are generally inviolable, but the cow is inviolable by mind, speech, and action.

Gomedha is indeed a Vedic yajña, as is aśvamedha. However, in gomeda, the cow is not killed alive and offered into the fire. If someone argues that because the term gomedha is parallel to aśvamedha, then the cow should be killed like the horse, that logic is flawed. Otherwise, in sarvamedha, would all humans be slaughtered? Would we kill family members in gṛhamedha? Certainly not. Therefore, gomedha also does not imply the killing of a cow.

The reason is: even though 'mā hiṁsyāt sarvā bhūtāni' makes all beings inviolable, the verse 'agniṣomyam paśum ālabheta' allows for specific animal offerings within yajña. In this way…"

When the possibility of offering cows in havan arises among animals, the term aghnyā—a special Vedic designation—protects the cow, as previously clarified. The Mahābhārata also affirms this:

"अघ्न्या इति गवां नाम क एता हन्तुमर्हति । महच्चकाराकुशलं वृषं गां वाऽऽलभेत्तु यः ॥ (Śānti Parva – Mokṣadharma, 263.47)

Then how is the yagya fulfilled? For this, rice grains (vrīhi) are made into symbolic animals, and Mahābhārata provides testimony:

"श्रूयते हि पुराकाले नृणां व्रीहिमयः पशुः । येनायजन्त यज्वानः पुण्यलोकपरायणाः ।।" (Anuśāsana Parva, 115.56)

Therefore, the Mahābhārata encourages:

"विधिदृष्टेन यज्ञेन धर्मस्ते सुमहान् भवेत् । यज बीजैः सहस्राक्ष ! त्रिवर्षपरमोषितैः ॥" (Aśvamedhika Parva, 91.16)

Here, the attainment of dharma is described through the offering of grain seeds in yagya. Thus, it is clear that in yagyas, rice (vrīhi), paddy (dhāna), and cooked rice (odana) were symbolically treated as animals.

Hence, the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa also states:

"पशवो वै धानाः" (Gopatha Brāhmaṇa, 2.4.6)

The Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (1.2.3.7) also discusses this. We have already shown the description of vrīhi-dhenu. In Anuśāsana Parva (71.40, 73.37), there is mention of tila-dhenu. Similarly, ghṛta-dhenu (71.39), jala-dhenu (71.41), yava-dhenu, mṛttikā-dhenu, suvarṇa-dhenu, and others are described or donated.

In Śātātapa Smṛti, there is mention of:

- śarkarā-dhenu (2.46)
- ghṛta-dhenu (2.48)
- ratna-dhenu (2.58)
- dadhi-dhenu (4.9)
- dugdha-dhenu (4.8)

Mentions of madhudhenu (4.10), guḍadhenu (4.11), and raupyadhenu (5.27) also appear. There are references to piṣṭapaśu, ghṛtapaśu, and similar symbolic animals. In the word goyajña, if we interpret godhūma as the root and apply the grammatical rule 'vinā'pi pratyayaṁ pūrvottarapadayor-lopaḥ', the term dhūma is elided while go remains. Thus, a symbolic animal made from wheat flour is offered—this becomes the piṣṭapaśu.

Therefore, in gomedha, the offering is of a rice-formed cow, not a living one. Otherwise, how could she be called aghnyā? This is clarified in the Atharvaveda, 10th Kāṇḍa, 9th Sūkta, where the śataudana cow is described. Śataudana means a cow made of a hundred or many odana (cooked rice portions). For her, terms like śamita (pacified), pakta (cooked), svargagamana, asthi, and lohita are used, as in:

"ye tvā devi! śamitāraḥ paktāro ye ca te janāḥ I te tvā sarve gopsyanti mā ebhyo bhaiṣīḥ śataudane II" (Atharvaveda 10.9.7)

Thus, in gomeda, the offering is of a piṣṭapaśu, not a living cow. This is not evidence of cow slaughter in ancient India. Where the division of the animal's parts among ṛtvij-s is mentioned, it should be understood as the division of a rice-formed animal, not a real one.

Alternatively, consider that in soma-yāga and similar rituals, the yajamāna is said to offer his own body parts to the priests, as in:

"brahmaṇe mano dadyāt, adhvaryave prāṇaṁ, hotṛbhyaḥ śrotram II" (Āpastamba Śrauta Sūtra 13.6.6)

Would the yajamāna literally cut off his body parts? No—it's symbolic. Just as that is a bhāvanā (mental offering), so too is the division of the symbolic cow. Opponents cannot argue that the Vedas, which declare the cow aghnyā, would sanction cutting her body.

According to:

- "annaṁ hi gauḥ" (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 4.3.4.25)
- "ājyaṁ medhaḥ",
- "gāvas-taṇḍulāḥ" (Atharvaveda 11.2.5)

—offerings of rice and food substances also constitute gomeda.

The Scriptural proofs Supporting this viewpoint on Use of Symbolic Cow made up of Rice and Barley Cakes in Gaumedha Yagya –

Taittireeya Brahmana 1/8/61-3 says – नैतेषां पशूनां पुरोडाशा भवन्ति ग्रहपुरोडाशा ह्येते नानादेवत्याः पशवश्च पुरोडाशाश्च भवन्ति समृद्ध्यै ऐन्द्रः पुरोडाशानां प्रथमः २ । पशवो वै पुरोडाशाः confirming that Purodosa was used as Pashu in Yagya

Taittriya Samhita 2.3.2.8 says दधि मधु घृतम् आपो धाना भवन्ति एतद् वै पशूना रूपम् which means The curd, honey, butter, water, and grains are forms of Pashu

Gopatha Brahmana 2/4/6 says पशवो वे धानाः that is Grains are in the form of Pashu

Atharva Veda 7/5/5 condemns killing Cows in Yagyas

विवेकरहित यजमान, श्वान और गौ आदि पशुओं के अवयवों के द्वारा यजन करता है, तो यह अकर्म मूर्खतापूर्ण और निन्दनीय है। जो मन के द्वारा यज्ञ की महान् प्रक्रिया को जानते हैं, ऐसे आत्म-यज्ञ को जानने वाले परमज्ञानी महापुरुष ही परमात्मा के स्वरूप को बतलाएँ ॥५ ॥

A yajamāna (sacrificer) devoid of Intellect , who performs Yagyas using the limbs of animals like dogs and cows, engages in an actionless, foolish, and condemnable act. Only those great souls who understand the profound process of inner sacrifice through the mind — the knowers of the self-sacrifice — can truly reveal the nature of the Supreme Being

A Short Explanation on Ashwamedha Yagya

Yes, Aśvamedha certainly took place—it is very well known. It was performed for the royal consecration of a Chakravartin and to beget a Chakravartin son. It had its own unique features. A special horse was sought, which was very difficult to find—this is clearly stated in the Mahābhārata. In the Jaiminīya Aśvamedha, there is mention of such a special horse that belonged to King Yuvanāśva, guarded by thousands of protectors. This highlights the horse's exceptional status. It was tested (Mahābhārata, Aśvamedha Parva 72.5).

The idea is that it was not an ordinary horse. Its feeding and care were conducted in such a way, and all actions were performed through mantras, that its body underwent a transformation—its ordinary nature was replaced by divinity. Its bodily elements like blood were altered, and foul odors were removed. It became white in part and took the form of vapā.

The Mahābhārata states:

"तं वपा धूमगन्धं तु धर्मराजः सहानुजैः । उपाजिघ्रद् यथाशास्त्रं सर्वपापापहं तदा ॥" (Mahābhārata, Aśvamedha Parva 89.4)

This verse describes the ritual smelling of the vapā smoke by Dharmarāja and his brothers, as prescribed by the śāstra, which removes all sins.

Normally, burning horse fat or body parts in fire produces such a foul smell that one cannot sit nearby. But through the ritual process of Aśvamedha, the horse undergoes a transformation that results in fragrant smoke during the homa.

As stated in the Ṛgveda:

“ये वाजिनं परिपश्यन्ति पक्वं य ईमाहुः सुरभिर्निर्हरेति” (Ṛgveda 1.162.12)

Here, the horse cooked in the fire of Aśvamedha is described as surabhi—fragrant—due to this ritual transformation.

A reason is indicated. In the Jaiminīya Aśvamedha, for testing the horse, Dhaumya Muni pressed its left ear, and a stream of milk flowed out:

“ततो धौम्यो हयस्याशु वामं कर्णं न्यपीडयत् । ततो दुग्धस्य धारा तु निर्गता जनमेजय ! ।। विस्मिताः सकला लोकाः शोणितं नैव दृश्यते ।” (64.19–20)

It is said here that milk flowed from the horse, and no blood was visible—this astonished everyone. Later, when its head was severed, it became fiery and entered the sun. The fallen body emitted the fragrance of camphor. A contextual verse describes:

“उर्ध्व गतं तच्च शिरो न चाधः सूर्य प्रविष्टं किल वाजिरूपम्” (64.22)

This shows that the horse's head did not fall to the ground but ascended to the solar realm.

“शुद्धं ज्ञात्वा हृषीकेशस्तुतोदैनमुरःस्थले । बैल्वेन कण्टकेनापि भिन्नः कृष्णेन पावनः ।।” (23)

Here, the words śuddha and pāvana indicate an inner transformation of the horse, which explains the emergence of milk:

“निर्गता क्षीरधारा तु तुरगस्य कलेवरात् ।” (64.24) “एवं विधो न कस्यापि शुद्धं पूर्व तुरंगमः ।” (25)

From the horse's body, a great radiance emerged and entered Keśava:

“तेषां संवदतामेवं तुरंगमकलेवरात् । निर्गतं सुमहत्तेजः प्रविष्टं केशवानने ।।” (27)

Afterward, the body that fell to the ground became like camphor:

“पश्चाच्छरीरं पतितं भूत्वा कर्पूरमेव तत् ।”

विभूतिरिव रुद्रस्य च्युता गात्रादशोभत ।। धौम्यस्तदेव कर्पूरं सुवेणैव जुहाव ह ।।” (64.28) It is said that due to the horse's ritual transformation, its fallen body became fragrant like camphor and white like Rudra's sacred ash (vibhūti). This astonished everyone, and Dhaumya offered that camphor in the fire using Suveṇa.

“विस्मिता मुनयस्ते तु कर्पूरं वीक्ष्य तेऽभवन् । कर्पूरं जुहुवुस्ते तु होमकुण्डे तु तत्क्षणात् ।।” (64.29) The sages were amazed upon seeing the camphor and immediately offered it into the sacrificial fire.

“घनसारं जुहावाग्नौ देवतानां पुरस्तदा ।” (37) They also offered ghanasāra (a fragrant resin) into the fire before the deities.

“मोचिताः पशवः सर्वे ये च यूपे नियन्त्रिताः ।” (64.54) All the animals that had been tied to the sacrificial posts were released—there was no mention of their slaughter.

The passage then elaborates on the meticulous preparation of ritual substances in ancient times. Specific grasses were sown in designated fields under certain constellations using particular mantras, watered with prescribed waters, fertilized appropriately, harvested at auspicious moments, and ritually sanctified before being fed to the horse. The horse's lifestyle was carefully regulated to ensure purity and transformation.

Just as skilled physicians today can rejuvenate the elderly, the yājñika ṛṣis (ritual sages) possessed extraordinary powers. The Mahābhārata even describes yogic practices where sages could extract their intestines and purify their bodies by expelling water directly through the rectum—similar to how people cleanse nasal passages by drawing water in through the nose and expelling it through the mouth, preventing ailments like pratiśyāya (cold or sinus issues).

Mental and spiritual powers were believed to elevate the horse in such rituals, so there was no room for astonishment. Moreover, the Aśvamedha Yagya was performed by Chakravartin kings, not only for other fruits but also with the intent of establishing their empire and producing a Chakravartin son. As stated in the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa:

"सुतार्थ वाजिमेधेन किमर्थ न यजाम्यहम् ।।" (118.2)

Although the Putreṣṭi Yagya was a separate ritual, the Aśvamedha often included the aim of producing a royal heir. As the Rāmāyaṇa says:

"तुरगश्व विमुच्यताम् । सर्वथा प्राप्स्यसे पुत्रान् ॥" (1.8.12)

Furthermore, the Aśvamedha Yagya, through its prescribed actions, also encompassed the secrets of Vājīkaraṇa (virility enhancement) for the king. As found in the Yajurveda:

"उत्सक्थ्या अवगुदं धेहि समञ्जि चारया वृषन् । यः स्त्रीणां जीवभोजनः ।।" (Yajurveda 23.21)

In this ritual act, where Gaṇapati in the form of Prajāpati is invoked through the horse, it is also possible that the invocation is directed toward a man symbolically represented as a horse. Opponents often mock Mahīdhara's commentary on this mantra, but in the context of Kāmaśāstra, there is no obscenity. The term aśva also refers to a man who uses Vājīkaraṇa practices.

In the ritual description where the queen resides with the horse, critics often ridicule it due to lack of understanding, but in truth, it contains scientific symbolism. For the purification of the queen's womb—so that it may bear a Chakravartin son—a substance prepared from the separated parts of the specially consecrated Aśvamedha horse is applied to her body. As stated:

"प्रजननं प्रजनने सन्निधाय उपविशन्ति"

If this passage exists in a text, it is not about indulgence but about ritual medicine. ? This act is meant to remove the woman's infertility and purify her womb so that it becomes capable of bearing offspring.

When the limbs of the consecrated horse are offered into the fire, they become infused with mantric power and fragrance. These subtle essences, when inhaled by the king and queen, enter the body and help remove defects in śukra (semen) and yoni (womb). This is reflected in the Mahābhārata:

"तं वपाधूमगन्धं तु धर्मराजः सहानुजैः । उपाजिघ्रद् यथाशास्त्रं सर्वपापापहं तदा ॥" (Aśvamedha Parva 89.4) (The term pāpa here may symbolically refer to uterine or reproductive disorders.)

"शिष्टान्यंगानि यान्यासन् तस्याश्वस्य नराधिपः । तान्यग्नौ जुहुवुर्धाराः समस्ताः षोडशर्विजः ॥" (Aśvamedha Parva 89.5–6)

Similarly, the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa states:

"पतत्रिणस्तस्य वपामुद्धृत्य नियतेन्द्रियः । ऋत्विक् परमसम्पन्नः श्रपयामास शास्त्रतः ॥ धूमगन्धं वपायास्तु जिघ्रति स्म नराधिपः । यथाकालं यथान्यायं निर्णदन् पापमात्मनः ॥ हयस्य यानि चांगानि तानि सर्वाणि ब्राह्मणाः । अग्नौ प्रास्यन्ति विधिवत्समस्ताः षोडशर्विजः ॥" (Rāmāyaṇa 1.14.36–38)

Even the mantras that are sometimes labeled as "obscene" in the Vedas serve a ritual and symbolic purpose here. Through the retas (semen) of the horse, which has been ritually transformed into a symbolic husband, the queen becomes pregnant.

The queen could thereby conceive a Chakravartin son. Such mysteries, as explained by Mahīdhara, cannot be dismissed as obscene or rejected due to discomfort with the cutting of animal parts. Just as students of Āyurveda or medicine gain knowledge by dissecting animals, similarly, understanding the anatomy of male and female reproductive organs without shame or mockery is essential for developing specialized treatments.

Treatments for cleansing, tightening, or widening the yoni are known through Ratiśāstra, and those who ridicule such subjects remain ignorant of them. Likewise, in Vedic contexts, one must not mock or distort meanings but instead pursue serious inquiry into these mysteries—lest Vedic medical systems be lost. Suppressing perceived obscenity by altering meanings only erases ancient science.

This ritual also includes a Vedic yogic practice of Vājīkaraṇa, so one must set aside notions of vulgarity and delve into its inner significance. Alongside this, the king's universal sovereignty remained intact—this is mentioned contextually.

In Kaliyuga, the traditional means for Aśvamedha cannot be replicated. Hence, the well-known verse declares:

"अश्वालम्भं गवालम्भं संन्यासं पलपैतृकम् । देवराच्च सुतोत्पत्तिं कलौ पञ्च विवर्जयेत् ।।"

This verse prohibits Aśvamedha Yagya in Kaliyuga. While Aśvamedha involved the horse due to its role in Vājīkaraṇa, Gomedha does not involve such elements. Moreover, because the cow is aghnyā, its role is fulfilled by a rice-formed cow.

Thus, even the vṛṣabha mentioned in commentaries by Sāyaṇācārya and others should be understood as rice-formed, not a living animal subjected to violence. Recognizing the potential harms of such symbolic animal yagyas in Kaliyuga, farsighted sages...

"महाप्रस्थानगमनं गोमेधं च मखं तथा । इमान् धर्मान् कलियुगे वर्ज्यानाहुर्मनीषिणः ।।" declares that these rituals (Gomedha , Ashwamedha) are to be avoided in the current age due to their incompatibility with Kali Yuga's ethical and spiritual climate.

The passage also notes that even symbolic representations—like sugar-crafted cow figurines—are avoided by devout individuals out of reverence for the cow's sacred status. Regarding narmedha, while it involved tying Brahmins and other humans to sacrificial posts, they were not killed but symbolically offered and then released—just as Śunaḥśepa was freed after being bound. This underscores that actual human sacrifice was not practiced in such rites, except in battle-like contexts, where narmedha took on a more literal form.

प्रश्नपक्ष

'वेद जो कि गायको अघ्न्या बतलाता है, यह कथन यज्ञकर्मसे बाहरके लिये है या सब स्थानके लिये? यदि यज्ञसे बाहर गायको अघ्न्या कहा है; तो बिना यज्ञके तो सब पशुओंको अवध्य माना गया है 'मा हिंस्यात् सर्वा भूतानि' । यदि गाय यज्ञमें अवध्य है, तो 'गोमेध' भी वैदिकयज्ञ है, उसमें कैसी व्यवस्था मानी जाय? अश्वमेधमें अश्वको मारा जाता था; इस प्रकार नरमेधमें मनुष्य को मारा जाता होगा; वैसे ही गोमेधमें गायको भी । तब कैसे कहा जा सकता है कि प्राचीन भारतमें गोवध नहीं होता था?"

उत्तरपक्ष

यद्यपि 'मा हिंस्यात् सर्वा भूतानि' से बिना यज्ञके सब पशु भी अवध्य हैं; तथापि अन्य पशुओंको 'अघ्न्य' इस विशेष नामसे न कहकर एकमात्र गायका नाम 'अघ्न्या' कहना उसकी विशेषता बतलाता है कि अन्य पशु साधारणतया अवध्य हैं; पर गाय तो मनसा, वाचा तथा कर्मणा भी अवध्य है ।

'गोमेध' अवश्य एक वैदिकयज्ञ है, अश्वमेध भी । पर 'गोमेध'में जीवित गायको मारकर उसका हवन नहीं किया जाता । यदि कहा जाय कि अश्वमेधकी भाँति 'गोमेध' शब्द भी बराबर है, तो अश्वकी भाँति गायकी भी हिंसा होनी चाहिये, यह बात ठीक नहीं । फिर तो 'सर्वमेध' यज्ञमें क्या सब लोगोंकी हिंसा कर दी जायगी? पुत्रमेधमें क्या यज्ञके बाल-बच्चोंको मार डाला जायगा? कभी नहीं; तो 'गोमेध'में भी गायके मारनेका अर्थ नहीं है । उसका कारण यह है कि 'मा हिंस्यात् सर्वा भूतानि' इससे प्राणिमात्रके अहिंस्य होनेपर भी 'अग्नीषोमीयं पशुमालभेत्' इस विशेष वचनसे यज्ञमें पशु हुत किया जा सकता था, इस प्रकार

पशुओंमें गायके हननकी भी प्रसक्ति प्राप्त होनेपर उसे 'अघ्न्या'; यह पूर्वोक्त विशेष वैदिक-शब्द बना देता था, जैसा कि हम पहले इस विषयमें स्पष्ट कर चुके हैं । महाभारत भी यही बात कहता है -

> अघ्न्या इति गवां नाम क एता हन्तुमर्हति ।
> महच्चकाराकुशलं वृषं गां वाऽऽलभेत्तु यः ॥
> (म.भा. मोक्षधर्म. २६२।४७)

फिर यज्ञकी पूर्ति कैसे हो? इसकेलिये व्रीहियों-चावलोंका पशु बनाया जाता है, इस पर भी महाभारतकी साक्षी है-

> श्रूयते हि पुराकल्पे नृणां व्रीहिमयः पशुः ।
> येनायजन्त यज्वानः पुण्यलोकपरायणाः ॥
> (महा. अनु. ११५।५६)

इसलिये महाभारतमें प्रेरणाकी गयी है कि-

> विधिहीनेन यज्ञेन धर्मध्वंसो महान् भवेत् ।
> यज बीजैः महाप्राज्ञ! त्रिवर्गपरमो विधिः ॥
> (महा. आश्वमेधिक. ९१।१९)

यहाँ धान्यके बीजोंके हवनसे धर्मकी प्राप्ति बतायी गयी है । अतः स्पष्ट है कि यज्ञोंमें व्रीहि, धान, अन्नका पशु बनाया जाता था । इसलिये गोपथब्राह्मणमें भी आया है- 'पशवो वै धानाः'(११४।६) । शतपथ (१।२।३।७०)में भी इस सम्बन्धमें वर्णन आया है । व्रीहिधेनुका वर्णन तो हम दिखला चुके, अनुशासनपर्व (७१।४०,७२।३७)में तिलधेनुका वर्णन आया है, इसप्रकार घृतधेनु (७१।३९), जलधेनु (७१।४१), मधुधेनु, गुड़धेनु, सुवर्णधेनु, आदिका भी वर्णन अथवा उनका दान आता है । हरदत्तपद्धतिमें 'शर्कराधेनु (२।४६), गुडधेनु (२।४८) रत्नधेनु (२।५८) आदिका वर्णन भी आता है । दधिधेनु (४।९) दुग्धधेनु (४।८),

मधुधेनु (४।३०) गुडधेनु (४।३१) रौप्यधेनु (५।२७) का भी । कहीं पिष्टपशु, घृतपशु आदिका वर्णन भी आता है । 'गोघृत' शब्दमें गोघृत शब्द मानकर 'विनाऽपि प्रत्ययं पूर्वोत्तरपदयोर्लोपः' इस वार्तिकसे घृतका लोप होकर भी गोशब्द बचता है; तो उसी गोघृतके आटेका पशु बनाकर उसका होम किया जाता है, वही पिष्टपशु बन जाता है ।

तब गोमेधमें भी व्रीहिनिर्मित गायका ही होम होता है, जीवित गायको मारकर नहीं होमा जाता था । नहीं तो वह 'अघ्न्या' कैसे कही जाय? यह भी यद्यपि एक हिंसा ही है, पर यज्ञमें यह हिंसा अभ्यनुज्ञात की गयी है । इसकी स्पष्टता अथर्ववेदके दशमकाण्डके नवमसूक्तमें है । वहाँ शतौदना गौका यज्ञ बताया गया है । शतौदनाका अर्थ है सौ ओदनों या बहुत (शत शब्द अनेक अर्थवाची भी है) ओदनोंसे बनी गाय । उसीकेलिये वहाँ उसका शान्त करना (मारना) पाक, स्वर्गगमन, अस्थि, लोहित आदि शब्द उपचारसे आये हैं, जैसे कि-

ये त्वा देवि! शमितारः पक्तारो ये च ते जनाः ।
ते त्वा सर्वे गोप्स्यन्ति मा एभ्यो भैषीः शतौदने ॥ (अथर्व. १०।९।७)

फलतः गोमेधमें जीवित गायका मारना नहीं, किन्तु यहाँ पिष्ट-पशुका ही होम है । यह प्राचीन भारतमें गोवधका प्रमाण नहीं । इस प्रकार जहाँ हवनीय पशुके अंगोंका ऋत्विजोंकेलिये विभाग कहा गया हो, वहाँ भी व्रीहिनिर्मित उस पशुका विभाग समझना चाहिये, जीवित पशुका नहीं । अथवा वहाँ यह भी जानना चाहिये कि सोमयाग आदिमें यजमानको अपने अंगोंका ऋत्विजोंको देना कहा है । जैसे कि 'ब्रह्मणे मनो दद्यात्, अध्वर्यवे प्राणं, होतृभ्यः श्रोत्रम् ॥' (आप. श्रौत. १३।६।६) इत्यादि । तब क्या यजमान अपने इन अंगोंको काटकर ऋत्विजोंको देगा? यदि नहीं; किन्तु वहाँ वैसी भावना की जाती है, वैसे ही यहाँ भी ऋत्विजोंको उन अंगोंके देनेकी भावनामात्र है । यहाँ प्रतिपक्षी नहीं सोच सकते कि गायकेलिये 'अघ्न्या' की घोषणा करनेवाले वेद उसके अंगोंको कैसे कटवायें? 'अन्नं हि गौः' (शत. ४।३।४।२५) 'अन्नं वै वेदः', 'गावस्तण्डुलाः' (अथर्व. ११।३।५) इन प्रमाणोंके अनुसार अन्न-चावल आदिका हवन भी 'गोमेध' हो जाता है ।

हाँ, अश्वमेध अवश्य होता था, यह तो बहुत ही प्रसिद्ध है, वह भी किसी चक्रवर्तीके राज्यप्रतिष्ठापनार्थ उसके चक्रवर्ती पुत्र उत्पन्न करनेकेलिये होता था । उसमें भी एक विशेषता ही होती थी । उसमें एक घोड़ा ढूँढ़ा जाता था, जिसका मिलना भी बड़ा कठिन होता था, यह महाभारतमें स्पष्ट है । जैमिनीयाश्वमेधमें भी ऐसे विशेष घोड़ेका वर्णन है, जो राजा युवनाश्वके पास था, जिसकी हजारों रक्षक रक्षा किया करते थे । इसीसे उस अश्वकी विशेषता व्यक्त हो रही है । उसकी परीक्षा की जाती थी (महा.आश्वमे.७२।५) । इसका भाव यह है कि वह साधारण अश्व न होता था फिर उस घोड़ेका खिलाना-पिलाना इस प्रकारके ढंगसे होता था और उसमें सब कार्य मन्त्रोंद्वारा किये जाते थे कि उसका कायाकल्प होकर उसमें साधारणता हटकर दिव्यता आ जाती थी, उसमें रक्त आदि सब धातुओंका परिवर्तन होकर दुर्गन्ध आदि हट जाते थे । वह सर्वांश अंशमें होकर 'वपा' रूपमें हो जाता था । महाभारतमें लिखा है-

उपाजिघ्रद् यथाशास्त्रं सर्वपापापहं तदा ॥
(महा. आश्व. ८९।४)

इस पद्यमें उसकी वपाके धुएँका सूँघना कहा है । साधारण घोड़ेकी चर्बी या अंग आदि अग्निमें डालनेपर इतनी दुर्गन्ध होती है कि वहाँ बैठा भी नहीं जा सकता, पर उस अश्वमेधके अश्वकी वैधानिक-प्रक्रियासे इस प्रकार कायापलट हो जाती थी, जिससे उसके होममें सुगन्ध हो जाती थी । तैत्तिरीय (ऋ.सं.)के 'ये वाजिनं परिपश्यन्ति पक्वं य ईमाहुः सुरभिर्निर्हरेति' (१।१६२।१२) यहाँ उस अश्वमेधके अग्निपरिपक्व अश्वको 'सुरभि' (शोभनगन्धवाला) इसी कायाकल्पके

कारण सांकेतिक किया गया है। जैमिनीयाश्वमेधमें उस अश्वकी परीक्षाके लिये धौम्य मुनिने उसका बायाँ कान निचोड़ा, तो उससे दूधकी धार निकली-

ततो धौम्यो ह्ययमाशु वामं कर्णं न्यपीडयत् ।
ततो दुग्धस्य धारा तु निर्गता जनमेजय! ॥
विस्मिताः सकला लोकाः शोणितं नैव दृश्यते ।(६४।१९-२०)

यहाँ कहा है कि उस घोड़ेमें से दूध तो निकला, रक्त बिलकुल दिखायी नहीं देता था, यह देखकर लोगोंको बड़ा आश्चर्य होता था। फिर उसका सिर काटनेपर बहिर्गमन होकर वह सूर्यमें प्रविष्ट हो गया, उसके शेष शरीरमें कर्पूरकी गन्ध आने लगी। इस विषयमें वहाँके प्रासंगिक पद्य हम उद्धृत करते हैं- 'ऊर्ध्वं गतं तस्य शिरो न चाधः सूर्यं प्रविष्टं किल वाजिकस्य' (६४।२२) यहाँ उस घोड़ेके सिरका नीचे भूमिपर गिरना न होकर सूर्यलोकमें उसका प्रवेश दिखलाया है।

शुद्धं ज्ञात्वा हृषीकेशप्रसादेनासुरःखलै ।
दैत्येन कण्टकेनापि भिन्नः कृष्णेन पावनः ॥(२३)

यहाँ उस घोड़ेकी 'शुद्ध' तथा 'पावन' शब्दसे भीतरी कायापलट बतायी जा रही है, उसीके परिणाममें उससे दूधकी धारा निकलना कहा है कि-

निर्गता क्षीरधारा तु तुरगस्य कलेवरात् ।(६४।२४)
एवं विधो न कस्यापि शुद्धं पूर्वं तुरंगमः ।(२५)

यहाँपर उस अश्वकी भीतरी-बाहरी शुद्धि पूर्वोक्त कारणवश बतायी गयी है।

तेषां संपश्यतामेवं तुरंगमकलेवरात् ।
निर्गतं सुमहत्तेजः प्रविष्टं केशवानने ॥(२७)

यहाँ भी पूर्वोक्त निमित्तसे घोड़ेसे एक विशेष तेजका निकलना कहा है।

पश्चाच्छरीरं पतितं भूत्वा कर्पूरमेव तत् ।

विभूतिरिव रुद्रस्य च्युता गात्रात्तथोज्ज्वल ॥
धौम्यस्तदेव कर्पूरं स्रुवेणैव जुहाव ह ॥(६४।२८)

यहाँ उस घोड़ेका विशेष विधानसे कायाकल्पताके कारण शिरोपर कर्पूर जैसा सुगन्धित और रुद्रकी विभूति जैसा श्वेत होना कहा है। इससे सभी हैरान हो गये और उसी कर्पूरका हवन किया गया। जैसे कि-

विस्मिता मुनयस्ते तु कर्पूरं वीक्ष्य तेऽभवन् ।
कर्पूरं जुहुवुस्ते तु होमकुण्डे तु तत्क्षणात् ॥(६४।२९)
धनसारं जुहावाग्नौ देवतानां पुरस्तदा ।(३७)

जो अन्य पशु इस अवसरपर बाँधे जाते हैं, उनका भी वहाँ मारना नहीं कहा, किन्तु छोड़ देना कहा गया। जैसे कि-

मोचिताः पशवः सर्वे ये च यूपे नियन्त्रिताः ।(६४।५४)

प्राचीनकालमें हवनीय सभी पदार्थोंका संस्कार करके उनमें सूक्ष्म शक्तियाँ उत्पन्न की जाती थीं। हवनीय अश्वको खिलानेके योग्य अमुक प्रकारका घास, अमुक प्रकारके खेतमें, अमुक नक्षत्रमें, अमुक मन्त्रोंसे बोया जाता था; अमुक प्रकारके जलसे सींचा जाता था; उसमें अमुक प्रकारका खाद दिया जाता था। अमुक मुहूर्तमें उसे तोड़ा जाता था; अमुक मन्त्रोंसे उसका संस्कार करके अमुक समयमें घोड़ेको खिलाया जाता था, उसकी अमुक प्रकारकी रहन-सहन सब बातें पूरी करनी होती थीं। जिस प्रकार आजके योग्य वैद्य एक वृद्धका भी कायाकल्प कर देते हैं, वैसे यहाँपर भी अनुमान कर लेना चाहिये और उन याज्ञिक ऋषियोंमें शक्ति भी विशेष होती थी। यह महाभारतमें स्पष्ट है।

जैसे वे लोग इस प्रकारकी योगक्रियाएँ करते थे कि वे अपनी आँतड़ियोंको भी बाहर निकाल लिया करते थे, उस समय पीया हुआ पानी सीधा गुदाद्वारसे निकलकर शरीरको शुद्ध कर दिया करता था। जैसे लोग नाकसे पानी लेकर मुखसे निकाल देते हैं; इससे उस अंगकी शुद्धि हो जानेसे फिर प्रतिश्याय आदि रोग नहीं

हो पाते । इस प्रकार घोड़े आदिमें मानसिक-शक्तिसे विशेषता कर दी जाती है । अत: यहाँ आश्चर्यका कोई अवकाश नहीं ।

इसके अतिरिक्त अश्वमेध-यज्ञ चक्रवर्ती राजालोग किया करते थे; उसमें अन्य फलोंके अतिरिक्त अपने साम्राज्यका प्रतिष्ठापन तन्मूलक चक्रवर्ती पुत्र उत्पन्न होनेका उद्देश्य भी प्राय: रहता था । जैसाकि वाल्मीकिरामायणमें-

सुतार्थं वाजिमेधेन किमर्थं न यजाम्यहम् ॥(१।८।२)

भी कहा है । यद्यपि यह पुत्रेष्टियज्ञ भिन्न भी होता था, तथापि राजाओंके चक्रवर्ती पुत्र उत्पन्न करनेकेलिये अश्वमेधका ही अंग बनता था । जैसा कि रामायणमें कहा है-

तुरगस्य विमुक्तस्य । सर्वथा प्राप्स्यसे पुत्रान् ॥(१।८।१२)

पुन: अश्वमेधयज्ञ सन्तोषजनक कार्योंके व्याजसे राजाओंकेलिये वाजीकरणके रहस्यको भी सम्भृत करता है ।

उत्सक्थ्या अवगुदं धेहि समञ्जिं चारया वृषन् ।
य: स्त्रीणां जीवभोजन: ॥(यजु. २३।२१)

यहाँ उक्त क्रियायें जहाँ गणपति प्रजापतिरूप अश्वसे प्रार्थना है, वहाँ अश्वरूप पुरुषसे कहना भी सम्भव हो सकता है । प्रतिपक्षी लोग इस मन्त्रके महीधरभाष्य पर खूब हँसी उड़ाया करते हैं, पर कामशास्त्रके विषयमें कोई अश्लीलता नहीं रह जाती । 'अश्व' वाजीकरणके प्रयोग करनेवाले पुरुषका नाम भी होता है । इस कर्मकाण्डमें जो कि अश्वके साथ रानीके सहनिवासका वर्णन आता है, प्रतिपक्षी लोग इसमें भी ज्ञान न होनेसे इस पर हँसी उड़ाया करते हैं, वस्तुत: इसमें वैज्ञानिक रहस्य भी है । रानीके गर्भाशयके शोधनार्थ- जिसमें चक्रवर्ती पुत्रका गर्भ रह सके, अश्वमेधके उस विशिष्ट घोड़ेके पृथक्कृत अंगोसे तैयार किये हुए पदार्थको रानी अपने अंगमें डालती है; 'प्रजननं प्रजनने सन्निधाय प्रविशन्ति' ।

यदि यह पाठ ठीक है, तो यहाँ विलास नहीं, किन्तु यह चिकित्सा है । प्रजननेन्द्रियमें प्रजननेन्द्रियका संयोगमात्र है, विलास नहीं, क्योंकि मृतकके साथ विलास कैसा? इससे स्त्रीका वन्ध्यात्वदोष दूर हो जाता है । इससे उसका सन्तान-बाधक दोष हटकर गर्भाशय सुसंस्कृत हो जाता है । फिर उस अश्वके अंगोंके हवन करनेसे जो मान्त्रिक शक्तिसे अद्भुत शक्तिवाले तथा सुगन्धित हो जाते हैं- वही अभिमन्त्रित अग्निमें हुत, इसीलिये ही सूक्ष्मीभूत अंगोंकी गन्ध राजा-रानीके सूँघनेसे भीतर प्राप्त होकर शुक्र और योनिके दोषोंको दूर कर देती है । यही बातें महाभारतमें-

तं वपाधूमगन्धं तु धर्मराज: सहानुजै: ।
उपाजिघ्रद् यथाशास्त्रं सर्वपापापहं तदा ॥

(यहाँ पापका भाव गर्भाशयादिगत दोष भी इष्ट हो सकते हैं)

शिष्टान्यंगानि यान्यासन् तस्याश्वस्य नराधिप: ।
तान्यग्नौ जुहुवुर्धीरा: समस्ता: षोडशर्त्विज: ॥

(आश्व. ८९।४-५।६)

यही वाल्मीकि-रामायणमें भी कहा है-

'पतत्रिणस्तस्य वपामुद्धृत्य नियतेन्द्रिय: ।
ऋत्विक् परमसम्पन्न: श्रपयामास शास्त्रत: ॥
धूमगन्धं वपायास्तु जिघ्रति स्म नराधिप: ।
यथाकालं यथान्यायं निर्णुदन् पापमात्मन: ॥
हयस्य यानि चांगानि तानि सर्वाणि ब्राह्मणा: ।
अग्नौ प्रास्यन्ति विधिवत्समस्ता: षोडशर्त्विज: ॥

उस समय वहाँ वेदके अश्लील कहे जाने वाले मन्त्रोंके वचन भी इसमें कुछ सहायक हो जाते हैं । फिर वाजीकृत किये हुए पतिरूप अश्वके देखने यह गर्भिणी

होकर चक्रवर्ती पुत्रको उत्पन्न कर सकती है। एतदादिक रहस्य महीधरके अर्थमें अश्लीलता बतलाकर तथा पशुके अंगोंके काटनेसे घृणा करनेसे तथा उनसे औषध मैदानमें नहीं मिलते। जैसे कि आयुर्वेद या डाक्टरी पढ़नेवालोंको, पशुको मारकर तथा चीर-फाड़ कर अंगोंको पृथक्कृत करके आयुर्वेदके रहस्योंका ज्ञान होता है, इस प्रकार स्त्री-पुरुषके गुप्त अंगोंका भी बिना लज्जा अथवा उपहासके ज्ञान करनेसे ही विशेष चिकित्साकी पद्धतियाँ जानी जाती हैं। योनिको शुद्ध करनेवाले, लंग या जोड़ी करनेवाले उपचारोंका भी [illegible] ज्ञान करनेसे ही तत्सम्बन्धी रोगोंको दूर करनेका ढंग आता है, उस विषयमें हँसी आदि करते रहनेवाला तत्सम्बन्धी विषयमें कोराका कोरा रह जाता है; वैसे इस वैदिक विषयमें भी उपहास न करके अर्थोंको न बदलकर इस रहस्यका गम्भीर अनुसन्धान करना चाहिये, जिससे वैदिक चिकित्सा पद्धतियाँ भी लुप्त न हो जायँ। अर्थोंके बदलनेसे अश्लीलताको कहाँ तक दबाया जा सकेगा? इससे प्राचीन विज्ञान लुप्त हो जायँगे। यह कर्मोंके साथ एक वाजीकरणका वैदिकयोग भी है; अतः यहाँ भी अश्लीलताका विचार छोड़कर ही अन्तस्तलमें प्रवेश करनेकी आवश्यकता है। इसीके साथ वहाँ उस राजाका स्वयं भी सार्वभौमिक चक्रवर्तित्व अक्षत होता था। यह बात प्रकरणवश बतला दी गयी है। कलियुगमें अश्वमेधके वैसे साधन नहीं बन सकते, इसलिये—

अश्वालम्भं गवालम्भं संन्यासं पलपैतृकम्।
देवराच्च सुतोत्पत्तिं कलौ पञ्च विवर्जयेत्॥

इस प्रसिद्ध पद्यसे अश्वमेधयज्ञका निषेध किया गया है। वाजीकरणमें अश्वकी आवश्यकता होनेसे अश्वमेध यज्ञ भी था; पर गोमेधमें वहाँ कोई ऐसी बात नहीं। इसके अतिरिक्त उसके अघ्न्या होनेसे उसकी पूर्ति व्रीहिनिर्मित गायसे कर दी जाती है। इस प्रकार सायणाचार्य आदिके भाष्यमें वर्णित वृषभ भी व्रीहिनिर्मित समझना चाहिये; हिंसाप्राप्त जीवित पशु नहीं। फिर उस व्रीहिमय गो-वृषभ आदि पशुओंके यज्ञमें भी कलियुगमें कई हानियाँ जानकर दूरदर्शी मुनियों द्वारा—

महाप्रस्थानगमनं गोमेधं च मखं तथा।
इमान् धर्मान् कलियुगे वर्ज्यानाहुर्मनीषिणः॥

इत्यादि वचनोंसे इन्हें कलिवर्जित कर दिया गया है। इसीसे आज भी श्रद्धालु सज्जन खाँड़का बना हुआ गायका खिलौना भी नहीं खाते। नरमेधमें ब्राह्मणादि मनुष्योंको यूपोंमें बाँधा अवश्य जाता है, ब्रह्म आदि देवताओंके आगे उन्हें अर्पण करके छोड़ दिया जाता है। शुनःशेपको भी तो पीछे मुक्त कर दिया था, अतः इसमें मनुष्यकी हिंसाकी कोई बात नहीं। हाँ संग्रामरूप यज्ञमें 'नरमेध' स्पष्ट है।

Allegations-

Sacrificial slaughter of cows is also mentioned in Mahabharata, Shalya Parv, Section 41. A king called Rantidev is mentioned in the Vana Parv, section 207 as well as section 199, as follows

7 राज्ञो महानसे पूर्वं रन्तिदेवस्य वै दविज

दवे सहस्रे तु वध्येते पशूनाम अन्वहं तदा

8 समांसं ददतो हय अन्नं रन्तिदेवस्य नित्यशः

अतुला कीर्तिर अभवन नृपस्य दविजसत्तम

“And in days of yore, O Brahmana, two thousand animals used to be killed every day in the kitchen of king Rantideva; and in the same manner two thousand cows were killed every day; and, O best of regenerate beings, king Rantideva acquired unrivalled reputation by distributing food with meat every day.”

Refutation-

Explanation by Acharya Gangadhar Pathal Maithil on Ranti Deva Prakaran in Mahabharta Vana Parva Adhaya 207 in his book Gau Janmantara

In the story of Rantideva, the word go refers to animals in general, not specifically to cows. This is supported by lirukta and other texts already cited. Readers may also refer to the narrative itself—this same story appears again in the Droṇa Parva, where the verse reads:

"Upasthitāś ca paśavaḥ svayaṁ yaṁ śaṁsitavratam ı Bahavaḥ svargamicchanto vidhivat satrayājinam ıı (67.4)"

Here, the word paśu is used, clearly indicating that the sto involves Pashu Alabhan , not cow slaughter. Since cows are considered aghnyā, their mention in this context would be inappropriate. In fact, even before the verse cited by the opposing view, the word paśu appears:

"Rājño mahānase pūrva Rantidevasya vai dvija ı Dve sahasre tu vadhyete paśūnām anvahaṁ sadā ıı (Vana 208.8)"

And further:

"Cāturmāsye ca paśavo vadhyanta iti nityaśaḥ ı (10)"

This repeated use of paśu in both earlier and later verses, along with the Droṇa Parva reference, confirms that go here is a general term for animals, not specifically cows—thus invalidating the opposing argument.

Alternatively, if one insists on interpreting go as "cow," then the line:

"Rantidevasya mahānase dvisahasraṁ gāvo vadhyante sma" would mean that two thousand cows were tied daily for guest hospitality. The tying was for milking purposes. That milk was served to guests and used to prepare samāṁsa anna, meaning nutritious, muscular food (samāṁsaṁ dadato hy annam), such as kheer, māvā, rabṛī, khurchan, etc.—this is the intended meaning here.

In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa:

"Etadu ha vai paramam annādyaṁ yan māṁsam" (11.7.1.3)

Here, māṁsa is interpreted as paramānna (kheer).

"Paramānnaṁ tu pāyasaṁ" (Amara 2.7.24)

This is supported by the Droṇa Parva version of Rantideva's story:

"Gṛhān abhyāgatān viprān atithīn pariveṣakāḥ ı Pakvāpakvaṁ divārātraṁ varānnam amṛtopamam ıı (67.2)"

The word varānna is associated with paramānna, indicating kheer, rabṛī, cream, māvā, etc. That's why Rantideva's kitchen required many cows to be tied. The interpretation of māṁsa here is not inappropriate—it is both appropriate and well-known. In fact, strong substances are often referred to as māṁsa. In Ayurvedic texts:

"Cūta phale 'aparipakve kesara māṁsa asthi majjānaḥ..."

In Ayurvedic texts, "na pṛthag dṛśyante" (Suśruta. Śārīra. 3a) indicates that māṁsa refers to the pulp of a fruit, asthi to the seed (kernel), and majjā to the fibrous strands. In "svādu śītaṁ guru snigdhaṁ māṁsaṁ mārutapittacit" (Suśruta 46.12), the pulp of the mātuluṅga fruit is referred to as māṁsa. Similarly, "samāṁsaṁ madhuraṁ proktam" from Madanapālanighaṇṭu describes the edible upper portion of the ber fruit as māṁsa.

In "bhallātakāsthyagnisamaṁ tvaṅ māṁsaṁ svādu śītalam" (Caraka Sūtra. 27.165), the kernel of bhallātaka is called asthi, its outer peel tvac, and its pulp māṁsa. Likewise, "kharjūramāṁsānyatha nārikelam" (Caraka. Cikitsā. 20.27) refers to the edible upper part of dates as māṁsa. Thus, even the nutritious portion of milk—like cream, rabṛī, etc.—can be denoted by the word māṁsa.

One should not assume that a text as accessible as the Mahābhārata would avoid such complex terminology. The Mahābhārata itself attests to this:

"aṣṭau ślokasahasrāṇi aṣṭau ślokaśatāni ca । ahaṁ vedmi śuko vetti saṁjayo vetti vā na vā ॥ 1.1.81"

Here, Vyāsa declares that 8,800 verses of the Mahābhārata are coded or esoteric, known only to himself and Śukadeva, and perhaps not even fully to Sañjaya. This passage affirms the presence of layered meanings.

An example of such a coded verse is presented:

"gokarṇā sumukhīkṛtena iṣuṇā goputrasampreṣitā gośabdātmajabhūṣaṇaṁ suvihitaṁ suvyaktago' suprabham । dṛṣṭvā gogatakaṁ jahāra mukuṭaṁ gośabdagopūri vai gokarṇāsanamardanaśca na yayāvaprāpya mṛtyorvaśam ।।" (Karṇa. 90.42)

In this verse, the word go appears seven times, each with a different meaning, showcasing the intricate and layered nature of the Mahābhārata's language—even in a text considered accessible.

In this coded verse, the word go does not refer to a cow; thus, in the story of Rantideva, the term go is symbolic. It denotes either animal in general or cow's milk, but not cow slaughter.

The reason for this interpretation is that if Rantideva had served meat to his guests, he would have consumed it himself. This is because consuming the remnants of a sacrifice is customary—whether it's from a devayajña, pitṛyajña, or atithiyajña. However, the Mahābhārata clearly states that Rantideva did not eat meat:

"Raivate Rantidevena… etaiś cānyaiś ca rājendra! purā māṁsaṁ na bhakṣitam ।।" (Anu. Parva. 115.72–77)

So why force a meat-based interpretation? The correct meaning is one that aligns with the context and flow of the entire text. That's why in the Droṇa Parva it is said:

"Gṛhān abhyāgatān viprān atithīn pariveṣakāḥ । pakvāpakvaṁ divārātraṁ varānnam amṛtopamam ।।" (67.2)

Here, the guests are served varānna, paramānna—foods like khoya, rabṛī, etc.—which resemble nectar. These cannot come from cow slaughter, but from milking.

If slaughter were assumed, then:

"Ālabhyanta śataṁ gāvaḥ sahasrāṇi ca viṁśatiḥ ।" (Śā. 29.127)

This would imply the killing of 20 lakh cows (100 × 1000 × 20). Assuming one cow feeds 100 people, that would mean feeding 20 crore people—an impossible gathering at one place.

But if we assume the cows were tied for milking, there's no inconsistency. Milk, khoya, etc., yield in small quantities, and the Droṇa Parva supports this view.

In the verse "sahasraśaś ca sauvarṇān vṛṣabhān gośatānugān । adhyardhamāsam adadad brāhmaṇebhyaḥ śataṁ samāḥ ।। (67.10–11)", it is stated that Rantideva donated golden bulls and hundreds of cows to Brāhmaṇas for fifty years, which aligns with the injunction "mahokṣaṁ vā mahājaṁ vā śrotriyāyopakalpayet" (Yājñ. Ā. 5.109). This section, describing the royal generosity of sixteen kings, highlights the greatness of their donations—something that could not be achieved through animal slaughter.

If one interprets the word "vadhyete" in the speech of the hunter in the Vana Parva as killing rather than binding, then it would resemble the sentiment in "aghāsu hanyante gāvaḥ", where Śrī Sāyaṇācārya explains: "daṇḍais tāḍyante preraṇārtham"—meaning the cows are struck with sticks to make them move. This usage of "vadha" as beating is also seen in "ura āvadhiṣṭāḥ" (Kāṭh. 28.4), where uraḥ refers to beating the chest.

Thus, other references to go-ghna (cow-striking) in the context of hospitality have already been discussed. Even beating a cow is a form of violence, as the hunter describes, but it is ritually permitted for the sake of the guest, as clarified in "goghno'tithiḥ". The striking was meant to move the cow from its place to the guest's location, and using a stick for this was natural.

Similarly, in "ālabhyanta śataṁ gāvaḥ", the meaning is not killing. The claim by the opposing side that two thousand cows were slaughtered daily in Rantideva's kitchen is flawed. How could cows be slaughtered in a kitchen? If it were a slaughterhouse, the claim might hold some weight. But a kitchen is meant for cooking food, not killing animals. A slaughterhouse is never located inside a kitchen—it is kept outside the city.

Moreover, Rantideva's atithiyajña (sacrifice for guests) had an effect even on animals. Many animals would voluntarily approach Rantideva, believing that by helping feed his guests with milk-based foods, they would attain heaven in the afterlife.

This verse:

"Upasthitāś ca paśavaḥ svayaṁ yaṁ śaṁsitavratam । Bahavaḥ svargamicchanto vidhivat satrayājinam ।। (Mahā. Droṇa. 67.4, 12.29.122)" expresses that animals themselves approached the sacrificer who had undertaken a noble vow, desiring heaven through participation in the ritual. The word paśu here can refer to both female animals like cows and male animals like bulls, since bulls also contribute to milk production by enabling conception. Therefore, interpreting this as literal slaughter is not appropriate—after all, what animal would voluntarily go to its own death?

Opponents should calmly consider: "Brāhmaṇebhyaḥ śatāṁ samāḥ" (Mahā. 10.67.11) — Rantideva performed this act of generosity for a hundred continuous years. If he had truly slaughtered two thousand cows daily (Vana. 208.8), or twenty-one thousand (Droṇa. 67.16), or even two million cows (Śā. 29.127), and also donated thousands of cows daily, could he have sustained this for a century? Where would so many cows come from?

If Rantideva had truly fed cow or bull meat, he should have been denounced as a great sinner—yet his fame for virtue spread so widely that Kālidāsa metaphorically "broke his pen" in admiration in the Meghadūta.

This clearly shows that gau-vadha here means striking with a stick to guide the cow toward the guest, not slaughter. For divine beings like cows, vadha can mean gentle coercion or binding, as in the mantra "aghāsu hanyante gāvaḥ", where Śrī Sāyaṇācārya explains: "daṇḍais tāḍyante preraṇārtham" — they are struck with sticks to prompt movement.

In the Section titled "Atithiki Goughna Saṅjñā", we have already clarified that Pāṇini, in the rule "han hiṁsāgatyoh", assigns both meanings—violence and movement—to the root han. Thus, "hanyante–gamyante" implies that cows are driven or guided, not necessarily killed.

In Nighaṇṭu (2.14), han is listed among verbs of motion, but not among verbs of killing. Similarly, ālabh is not included in the killing category either. In the context of Rantideva, these very roots are used.

Now consider a reference from Nirukta: while explaining the word "Nighaṇṭu", it first derives from gam in "nigmā ime bhavanti" (1.1.3), and later uses han in "āhananād eva syuḥ" (1.1.16) as a synonym for gam. Commentators interpret han here as paṭhan (recitation).

The ancient grammarian Śrī Durgācārya writes: "hanteḥ pāṭhārthe vartamānasya anekārthatvād dhātūnām" — meaning, due to the multiple meanings of roots, han can also mean recitation. He even provides evidence: "prasiddhaś ca pāṭhārthe hanteḥ prayogaḥ; evaṁ hi vaktāro bhavanti—brāhmaṇe idam āhatam, sūtre idam āhatam iti."

This proves that han does not exclusively mean violence; it can have other meanings depending on context.

Therefore, in the Mahābhārata verse:

"Sāṅkṛte Rantidevasya yāṁ rātrim atithir vaset । ālabhyanta śataṁ gāvaḥ sahasrāṇy ekaviṁśatiḥ ॥ (7.67.16, 12.29.127)" the phrase "gāva ālabhyanta" should not be interpreted as "cows were slaughtered", as opponents claim. Instead, it means "so many cows were made available" (from urlabhaṣ prāptau) or "touched for donation", since during the donation ritual, the object must be physically touched. It may also refer to milking the cows.

To obtain milk, the cow is touched gently—its body is stroked, which calms it and helps release smooth milk. This is the subtle meaning behind the cow's ālambhana (touch). The following references support the interpretation of ālambh as "touch":

(क) In the Mahābhārata, Udyoga Parva: "ṛṣabhaṁ pṛṣṭha ālabhya brāhmaṇān abhivādya ca" (83.10) Here, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa touches the back of the bull—ālambhana clearly means "touch," not "strike."

(ख) In Manu Smṛti (5.87): "gām ālabhya viśuddhyati" Even a person rendered impure by contact with a corpse becomes purified by touching a cow—again, ālambh means "touch."

(ग) Similarly, in Manu Smṛti (2.173): "strīṇāṁ ca prekṣaṇālambhe" Here too, ālambhana refers to touching women—not harming them.

(घ) In Yajurveda (20.4), the Uvaṭa Bhāṣya says: "yajamānam ālabhate—ko'si" And in Mahīdhara Bhāṣya: "yajamānam ālabhata, adhvaryur yajamānaṁ spṛśati" Also, in Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra (19.4.19), the ālambhana of the yajamāna is interpreted as "touch," not "strike."

(ङ) In Gautama Dharma Sūtra (1.2.22), Śrī Haradatta writes: "ālambhanaṁ—sparśanam" Confirming that ālambhana means "touch."

(च) From "brahmaṇe brāhmaṇaṁ" (Yajur. 30.5) through 21 mantras, the term "ālabhate" is repeated. In "brahmaṇe brāhmaṇam ālabhate" (Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 3.4.1–19), ālabhate clearly means bringing or touching the Brāhmaṇa—not harming him. They are brought to the yūpa (sacrificial post), tied, and then released.

(छ) In marriage rites, the bride's heart is touched: "athāsyai hṛdayam ālabhate" (Pāraskara 1.8.5) And in upanayana, the boy's heart is touched: "athāsya hṛdayam ālabhate" (2.2.16) Here, ālambhana means reaching or touching the heart—not striking.

(ज) "ālabetāsakṛd dīnaḥ kareṇa ca śiroruhān" This too implies gentle touching of the hair with the hand.

That is why his fame spread. This interpretation is sound from every perspective, whereas the meaning of slaughter does not hold up from any angle. Just as a vine produces more flowers when its blossoms are regularly plucked, and a cow yields more milk when milked consistently, it is said:

"godugdhaṁ vāṭikāpuṣpaṁ vidyā kūpodakaṁ dhanam । dānād vivardhate nityam adānāc ca vinaśyati ॥"

Milk, garden flowers, knowledge, well water, and wealth — all increase through giving and diminish through withholding.

So how could slaughter ever lead to increase? In truth, the story of Rantideva reflects the meaning of "atithigvaḥ" (20.21.8) from the Atharvaveda Saṁhitā, which Sāyaṇācārya interprets as: "One whose cows are for the ake of guests." This is a commentary, because in Purāṇas and Itihāsas, Vedic principles are often expressed through historical or traditional narratives using bhūtārthavāda (retrospective interpretation).

This confirms that the true meaning of these coded verses in the Mahābhārata is as we have explained. When opponents interpret:

"Sāṅkṛte Rantidevasya yāṁ rātrim atithir vaset । ālabhyanta śataṁ gāvaḥ sahasrāṇy ekaviṁśatiḥ ॥"

as "On the night when guests stayed at King Rantideva's house, twenty-one thousand cows were slaughtered," how can that be justified?

Especially when the very next verse says:

"tatra sma sūpāḥ krośanti sumṛṣṭamaṇikuṇḍalāḥ । sūpaṁ bhūyiṣṭham aśnīdhvaṁ nādya māṁsaṁ yathā purā । (67.18)"

Meaning: "The cooks there cried out, 'Today there is no meat—please eat plenty of lentils!'"

If, as the opponents claim, the previous verse refers to the slaughter of twenty-one thousand cows (and with the word śataṁ included, multiplying twenty-one thousand by one hundred gives twenty-one lakh), and yet this verse says there is no meat today, only lentils—then this contradiction is like the proverbial "yāvajjīvam ahaṁ maunī" (I am silent for life)—a paradox.

If one cow is considered sufficient to feed a hundred people, then twenty-one thousand cows could feed 2.1 million guests. But it's not possible for 2.1 million guests to gather at Rantideva's house in a single night. A few hundred guests might be feasible, but even then, telling them "Today there is no meat, please eat plenty of lentils" would not make sense. Therefore, it's clear that the earlier verse does not imply cow slaughter. The word "māṁsa" here refers to māṁsala—nutritious foods like khoya and rabṛī. Their shortage is understandable, since a cow produces only a limited amount of milk, and when that milk is heated to make khoya, the quantity reduces significantly. Moreover, khoya is consumed in substantial amounts.

In Manusmṛti, the ritual of welcoming a snātaka (a graduate of Vedic studies) is described as: "arhayet prathamaṁ gavā" (3.3) — meaning the guest should be honored with a cow. The following verse aligns with this interpretation.

A similar verse appears in the Śānti Parva: "ālabhyaṁta śataṁ gāvaḥ sahasrāṇi ca viṁśatiḥ" (29.127)

In the narratives of the Droṇa Parva and Śānti Parva, the greatness of sixteen kings is described. None of the other kings are associated with cow slaughter, so it's unlikely that such an act occurred in the story of their companion, Rantideva. Moreover, the Mahābhārata explicitly prohibits cow meat consumption: "na cāsāṁ māṁsam aśnīyāt" (Anu. 78.17)

So how could Rantideva's story portray such an act as virtuous? This confirms that the verses cited by opponents do not support their intended meaning. These are coded verses (kūṭa śloka) from the Mahābhārata, and interpreting them literally only reveals a lack of deeper understanding.

If live animals were truly slaughtered in Rantideva's atithiyajña (guest sacrifice), then there should have been mention of butchers or their numbers. But there is none. Instead, the number of cooks is mentioned—two hundred thousand (Droṇa Parva 67.2). These cooks prepared so much pāyasa and rasagullā, that guests couldn't even finish all the gulābjāmun and similar sweets...

The outer skin was peeled off and discarded, while the inner māva—which can also be referred to as māṁsa—was consumed. This discarded outer layer, likened to carma (skin or leather), formed heaps that, in poetic language, were described as the emergence of the Carmaṇvatī River. Even today, if a large quantity of kheer is prepared during a brahmabhoja and some of it spills, people say, "A river of kheer flowed during this feast."

Opponents similarly claim that in foreign lands, milk rivers or canals are flowing today. Otherwise, how could one interpret:

"nadī mahānasād yā'sya pravṛttā carmarāśitaḥ । tasmāc carmaṇvatī pūrva..." (Droṇa Parva 067.5)

How could a river emerge from a heap of leather? Is it even conceivable that a river of actual leather could form and continue to flow to this day? If not, then clearly the interpretation we've provided is the correct one.

रन्तिदेवकी कथामें उक्त पद्यमें 'गो' शब्द पशुवाचक है, गाय-वाचक नहीं। इसका प्रमाण निरुक्त आदिका पहले हम दे ही चुके हैं; अब पाठक इस कथाको ही साक्षी देखें- यही रन्तिदेवकी कथा फिर द्रोणपर्वमें भी आयी है। वहाँ यह पद्य मिलता है—

उपस्थिताश्च पशवः स्वयं यं शंसितव्रतम्।
बहवः स्वर्गमिच्छन्तो विधिवत् सत्रयाजिनम्॥ (६७।४)

यहाँ पशुशब्द है, इससे स्पष्ट है कि रन्तिदेवकी कथामें भी गोवध नहीं, किन्तु पशुवध सम्भव है; गायके 'अघ्न्या' होनेसे यहाँ उसका नाम कैसे सम्भव हो सकता है? बल्कि प्रतिपक्षीसे दिये हुए पद्यसे पूर्व भी पशु शब्द आया है—

राज्ञो महानसे पूर्वं रन्तिदेवस्य वै द्विज।
द्वे सहस्रे तु वध्येते पशूनामन्वहं तदा॥ (वन. २०८।८)

आश्रित पद्यसे आगेके-

चातुर्मास्ये च पशवो वध्यन्त इति नित्यशः । (१०)

इस पद्यमें भी पशु शब्द है; जब पूर्वापर साहचर्यसे तथा द्रोणपर्वकी साक्षीसे यहाँ गो शब्द सामान्य पशुवाचक सिद्ध हो जानेसे प्रतिपक्षीका पक्ष ही असिद्ध हो गया ।

अथवा 'गाय' अर्थ ही माना जाय; तो यहाँ-

'रन्तिदेवस्य महानसे द्विसहस्रं गावो बध्यन्ते स्म'

'एतदु ह वै परममन्नाद्यं यन्मांसम्' (११।७।१।३)

यहाँ मांसको परमान्न (खीर)का नाम माना है-

'परमान्नं तु पायसम्' (अमर. २।७।२४) ।

इसकी साक्षी रन्तिदेवकी द्रोणपर्ववाली कथामें भी मिलती है-

गृहानभ्यागतान् विप्रानतिथीन् परिवेषकाः ।
पक्वापक्वं दिवारात्रं वरान्नममृतोपमम् ॥ (६७।२)

'वरान्न' यह परमान्नका साथी शब्द है- तब यह खीर, रबड़ी, मलाई, मावा आदिको बतानेवाला है । इसीलिये रन्तिदेवके महानस (पाकशाला)में बहुतसी गौओंके बाँधनेकी आवश्यकता पड़ती थी । यह अर्थ जो मांसका किया गया है, वह यहाँ अयुक्त भी नहीं है, किन्तु युक्त एवं प्रसिद्ध है, बलिष्ट वस्तुको मांस कहा भी जाता ही है । आयुर्वेदकी पुस्तकोंमें- 'चूतफलेऽपरिपक्वे केसरमांसास्थिमज्जानो न पृथग् दृश्यन्ते' (सु.शा.शारीर. ३अ.) यहाँ मांस गूदेका नाम, अस्थि 'गुठली' (बीज)का नाम और मज्जा रेशोंका नाम है । 'स्वादु शीतं गुरु स्निग्धं मांसं मारुतपित्तजित्' (सुश्रु.४६।१२) यहाँ मातुलुंगके गूदेको मांस शब्दसे लिखा गया है । 'समांसं मधुरं प्रोक्तम्' मदनपालनिघण्टुके इस प्रमाणमें बेरके भक्ष्य ऊपरवाले छिल्केको मांस कहा गया है । 'भल्लातकास्थ्यग्निसमं तद् मांसं स्वादु शीतलम्' (चरक.सूत्र.२७।१६५) यहाँ भल्लातककी गुठलीको अस्थि, ऊपरके छिलकेको त्वचा तथा गूदेको ही मांस कहा गया है । 'खर्जूरमांसान्यथ नारिकेलम्' (चरक. चिकि. २०।२७)में खजूरके भक्ष्य ऊपरी भागको मांस कहा गया है । इस प्रकार दूधका पौष्टिक भाग मलाई, रबड़ी आदि भी मांस शब्दवाच्य सिद्ध हुआ । यह भी न समझना चाहिये कि महाभारत जैसी सुगम रचनामें ऐसे कठिन शब्द कैसे आते हैं? इसपर स्वयं महाभारतकी साक्षी है -

'अष्टौ श्लोकसहस्राणि अष्टौ श्लोकशतानि च ।
अहं वेद्मि शुको वेत्ति संजयो वेत्ति वा न वा ॥ १।१।८१

यहाँ व्यासजीने महाभारत में ८,८०० श्लोक कूट माने हैं जिनका ज्ञान स्वयं श्रीव्यासको तथा श्रीशुकदेवको है, संजयको भी पूरा नहीं बताया गया है । तब यही भी वही कूटता है । महाभारतके एक कूटपद्यका आदर्श पाठकोंके सामने भी रखा जाता है -

'गोकर्णा सुमुखीकृतेन इषुणा गोपुत्रसम्प्रेषिता
गोशब्दात्मजभूषणं सुविहितं सुव्यक्तगोऽसुप्रभम् ।
दृष्ट्वा गोगतकं जहार मुकुटं गोशब्दगोपूरि वै
गोकर्णासनमर्दनश्च न ययावप्राप्य मृत्योर्वशम् ॥' (कर्ण.९०।४२)

यहाँ पाठकोंने देखा होगा कि सुगम कहे जाते हुए महाभारतमें यहाँ कितनी क्लिष्टता है । इस पद्यमें गो शब्द ७ बार आया है; और भिन्न-२ अर्थ रखता है ।

इस कूट पद्यमें कहीं भी गो शब्द गाय वाचक नहीं आया है, इसप्रकार रन्तिदेवकी कथामें गो शब्द कूट है। बल्कि वह पशु अर्थमें या गोदुग्ध अर्थमें है, गायके वध अर्थमें नहीं।

उपर्युक्त अर्थका कारण यह भी है कि यदि रन्तिदेव अतिथियोंको मांस खिलाता; तो स्वयं भी खाता। क्योंकि यज्ञावशेषका खाना भी आवश्यक हुआ करता है, चाहे वह देवयज्ञका हो, पितृयज्ञका अथवा अतिथियज्ञका अवशेष हो, किन्तु रन्तिदेवका तो महाभारतमें मांस न खानेका वर्णन आया है; जैसे कि-

रैवते रन्तिदेवेन.......................।
इत्यैश्चान्यैश्च राजेन्द्र! पुरा मांसं न भक्षितम् ॥
(अनु.पर्व.११५।७२-७७)

तब जबरदस्ती उसपर मांसका अर्थ क्यों थोपा जाय? अर्थ वही ठीक होता है जो पुस्तकके सब पूर्वापरके प्रकरणोंसे सम्बद्ध हो, संगत हो। इसीलिये द्रोणपर्वमें कहा है-

गृहानभ्यागतान्विप्रानतिथीन्परिवेषकाः ।
पक्वान्नपक्वं दिवारात्रं वरान्नममृतोपमम् ॥(६७।१२)

यहाँ अतिथियोंको अमृतोपम वरान्न, परमान्न, (खोया, रबड़ी आदि) खिलाना कहा है, तो वह गौओंके वधसे प्राप्त नहीं हो सकता, किन्तु बन्धनसे ही। वध माना जाय; तो-

आलभ्यन्त शतं गावः सहस्राणि च विंशतिः।(शा.२९।१२७)

में (१००० गुणा १०० गुणा २०=) २० लाख गौओंका वध करना पड़ेगा, एक गाय-बैल १०० पुरुषोंका भोजन माना जाय तो २०करोड़ पुरुषोंका खिलाना मानना पड़ेगा फिर क्या इतने पुरुष एकस्थानपर कभी इकट्ठे हो सकते थे? दूध, खोया आदिकेलिये इतने गायोंका बन्धन माना जाय, तो कोई अनुपपत्ति नहीं हो सकती। क्योंकि दूध, मावा आदि थोड़ी ही मात्रामें उतरते हैं। द्रोणपर्वमें-

सावी जगत्कालतः

सहस्रशश्च सौवर्णान् वृषभान् षोडशानुगान् ।
अवर्धमासमददद् ब्राह्मणेभ्यः शतं समाः ॥(६७।१०-११)

यहाँ रन्तिदेवका ब्राह्मणोंको गाय-वृषभोंका दान ही कहा है, जो 'महोक्षं वा महाजं वा श्रोत्रियायोपकल्पयेत्' (याज्ञ.आ.५।१०९)के अनुकूल है। षोडशराजकीय इस प्रकरणमें राजाओंके दानका वर्णन करके महत्ता बतायी गयी है, पशुवधसे वह महत्ता किस प्रकार हो सकती है? धनवर्धके व्याघ्रके वक्तृत्वमें उक्त कथनसे 'वध्येते'का अर्थ बन्धन न करके हिंसा ही माना जाय तो वहाँ भी वही भाव है, जो 'अघासु हन्यन्ते गावः'में है, वहाँ श्रीसायणाचार्यने लिखा है- 'दण्डैस्ताड्यन्ते प्रेरणार्थम्' यह हम पूर्वमें लिख चुके हैं। अर्थात् वहाँ पीटना अर्थ है, वधका प्रयोग पीटनेके अर्थमें भी आया है। जैसे- 'उरु आवधिष्ठाः' (कात.१८।४) यहाँ उरःका अर्थ छातीपीटना ही है। इसप्रकार अन्य प्रमाण हम अतिथिकी गोघ्नसंज्ञामें दे चुके हैं। गायका पीटना भी एक हिंसा है, जैसे कि व्याधने उसे बताया। पर वह हिंसा अतिथिकेलिये अभ्यनुज्ञात है, इसे हम 'गोघ्नोऽतिथिः'में स्पष्ट कर चुके हैं। वह पीटना इसलिये होता था कि वह अपने स्थानसे चले और अतिथिके स्थान तक पहुँचे, उसमें दण्डसे ताड़न करना स्वाभाविक है।

बहवः स्वर्गमिच्छन्तो विधिवत् सत्रयाजिनम् ॥

इस पद्यसे व्यक्त किया गया है । 'पशु' शब्दसे यहाँ स्त्री-पशु गौ आदि और पुरुष-पशु बैल आदि भी लिये जा सकते हैं, क्योंकि बैल आदि भी गर्भाधारक होनेसे दूधके निमित्त बनते हैं । अतः यहाँ साक्षात् मारना अर्थ उपपन्न नहीं हो सकता । क्योंकि- कौन पशु भला स्वयं मरने जाता? प्रतिपक्षी जरा उनके दिमागसे सोचें कि- 'ब्राह्मणेभ्यः शतं समाः' (महा.१०६५७।२१) यह कर्म रन्तिदेवने सौ वर्ष निरन्तर किया । तो यदि रन्तिदेव प्रतिदिन कभी दो हजार गौएँ (वन.२०८।८), कभी इक्कीस हजार गौएँ (द्रोण.६७।१६) और कभी बीसलाख गौएँ (शा.२९।१२७) अतिथियोंकेलिये मरवाता था और फिर हजारों गौएँ प्रतिदिन दान भी करता था । तो क्या वह सौ सालों तक वैसा कर सकता था? इतनी गौएँ कहाँसे आतीं? और फिर प्रतिपक्षीके इस अर्थमें विरोध भी आता है, उनके लिये वसिष्ठस्मृति तथा शतपथके वचनसे 'महोक्ष' बड़ा बैल या 'महाज' बड़ा बकरा या 'वेहत्' गर्भघातिनी गौएँ आतिथ्यकेलिये पकवाने चाहिये थे; पर उससे विरुद्ध यहाँ साधारण गौएँ क्यों रखी गयीं? और फिर शतपथके सिद्धान्तसे विरोध भी आता है, क्योंकि शतपथ (३।१।२।२१)में गाय-बैलके अन्न खानेवालेको भी सब सर्वभक्षी, गर्भघातक तथा पापकीर्ति बतलाया है; तो गाय बैलको ही साक्षात् खा जाने या खिलानेवालेको तो महापापी कहकर निन्दित किया जाना चाहिये था, पर यहाँ उसी कर्मसे रन्तिदेवकी पुण्यकीर्ति कैसे फैली, जिसके लिये श्रीकालिदासने भी मेघदूतमें अपनी लेखनी तोड़ दी । इससे स्पष्ट है कि- यहाँ गौओंका वध अर्थात् दण्डेसे ताड़न कर वहाँ अतिथियोंके पास पहुँचाना, जो कि गाय जैसे दिव्य जीवके लिये वधका ताड़न अर्थ या यहाँ चौपना अर्थ है, जैसेकि 'अघासु हन्यन्ते गावः' इस मन्त्रके भाष्यमें श्रीसायणाचार्यने लिखा है- 'दण्डैस्ताड्यन्ते प्रेरणार्थम्' जिसकी

स्पष्टता हम 'अतिथिकी गोघ्न संज्ञा' इस निबन्धमें कर चुके हैं । वहाँ यह भी हमने बताया है कि पाणिनि 'हन् हिंसागत्योः' इसमें वधार्थक 'हन्' धातुका गमन अर्थ भी मानता है । 'हन्यते-गम्यते' होती जाती है । निघण्टु (२।१४)में भी गतिकर्मक धातुओंमें हन् पढ़ा गया है, पर वधकर्मक धातुओंमें न तो हन् पढ़ा गया है और न आलभ ही । रन्तिदेवके इस प्रकरणमें इन्हीं धातुओंका प्रयोग किया गया है । इस विषयमें निरुक्तका भी एक प्रमाण देखिये । 'निघण्टु' शब्दका निर्वचन करते हुए पहले 'निगमा इमे भवन्ति' (१।१।१) यह गम् धातुसे निर्वचन किया गया, फिर 'आहननादेव स्युः' (१।१।६) यहाँ गम् धातुके स्थानपर हन् धातुका प्रयोग समानार्थकतावश ही किया है । टीकाकारोंने तो यहाँ हन् धातुका पतन् अर्थ किया है । इसकेलिये प्राचीनवृत्तिकार श्रीदुर्गाचार्यने लिखा है- हनेः पातार्थे वर्तमानस्य अनेकार्थत्वाद् धातूनाम्

इसका तात्पर्य यह है कि धातुओंकी अनेकार्थकतावश हन् धातुका पतन् अर्थ है । केवल उसने कहा ही नहीं, प्रमाण भी आगे दिया है- 'प्रसिद्धश्च पातार्थे हन्तेः प्रयोगः; एवं हि वक्तारो भवन्ति- ब्राह्मणे इदमाहतम्, सूत्रे इदमाहतम् इति' ।

इससे सिद्ध है कि हन् धातुका केवल हिंसा अर्थ ही नहीं होता; अन्य अर्थ भी औचित्यवश हुआ करते हैं । इस कारण-

सांकृते रन्तिदेवस्य यां रात्रिमतिथिर्वसेत् ।
आलभ्यन्त शतं गावः सहस्राण्येकविंशतिः ॥

(७६७।१६, १२।२९।१२७)

इस महाभारतीय पद्यमें भी 'गाव आलभ्यन्त'का 'गौएँ मारी गयीं' यह अर्थ नहीं, जैसाकि प्रतिपक्षी कहते हैं; किन्तु इतनी गौएँ वहाँ प्राप्त करायी गयीं' (डुलभष् प्राप्तौ) अथवा दानकेलिये स्पर्श करायी गयीं, क्योंकि दानके संकल्पके समय उस वस्तुका हाथसे स्पर्श करना पड़ता है, अथवा गायके दूध निकालनेके

लिए गायको छुड़ा जाता है, अथवा हाथ फेरा जाता है; इससे आश्वस्त होकर उसका दूध भी स्निग्ध निकलता है; यही गायके 'आलम्भन' (स्पर्श)का रहस्य है। 'आलम्भ'के स्पर्श अर्थमें निम्न प्रमाण द्रष्टव्य हैं—

(क) महाभारतके उद्योग पर्वमें—

'ऋषभं पृष्ठ आलभ्य ब्राह्मणानभिवाद्य च'(८३।७०)

यहाँ श्रीकृष्ण भगवान्‌का बैलकी पीठका आलम्भन अर्थात् स्पर्श करना अर्थ ही महाभारतको विवक्षित है, बैलकी पीठको मारना नहीं।

(ख) 'गामालभ्य विशुद्ध्यति' (५।८७) इस मनुके पद्यमें भी नरकंकालके छूनेसे अशुद्ध पुरुषकी गायके आलम्भ (स्पर्श)से शुद्धि मानी गयी है।

(ग) इसी प्रकार 'स्त्रीणां च प्रेक्षणालम्भे' (मनु० २।१७९) यहाँ भी 'स्त्रियोंका आलम्भन-स्पर्श ही है, मारना नहीं।

(घ) (मनु.१०।२४) मन्त्रके उवट-भाष्यमें 'यजमानमालभते- स्पृशति', महीधरभाष्यमें भी 'यजमानमालभते, अध्वर्युर्यजमानं स्पृशति' तथा कात्यायनश्रौतसूत्र (११।४।११)में भी यजमानका आलम्भन स्पर्शार्थक माना गया है, मारणार्थक नहीं।

(ङ) गोभिलगृह्यसूत्र (१।२।२२)में भी भट्टनारायणने लिखा है— 'आलम्भनं स्पर्शनम्'

(च) 'ब्रह्मणे ब्राह्मणं' (यजु. ३०।५)से लेकर २१ मन्त्र तक १९ मन्त्र-स्थित 'आलभते' पदका अनुकर्षण है। 'ब्रह्मणे ब्राह्मणमालभते' (तै.ब्रा. ३।४।१-१९)में भी 'आलभते' पद स्पष्ट है, तो यहाँ ब्राह्मणादिका आलम्भन-लाया जाना है, मारा जाना नहीं। वे लाकर यूपमें बाँधकर फिर छोड़ दिये जाते हैं।

(छ) विवाहसंस्कारमें वधूका हृदयालम्भन- 'अथास्यै हृदयमालभते' (पारस्कर. १।८।८) तथा उपनयनमें माणवकका हृदयालम्भन- 'अथास्य हृदयमालभते'(२।२।१६)में हृदयदेशका प्राप्त करना अथवा स्पर्श करना ही अर्थ है, मारना नहीं।

(ज) 'आलभेतासकृद् दीनः करेण च शिरोरुहान्'

(सुश्रु.कल्पस्थान१) यहाँ भी बालोंका स्पर्श अर्थ है।

(झ) मीमांसादर्शन (२।३।१७)में सुबोधिनीकारने लिखा है— 'यत्नस्य समीपे आनयनार्थम् आलम्भः स्पर्शो भवति'।

(ञ) 'अक्षान् यद् बभ्रून् आलभे' (अथर्व. ७।११४।७)

में भी अक्षोंका आलम्भ-स्पर्श ही है, सायणने भी यही अर्थ किया है।

(ट) 'कुमारं जातं पुरा अन्यैरालम्भात् सर्पिर्मधुनी हिरण्येन प्राशयेत्' (आश्वलायनगृ. १।१५।१) जातकर्मसंस्कारके इस वाक्यमें शिशुका स्पर्श ही आलम्भका अर्थ है, मारना नहीं।

(ठ) 'अत ऊर्ध्वम् असमालम्भनमादशरात्रात्' (गोभिलगृ. २।५।१३) में प्रसूता स्त्रीका दस दिन तक असमालम्भ-अर्थात् छूनेका निषेध किया है।

(ड) 'केशान् अंगं वाससश्च आलभ्य अप उपस्पृशेत्' (आपस्तम्बधर्म. १।१६।३) में भी बालोंके छूनेपर आचमनका विधान किया है। श्रीहरदत्तने लिखा है 'आलभ्य स्पृष्ट्वा'।

(ढ) मीमांसादर्शनके शाबरभाष्य (६।२।१०) में- 'अज इति अन्नं, बीजं बीजन् वा, तम् आलभ्य-उपयुज्य, प्रजाः-पशून् प्राप्नोतीति गौणाः शब्दाः'

यहाँ आलम्भनका उपयोग अर्थ किया गया है।

(ण) प.सूत्रमें श्रीनागेशभट्टने भी लिखा है— 'अग्नीषोमीयं पशुमालभेत्' इत्यत्र आलम्भनं न हिंसनं, किन्तु स्पर्शः। अग्निहोत्रप्रकरणपठिते 'वत्समालभेत्' इति वाक्ये स्पर्शार्थकत्वनिर्णयात्'।

फलतः रन्तिदेवके 'आलभ्यन्त शतं गावः' का भी दानार्थ या सत्कारार्थ स्पर्श ही अर्थ है। तब गौओंको अतिथियोंके पास प्राप्त कराना और यास्कके (निरुक्त २।५।४) अनुसार 'गो'का अर्थ 'गायका दूध' भी होनेसे उसके दूधके मावेसे जिसे मांसल होनेके कारण मांस भी कहना सम्भव हो सकता है, ऐसा गौओंका अतिथियोंकेलिये उपयोग रन्तिदेव जैसा राजा सौ साल तक भी कर सकता

था, इसीसे उसकी कीर्ति फैली। यह अर्थ तो सभी दृष्टियोंसे ठीक है और मारना अर्थ तो किसी भी दृष्टि से उपपन्न नहीं बैठता। कलीके पुष्प लेते रहनेसे उसके फूल बढ़ते हैं? गायका दूध लेते रहनेपर वह भी बढ़ता है। कहा है–

गोदुग्धं वाटिकापुष्पं विद्या कूपोदकं धनम्।
दानाद्विवर्धते नित्यमदानाच्च विनश्यति॥

सर्वथा काटनेसे भला वृद्धि कैसे हो? वस्तुतः रन्तिदेवका इतिहास 'अतिथिग्व:' (२०।२१।८) इस अथर्वसंहिताके पदरूप सूक्तका– जिसका अर्थ 'अतिथ्यर्था गावो यस्य सः' यह सायणाचार्यने किया है– भाष्य ही है, क्योंकि पुराण और इतिहासादिमें वेदके सिद्धान्त भूतार्थवाद द्वारा कहीं कल्पित और कहीं पारम्परिक रूपसे प्रसिद्ध अर्थ कहे जाया करते हैं। इससे स्पष्ट है कि महाभारतके इन कूटश्लोकोंका यही वास्तविक अर्थ है जो हमने किया है। जब प्रतिपक्षीका यह अर्थ करते हैं कि–

सांकृते रन्तिदेवस्य यां रात्रिमतिथिर्वसेत्।
आलभ्यन्त शतं गावः सहस्राण्येकविंशतिः॥

संकृतिके पुत्र राजा रन्तिदेवके घरपर जिस रातमें अतिथियोंने निवास किया; उस रात इक्कीस हजार गौएँ मारी गयीं' यह अर्थ कैसे उपपन्न हो सकता है? क्योंकि इसके साथ वाले अठारहवें पद्यमें कहा है–

तत्र स्म सूपाः क्रोशन्ति सुमृष्टमणिकुण्डलाः।
सूपं भूयिष्ठमश्नीध्वं नाद्य मांसं यथा पुरा॥ (६७।१८)

अर्थात् 'वहाँके रसोइये कहते थे कि आज मांस नहीं है, आप दाल खूब खाइये'। यदि इससे प्रतिपक्षीके अनुसार पूर्वके पद्यमें इक्कीस सहस्र गौओंका मारना कहा है, (अथवा उस श्लोकमें 'शतं' शब्द साथ है, जिससे इक्कीस सहस्रको सौगुना करनेपर इक्कीस लाख अर्थ हो जायगा) और इसमें कहा है कि मांस आज नहीं है, दाल ही बहुत खाओ तो यह तो 'यावज्जीवमहं मौनी' वाला व्याघात हो

जायगा। यदि एक गाय को सौ पुरुषोंका भक्ष्य मान लिया जाय; तो इक्कीस सहस्र गाय इक्कीस लाख अतिथियोंकी पूर्ति हो सकती हैं। एक रातमें रन्तिदेवके घर इक्कीस लाख अतिथि आया हो जायँ यह सम्भव नहीं हो सकता, कई सौकी संख्यामें तो अतिथि आ सकते हैं; फिर भी उन्हें कहा जाय कि आज मांस नहीं है, दाल खूब खाओ यह सम्भव नहीं। इसलिये स्पष्ट है कि पूर्व पद्यमें गायका मारना अर्थ नहीं है। 'मांस'का अर्थ यहाँ पर 'मांसल' खोया रबड़ी अर्थ है, उसकी कमी सम्भव है। क्योंकि एक गायका दूध ही परिमित होना हुआ, फिर उसी दूधको अग्निपर रखकर खोया बनानेपर उसकी कमी हो जाती है। खोया खाया भी काफी जा सकता है।

मनुस्मृतिमें अर्घ्य स्नातकका 'अर्हयेत् प्रथमं गवा' (३।३) गायसे सत्कार करना कहा गया है। अग्रिम पद्यसे इस अर्थकी संगति भी लग जाती है।

'आलभ्यन्त शतं गावः सहस्राणि च विंशतिः' (२९।१२७)

द्रोणपर्व तथा शान्तिपर्वके इस उपाख्यानमें सोलह राजाओंकी महिमा बतायी गयी है। अन्य राजाओंमें किसीका भी गोवधकाण्ड नहीं दिखलाया गया; तब उनके सहचारी रन्तिदेवके आख्यानमें भी वह संघटित नहीं हो सकता। जबकि महाभारत 'न खादेत् मांसमश्नीयात्' (अनु० ७८।१७) गोमांसका भक्षण निषिद्ध करता है तब रन्तिदेवके आख्यानमें उसे पुण्य कैसे कह सकता है। इससे स्पष्ट है कि प्रतिपक्षियोंसे लिये हुए रन्तिदेवके पद्योंका तदभीष्ट अर्थ नहीं। जब महाभारतीय कूट पद्य है, उसका यथाश्रुत अर्थ करना अपनी अनभिज्ञताका परिचय देना है। यदि रन्तिदेवके अतिथियज्ञमें जीवित पशु मारे जाते; तो वहाँ वधिकोंका वर्णन अथवा उनकी संख्या आनी चाहिये थी, पर नहीं आयी, किन्तु रन्तिदेवके पाचकोंकी तो संख्या आयी है कि वे दो लाख थे' (द्रोणपर्व ६७।१२) तो वे इतना पायस और मालपूए आदि तैयार करते थे; कि अतिथि लोग उतना न खा सकनेके कारण उन गुलाबजामुन आदिकी

ऊपरी त्वचा उतारकर गिरा देते थे और भीतर का भाग जिसे मांस भी कहा जा सकता है– खा जाते थे। उन्हीं ऊपरी त्वचाको चर्म-सा कहकर उन ढेरोंको गिरा देनेसे कविकी भाषामें उसे 'चर्मण्वती नदी'का प्रकट होना कहा गया है। अब भी कहीं ब्रह्मभोजमें खीर बहुत-सी बनायी जाय और गिरे भी; तो कहा जाता है कि इस भोजनमें तो खीरकी नदी बही। विदेशोंके लिये यही प्रतिपक्षी कहते हैं कि विदेशोंमें आज दूधकी नदियाँ या नहरें बह रही हैं' नहीं तो–

नदी महानमात् स्राऽस्य प्रवृत्ता चर्मराशितः।
तस्माच्चर्मण्वती पूर्व ....॥ (द्रोणपर्व ६७।५)

चर्मराशिसे चर्मण्वती नदीका प्रवृत्त होना सम्भव-कोटिमें कैसे आ सकता है? क्या चमड़ेकी भी नदी बन सकती है जो आज तक भी बह रही है? यदि नहीं, तो यहाँ यही हमारे कहा हुआ अर्थ ही ठीक है।

Allegations-

There is Beef eating cow Sacrifice and meat consumption mentioned in Madhupark in Vedas

Refutation-

Geeta Press Gorakhpur has explained in its book " A Review of Beef in Ancient India " the real meaning of Madhupark in Vedas

Madhuparka is a ceremony in Hinduism in which curd mixed with honey is offered to a guest. Offering of madhuparka to a guest or receiving the guest with madhuparka is considered the highest form of reception in Hindu religion.

Ingredients of Madhuparka
Madhuparka has been prescribed for special honoured guests who have come from far-off places. Wherever the ingredients of madhuparka have been described in the scriptures, nowhere has meat been included in them. Curd, ghee, milk, honey and candy-sugar are the main constituents of madhuparka. Some have not taken all of them but mentioned only a few of them. In some sources, parched barley powder (sattu) has also been mentioned as one of the ingredients of madhuparka.
Now let us see what are the ingredients of madhuparka in the various texts :-

TANTRASĀRA (Chowkhambā Sanskrit Series, Varanasi, November 1938, Chapter I, page 53):
आज्यं दधिमधुमिश्र मधुपर्के विदुर्बुधाः ।
"Wise men prescribe the mixture of ghee, curd and honey in madhuparka,"

The same has been quoted in śabda-kalpadruma (Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series, Varanasi, 1961, Part III, page 599, column 2) while explaining the word madhuparka.

PARASKARA-GRHYA-SUTRA chapter on marriage, 1.3.5

"Madhuparka is made of curd, honey and ghee in a bronze vessel covered with a bronze lid,

At the same place in śabda-kalpadruma in the meanings of madhuparka, the following has been quoted from the KĀLIKA-PURĀṆA, chapter 7
दधि सर्पिर्जलं क्षौद्र सितैताभिस्तु पञ्चभिः । प्रोच्यते मधुपर्कस्तु सर्वदेघोपतुष्टये ॥

8. BAUDHAYNA-GRHYA-SUTRA 1.2.10-13
In sutra 9, bringing of madhu has been described. In sūtras 10 to 13 the ingredients to be mixed with honey have been described as follows:
दद्धि पयो वा द्वितीयं स द्विवृत् ।
"if curd or milk is mixed with honey, it is called dvivṛt (द्विवृत्)"
घृतं तृतीयं चा त्रिवृत् ।
"if the third ingredient ghee is added, it is called trivit (त्रिवृत्)"

10. HIRANYAKEŚI-GRHYA-SUTRA 1.12.10
The text of Hiranyakeśi-grhya-sūtra was neither available with any book seller nor in any library. But its evidence was found in the German book: 'Ritual Literatur Vedische Opfer und Zauber' by Alfred Hillebrandt, published by Verlag von Karl. J. Trubner, Strassburg, in 1897. It is cited below in the original German, with an interhnear English word-for-word translation:
Hierauf folgt dic Darbietung des Spulwassers und des Madhuparka.
Hereafter follows the offering of rinsing water and of Madhuparka.

According to Hiranyakeśi 1.12.10-firstly water should be offered for washing and then madhuparka which contains three or five ingredients-curd, honey and ghee; to which water and groats of barley meal (saktu) can be added.

11. Meanings of madhuparka in Monier-Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary, page 780-
(i) A mixture of honey;
(ii) An offering of honey and milk;
(iii) A respectful offering to a guest, or to the bridegroom on his arrival at the door of the father of the bride, sometimes consisting of equal parts of curd, honey and clarified butter.

At other places too wherever the ingredients of madhuparka have been detailed, what to talk of beef, there is not even the slightest indication of meat. When meat has nowhere been included in the ingredients of madhuparka, then how is it alleged that meat is essential in madhuparka or that there can be no madhuparka without meat. The most essential ingredient of madhuparka is honey, without which there can be no madhuparka. Only the Aśvalāyana-grhya-sūtra prescribes that ghee can be taken if honey is not available, nowhere else such a prescription has been made; though other ingredients in place of milk, curd or ghee have been prescribed. Apastambīya-dharma-sūtra has even prescribed that if neither milk nor curd is available, then madhuparka can be prepared by mixing honey in water. It is not understandable as to how the Aśvalāyana-grhya-sūtra has accepted madhuparka without honey when the name madhu parka itself indicates the essentiality of honey in it. There appears to be some transgression. It is probably due to a pressing occasion when some followers of Aśvalāyana must have ruled in a hurry that ghee could be mixed in place of honey when it is not available, to avoid inconvenience of waiting to the guest. From that very time onwards the followers of Aśvalāyana would have recognised the convention of mixing ghee in place of honey when it was not available. Whatever it be, meat is not mentioned anywhere in the ingredients of madhu parka, inspite of ransacking searches.
The descriptions of the ingredients of madhuparka in the various scriptures prove that there is not even an inkling of meat in madhuparka. So it is firmly proved that madhuparka contains no meat. Whichever Impracticability of Beef in the Reception of a Guest with Madhuparka
The rites of receiving an honourable guest with madhuparka have been detailed in the Aśvalāyana-grhya-sutra 1.24 and Pāraskara-grhya-sūtra 1.3. Only on the basis of these two grhya-sūtras, people opine that meat (beef) is essential in madhuparka. Let us now consider the possibility of meat in madhuparka according to the rites described in them.
The sequence of rites given in these grhya-sūtras is as follows:

Accepting madhuparka, mixing it with the thumb and third finger, sprinkling madhuparka in the four directions by these

Offering of a seat and its acceptance;

Offering of water for washing the feet;

Offering of arghya (अर्घ्य) and its acceptance;

Offering of sipping water (ācamaniya) and its acceptance;

very fingers, taking madhuparka thrice from its middle by these very fingers, and leaving the residue;

6. Cleaning the mouth by sipping water.
   The rites upto here are almost identical in the Aśvalāyana and Pāraskara-grhya-sūtras. Till this place there is no point for difference of opinion. Hereafter interpretations differ, which will be discussed separately according to both the grhya-sūtras in the forthcoming sections. Here it will suffice to point out that there is no mention of meat in the ingredients of madhuparka, nor is meat mentioned till the completion of the rite by cleansing the mouth with sipping water. When a guest arrives, all the rites in the chain of his honoured reception by madhuparka are performed one after the other in a regular sequence and without interruption. There is no waiting for any length of time. Therefore, it does not seem possible that a cow could be slaughtered instantaneously, her meat taken out, be cooked, be mixed with madhuparka and then it could be served to the guest. It takes a long time to slaughter a cow, to extract her meat and then to cook it. It does not seem possible that an honoured guest was required to wait for such a long time. The followers of Aśvalāyana do not let an honourable guest wait even for honey and hence accept ghee in its place.

Moreover, a guest cannot consume the entire meat of a cow. The quantity of madhuparka for the occasion can permit only a fraction of an ounce of meat in it. How can it be desirable to slaughter a cow for such a little quantity of meat? Therefore, when a cow is brought after the guest has partaken of madhuparka and has cleansed his mouth by sipping water, her bringing in can be either for gifting her to the guest, or for offering instantaneously drawn milk to the guest for which he will not have to wait.

Gift of a Cow in Madhuparka
Some scriptures specifically prescribe that a cow should be gifted in madhuparka.

1. Aruna-smrti, chapter 1, (published by Mansukhrai Mor, 5, Clive Row, Calcutta):
   यश्वकर्मणि या धेनुर्या धेनुर्धर्मकर्मणि ॥ ११६ ॥ प्रायश्चित्तनिमित्ते वा होमार्थ दुर्बलाय वा । मधुपर्के च या धेनुः या धेनुः कर्मसिद्धये ॥ ११७ ॥ एताः सर्वा द्विजो विद्वान् प्रतिगृह्य यतस्ततः । न स पापेन लिप्येत पद्मपत्रमिषांभसा ॥ ११८ ॥
   "As there is no effect of water on a lotus leaf, similarly sin does not effect a learned dwija who accepts a cow gifted at the time of a yajña, in a religious performance, on performing expiation rites, for offerings (homa), for regaining his lost health, in the rites of madhuparka, and on fulfilment of desire (karma-siddhi)."

2. Manu-smrti 3.3:
   तं प्रतीतं स्वधर्मेण ब्रह्मदायहरं पितुः । स्रग्विणं तल्प आसीनमर्हयेत्प्रथमं गवा ॥
   "Being justly applauded for his strict performance of his duty, and having received from his natural or spiritual father the sacred gift of the Vedas, let him on an elegant bed, decked with a garland of flowers, and let his father honour him before his nuptials with the present of a cow according to the Madhuparka rite." (translated by Raja Rajendra Lala Mitra in 'Beef in Ancient India')

Manu-smrti 3.119, 120 prescribes that ordained person who has finished his studies should be honoured by madhuparka and Manu-smrti 3.3 prescribes that a cow should be gifted to such an ordained one; and in the succeeding stanzas he has been permitted to marry an auspicious girl. It is clear from this that an ordained brahmacāri should first be honoured with madhuparka along with an offer of a cow. Probably its reason is that one who has been physically weakened by the hard labours of studies and by performing the strict duties of a brahmacāri should increase his vigour and regain his health' by drinking cow's milk before marriage so that he may be able to carry on with married life without adverse effect.

3. The following sutras of the Apastamba-dharma-sūtra 2.4.8 are also indicative of the offering or gifting of a cow :
   i) गोमधुपर्कार्हो वेदाध्यायः
   "One who studies the Vedas is eligible to a cow and madhuparka." (5)
   (ii) आचार्यायत्विजे श्वशुराय राज्ञ इति परिसंवत्सरादुपतिष्ठद्भ्यो गौमधुपर्कश्च –
   "A teacher, priest, father-in-law, king-if they come once a year they should be offered a cow and madhuparka."
   Immediately after these sūtras follows the enumeration of the ingredients of madhuparka :
   दधि मधुसंसृष्टं मधुपर्कः पयो वा मधुसंसृष्टम् । अभावे उदकम् ॥
   If the sense of a 'cow' would have been its beef, then it would have surely been included in the enumeration of ingredients. Evidently therefore, only the gifting of a cow is desired in these sutras.

Historical Examples of the Gift of a Cow with Madhuparka
Let us now look into the historical examples of madhuparka, wherein only the gift of a cow is mentioned and not serving its beef after immediate slaughter.
Valmikiya Rāmāyana :
(a) When Śri Rāma went to Bharadvāja Muni, he (Bharadvāja Muni) gave a reception to Śri Rāma by offering madhuparka and a cow in gift.
तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राजपुत्रस्य धीमतः । उपानयत धर्मात्मा गामर्थ्यमुदकं ततः ॥
(Ayodhyā-kānda 54.17) meaning-Pious Bharadvāja Muni after hearing highly intellected Prince Śri Rāma, offered him water for washing feet and hands and then offered arghya (madhuparka) and also a cow in gift.
(b) On the arrival of Maharṣi Agastya and others Lord Śri Rāma also offered them madhuparka in reception along with a cow in gift.
दृष्ट्वा प्राप्तान् मुनींस्तांस्तु प्रत्युत्थाय कृताञ्जलिः । पाद्यार्थ्यादिभिरानर्च गां निवेद्य च सादरम् ॥
(Uttara-kānda 1.13)
meaning-On arrival of those great sages, Śri Rāma Candra got up and stood before them with folded hands and then worshipped them with high esteem by offering water for washing their feet and hands and by offering arghya (madhuparka) and a cow in gift to each of them.

Mahābhārata:
(a) When Śri Narada presented himself in the assembly of King Yudhisthira, the King received him with madhuparka rite and with the gift of a cow.
गां चैव मधुपर्कं च सम्प्रदायायमेव च । अर्चयामास रत्नैश्च सर्वकामैश्च धर्मवित् ॥
(Sabhā-parva 5.15)
meaning-The king, conversant with religious observances _ duties, worshipped them in the prescribed manner by offering water (for washing feet and hands), madhuparka and a cow in gift and pleased them by fulfilling all their desires.
(b) When Lord Śri Krsna arrived in the assembly of Kauravas, a cow was gifted to Him in His reception by madhuparka rites:
अथ गां मधुपर्कं चाप्युदकं च जनार्दने । उपजह्रूर्यथान्यायं धृतराष्ट्रपुरोहिताः ॥
(Udyoga-parva 89.19)) meaning-The priests of Dhrtarāstra presented water, madhuparka and a high breed cow for the reception of Bhagavān Janārdana.
(c) When Lord Śri Krsna came to Duryodhana's place, there too the gift of a cow with madhuparka is mentioned :-
तस्मिन् गां मधुपर्कं चाप्युदकं च जनार्दने । निवेदयामास तदा गृहान् राज्यं च कौरवः ॥
(Udyoga-parva 91.9,10)
meaning-Kururāja (Duryodhana) offered water, madhuparka, cow and his palace and kingdom on the occasion.

Srimad-Bhāgavata Mahāpurāna:
(a) When Akrūra arrived in Braja, Lord Krsna received him with madhuparka rite and presented a cow in gift.
पृष्ट्वाथ स्वागतं तस्मै निवेद्य च घरासनम् । प्रक्षाल्य विधिवत् पादौ मधुपर्कार्हणमाहरत् ॥ निवेद्य गां चातिथये संवाह्य श्रान्तमादृतः । अन्नं बहुगुणं मेध्यं श्रद्धयोपाहरद् विभुः ॥
(Śrimad-Bhāgavata 10.38.38-39)
meaning-Then, enquiring about his safe arrival and giving him an excellent seat, Balarāma washed his feet with due ceremony and fetched (for him) an offering called madhuparka (consisting of honey, clarified butter and curds). Again, bestowing on the guest a cow and massaging him, weary as he was, the almighty Lord respectfully and with (great) reverence brought (for him) pure food endowed with manifold excellences.

b- When Kauravas honoured Balarāma with madhuparka rite, there too, a cow was presented.

तं संगम्य यथान्यायं गामयं च न्यवेदयन् । तेषां ये तत्प्रभावज्ञाः प्रणेमुः शिरसा बलम् ॥
(Śrīmad Bhagavata 10.68.19)
meaning-They received Balarāma with due honours and offered Him arghya and a cow; and such of them as knew His greatness saluted Him with their heads (bent low).

(c) When Sudāmā visited Dvārakā, the reception to him included the gift of a cow, even though reception by madhuparka rites is not clearly specified :
धूपैः सुरभिभिमित्रं प्रदीपावलिभिर्मुदा । अर्चित्वाऽऽवेद्य ताम्बूलं गां च स्वागतमब्रवीत् ॥
(Śrīmad Bhagavata 10.80.22)
meaning-Having joyfully worshipped His friend with scented fumes and rows of lights, and offering him betel-leaf easoned with catechu, lime, areca-nut parings and cloves etc. and a cow, the Lord greeted the Brahmana with sweet words.

(d) On his arrival at the place of Bahulāśva in Janakapura, when Lord Krsna was given a reception with madhuparka rite, gift of a cow is very explicit :-

सकुटुम्बो वहन् मूर्धा पूजयांचक ईश्वरान् । गन्धमाल्याम्बराकल्पधूपदीपार्घ्यगोवृषैः
(Śrīmad Bhagavata 10.86.29)

meaning-King Bahulāśva sprinkled that all-purifying water on his head and on his relatives and worshipped the Lord as well as the divine sages by offering them sandal-paste, flowers, textiles, ornaments, scented fumes, lights, oblations of water, cow and oxen.

Ingredients of Madhuparka

Madhuparka has been prescribed for special honoured guests who have come from far-off places. Wherever the ingredients of madhuparka have been described in the scriptures, nowhere has meat been included in them. Curd, ghee, milk, honey and candy-sugar are the main constituents of madhuparka. Some have not taken all of them but mentioned only a few of them. In some sources, parched barley powder (sattu) has also been mentioned as one of the ingredients of madhuparka.

Now let us see what are the ingredients of madhuparka in the various texts :—

1. TANTRASĀRA (Chowkhambā Sanskrit Series, Varanasi, November 1938, Chapter I, page 53) :

आज्यं दधिमधुमिश्रं मधुपर्कं विदुर्बुधाः ।

"Wise men prescribe the mixture of ghee, curd and honey in madhuparka."

The same has been quoted in Śabda-kalpadrama (Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series, Varanasi, 1961, Part III, page 599, column 2) while explaining the word madhuparka.

2. At the same place in Śabda-kalpadruma in the meanings of madhuparka, the following has been quoted from the KĀLIKĀ-PURĀṆA, chapter 7

दधि सर्पिर्जलं क्षौद्रं सिताश्चैताभिस्तु पञ्चभिः ।
प्रोच्यते मधुपर्कस्तु सर्वदेवौघतुष्टये ॥

"Curd, ghee, milk, honey and candy-sugar—all these five constitute madhuparka which satisfies all the gods."

3. YĀJÑAVALKYA SAMHITĀ by Brahma (Smṛti-sandarbha, first edition, part 4, page 2430, published by Mansukh Rai Mor, 5 Clive Row, Calcutta), chapter 8, stanza 202.

कांस्यपात्रे समायुक्तं दधिमधुघृतैर्युतम् ।
मधुपर्कः स विज्ञेयः मिश्रणं स्यात् प्रतोषणी ॥

"The preparation with curd, honey and ghee in a bronze vessel is called madhuparka."

4. ĀŚVALĀYANA-GṚHYA-SŪTRA 1.24.5,6

दधनि मध्वानीय, सर्पिर्वा मध्वलाभे ।

"One should mix curd and honey, and ghee if honey is not available."

5. PĀRASKARA-GṚHYA-SŪTRA chapter on marriage, 1.3.5

आहरन्ति विष्टरं पाद्यं पादार्थमुदकमर्घमाचमनीयं ।
मधुपर्कं दधिमधुघृतमपिहितं कांस्ये कांस्येन ॥

After describing other items in the first line, the ingredients of madhuparka have been detailed in the second line :
"Madhuparka is made of curd, honey and ghee in a bronze vessel covered with a bronze lid.

6. VĀRĀHA-GṚHYA-SŪTRA 12.4

कांस्ये चमसे वा दधनि मध्वासिच्य,
वर्षीयसा पिधायाचमनीय प्रथमैः प्रतिपद्यन्ते ।

"The celebrant should come for worship with mixture of honey and curd in a bronze vessel or in a camasa vessel shaped like the prayita covered with a big lid, along with the sipping water."

7. ĀPASTAMBIYA-DHARMA-SŪTRA 2.4.8.8, 9

दधिमधुसंसृष्टं मधुपर्कः पयो वा मधुसंसृष्टम् । अभावे उदकम् ।

"Madhuparka should be prepared by mixing curd and honey or by mixing milk and honey, and if they are not available, water should be mixed with honey."

8. BAUDHĀYNA-GṚHYA-SŪTRA 1.2.10—13

In sutra 9, bringing of madhu has been described. In sūtras 10 to 13 the ingredients to be mixed with honey have been described as follows :

दधि पयो वा द्वितीयं स द्विवृत् ।

"If curd or milk is mixed with honey, it is called dvivṛt (द्विवृत्)"

घृतं तृतीयं स त्रिवृत् ।

"If the third ingredient ghee is added, it is called trivṛt (त्रिवृत्)"

मधु द्वितीयं तथ्यस्तुर्यं स चतुर्वृत् ।

"by mixing the second ingredient i.e. if firstly milk has been mixed then curd and if firstly curd has been mixed then by mixing milk, it is called caturvṛt (चतुर्वृत्)"

आपः पञ्चमीस्स पाङ्क्तः ।

"by mixing the fifth ingredient, i.e. water, it is called pāṅkta (पाङ्क्तः)

9. JAIMNIYA-GṚHYA-SŪTRA 1.19

मधोर्दधि मधु आनिषिञ्चि अमत्रे, मधुना चेद्
दधिमन्थोऽद्भिरुदमन्थः, पयसा चेत् पयस्यः ।

"Curd and honey are mixed in it. With curd it is called dadhimantha (दधिमन्थ) ; with water it is termed udamantha (उदमन्थ) and with milk it is designated as payasya (पयस्य)"

10. HIRAṆYAKEŚI-GṚHYA-SŪTRA 1.12.10

The text of Hiraṇyakeśi-gṛhya-sūtra was neither available with any book seller nor in any library. But its evidence was found in the German book : 'Ritual Literatur Vedische Opfer und Zauber' by Alfred Hillebrandt, published by Verlag von Karl. J. Trubner, Strassburg, in 1897. It is cited below in the original German, with an interlinear English word-for-word translation :

Hierauf folgt die Darbietung des Spulwassers und des Madhuparka.
Hereafter follows the offering of rinsing water and of Madhuparka.

Dieser besteht nach Hiraṇyakeśi 1.12.10 aus drei
These comprise according to Hiraṇyakeśi 1.12.10 of three or five components, namely curd, honey, ghee which can be wozu noch Apaḥ und saktu's treten konnen mixed with water and saktus (flour of barley, parched in hot sand)

According to Hiraṇyakeśi 1.12.10—firstly water should be offered for washing and then madhuparka which contains three or five ingredients—curd, honey and ghee; to which water and groats of barley meal (saktu) can be added.

11. Meanings of madhuparka in Monier-Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary, page 780—

   (i) A mixture of honey ;

   (ii) An offering of honey and milk ;

   (iii) A respectful offering to a guest, or to the bridegroom on his arrival at the door of the father of the bride, sometimes consisting of equal parts of curd, honey and clarified butter.

At other places too wherever the ingredients of madhuparka have been detailed, what to talk of beef, there is not even the slightest indication of meat. When meat has nowhere been included in the ingredients of madhuparka, then how is it alleged that meat is essential in madhuparka or that there can be no madhuparka without meat. The most essential ingredient of madhuparka is honey, without which there can be no madhuparka. Only the Āśvalāyana-gṛhya-sūtra prescribes that ghee can be taken if honey is not available, nowhere else such a prescription has been made ; though other ingredients in place of milk, curd or ghee have been prescribed. Āpastambīya-dharma-sūtra has even prescribed that if neither milk nor curd is available, then madhuparka can be prepared by mixing honey in water. It is not understandable as to how the Āśvalāyana-gṛhya-sūtra has accepted madhuparka without honey when the name madhuparka itself indicates the essentiality of honey in it. There appears to be some transgression. It is probably due to a pressing occasion when some followers of Āśvalāyana must have ruled in a hurry that ghee could be mixed in place of honey when it is not available, to avoid inconvenience of waiting to the guest. From that very time onwards the followers of Āśvalāyana would have recognised the convention of mixing ghee in place of honey when it was not available. Whatever it be, meat is not mentioned anywhere in the ingredients of madhuparka, inspite of ransacking searches.

The descriptions of the ingredients of madhuparka in the various scriptures prove that there is not even an inkling of meat in madhuparka. So it is firmly proved that madhuparka contains no meat. Whichever

Impracticability of Beef in the Reception of a Guest with Madhuparka

The rites of receiving an honourable guest with madhuparka have been detailed in the Āśvalāyana-gṛhya-sutra 1.24 and Pāraskara-gṛhya-sūtra 1.3. Only on the basis of these two gṛhya-sūtras, people opine that meat (beef) is essential in madhuparka. Let us now consider the possibility of meat in madhuparka according to the rites described in them.

The sequence of rites given in these gṛhya-sūtras is as follows :

1. Offering of a seat and its acceptance ;
2. Offering of water for washing the feet ;
3. Offering of arghya (अर्घ्य) and its acceptance ;
4. Offering of sipping water (ācamanīya) and its acceptance ;
5. Accepting madhuparka, mixing it with the thumb and third finger, sprinkling madhuparka in the four directions by these very fingers, taking madhuparka thrice from its middle by these very fingers, and leaving the residue ;

6. Cleaning the mouth by sipping water.

The rites upto here are almost identical in the Āśvalāyana and Pāraskara-gṛhya-sūtras. Till this place there is no point for difference of opinion. Hereafter interpretations differ, which will be discussed separately according to both the gṛhya-sūtras in the forthcoming sections. Here it will suffice to point out that there is no mention of meat in the ingredients of madhuparka, nor is meat mentioned till the completion of the rite by cleansing the mouth with sipping water. When a guest arrives, all the rites in the chain of his honoured reception by madhuparka are performed one after the other in a regular sequence and without interruption. There is no waiting for any length of time. Therefore, it does not seem possible that a cow could be slaughtered instantaneously, her meat taken out, be cooked, be mixed with madhuparka and then it could be served to the guest. It takes a long time to slaughter a cow, to extract her meat and then to cook it. It does not seem possible that an honoured guest was required to wait for such a long time. The followers of Āśvalāyana do not let an honourable guest wait even for honey and hence accept ghee in its place.

Moreover, a guest cannot consume the entire meat of a cow. The quantity of madhuparka for the occasion can permit only a fraction of an ounce of meat in it. How can it be desirable to slaughter a cow for such a little quantity of meat ? Therefore, when a cow is brought after the guest has partaken of madhuparka and has cleansed his mouth by sipping water, her bringing in can be either for gifting her to the guest, or for offering instantaneously drawn milk to the guest for which he will not have to wait.

Gift of a Cow in Madhuparka

Some scriptures specifically prescribe that a cow should be gifted in madhuparka.

Gift of a Cow in Madhuparka

1. Aruṇa-smṛti, chapter 1, (published by Mansukhrai Mor, 5. Clive Row, Calcutta) :

    यज्ञकर्मणि या धेनुर्या धेनुर्धर्मकर्मणि ॥ ११६ ॥
    प्रायश्चित्तनिमित्ते या होमार्थं दुर्बलाय या ।
    मधुपर्के च या धेनुः या धेनुः कर्मसिद्धये ॥ ११७ ॥
    यतः सर्वा द्विजो विद्वान् प्रतिगृह्य यतात्मतः ।
    न स पापेन लिप्येत पद्मपत्रमिवाम्भसा ॥ ११८ ॥

    "As there is no effect of water on a lotus leaf, similarly sin does not affect a learned dvija who accepts a cow gifted at the time of a yajña, in a religious performance, on performing expiation rites, for offerings (homa), for regaining his lost health, in the rites of madhuparka, and on fulfilment of desire (karma-siddhi)."

2. Manu-smṛti 3.3 :

    तं प्रतीतं स्वधर्मेण ब्रह्मदायहरं पितुः ।
    स्रग्विणं तल्प आसीनमर्हयेत्प्रथमं गवा ॥

    "Being justly applauded for his strict performance of his duty, and having received from his natural or spiritual father the sacred gift of the Vedas, let him on an elegant bed, decked with a garland of flowers, and let his father honour him before his nuptials with the present of a cow according to the Madhuparka rite." (translated by Raja Rajendra Lala Mitra in 'Beef in Ancient India')

Manu-smṛti 3.119, 120 prescribes that ordained person who has finished his studies should be honoured by madhuparka and Manu-smṛti 3.3 prescribes that a cow should be gifted to such an ordained one ; and in the succeeding stanzas he has been permitted to marry an auspicious girl. It is clear from this that an ordained brahmacārī should first be honoured with madhuparka along with an offer of a cow. Probably its reason is that one who has been physically weakened by the hard labours of studies and by performing the strict duties of a brahmacārī should increase his vigour and regain his health by drinking cow's milk before marriage so that he may be able to carry on with married life without adverse effect.

3. The following sūtras of the Āpastamba-dharma-sūtra 2.4.8 are also indicative of the offering or gifting of a cow :

   (i) गोमधुपर्कार्हो वेदाध्यायः

   "One who studies the Vedas is eligible to a cow and madhuparka." (3)

   (ii) आचार्यायर्त्विजे श्वशुराय राज्ञ इति परिसंवत्सरादुपतिष्ठद्भ्यो गौर्मधुपर्कश्च—

   "A teacher, priest, father-in-law, king—if they come once a year they should be offered a cow and madhuparka."

Immediately after these sūtras follows the enumeration of the ingredients of madhuparka :

दधि मधुसंसृष्टं मधुपर्कः पयो वा मधुसंसृष्टम् । अभावे उदकम् ।

If the sense of a 'cow' would have been its beef, then it would have surely been included in the enumeration of ingredients. Evidently therefore, only the gifting of a cow is desired in these sutras.

Historical Examples of the Gift of a Cow with Madhuparka

Let us now look into the historical examples of madhuparka, wherein only the gift of a cow is mentioned and not serving its beef after immediate slaughter.

Vālmīkīya Rāmāyaṇa :

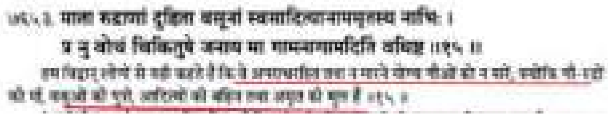
Prohibition of Killing Cows and Bulls in Sanatan Dharma and Prohibition of Consumption of Beef

Rig Veda 8.101.15 – Cows are Aghanya – Not to be Killed

हम विद्वान् लोगों से यही कहते हैं कि वे अपराधरहित तथा न मारने योग्य गौओं को न मारें, क्योंकि गौ-रुद्रों की माँ, वस्ओं की पुत्री, आदित्यों की बहिन तथा अमृत की मूल हैं ॥१५

We say this to the learned: do not harm the innocent and inviolable cows—because the cow is the mother of the Rudras, daughter of the Vasus, sister of the Ādityas, and the source of ambrosia (amṛta). (Verse 15)



Sayanacharya in his commentary on Rig Veda 8.101.15 too said that Cows are Inviolable not to killed nor harmed at any circumstances

Once upon a time, the sages and ascetics approached Kin Nahusha and respectfully submitted: "You have committed the unforgivable sin of killing Mother Cow and Prajāpati Bull. Nahusha! This is a heinous act unfit for a king. Because of this misdeed, great sorrow has befallen all of us."

O Jājali! After saying this, those revered sages—once praised by Nahusha himself—transformed the sin into one hundred and one diseases, casting them upon all living beings. They branded King Nahusha as a feticide (bhruṇahatyārī) and declared with firm resolve: "We shall not offer sacrificial oblations in your yajña.

From these Evidences it must be clear to all that in Madhupark and all types of Vedic Rituals Killing Cows , Bulls or consuming their meat is Strictly Prohibited . One Who Kills Animals and eats their meat in the name of Vedic Rituals (including Madhupark etc) is destined to go to hell

Allegations-

Asvalayana , Parashar Griihya Sutra and various other Grihya Sutras says Mamsa should be offered in Madhupark hence meat eating and beef is allowed in Madhupark

Refutation-

Geeta Press Gorakhpur in its text " A Review of Beef Eating in Ancient India " explained the meaning of Mamsa in context of Madhupark as Nourishing Food Rich in Fats like Curd or Milk or fleshy part of fruits or substantial milk products thickened by boiling and sweetened like रबड़ी, खोया, सिखरन

Pandit Dinanath Sastri, in his book 'Sanatana-Dharmālok' Vol. 6, pages 337-338, has interpreted the word māṁsa (मांस) in relation to madhuparka as under:
"The above-stated ingredients of madhuparka should be (मांसल) i.e. rich in fats, nourishing and should not be devoid of substance. To the word māṁsa (मोस), has been suffixed in accordance with अर्श आदिभ्योऽच् (Aṣṭādhyāyī 5.2.127) in the sense of 'with, together' and it gives the meaning of 'rich in fats'.
This meaning is also relevant to the present context. In practice it means that the milk and curd used in madhuparka should not be that from which butter or cream has been extracted. Milk or curd from which butter, cream has been extracted will neither be rich in fats, nor delicious and tasty, nor well nourishing, rather it will be devoid of substance. Only good things should be used for an honoured guest and not things devoid of substance.

Pandit Madhavacharya Sastri has interpreted the word māṁsa (मांस) on page 39 of the 'Removal of Doubts' Number (शङ्का समाधान अन्न) of his monthly magazine 'Lokālok' published by Madhava Pustakalaya, Dharmadham, Kamla Nagar, Delhi-7). There he says that in the context of madhuparka, māṁsa (मांस) means the fleshy part of fruits, kernels of dry fruits like almonds etc., fresh newly milked warm milk, or substantial milk products thickened by boiling and sweetened like रबड़ी, खोया, सिखरन etc. This meaning is also not irrelevant as it is not contradictory to principles. Incongruence, if any, is that fruits, etc. are not mentioned anywhere in the ingredients of madhuparka, but curd and milk do figure among the ingredients and newly-milked fresh warm milk of a cow is desirable to remove the fatigue of the honoured guest, These discussions make it clear that there is no place even for any surmise of animal-flesh in madhuparka.

2. Pandit Dinanath Sastri, in his book 'Sanātana-Dharmālok' Vol. 6, pages 337-338, has interpreted the word māṁsa (मांस) in relation to madhuparka as under :

"The above-stated ingredients of madhuparka should be (मांसल) i.e. rich in fats, nourishing and should not be devoid of substance. To the word māṁsa (मांस), has been suffixed in accordance with अर्श आदिभ्योऽच् (Aṣṭādhyāyī 5.2.127) in the sense of 'with, together' and it gives the meaning of 'rich in fats'.

3. Pandit Madhavacharya Sastri has interpreted the word māṁsa (मांस) on page 39 of the 'Removal of Doubts' Number (शङ्का समाधान अङ्क) of his monthly magazine 'Lokālok' (published by Madhava Pustakalaya, Dharmadham, Kamla Nagar, Delhi-7). Explanation by Acharya Gangadhar Pathal Maithil on Madhupark in his book Gau Janmantara page 159/184

The पूर्वपक्ष argues that in ancient times, cow slaughter was considered a necessary duty for preparing madhuparka as part of guest hospitality. It cites 'न त्वेव अमा सोऽर्घः स्यात्' (Pāraskara Gṛhya Sūtra 1.4.28) to claim that meat-inclusive madhuparka was mandated.

The उत्तरपक्ष refutes this, stating that madhuparka traditionally consists of sweet items like dadhi, ghṛta, madhu, or śarkarā, making the inclusion of cow meat irrelevant. It emphasizes that madhuparka is a ritual offering to the groom, and if he doesn't consume the entire offering, how could he possibly consume an entire cow? That would be akin to 'charmatantau mahiṣīṁ hanti'—killing a whole buffalo just for its hide.

It further notes that meat is typically savory, which clashes with the sweet nature of madhuparka. Given the cow's sacred status as aghnyā, aditi, and ahī, how could she be ritually taken or harmed? At that moment, the mantra from Pāraskara Gṛhya Sūtra 1.3.27 is recited:

'माता रुद्राणां-दुहिता वसूनां..... मा गामनागामदितिं वधिष्ट, मम चामुष्य च पाप्मान हनोमि'

This mantra pleads: "O conscious human! Do not kill this innocent aditi cow; I destroy my own sin." If this is the meaning, then killing the aditi cow is clearly impermissible. Moreover, if slaughter were mandatory, there would be no mention of 'yadi utsisṛkṣet', which implies an option for release. Therefore, the term 'ālabet' should be interpreted, as previously, to mean touch, not kill.

The phrase 'samāmso'rghaḥ' is interpreted here to mean that the madhuparka-type offering should be nutritionally rich (māṁsala), implying that the ingredients like curd (dadhi), honey (madhu), fresh butter (navanīta), or ghee (ghṛta) should be wholesome and substantial—not insipid or diluted. It should not be made from commercial milk or artificial honey. In the gṛhastha āśrama, the groom is expected to consume nourishing versions of these items, which contradicts the opposing interpretation.

These three substances are considered highly potent. In Ayurveda, no medicine is taken without honey as a carrier (anupāna). The Vedas even declare 'āyur vai ghṛtam' (Taittirīya Saṁhitā 2.3.2.2), meaning "ghee is life." Curd is also known for its strength and benefits, which is why it's included in pañcāmṛta. If these ingredients are weak or diluted, they lose their nourishing quality. Hence, the emphasis on samāṁsata—nutritional richness—in madhuparka. Meat is irrelevant here, as it is not used in sweet offerings.

Once such nourishing food is served, dakṣiṇā (ritual gift) is traditionally given afterward. At that time, the phrase 'gaugaurgoḥ' is invoked, and a cow is gifted to the teacher and groom—a significant offering. That's why the term 'gaurdakṣiṇā' appears frequently in Gṛhya Sūtras, and cows are called 'godhāna' (wealth of cows). Afterward, grass is cut and offered to the cow.

Hence the instruction: 'utsṛjata tṛṇānyattu'.

According to the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam, when Lord Kṛṣṇa welcomed Akrūra with pādya and madhuparka, there was no mention of meat. When Akrūra arrived in Vraja, he saw:

"dadarśa kṛṣṇaṁ rāmaṁ ca vraje godohanaṁ gatau I pītanīlāmbardharau śaradamburuhekṣaṇau" (10.38.28)

Both brothers were seen seated at the spot where cows were milked. Everyone joyfully greeted one another. After that, the Lord formally welcomed Akrūra with pādya, madhuparka, and other rituals:

“पृष्ट्वाऽथ स्वागतं तस्मै निवेद्य च वरासनम् । प्रक्षाल्य विधिवत्पादौ मधुपर्कार्हणमाहरत् ॥ 10.38.38”

Then, having offered a cow to the guest, and affectionately relieving his fatigue with a foot massage, the Lord served him pure and richly prepared food with devotion:

“निवेद्य गां चातिथये संवाह्य श्रान्तमादृतः । अन्नं बहुगुणं मेध्यं श्रद्धयोपाहरद्विभुः ॥ 10.38.39”

The Lord brought Akrūra into the house, inquired about his well-being, seated him on a respected seat, washed his feet as per tradition, and offered madhuparka. He gave him a cow, massaged his feet to ease fatigue, and lovingly served him sanctified, nourishing food.

Thus, imagining the inclusion of meat in the madhuparka ritual is clearly irrelevant.

मधुपर्कमें मांसका विधान नहीं

पूर्वपक्ष

'प्राचीनकालमें अतिथिसत्कारकेलिए भी मधुपर्कनिर्माणके हेतु गोहत्या आवश्यक कर्तव्य थी । 'न त्वेव अमांसोऽर्घः स्यात्' (पार. १।३।२८) यहाँ मधुपर्कके समय मांससहित मधुपर्कका ही आदेश किया गया है ।' (एक अज्ञ महाशय)

उत्तरपक्ष

यह भी बात ठीक मालूम नहीं होती । मधुपर्कमें दधि, घृत, मधु या शर्करा ये मीठी वस्तुएँ होती हैं, वहाँ गोमांसका काम भी क्या? यह मधुपर्क वरकी पूजा होती है । जब वह मधुपर्क ही सारा नहीं खाता, तो एक समूची गायको कैसे निगल लेगा? यह तो फिर 'चर्मतन्ती महिषीं हन्ति' चमड़ेकी तन्तुकेलिये समूची भैंसको मारने जैसा होगा, सौ-दोसौ आदमियोंका भक्ष्य एक वर कैसे खायेगा? और यह भी सुना जाता है कि- मांसकी वस्तुएँ नमकीन ही बनती हैं, तो मधुपर्कके समय नमक अथवा मांसका काम ही क्या? अघ्न्या (अहन्तव्य), अदिति (अखण्डनीया), अघ्नी (न हन्यते) होनेसे वहाँ गाय गृहीत हो ही कैसे सकती है? उस समय- 'माता रुद्राणां-दुहिता वसूनां...... मा गामनागामदितिं वधिष्ट, मम चामुष्य च पाप्मानं हनोमि' (१।३।२७)

पारस्करगृह्यसूत्रका यह मन्त्र पढ़ा जाता है, इसमें कहा है कि- 'हे चेतनावान् (समझदार) मनुष्य! इस निरपराध अदिति (अखण्डनीया) गायको मत मार, मैं अपने पापको मारता हूँ', जबकि इसमें ऐसा अर्थ है, तो उस अदिति गायका मारना ही कैसे सम्भव हो सकता है? और फिर वहाँ वध अनिवार्य होता; तो 'यदि

[illegible]

दित्सृजेत्' यह उत्सर्गपक्ष (त्यागपक्ष) ही न होता । अतः वहाँ 'आलभेत्'का अर्थ पूर्वरीत्या स्पर्श ही समझना चाहिये । 'अमांसोऽर्घः' का हमारे विचारमें 'मधुपर्क-रूप अर्घ समास हो' का भाव मधुपर्ककी मांसलतासे है, अर्थात् उस समयके दधि, मधु, नवनीत अथवा घृत मांसल (पौष्टिक) हों, निःसार न हों । बाजारू दूधके न हों; शहद भी बनावटी चीनी आदिका न हो । गृहस्थाश्रममें मांसवर्धित (पौष्टिक) दधि, मधु, घृतका सेवन करते रहना चाहिये- यह सूचित हो रहा है; अतः यहाँ प्रतिपक्षिप्रोक्त अर्थ संगत नहीं । इन तीनोंमें बड़ी शक्ति है, आयुर्वेदमें बिना मधुके अनुपानके कोई औषधि ही नहीं खायी जाती । घृतको तो वेदने- 'आयुर्वै घृतम्' (तै.सं. २।३।२।२) कहा है । दधि भी बहुत बल और लाभ देनेवाली है- इसलिये 'पञ्चामृत'में इन्हींका उपयोग होता है । तब यदि निःसार होंगे; तो अमांसल होनेसे मांसवर्धक नहीं होंगे । इसलिये इनको 'अमांसो मधुपर्कः' अमांसतापर बल दिया गया है । मांस इसमें अप्रासंगिक है, क्योंकि वह मधुपर्कमें प्रयुक्त नहीं होता । तब हमसे प्रदर्शित तात्पर्य ही यहाँ ठीक है । जब ऐसा पौष्टिक भोजन खिला दिया गया तो, दक्षिणा भी तो भोजन के बाद हुआ करती है; तो उस समय 'गौर्गौर्गौः' कहकर आचार्य एवं वर आदिको 'गौ' दी जाती है, यह एक बड़ी भारी दक्षिणा है, इसी कारण गृह्यसूत्रोंमें स्थान-स्थानपर 'गौर्दक्षिणा' पद आता है । इसीलिये गौओंको 'गोधन' कहते हैं । फिर तृणभक्षणके कारण तृण गायको डाले । इसलिये कहा जाता है- 'उत्सृजत तृणान्यत्तु' ।

श्रीमद्भागवतके अनुसार भी भगवान् श्रीकृष्णने जब स्वयं, मधुपर्कादिसे अक्रूरजीका स्वागत किया तो वहाँ मांसकी कोई भी चर्चा नहीं है ।

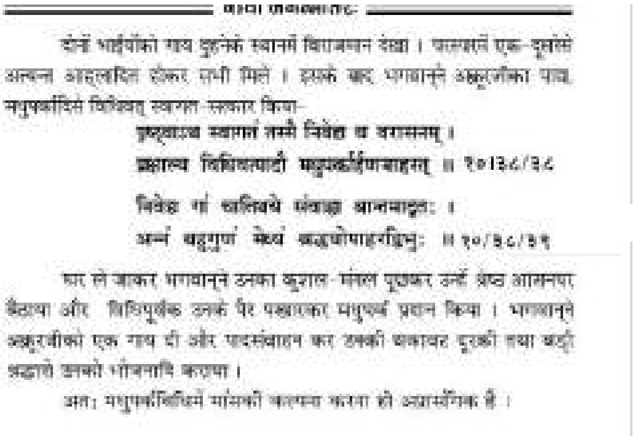
ददर्श कृष्णं रामं च व्रजे गोदोहनं गतौ ।
पीतनीलाम्बरधरौ शरदम्बुरुहेक्षणौ ॥ १०।३८।२८



दोनों भाईयोंको गाय दुहनेके स्थानमें विराजमान देखा। परस्परमें एक-दूसरेसे अत्यन्त आह्लादित होकर सभी मिले। इसके बाद भगवान्ने अक्रूरजीका पाद्य, मधुपर्कादिसे विधिवत् स्वागत-सत्कार किया—

पृष्ट्वाथ स्वागतं तस्मै निवेद्य च वरासनम्।
प्रक्षाल्य विधिवत्पादौ मधुपर्कार्हणमाहरत्॥ १०।३८/३८

निवेद्य गां चातिथये संवाह्य श्रान्तमादृतः।
अन्नं बहुगुणं मेध्यं श्रद्धयोपाहरद्विभुः॥ १०/३८/३९

घर ले जाकर भगवान्ने उनका कुशल-मंगल पूछकर उन्हें श्रेष्ठ आसनपर बैठाया और विधिपूर्वक उनके पैर पखारकर मधुपर्क प्रदान किया। भगवान्ने अक्रूरजीको एक गाय दी और पादसंवाहन कर उनकी थकावट दूरकी तथा बड़ी श्रद्धासे उनको भोजनादि कराया।

अतः मधुपर्कविधिमें मांसकी कल्पना करना ही अप्रासंगिक है।

Allegations-

Goghna- the guest for whom a cow is killed

Literally the word 'Goghna' means a killer of cows. However in the ancient Indian context it has a unique application. The word 'Goghna' occurs in ancient Indian Grammarian Panini's book Ashtadhyayi. He mentions in Ashtadyayi 3/4/73

दाशगोघ्नौ संप्रदाने

"The words 'daasa' and 'goghna' are irregularly formed and the affix in these denotes the idea of the Dative or Recipient."

What does Panini mean that the word 'goghna' denotes the idea of recipient? He intends to say that in popular usage 'goghna' does not mean 'the killer of cow' but 'he on whose coming the cow is killed in order to give him, that is to say, a guest'. It is this irregularly formed word 'goghna' which is made applicable to the priests, guests, sons-in-law, and not the regularly formed word 'goghna' which means 'a killer of a cow'.

Thus guests in ancient India were called 'goghna', because on their coming a cow was slaughtered to be served to them.

This is exactly the explanation given in the 14th century grammar book Siddhanta Kaumudi by Pandit Bhattoji Dikshit. This book is taught to university level students across India for learning sanskrit grammar. In it, the sutra of Panini दाशगोघ्नौ संप्रदाने is explained in the 'Uttarkradant' chapter as follows:

गां हंति तस्मै गौघ्नो.अतिथिः

For it a cow is slaughtered; a guest is called 'goghna'

Almost similar definition of 'goghna' is provided by the Vedic commentator Acharya Sayana in his book Maadhaviya dhaatuvrittih. He writes

गौर्यस्मै दातुं हन्यते स गोघ्नः अतिथिः

"A person for whom a cow is slaughtered, is known as 'goghna' and 'atithi' (guest)." Thus it is clear that in ancient India, cows were slaughtered for honouring the guests

Refutation–

Geeta Press Gorakhpur explained in its book " A review of Beef Eating in Ancient India " the meaning of Goghna Atithi page no 151

Goghnah (गोघ्नः) has been explained as गौर्हन्यते तस्मै गोधनः । There is no scope for difference of opinion in this etymology. There certainly is difference in the interpretation of हन्यते. Those, who propagate beef-eating, find it handy and interpret goghnah (गोघ्नः) as 'the killer of a cow', inspite of the fact that they are aware of the multiple meanings of the root han :

हन – हिंसागत्योः । गतेस्त्रयोऽर्थाः- ज्ञानं, गमनं, प्राप्तिश्चेति ।
Besides the meaning 'to kill', the root हन् in हन्यते also means 'to multiply; to go to move; to obtain; to attain; to get; to touch; to come into contact; etc. (see the Sanskrit-English dictionaries of Monier-Williams and V. S. Apte). But they do not want to take these meanings into account because by them their main purpose of the propagation of beef-eating is not served. According to the previous discussions, when any possibility of beef or any other kind of meat cannot be proved in the madhuparka rites to entertain a guest, but what can be proved is the gifting of a cow, then it is clear that the meanings of goghnah (गोघ्नः) can only be one who 'touches' the cow for accepting her in gift and by drinking her milk; or one who 'multiplies' the number of his cows by taking the cow in gift, etc.
According to the Dhātupātha (धातुपाठ) of Acārya Pāṇini which reads हन हिंसागत्योः the meanings of the root han (हन्) are himsā (violence) and gati (movement). Gati (गति) has three meanings; (i) jñāna (learning); (ii) gamana (going or moving); and (iii) prāpti (obtaining, attaining, getting). The meaning of हन्यते in गौर्हन्यते तस्मै गोघ्नः is गम्यते, प्राप्यते i.e. 'attained, obtained'. Scriptural proof has been adduced under the heading 'Gift of a Cow in Madhuparka', which makes it clear that there can be no other meaning of goghnah (गोघ्नः) except 'one who gets a cow in gift', or 'one who takes a cow with him after obtaining her in gift'.
Pāṇini's sūtra दाशगोघ्नौ सम्प्रदाने 3.4.73 also makes it clear that the words दाश and गोघ्न are formed irregularly in the sense of the dative (सम्प्रदाने). If the dative case (चतुर्थी) alone had been intended here, i.e. if the aim had been to convey that the cow was killed for a guest, then the word सम्प्रदाने would not have been used, but तस्मै would have been employed instead, i.e. an indeclinable (अव्यय) indicative of the dative case would have been used. But, as it is phrased सम्प्रदाने, the only sense expressed here is that of gifting. Therefore, the correct and genuine signification of गोघ्नोऽतिथिः is 'a person to whom a cow is gifted'.
The word हस्तघ्न occurs in the mantra beginning अहिरिव भोगैः in the Rgveda and Yajurveda. Its meaning has been given in Monier-Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary on page 1295, column 1, as follows:
हस्तघ्न – a kind of hand-guard (protecting the hand in archery RV).
When the word (हस्तघ्न) hastaghna can mean 'a kind of hand-guard' then why can the meaning of गोघ्नोऽतिथिः not be 'a guest who protects a cow'?

Goghnaḥ (गोघ्नः) has been explained as गौर्हन्यते यस्मै गोघ्नः। There is no scope for difference of opinion in this etymology. There certainly is difference in the interpretation of हन्यते. Those, who propagate beef-eating, find it handy and interpret goghnaḥ (गोघ्नः) as 'the killer of a cow', inspite of the fact that they are aware of the multiple meanings of the root han :

The word हस्तघ्न occurs in the mantra beginning अहिरिव भोगैः in the Ṛgveda and Yajurveda. Its meaning has been given in Monier-Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary on page 1295, column 1, as follows :

हस्तघ्न—a kind of hand-guard (protecting the hand in archery RV).

When the word (हस्तघ्न) hastaghna can mean 'a kind of hand-guard' then why can the meaning of गोघ्नोऽतिथिः not be 'a guest who protects a cow' ?

A Few Scriptural Proof for Gifting of Cows in Madhupark

1. Aruna-smrti, chapter 1, (published by Mansukhrai Mor, 5, Clive Row, Calcutta):
   यश्वकर्मणि या धेनुर्या धेनुर्धर्मकर्मणि ॥ ११६ ॥ प्रायश्चित्तनिमित्ते वा होमार्थ दुर्बलाय वा । मधुपर्के व या धेनुः या धेनुः कर्मसिद्धये ॥ ११७ ॥ एताः सर्वा द्विजो विद्वान् प्रतिगृह्य यतस्ततः । न स पापेन लिप्येत पद्मपत्रमिषांभसा ॥ ११८ ॥
   "As there is no effect of water on a lotus leaf, similarly sin does not effect a learned dwija who accepts a cow gifted at the time of a yajña, in a religious performance, on performing expiation rites, for offerings (homa), for regaining his lost health, in the rites of madhuparka, and on fulfilment of desire (karma-siddhi)."

2. Manu-smrti 3.3:
   तं प्रतीतं स्वधर्मेण ब्रह्मदायहरं पितुः । स्रग्विणं तल्प आसीनमर्हयेत्प्रथमं गवा ॥
   "Being justly applauded for his strict performance of his duty, and having received from his natural or spiritual father the sacred gift of the Vedas, let him on an elegant bed, decked with a garland of flowers, and let his father honour him before his nuptials with the present of a cow according to the Madhuparka rite." (translated by Raja Rajendra Lala Mitra in 'Beef in Ancient India')

3. The following sutras of the Apastamba-dharma-sūtra 2.4.8 are also indicative of the offering or gifting of a cow:
   (i) गोमधुपर्कार्हो वेदाध्यायः
   "One who studies the Vedas is eligible to a cow and madhuparka." (5)
   (ii) आचार्यायत्विजे श्वशुराय राज्ञ इति परिसंवत्सरादुपतिष्ठद्भ्यो गौमधुपर्कश्च –
   "A teacher, priest, father-in-law, king-if they come once a year they should be offered a cow and madhuparka."
   Immediately after these sūtras follows the enumeration of the ingredients of madhuparka :
   दधि मधुसंसृष्टं मधुपर्कः पयो वा मधुसंसृष्टम् । अभावे उदकम् ॥
   If the sense of a 'cow' would have been its beef, then it would have surely been included in the enumeration of ingredients. Evidently therefore, only the gifting of a cow is desired in these sutras.

Historical Examples of the Gift of a Cow with Madhuparka
Let us now look into the historical examples of madhuparka, wherein only the gift of a cow is mentioned and not serving its beef after immediate slaughter.
Valmikiya Rāmāyana :
(a) When Śri Rama went to Bharadvāja Muni, he (Bharadvāja Muni) gave a reception to Śri Rāma by offering madhuparka and a cow in gift.
तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राजपुत्रस्य धीमतः । उपानयत धर्मात्मा गामर्थ्यमुदकं ततः ॥
(Ayodhyā-kānda 54.17)- meaning-Pious Bharadvāja Muni after hearing highly intellected Prince Śri Rāma, offered him water for washing feet and hands and then offered arghya (madhuparka) and also a cow in gift.

Mahābhārata:
(a) When Śri Narada presented himself in the assembly of King Yudhisthira, the King received him with madhuparka rite and with the gift of a cow.
गां चैव मधुपर्क च सम्प्रदायार्घ्यमेव च । अर्चयामास रत्नैश्च सर्वकामैश्च धर्मवित् ॥
(Sabhā-parva 5.15)
meaning-The king, conversant with religious observances & duties, worshipped them in the prescribed manner by offering water (for washing feet and hands), madhuparka and a cow in gift and pleased them by fulfilling all their desires.

1. Aruṇa-smṛti, chapter 1, (published by Manmkhrai Mor, 5. Clive Row, Calcutta) :

यज्ञकर्मणि या धेनुर्या धेनुर्धर्मकर्मणि ॥ ११६ ॥
प्रायश्चित्तनिमित्ते वा होमार्थं दुर्बलाय वा ।
मधुपर्के च या धेनुः या धेनुः कर्मसिद्धये ॥ ११७ ॥
यतः सर्वां द्विजो विद्वान् प्रतिगृह्य यत्नतः ।
न स पापेन लिप्येत पद्मपत्रमिवाम्भसा ॥ ११८ ॥

"As there is no effect of water on a lotus leaf, similarly sin does not effect a learned dwija who accepts a cow gifted at the time of a yajña, in a religious performance, on performing expiation rites, for offerings (homa), for regaining his lost health, in the rites of madhuparka, and on fulfilment of desire (karma-siddhi)."

2. Manu-smṛti 3.3 :

तं प्रतीतं स्वधर्मेण ब्रह्मदायहरं पितुः ।
स्रग्विणं तल्प आसीनमर्हयेत्प्रथमं गवा ॥

"Being justly applauded for his strict performance of his duty, and having received from his natural or spiritual father the sacred gift of the Vedas, let him on an elegant bed, decked with a garland of flowers, and let his father honour him before his nuptials with the present of a cow according to the Madhuparka rite." (translated by Raja Rajendra Lala Mitra in 'Beef in Ancient India')

3. The following sūtras of the Āpastamba-dharma-sūtra 2.4.8 are also indicative of the offering or gifting of a cow :

(i) गोमधुपर्कार्हो वेदाध्यायः

"One who studies the Vedas is eligible to a cow and madhuparka." (5)

(ii) आचार्यायर्त्विजे श्वशुराय राज्ञ इति परिसंवत्सरादुपतिष्ठद्भ्यो गौर्मधुपर्कश्च—

"A teacher, priest, father-in-law, king—if they come once a year they should be offered a cow and madhuparka."

Immediately after these sūtras follows the enumeration of the ingredients of madhuparka :

दधि मधुसंसृष्टं मधुपर्कः पयो वा मधुसंसृष्टम् । अभावे उदकम् ॥

If the sense of a 'cow' would have been its beef, then it would have surely been included in the enumeration of ingredients. Evidently therefore, only the gifting of a cow is desired in these sutras.

Historical Examples of the Gift of a Cow with Madhuparka

Let us now look into the historical examples of madhuparka, wherein only the gift of a cow is mentioned and not serving its beef after immediate slaughter.

meaning—Pious Bharadvāja Muni after hearing highly intellected Prince Śri Rāma, offered him water for washing feet and hands and then offered arghya (madhuparka) and also a cow in gift.

Mahābhārata :

(a) When Śrī Nārada presented himself in the assembly of King Yudhiṣṭhira, the King received him with madhuparka rite and with the gift of a cow.

गां चैव मधुपर्कं च सम्प्रदायार्घ्यमेव च ।

(Sabhā-parva 5.15)

meaning—The king, conversant with religious observances & duties, worshipped them in the prescribed manner by offering water (for washing feet and hands), madhuparka and a cow in gift and pleased them by fulfilling all their desires.

In Madhupark a mixture made up of Curd and Honey is to be given to the Atithi and it nowhere mentions beef or any such thing

Based on this the meaning of Goghna गोघ्न as per Vachaspatyam

गोघ्नः,

पुं, (गौर्हन्यतेऽस्मै । गो + हन् + सम्प्रदानेमूलविभूजादित्वात् कः ।) अतिथिः । इतिपाणिनिः ॥

(गां हन्ति । हन् + कः ।) गोघा-तके त्रि । यथा, प्रायश्चित्ततत्त्वे ।“गोघ्नवद्विहितः कंल्पश्चान्द्रायणमथापि वा ॥

- Translation:

> “A cow is attained/obtained for him (गौः हन्यते अस्मै).” The word is formed from गो (cow) + the root हन् (to attain, to obtain) + suffix कः, as per the grammatical rule of 'सम्प्रदाने' (dative sense), derived from vibhū + jādi roots (used to indicate giving or gifting). Hence, the word refers to an “atithi” (guest). So says Pāṇini.

(In the alternative literal sense: "One who receives (accepts) a cow" – Go + han + kaḥ = Go-ghnaḥ.)

Similarly, in Prāyaścitta-tattva, it is said:
"गोघ्नवत् विहितः कल्पः चान्द्रायणम् अथापि वा"
— "Like a goghnah (recipient of a cow), the prescribed expiation is either a kalpa (ritual procedure) or a Chāndrāyaṇa fast."

गो + हन् + कः → The suffix "kaḥ" is added due to the sampradāna sense (gift/dative) as per Pāṇini Sūtra 3.4.73:

> दाशगोघ्नौ सम्प्रदाने – both dāśa and goghnah are formed in the sense of donation/gifting (sampradāna).

Hence, the word गोघ्नः (goghnah) means:

> ◆ The guest for whom a cow is obtained/gifted,
> ◆ Not "cow-killer" but "cow-recipient."

A guest who is a Vedic scholar, the rituals for ancestors (like the aṣṭakā ceremony), and marriage — these three events are considered occasions for the 'taking up' or ritual employment of a cow (gavalambha).

This is what is being conveyed: Just as the guest and the ancestors are considered reasons for employing the cow (in ritual), likewise marriage too is included in that — not because of any separate qualification or requirement.

If this sūtra (rule) were not to be interpreted in this way, then statements like 'Gāuḥ—he said the word gauḥ (cow)' (Āpastamba Gṛhya Sūtra 13.15), 'he approaches the cow with darbha grass at marriage' (Āpastamba Gṛhya Sūtra 22.3), and 'at marriage, a cow [is used]' (Āpastamba Gṛhya Sūtra 3.6) would be sufficient alone to establish the ritual usage — and then any further interpretation would be redundant.

Therefore, even if the groom and his party are not Vedic scholars, as long as they are respectable, the madhuparka (a welcoming offering of honey and other ingredients) should be given along with a cow, according to dharma. But if they are Vedic scholars, then it should be offered with that (ritualistic) accompaniment.

Some argue: 'This threefold classification alone (guest, ancestor ritual, and marriage) is our basis for employing the cow — not, as others suggest, through optional forms like offerings to lords (īśānabali), spears (śūla), or cows with other names.' Thus, by saying so, they allow even the alternate ritual usages mentioned in other Kalpasūtras to be accepted optionally."

अथ विवाहे वर्जनीयाः कन्या आह-

Only in these three occasions — a guest, ancestral rituals, and marriage — is the donation (alambha) of a cow appropriate, and not in other offerings such as pākayajñas.

The word atithi (guest) implies the ritual of welcoming a guest, as in the passage: 'where they perform service for him' (Āpastamba Gṛhya Sūtra 22.3, etc.).

The word pitṛ (ancestor) refers to the aṣṭakā ceremony, as in 'he approaches the cow with darbha grass' (Āpastamba Gṛhya 22.3).

The word vivāha (marriage) includes the immediately following mention of it in the sūtra.

Although in other kalpas (ritual manuals), the cow is also used in rituals like offerings to Īśāna (a form of Shiva) and others, this rule (niyamaḥ) is meant to restrict its use to the three above.

Thus, while in other kalpas there may be fixed rules, here the other uses are only optionally permitted — i.e., only these three are firmly sanctioned, while other rituals may allow the cow-donation optionally."

Should any one of the six persons (mentioned in the Srauta-sutra and in the Sutras 4-9) to whom the Arghya reception is due, visit (him), let him make (ready) a cow, a goat, or what (sort of food) he thinks most like (thereto). Let the Argha not be without flesh. On the occasion of a sacrifice and of a wedding let (the guest) say, 'Make it (ready)

Refutation-

Here is Shankhayan Grihya Sutram 2.15.1-3 Dr. Ganga Sagar Rai

This Prakaran is too about Madhupark . It mentions donating Cows or Bulls to the Atithi and in the absence of a Cow or a Bull – A Goat is to be donated and in the absence of a Goat māṣa-vika (a black gram-based dish) is to be offered

The Bhasya says

वर्ष्या भवन्त्याचार्यऋत्विकश्वगुरो राजा स्नातकः प्रिय इति सूत्रे सूत्रिताः। षट् बर्थ्यास्तेषां षण्णां अर्ध्याणां मध्ये चेद्यदि अन्य आगच्छेत्तदा तस्मै आगताय गोपशु शूलगवप्रकरणोक्तेति कत्रव्यता कलापसहितं प्रतिश्रुतविधानेन वा सम्पादितं । तत्कुर्यात् अर्घाय योग्या अर्ध्यास्तेषां वा शब्दः प्रत्येकमभिसम्बध्यते । गोपश्वभावे बजं सम्पादयेद्विधिना । अजाभावे यत्सामान्यतमं सदृशतमं माषाविकमन्तं मन्येत तत्कुर्यात् । अमांसो मांसरहितो अर्धो न स्यान्न भवति तस्मान्मांसाभावे मांसप्रतिनिधित्वेन तदनुरूपं मन्येत तन्मापादिकं कुर्यात् । सप्तम्यर्थे द्वितीया । अधियज्ञे अधिविवाहे च गोपश्वादी कत्त्तव्ये कुरुतेत्येव ब्रूयादाचार्यादिः । । महाप्रस्थानगमनं गोपशुः श्वणुरागृहः । अग्निहोत्र हवण्याश्वले होलीडापरिग्रह इति कलियुगे निषिद्धत्वान्न गोपशुकरणं । तत्प्रतिनिधित्वेनाजपशुरेव कत्त्तव्यः। अथवाऽन्नमेव मावादिकं ज्ञेयं । गौरित्युक्तं ॐ कुरुतेति सूत्रं ब्रूयादिति क्रियमाणे गोपशी इति ब्रूयात्। यदा गोपणुनं तदा "माता रुद्राणामिति" जपित्वा ॐ उत्सृजेत्तृणान्यत्तु । इत्येव बूयात् । इति सूत्रे सूत्रितत्वात् ।

According to the sutra , the six types of respected guests are: the seasonal (varṣya), the ācārya (preceptor), the ṛtvij (sacrificing priest), the śvaśura (father-in-law or elder guru), the king, and the snātaka (initiated graduate). If, among these six who are recipients of arghya (ceremonial hospitality), some other (non-listed) person arrives, then for that arriving person too, the practice prescribed in the Gopaśu or Śūlagava section should be followed either with the full ritual kit or as per the Pratishruta-vidhi (alternative ritual prescription).

Thus, the word “arghya” or “arghyāḥ” applies individually to each of the qualified guests. If the cow or bull (gopaśu) is not available, then the substitute offering of baja (barley or similar) should be prepared according to ritual rules and offered

In the absence of a goat (aja), whatever is most similar and commonly acceptable—such as māṣa-vika (a black gram-based dish or offering)—should be considered appropriate and used instead and offered to the Guest .

if a Amamsa substitute is used, it should not be of lower quality or improper. Hence, in the absence of actual Mamsa , a symbolic meat substitute that resembles it should be considered and prepared proportionally.

(Pandit Dinanath Sastri, in his book ‘Sanatana-Dharmālok’ Vol. 6, pages 337-338, has interpreted the word māṁsa (मांस) in relation to madhuparka as under:
“The above-stated ingredients of madhuparka should be (मांसल) i.e. rich in fats, nourishing and should not be devoid of substance. To the word māṁsa (मोस), has been suffixed in accordance with अर्श आदिभ्योऽच् (Aṣṭādhyāyī 5.2.127) in the sense of ‘with, together’ and it gives the meaning of ‘rich in fats’.
This meaning is also relevant to the present context. In practice it means that the milk and curd used in madhuparka should not be that from which butter or cream has been extracted. Milk or curd from which butter, cream has been extracted will neither be rich in fats, nor delicious and tasty, nor well nourishing, rather it will be devoid of substance. Only good things should be used for an honoured guest and not things devoid of substance.)

2. Pandit Dinanath Sastri, in his book ‘Sanātana-Dharmālok’ Vol. 6, pages 337-338, has interpreted the word māṁsa (मांस) in relation to madhuparka as under :

“The above-stated ingredients of madhuparka should be (मांसल) i.e. rich in fats, nourishing and should not be devoid of substance. To the word māṁsa (मांस), has been suffixed in accordance with अर्श आदिभ्योऽच् (Aṣṭādhyāyī 5.2.127) in the sense of ‘with, together’ and it gives the meaning of ‘rich in fats’.

This meaning is also relevant to the present context. In practice it means that the milk and curd used in madhuparka should not be that from which butter or cream has been extracted. Milk or curd from which butter, cream has been extracted will neither be rich in fats, nor delicious and tasty, nor well nourishing, rather it will be devoid of substance. Only good things should be used for an honoured guest and not things devoid of substance.

This is a grammatical note: in the sense of “for the purpose of the seventh case (locative)”, the accusative (second case) is used. In rituals like yajña and vivāha (marriage), offerings like gopaśu (bull) should be carried out accordingly. The ācārya should instruct the host: “Do it this way.”

In the Mahāprasthāna (departure on a final journey), the ow (gopaśu) and the dog (śva) are considered to be non-householders. In Kali Yuga, the gopaśu ritual is prohibited in contexts like Agnihotra, havan, or formal reception (holiḍāparigraha), due to degeneration of dharma.

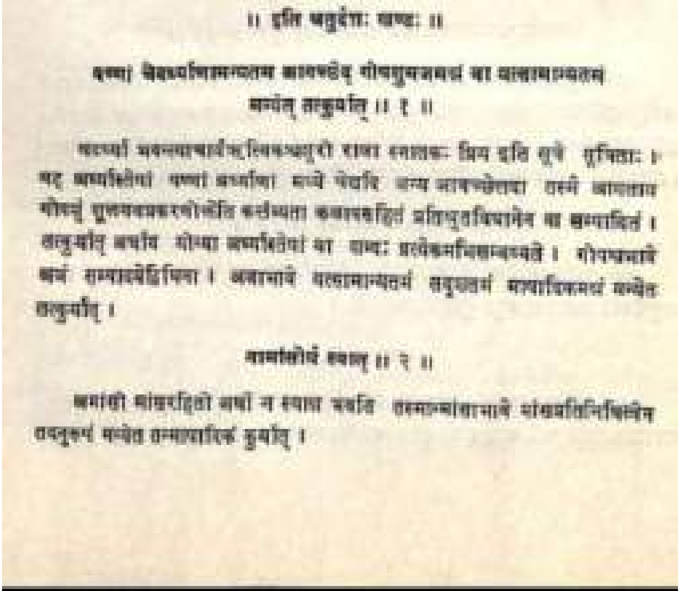
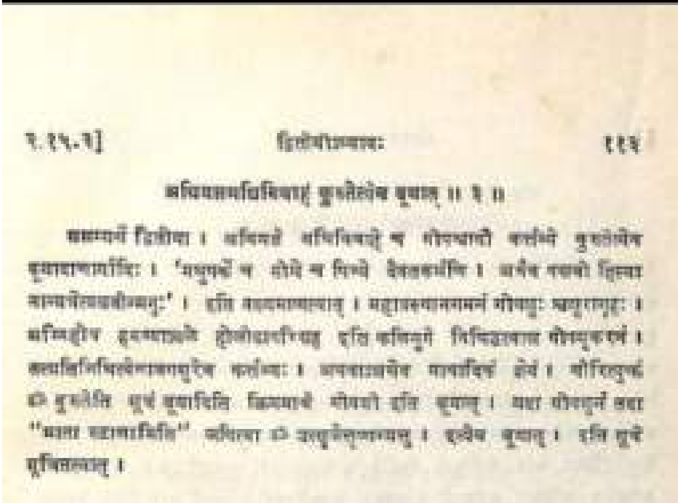
Therefore, as a substitute for the gopaśu, a goat (ajapaśu) should be used. Alternatively, grain offerings like māṣa (black gram) should be known and used.

When offering the cow as part of the ritual, the "Om Kurute" sūtra should be recited. At that time, declare: "This is gopaśu (ritual cow)."

When offering the cow or dog (gopa-śva), recite the mantra "mātā rudrāṇām…" , and utter "Om", then release it (symbolically) over kusa grass, saying exactly so. This is as prescribed in the sūtra.





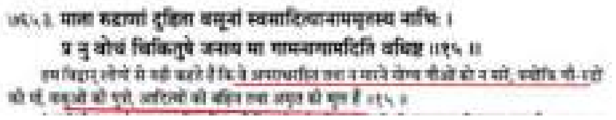
While Offering the Cow its mentioned to recite the Mantra " mātā rudrāṇām which is famous Mantra from Rig Veda 8.101.15

Rig Veda 8.101.15

हम विद्वान् लोगों से यही कहते हैं कि वे अपराधरहित तथा न मारने योग्य गौओं को न मारें, क्योंकि गौ-रुद्रों की माँ, वस्ओं की पुत्री, आदित्यों की बहिन तथा अमृत की मूल हैं ॥१५

We say this to the learned: do not harm the innocent and inviolable cows—because the cow is the mother of the

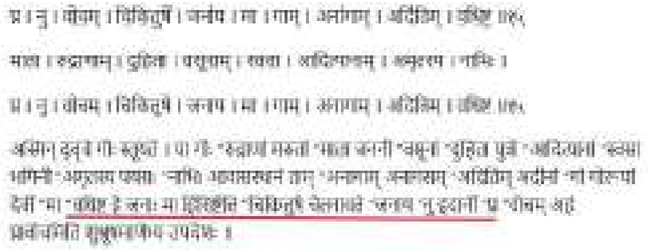
Rudras, daughter of the Vasus, sister of the Ādityas, and the source of ambrosia (amṛta). (Verse 15)



Sayanacharya in his commentary on Rig Veda 8.101.15 too said that Cows are Inviolable not to killed nor harmed at any circumstances

गां गोरूपां देवीं “मा “वधिष्ट हे जनाः मा हिंसिष्टेति “चिकितुषे चेतनावते “जनाय “नु इदानीं

“Do not slay the cow, the divine being in the form of a cow. O people, do not harm her! This is a message for the intelligent and conscious human of today.”



How impossible a conjecture it is and in total contradiction to the injunction of the above Vedic mantra that after the completion of the rites of madhuparka, the guest by muttering the sacred Om should say: do it (kill it) if he (the honoured guest, who has been offered madhuparka and who has completed the madhuparka ceremony), desires to have the cow killed.

Thus its clear from this that Shankhayan Grihya Sutram 2.15.1-3 too does not tell to kill Cows or Bulls but mentions the donation of Cows or Bulls to Atithi

This meaning is also relevant to the present context. In practice it means that the milk and curd used in madhuparka should not be that from which butter or cream has been extracted. Milk or curd from which butter, cream has been extracted will neither be rich in fats, nor delicious and tasty, nor well nourishing, rather it will be devoid of substance. Only good things should be used for an honoured guest and not things devoid of substance.

Pandit Madhavacharya Sastri has interpreted the word māṁsa (मांस) on page 39 of the 'Removal of Doubts' Number (शङ्का समाधान अन्न) of his monthly magazine 'Lokālok' (published by Madhava Pustakalaya, Dharmadham, Kamla Nagar, Delhi-7). There he says that in the context of madhuparka, māṁsa (मांस) means the fleshy part of fruits, kernels of dry fruits like almonds etc., fresh newly milked warm milk, or substantial milk products thickened by boiling and sweetened like रबड़ी, खोया, सिखरन etc. This meaning is also not irrelevant as it is not contradictory to principles. Incongruence, if any, is that fruits, etc. are not mentioned anywhere in the ingredients of madhuparka, but curd and milk do figure among the ingredients and newly-milked fresh warm milk of a cow is desirable to remove the fatigue of the honoured guest, These discussions make it clear that there is no place even for any surmise of animal-flesh in madhuparka.

2. Pandit Dinanath Sastri, in his book 'Sanātana-Dharmālok' Vol. 6, pages 337-338, has interpreted the word māṁsa (मांस) in relation to madhuparka as under :

"The above-stated ingredients of madhuparka should be (मांसल) i.e. rich in fats, nourishing and should not be devoid of substance. To the word māṁsa (मांस), has been suffixed in accordance with अर्शआदिभ्योऽच् (Aṣṭādhyāyī 5.2.127) in the sense of 'with, together' and it gives the meaning of 'rich in fats'.

This meaning is also relevant to the present context. In practice it means that the milk and curd used in madhuparka should not be that from which butter or cream has been extracted. Milk or curd from which butter, cream has been extracted will neither be rich in fats, nor delicious and tasty, nor well nourishing, rather it will be devoid of substance. Only good things should be used for an honoured guest and not things devoid of substance.

Hiranyakesin-Gṛhya-Sūtra

These discussions make it clear that there is no place even for any surmise of animal-flesh in madhuparka.

Allegations-

📚Grihya Sutra of Hiranyakesin 1.4.13.11-16📚

That cow is either killed or let loose. If he chooses to let it loose, (he murmurs), 'This cow will become a milch cow'...If it shall be killed, (he says), 'A cow art thou; sin is driven away from thee. Drive away my sin and the sin of N.N.! Kill ye him whoever hates me. He is killed whosoever hates me. Make (the cow) ready!' If (the cow) is let loose, a meal is prepared with other meat, and he announces it (to the guest) in the words, 'It is ready!' He replies, 'It is well prepared; it is Virag; it is food. May it not fail! May I obtain it...Give food to the Brahmanas!' After those (Brahmanas) have eaten, (the hose) orders blameless (?) food to be brought to him (i.e. to the guest)."

Refutation-

Here if we will read the mool Sutras of Hiranyakesin Grihya Sutra 1.4.13 it does not mention anything close to Cow Sacrifice but honoring the guest with Madhupark

Atharva Veda 7/5/5 condemns killing Cows in Yagyas

विवेकरहित यजमान, श्वान और गौ आदि पशुओं के अवयवों के द्वारा यजन करता है, तो यह अकर्म मूर्खतापूर्ण और निन्दनीय है। जो मन के द्वारा यज्ञ की महान् प्रक्रिया को जानते हैं, ऐसे आत्म-यज्ञ को जानने वाले परमज्ञानी महापुरुष ही परमात्मा के स्वरूप को बतलाएँ ॥५ ॥

A yajamāna (sacrificer) devoid of Intellect , who performs Yagyas using the limbs of animals like dogs and cows, engages in an actionless, foolish, and condemnable act. Only those great souls who understand the profound process of inner sacrifice through the mind — the knowers of the self-sacrifice — can truly reveal the nature of the Supreme Being

If Killing Cows or any other animals and eating their meat and offering meat in Shraddha or any other Vedic Anusthan is Strictly Prohibited then how could Apastamba Dharma sutra prescribe to offer the meat of Cows or Buffaloes or Goat in Shraddha hence here Mamsa which is mentioned in the original Sutras and the bhasya will have a different meaning rather than meat

In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 11.7.1.3 Mamsa has been termed paramānna परमान्न (एतदु ह वै परममन्नाद्य यन्मांसम्) and according to Amarakośa 2.7.24 paramanna परमान्न is a synonym of pāyasa पायस or a pudding of milk and rice with sugar added to it (परमान्नं तु पायसम्).

स यत्पशुबन्धेन यजते। आत्मानमेवैतन्निष्क्रीणीते वीरेण वीरं वीरो हि पशुर्वीरो यजमान एतद्ध वै परममन्नाद्यं यन्मांसं स परमस्यैवान्नाद्यस्यात्ता भवति तं वै संवत्सरो नानीजानमतीयादायुर्वै संवत्सर आयुरेवैतदमृतमात्मन्धत्ते - ११.७.१.३

(२.६.८५८) पृषदाज्यं सदध्याज्यं परमान्नं तु पायसम्

Thus here Mamsa should be interpreted as Puddling made up of Cow's or Buffaloe's or Goat's Milk and Rice and not literal meat because offering meat in Shraddha is strictly prohibited and killing Cows or other Pashu in Vedic Anusthan is also prohibited

Vasistha Dharmasutra 14.46
It is declared in the Vâgasaneyaka, that (the flesh of) milch-cows and oxen is fit for offerings.

Refutation-

These Sutras are Anti Vedic . Mimamsa Sutra 1/3/11-14 states that anything against Vedas in Kalpa Sutras is not acceptable and rejected

NOTE- I am not totally denying the authority of Kalpasutras . While Kalpasutras have a very large importance in Sanatan Dharma and Explain Vedic Rituals and helps to Understand many aspects of Brahmanas and Samhitas the core Purpose of Kalpasutras is to explain Vedic Rituals and if kalpasutras go against Vedas then they will be rejected immediately as per Mimansa Sutra 1/3/11-14

Killing Cows and Bulls and Eating their Meat is Totally Anti Vedic

Rig Veda 1.173.1 – Cows are Aghanya – One who is not to be killed

हे इंद्र ! उद्गाता सामवेद को इस प्रकार गाता है कि वह आकाश में गूंज जाए और आप उसे समझ लें. हम उस बढ़ते हुए सामगान की पूजा स्वर्ग के समान करते हैं. जिस प्रकार दुधारू और हिंसारहित गाएं अपने स्थान पर बैठती हैं, उसी प्रकार मैं तुम्हारी सेवा करता हूं.

O Indra! The chanter sings the Sāma Veda in such a way that it echoes through the sky, and may You understand it. We worship that ascending song of the Sāma as if it were heaven itself. Just as the milk-giving and Inviolable cows sit peacefully in their place, in the same manner, I serve You."

Sayanacharya in his commentary on Rig Veda 1.173.1 too said the same thing about Cows

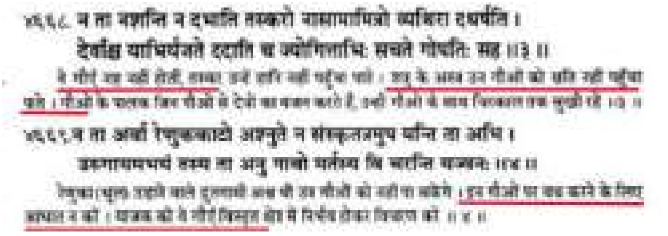
Rig Veda 6/28/3-4 – Cows are Aghnaya – One who is not to be killed

वे गौएँ नष्ट नहीं होतीं, तस्कर उन्हें हानि नहीं पहुँचा पाते। शत्रु के अस्त्र उन गौओं को क्षति नहीं पहुँचा पाते । गौओं के पालक जिन गौओं से देवों का यजन करते हैं, उन्हीं गौओं के साथ चिरकाल तक सुखी रहें ॥ ३ ॥

रेणुका (धूल) उड़ाने वाले द्रुतगामी अश्व भी उन गौओं को नहीं पा सकेंगे। इन गौओं पर वध करने के लिए आघात न करें। याजक की वे गौएँ विस्तृत क्षेत्र में निर्भय होकर विचरण करें ॥ ४ ॥

Those cows are never harmed—thieves cannot steal them, and enemy weapons cannot injure them. May the keeper of those cows—who offers them in divine sacrifices—live joyfully with those very cows for a long time. (Verse 3)

Even swift horses that kick up clouds of dust shall not be able to overtake those sacred cows. Let no one be able to kill these Inviolable cows . May the priest's cows roam freely and fearlessly across wide pastures. (Verse 4)



Sayanacharya in his commentary on Rig Veda 6.28.3-4 too said that Cows are Inviolable not to killed nor harmed at any circumstances

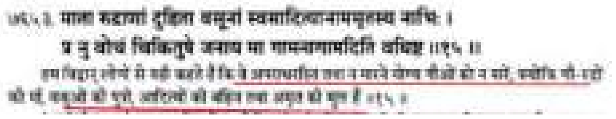
*“Even the warrior horse, whose activity is to strike or split (*kaṭiḥ), that arrives for battle—may it not reach or touch those cows of the sacrificer, the pious man.”

Rig Veda 8.101.15 – Cows are Aghanya – Not to be Killed

हम विद्वान् लोगों से यही कहते हैं कि वे अपराधरहित तथा न मारने योग्य गौओं को न मारें, क्योंकि गौ-रुद्रों की माँ, वसुओं की पुत्री, आदित्यों की बहिन तथा अमृत की मूल हैं ॥१५

We say this to the learned: do not harm the innocent and inviolable cows—because the cow is the mother of the Rudras, daughter of the Vasus, sister of the Ādityas, and the source of ambrosia (amṛta). (Verse 15)



Sayanacharya in his commentary on Rig Veda 8.101.15 too said that Cows are Inviolable not to killed nor harmed at any circumstances

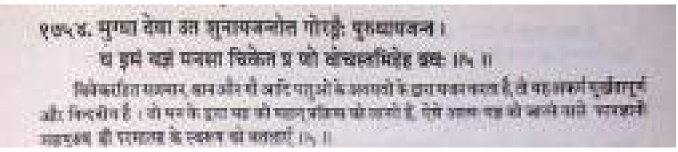
Atharva Veda 7/5/5 condemns killing Cows in Yagyas

विवेकरहित यजमान, श्वान और गौ आदि पशुओं के अवयवों के द्वारा यजन करता है, तो यह अकर्म मूर्खतापूर्ण और निन्दनीय है। जो मन के द्वारा यज्ञ की महान् प्रक्रिया को जानते हैं, ऐसे आत्म-यज्ञ को जानने वाले परमज्ञानी महापुरुष ही परमात्मा के स्वरूप को बतलाएँ ॥५ ॥

A yajamāna (sacrificer) devoid of Intellect , who performs Yagyas using the limbs of animals like dogs and cows, engages in an actionless, foolish, and condemnable act. Only those great souls who understand the profound process of inner sacrifice through the mind — the knowers of the self-sacrifice — can truly reveal the nature of the Supreme Being



Allegations-

📚Mahabharata 12.263📚
One who is of such a cleansed soul may slaughter a cow (as an offering in Sacrifice). They, therefore, that are not of that kind should perform Sacrifices with herbs and plants (and ot animals).”

Refutation-

Here is Mahabharta Shanti Parva Adhaya 263 Geeta Press Gorakhpur – No Cow Sacrifice

जाजलिने कहा-वणिक् महोदय ! तुम हाथमें तराजू लेकर सौदा तौलते हुए जिस धर्मका उपदेश करते हो, उससे तो स्वर्गका दरवाजा ही बंद किये देते हो और प्राणियोंकी जीविकावृत्तिमें भी रुकावट पैदा करते हो ।। १ ।

वैश्यपुत्र ! तुम्हें मालूम होना चाहिये कि खेतीसे ही अन्न पैदा होता है, जिससे तुम भी जी रहे हो। अन्न और पशुओंसे ही मनुष्यका जीवन-निर्वाह होता है ।। २ ।।

उन्हींसे यज्ञकार्य सम्पन्न होता है। तुम तो नास्तिकताकी भी बातें करते हो। यदि पशुओंके कष्टका ख्याल करके खेती आदि वृत्तियोंका त्याग कर दिया जाय, तो इस संसारका जीवन ही समाप्त हो जायगा ।। ३ ।।

तुलाधारने कहा-जाजले ! मैं तुम्हें हिंसातिरिक्त जीविका-वृत्ति बताऊँगा। ब्राह्मणदेव ! मैं नास्तिक नहीं हूँ और न यज्ञकी ही निन्दा करता हूँ; परंतु यज्ञके यथार्थ स्वरूपको समझनेवाला पुरुष अत्यन्त दुर्लभ है ।। ४ ।

ब्रह्मन् ! धन कमानेके प्रयत्नमें लगे हुए बहुत से लोभी और नास्तिक पुरुषोंने वैदिक वचनोंका तात्पर्य न समझकर सत्य-से प्रतीत होनेवाले मिथ्या यज्ञोंका प्रचार कर दिया है ।। ६ ।।

जाजले ! श्रुतियों और स्मृतियोंमें कहा गया है कि अमुक कर्मके लिये यह दक्षिणा देनी चाहिये, वह दक्षिणा देनी चाहिये, उसके अनुसार वैसी दक्षिणा देनेसे भी यह यज्ञ श्रेष्ठ माना जाता है; अन्यथा शक्ति रहते हुए यदि यज्ञकर्ताने लोभ दिखाया तो उसको चोरी करनेका पाप लगता है और उस कर्ममें भी विपरीतता आ जाती है ।। ७ ।।

शुभ कर्मके द्वारा जिस हविष्यका संग्रह किया जाता है, उसीके होमसे देवता संतुष्ट होते हैं। शास्त्रके कथनानुसार नमस्कार, स्वाध्याय, घी और अन्न- इन सबके द्वारा देवताओंकी पूजा हो सकती है ।। ८ ।।

जो लोग कामनाके वशीभूत होकर यज्ञ करते, तालाब खुदवाते या बगीचे लगवाते हैं, उन (सकाम-भावयुक्त) असाधु पुरुषोंसे उन्हींके समान गुणहीन संतान उत्पन्न होती है ।। ९ ।।

लोभी पुरुषोंसे लोभीका जन्म होता है और समदर्शी पुरुषोंसे समदर्शी पुत्र उत्पन्न होता है। यजमान और ऋत्विज् स्वयं जैसे होते हैं, उनकी प्रजा भी वैसी ही होती है ।। १० ।।

जिस प्रकार आकाशसे निर्मल जलकी वर्षा होती है उसी प्रकार शुद्ध भावसे किये हुए यज्ञसे योग्य प्रजाकी उत्पत्ति होती है। विप्रवर ! अग्निमें डाली हुई आहुति सूर्यमण्डलको प्राप्त होती है, सूर्यसे जलकी वृष्टि होती है, वृष्टिसे अन्न उपजता है और अन्नसे सम्पूर्ण प्रजा जन्म तथा जीवन धारण करती है ।। ११ ।।

पहलेके लोग कर्तव्य समझकर यज्ञमें श्रद्धापूर्वक प्रवृत्त होते थे और उस यज्ञसे उनकी सम्पूर्ण कामनाएँ स्वतः पूर्ण हो जाती थीं। पृथ्वीसे बिना जोते-बोये ही काफी अन्न पैदा होता तथा जगत्की भलाईके लिये उनके शुभ संकल्पसे ही वृक्षों और लताओंमें फल-फूल लगते थे ।। १२ ।।

वे यज्ञोंमें अपने लिये किसी फलकी ओर दृष्टि नहीं रखते थे। जो मनुष्य यज्ञसे कोई फल मिलता है या नहीं, इस प्रकारका संदेह मनमें लेकर किसी तरह यज्ञोंमें प्रवृत्त होते हैं, वे धन चाहनेवाले लोभी, धूर्त और दुष्ट होते हैं ।। १३-१४ ।।

द्विजश्रेष्ठ ! जो मनुष्य प्रमाणभूत वेदको अपने अप्रामाणिक कुतर्कद्वारा अमंगलकारी सिद्ध करता है, उसकी बुद्धि शुद्ध नहीं है, उसका मन सदा यहाँ पापोंमें ही लगा रहता है और वह अपने अशुभ कर्मके कारण पापाचारियोंके लोकों नरकों) में ही जाता है ।। १५

जो करने योग्य कर्मोंको अपना कर्तव्य समझता है और उसका पालन न होनेपर भय मानता है, जिसकी दृष्टिमें (ऋत्विक्, हविष्य, मन्त्र और अग्नि आदि) सब कुछ ब्रह्म ही है तथा जो किसी भी कर्तव्यको अपना नहीं मानता – कर्तापनका अभिमान नहीं रखता -वही सच्चा ब्राह्मण है ।। १६ ।।

प्राचीन कालके ब्राह्मण सत्यभाषण और इन्द्रिय-संयमरूप यज्ञका अनुष्ठान करते थे। वे परम पुरुषार्थ (मोक्ष) के प्रति लोभ रखते थे, उन्हें लौकिक धनकी प्यास न रहती थी, वे उस ओरसे सदा तृप्त रहते थे। वे सब लोग प्राप्त वस्तुका त्याग करनेवाले और ईर्ष्या-द्वेषसे रहित थे ।। १८३ ।।

वे क्षेत्र (शरीर) और क्षेत्रज्ञ (आत्मा) के तत्त्वको जाननेवाले और आत्मयज्ञ-परायण थे। उपनिषदोंके अध्ययनमें तत्पर रहते तथा स्वयं संतुष्ट होकर दूसरोंको भी संतोष देते थे ।। १९३ ।।

ब्रह्म सर्वस्वरूप है, सम्पूर्ण देवता उसीके रूप हैं, वह ब्रह्मवेत्ता ब्राह्मणके भीतर विराजमान है। इसलिये जाजले ! इसके तृप्त होनेपर सम्पूर्ण देवता तृप्त एवं संतुष्ट हो जाते हैं ।। २० ।।

जैसे सब प्रकारके रसोंसे तृप्त हुआ मनुष्य किसी भी रसका अभिनन्दन नहीं करता, उसी प्रकार जो ज्ञानानन्दसे परितृप्त है, उसे अक्षय सुख देनेवाली नित्य तृप्ति बनी रहती है ।। २१ ।।

हममेंसे बहुत लोग ऐसे हैं, जिनका धर्म ही आधार है, जो धर्ममें ही सुख मानते हैं तथा जिन्होंने सम्पूर्ण कर्तव्य-अकर्तव्यका निश्चय कर लिया है; परंतु हमलोगोंका जो यथार्थरूप है, उसकी अपेक्षा बहुत महान् और व्यापक परमात्मा सर्वत्र सर्वात्मा रूपसे विराजमान है – ऐसा ज्ञानी पुरुष देखता है ।। २२ ।।

भवसागरसे पार उतरनेकी इच्छावाले कोई-कोई ज्ञान-विज्ञानसम्पन्न महात्मा पुरुष ही अत्यन्त पवित्र और पुण्यात्माओंसे सेवित पुण्यदायक ब्रह्मलोकको प्राप्त होते हैं, जहाँ जाकर वे न तो शोक करते हैं, न वहाँसे नीचे गिरते हैं और न मनमें किसी प्रकारकी व्यथाका ही अनुभव करते हैं ।। २३-२४ ।।

वे सात्त्विक महापुरुष उस ब्रह्मधामको ही प्राप्त होते हैं, उन्हें स्वर्गकी इच्छा नहीं होती, वे यश और धनके लिये यज्ञ नहीं करते, सत्पुरुषोंके मार्गपर चलते और हिंसारहित यज्ञोंका अनुष्ठान करते हैं। वनस्पति, अन्न और फल-मूलको ही वे हविष्य मानते हैं, धनकी इच्छा रखनेवाले लोभी ऋत्विज् इनका यज्ञ नहीं कराते हैं ।। २५-२६३ ।।

ज्ञानी ब्राह्मणोंने अपनेको ही यज्ञका उपकरण मानकर मानसिक यज्ञका अनुष्ठान किया है। उन्होंने प्रजाहितकी कामनासे ही मानसिक यज्ञका अनुष्ठान किया है ।। २७३ ।

लोभी ऋत्विज् तो ऐसे लोगोंका ही यज्ञ कराते हैं, जो अशुभ (मोक्षकी इच्छासे रहित) होते हैं, श्रेष्ठ पुरुष तो स्वधर्मका आचरण करते हुए ही प्रजाको स्वर्गमें पहुँचा देते हैं। जाजले ! यही सोचकर मेरी बुद्धि भी सर्वत्र समान भाव ही रखती है ।। २८-२९ ।।

महामुने ! श्रेष्ठ विद्वान् ब्राह्मण सदा ही जिन द्रव्योंको लेकर उनका यज्ञोंमें उपयोग करते हैं, उन्हींके द्वारा वे दिव्य मार्गसे पुण्य लोकोंमें जाते हैं ।। ३० ।।

जाजले ! जो कामनाओंमें आसक्त है, उसी मनुष्यकी इस संसारमें पुनरावृत्ति होती है। ज्ञानीका पुनः यहाँ जन्म नहीं होता। यद्यपि दोनों दिव्यमार्गसे ही पुण्यलोकोंमें जाते हैं, तथापि संकल्प-भेदसे ही उनकी आवृत्ति और अनावृत्ति होती है ।। ३१ ।।

ज्ञानी महात्माओंकी इच्छा होते ही उनके मानसिक संकल्पकी सिद्धियोंके अनुसार बैल स्वयं गाड़ीमें जुतकर उनकी सवारी ढोने लगते हैं, दूध देनेवाली गौएँ स्वयं ही सब प्रकारके मनोरथोंकी सिद्धिरूप दुग्ध प्रदान करती हैं ।। ३२ ।।

योगसिद्ध पुरुषोंके पास स्वयं यज्ञयूप उपस्थित हो जाते हैं और उन्हें लेकर वे पर्याप्त दक्षिणाओंसे युक्त यज्ञोंद्वारा यजन करते हैं। उनके ऋत्विजोंके पास दक्षिणा भी स्वतः उपस्थित हो जाती है। जिसका अन्तःकरण इस प्रकार शुद्ध एवं सिद्ध हो गया है, वही पृथ्वीको उपलब्ध कर सकता है ।। ३३ ।।

ब्रह्मन् ! इसलिये वे योगसिद्ध पुरुष ओषधियों- अन्न आदिके द्वारा यज्ञ कर सकते । जो पहले बताये अनुसार मूढ़ लोग हैं, वे उस तरहका यज्ञ नहीं कर सकते।

कर्मफलका त्याग करनेवाले महात्माओंका ऐसा अद्भुत माहात्म्य है, इसलिये मैं त्यागको आगे रखकर तुमसे ऐसी बात कह रहा हूँ ।। ३४ ।।

जिसके मनमें कोई कामना नहीं है, जो किसी फलकी इच्छासे कर्मोंका आरम्भ नहीं करता, नमस्कार और स्तुतिसे अलग रहता है, जिसका धर्म नहीं क्षीण हुआ है, कर्म-बन्धन क्षीण हो गया है, उसी पुरुषको देवतालोग ब्राह्मण मानते हैं ।। ३५ ।।

जाजले ! जो ब्राह्मण वेदाध्ययन, यजन और ब्राह्मणोंको दान देना आदि वर्णोचित कर्म नहीं करता और मनोहर भोग-पदार्थोंकी लिप्सा रखता है, वह कुत्सित गतिको प्राप्त होता है। किंतु निष्काम धर्मको देवताके समान आराध्य बनानेवाला मनुष्य यज्ञके यथार्थ फल-मोक्षको प्राप्त कर लेता है ।। ३६।।

जाजलिने पूछा- वैश्यप्रवर ! मैंने आत्मयाजी मुनियोंके समीप तुम्हारेद्वारा प्रतिपादित तत्त्वको कभी नहीं सुना। सम्भवतः यह समझनेमें कठिन भी है, क्योंकि पूर्वकालीन महर्षियोंने उसके ऊपर विशेष विचार नहीं किया है। जिन्होंने विचार किया है, उन्होंने भी उत्तम होनेपर भी इस धर्मकी जगत्में स्थापना नहीं की है; अतः मैं तुमसे ही पूछता हूँ ।। ३७ ।।

वणिक्पुत्र ! यदि इस प्रकार आत्मतीर्थमें पशु अर्थात् अज्ञानी मानव आत्मयज्ञका सौभाग्य नहीं पा सकते तो किस कर्मसे उन्हें सुखकी प्राप्ति हो सकती है? महामते ! यह बात मुझे बताओ। मैं तुम्हारे कथनपर अधिक श्रद्धा रखता हूँ ।। ३८ ।

तुलाधारने कहा- ब्रह्मन् ! जिन दम्भी पुरुषोंके यज्ञ अश्रद्धा आदि दोषोंके कारण यज्ञ कहलानेयोग्य नहीं रह जाते, वे न तो मानसिक यज्ञके अधिकारी हैं और न क्रियात्मक यज्ञके ही। श्रद्धालु पुरुष तो घी, दूध, दही और विशेषतः पूर्णाहुतिसे ही अपना यज्ञ पूर्ण करते हैं। श्रद्धालुओंमें जो असमर्थ हैं, उनका यज्ञ गाय अपनी पूँछके बालोंके स्पर्शसे, शृंगजलसे और पैरोंकी धूलसे ही पूर्ण कर देती है ।। ३९-४० ।।

इसी विधिसे देवताके लिये घी आदि द्रव्य समर्पित करनेके लिये श्रद्धाको ही पत्नी बनाये और यज्ञको ही देवताके समान आराध्य बनाकर यथावत् रूपसे यज्ञपुरुष भगवान् विष्णुको प्राप्त करे ।। ४१ ।।

यज्ञविहित समस्त पशुओंके दुग्ध आदिसे निर्मित पुरोडाशको ही पवित्र बताया जाता है। सारी नदियाँ ही सरस्वतीका रूप हैं और समस्त पर्वत ही पुण्यमय प्रदेश हैं ।। ४२ ।।

जाजले ! यह आत्मा ही प्रधान तीर्थ है। आप तीर्थसेवनके लिये देश-देशमें मत भटकिये। जो यहाँ मेरे बताये हुए अहिंसाप्रधान धर्मोंका आचरण करता है तथा विशेष कारणोंसे धर्मका अनुसंधान करता है, वह कल्याणकारी लोकोंको प्राप्त होता है ।। ४३३

भीष्मजी कहते हैं- युधिष्ठिर ! इस प्रकार हिंसारहित, युक्तिसंगत तथा श्रेष्ठ पुरुषोंद्वारा सेवित धर्मोंकी ही तुलाधार वैश्यने सदा प्रशंसा की थी ।। ४४-४५ ।।

Jājali said: “O merchant! The dharma you preach while weighing goods with a scale in your hand actually closes the gates of heaven and obstructs the livelihood of living beings.” ॥1॥

“O son of a Vaiśya! You should know that food is produced through agriculture, and even you survive on it. Human life is sustained by food and animals.” ॥2॥

“Yajña rituals are also completed through them. Yet you speak words of atheism. If one abandons agriculture and related vocations out of concern for the suffering of animals, then worldly life itself would come to an end.” ॥3॥

Tulādhāra replied: “Jājali! I will show you a livelihood free from violence. O revered Brāhmaṇa! I am not an atheist, nor do I criticize yajña; but a person who truly understands the essence of yajña is extremely rare.” ॥4॥

"O Vipra! I bow to the yajña prescribed for Brāhmaṇas, and I also bow at the feet of those who truly understand it. But sadly, Brāhmaṇas today have abandoned their own yajñas and are engaging in rituals suited for Kṣatriyas." ॥5॥

"O Brahman! Many greedy and atheistic men, in their pursuit of wealth, have misunderstood the intent of Vedic statements and promoted false yajñas that only appear to be true." ॥6॥

"Jājali! The Śruti and Smṛti texts prescribe specific donations for specific rituals. If one gives the appropriate donation, the yajña is considered excellent. But if the performer, despite having the means, acts out of greed, he incurs the sin of theft and the ritual itself becomes flawed." ॥7॥

"The oblations collected through virtuous actions satisfy the gods when offered in the fire. According to the scriptures, worship of the gods can be done through bowing, self-study, ghee, and food." ॥8॥

"Those who perform yajñas, dig ponds, or plant gardens driven by desire—such impure individuals produce offspring with similar flawed qualities." ॥9॥

"Greedy men give birth to greedy children, and impartial men give birth to impartial children. The yajamāna and the priests —whatever their nature, their progeny reflects the same." ॥10॥

"Just as pure water rains down from the sky, so too does a pure-hearted yajña give rise to worthy offspring. O noble Brāhmaṇa! The oblation offered into the fire reaches the solar realm; from the sun comes rain, from rain comes food, and from food all beings are born and sustain life." ॥11॥

In earlier times, people engaged in yajña with devotion, considering it their duty, and all their desires were naturally fulfilled through it. Even without plowing or sowing, the earth yielded abundant food, and through their auspicious intentions, trees and vines bore fruits and flowers for the welfare of the world. ॥12॥

They did not perform yajñas with a desire for personal gain. Those who engage in yajña with doubts about whether it will yield results are greedy, deceitful, and wicked individuals driven by material desires. ॥13–14॥

O best among the twice-born! A person who tries to disprove the authority of the Vedas using unauthentic logic is impure in intellect, constantly engaged in sinful thoughts, and due to his inauspicious actions, ends up in the worlds of sinners (hells). ॥15॥

One who considers prescribed actions as his duty and fears their neglect, who sees everything—ṛtvik, haviṣya, mantra, and agni—as manifestations of Brahman, and who does not claim ownership over any action, free from the ego of doership—that person is the true Brāhmaṇa. ॥16॥

In ancient times, Brāhmaṇas practiced truthfulness and sense-restraint as forms of yajña. They were drawn toward the supreme goal (mokṣa) and had no thirst for worldly wealth, remaining ever content. They were renunciants of acquired possessions and free from envy and hatred. ॥18॥

They understood the principles of kṣetra (body) and kṣetrajña (soul), and were devoted to ātmayajña. They were committed to the study of the Upaniṣads, and being self-satisfied, they spread satisfaction to others as well. ॥19॥

Brahman is the essence of everything; all deities are its forms. That Brahman-knower resides within the Brāhmaṇa. Therefore, O Jājali! When he is satisfied, all the deities are satisfied and content. ॥20॥

Just as a person who is fulfilled by all flavors no longer craves any particular taste, similarly, one who is fulfilled by the bliss of knowledge enjoys an eternal satisfaction that grants inexhaustible joy. ॥21॥

Many among us are those whose foundation is dharma, who find joy in dharma, and who have discerned what is duty and what is not. Yet, compared to our true nature, the Supreme Self (Paramātmā) is far greater and more expansive, pervading all as the Universal Soul—this is what the wise perceive. ॥22॥

Only a few noble souls, endowed with knowledge and realization, and served by the most pure and virtuous beings, attain the auspicious realm of Brahmaloka, crossing over the ocean of worldly existence. Upon reaching there, they experience neither sorrow, nor fall from that state, nor any form of inner suffering. ॥23–24॥

These sāttvika mahāpuruṣas attain that Brahma-dhāma. They do not desire heaven, nor do they perform yajñas for fame or wealth. They follow the path of the righteous and conduct non-violent yajñas, considering plants, grains, and fruits as their offerings (haviṣya). Greedy ṛtviks who seek wealth do not officiate their rituals. ॥25–26॥

Wise Brāhmaṇas have regarded themselves as the instruments of yajña, performing mental yajñas with the intention of benefiting the people. ॥27॥

Greedy ṛtviks conduct rituals only for those who are impure (lacking desire for liberation). But noble individuals, by practicing their own svadharma, elevate the people toward heaven. O Jājali, this is why my intellect maintains an equal outlook toward all. ॥28–29॥

O great sage! The learned Brāhmaṇas, using sacred substances in their yajñas, ascend to virtuous realms through the divine path. ॥30॥

O Jājali, the one who is attached to desires undergoes rebirth in this world. The wise do not return here again. Though both travel to auspicious realms via divine paths, it is the difference in their intentions (saṅkalpa) that determines whether they return or not. ॥31॥

When wise and noble souls desire something, their mental resolve alone brings results—bulls spontaneously yoke themselves to carts and carry them, and milk-giving cows provide milk that fulfills all their wishes. ॥32॥

For yoga-siddha individuals, even yajña-yūpa (sacrificial posts) appear on their own, and they perform yajñas with abundant dakṣiṇā. Their ṛtviks receive offerings automatically. One whose heart is purified and perfected in this way can truly attain the Earth. ॥33॥

O Brāhmaṇa, such yoga-siddha persons can perform yajña using herbs, grains, and similar offerings. Those ignorant ones previously described cannot perform such yajñas. This is the extraordinary greatness of noble souls who renounce the fruits of action—therefore I speak to you with renunciation as my foundation. ॥34॥

One who has no desires, who does not begin actions with a wish for results, who remains apart from praise and worship, whose dharma is not diminished, and whose karma-bondage is dissolved—such a person is recognized by the devas as a true Brāhmaṇa. ॥35॥

O Jājali, a Brāhmaṇa who does not engage in Vedic study, yajña, or giving to other Brāhmaṇas, and instead craves sensual pleasures, attains a degraded state. But one who worships niṣkāma dharma (desireless duty) as divine attains the true fruit of yajña—mokṣa. ॥36॥

Jājali asked: "O noble Vaiśya! I have never heard the principle you've explained from the self-sacrificing sages. Perhaps it is difficult to understand, as ancient seers did not reflect deeply on it. Even those who did, despite its excellence, did not establish it in the world—so I ask you directly." ॥37॥

"O son of a merchant! If ignorant humans—likened to animals—cannot attain the fortune of ātma-yajña at the sacred inner pilgrimage, then by what action can they attain happiness? O wise one, please tell me. I place great faith in your words." ॥38॥

Tulādhāra replied: "O Brāhmaṇa, those hypocrites whose yajñas are tainted by lack of faith and other faults are unfit for both mental yajña and ritual yajña. Faithful individuals complete their yajñas with ghee, milk, curd, and especially pūrṇāhuti. Among the faithful who are unable to do so, the cow completes the yajña simply by touching with her tail hairs, horn water, and hoof dust." ॥39–40॥

"In this way, one should make faith his consort and worship yajña as divine, offering ghee and other substances to the deity, and thereby attain Yajña-puruṣa, Lord Viṣṇu, in his true form." ॥41॥

The puroḍāśa (sacrificial cake) made from the milk of all yajña-sanctioned animals is considered sacred. All rivers are manifestations of Sarasvatī, and all mountains are regions of merit. ॥42॥

"O Jājali, the self is the supreme pilgrimage. Do not wander from place to place seeking holy sites. One who practices the nonviolent dharmas I've described and investigates dharma for deeper reasons attains auspicious realms." ॥433

Bhīṣma says: "O Yudhiṣṭhira, in this way, Tulādhāra Vaiśya always praised the nonviolent, rational, and noble dharmas practiced by the wise." ॥44–45॥

त्रिषष्ट्यधिकद्विशततमोऽध्यायः

जाजलिको तुलाधारका आत्मयज्ञविषयक धर्मका उपदेश

जाजलिरुवाच

अयं प्रवर्तितो धर्मस्तुलां धारयता त्वया ।
स्वर्गद्वारं च वृत्तिं च भूतानामवरोत्स्यते ॥ १ ॥

जाजलिने कहा—वणिक् महोदय! तुम हाथमें तराजू लेकर सौदा तौलते हुए जिस धर्मका उपदेश करते हो, उससे तो स्वर्गका दरवाजा ही बंद किये देते हो और प्राणियोंकी जीविकावृत्तिमें भी रुकावट पैदा करते हो ॥ १ ॥

कृष्या ह्यन्नं प्रभवति ततस्त्वमपि जीवसि ।
पशुभिश्चौषधीभिश्च मर्त्या जीवन्ति वाणिज ॥ २ ॥

वैश्यपुत्र! तुम्हें मालूम होना चाहिये कि खेतीसे ही अन्न पैदा होता है, जिससे तुम भी जी रहे हो। अन्न और पशुओंसे ही मनुष्यका जीवन-निर्वाह होता है ॥ २ ॥

ततो यज्ञः प्रभवति नास्तिक्यमपि जल्पसि ।
न हि वर्तेदयं लोको वार्तामुत्सृज्य केवलाम् ॥ ३ ॥

उन्हींसे यज्ञकार्य सम्पन्न होता है। तुम तो नास्तिकताकी भी बातें करते हो। यदि पशुओंके कष्टका ख्याल करके खेती आदि वृत्तियोंका त्याग कर दिया जाय, तो इस संसारका जीवन ही समाप्त हो जायगा ॥ ३ ॥

तुलाधार उवाच

वक्ष्यामि जाजले वृत्तिं नास्मि ब्राह्मण नास्तिकः ।
न यज्ञं च विनिन्दामि यज्ञवित् तु सुदुर्लभः ॥ ४ ॥

तुलाधारने कहा—जाजले! मैं तुम्हें हिंसातिरिक्त जीविका-वृत्ति बताऊँगा। ब्राह्मणदेव! मैं नास्तिक नहीं हूँ और न यज्ञकी ही निन्दा करता हूँ; परंतु यज्ञके यथार्थ स्वरूपको समझनेवाला पुरुष अत्यन्त दुर्लभ है ॥ ४ ॥

नमो ब्राह्मणयज्ञाय ये च यज्ञविदो जनाः ।
स्वयज्ञं ब्राह्मणा हित्वा क्षात्रयज्ञमिहास्थिताः ॥ ५ ॥

विप्र! ब्राह्मणोंके लिये जिस यज्ञका विधान है, उसको तो मैं नमस्कार करता हूँ और जो लोग उस यज्ञको ठीक-ठीक जानते हैं, उनके चरणोंमें भी मस्तक झुकाता हूँ, किंतु खेद है, इस समय ब्राह्मणलोग अपने यज्ञका परित्याग करके क्षत्रियोचित यज्ञोंके अनुष्ठानमें प्रवृत्त हो रहे हैं ॥ ५ ॥

लुब्धैर्वित्तपरैर्ब्रह्मन् नास्तिकैः सम्प्रवर्तितम् ।
वेदवादानविज्ञाय सत्याभासमिवानृतम् ॥ ६ ॥

ब्रह्मन्! धन कमानेके प्रयत्नमें लगे हुए बहुत-से लोभी और नास्तिक पुरुषोंने वैदिक वचनोंका तात्पर्य न समझकर सत्य-से प्रतीत होनेवाले मिथ्या यज्ञोंका प्रचार कर दिया है ॥ ६ ॥

इदं देयमिदं देयमिति चायं प्रशस्यते ।
अतः स्तैन्यं प्रभवति विकर्माणि च जाजले ॥ ७ ॥

जाजले! श्रुतियों और स्मृतियोंमें कहा गया है कि अमुक कर्मके लिये यह दक्षिणा देनी चाहिये, वह दक्षिणा देनी चाहिये, उसके अनुसार वैसी दक्षिणा देनेसे भी यह यज्ञ श्रेष्ठ माना जाता है; अन्यथा शक्ति रहते हुए यदि यज्ञकर्ताने लोभ दिखाया तो उसको चोरी करनेका पाप लगता है और उस कर्ममें भी विपरीतता आ जाती है ॥ ७ ॥

यदेव सुकृतं हव्यं तेन तुष्यन्ति देवताः ।
नमस्कारेण हविषा स्वाध्यायैरौषधैस्तथा ॥ ८ ॥
पूजा स्याद् देवतानां हि यथा शास्त्रनिदर्शनम् ।

शुभ कर्मके द्वारा जिस हविष्यका संग्रह किया जाता है, उसीके होमसे देवता संतुष्ट होते हैं। शास्त्रके कथनानुसार नमस्कार, स्वाध्याय, घी और अन्न—इन सबके द्वारा देवताओंकी पूजा हो सकती है ॥ ८½ ॥

इष्टापूर्तादसाधूनां विगुणा जायते प्रजा ॥ ९ ॥

जो लोग कामनाके वशीभूत होकर यज्ञ करते, तालाब खुदवाते या बगीचे लगवाते हैं, उन (सकाम-भावयुक्त) असाधु पुरुषोंसे उन्हींके समान गुणहीन संतान उत्पन्न होती है ॥ ९ ॥

लुब्धेभ्यो जायते लुब्धः समेभ्यो जायते समः ।
यजमानो यथाऽऽत्मानमृत्विजश्च तथा प्रजाः ॥ १० ॥

लोभी पुरुषोंसे लोभीका जन्म होता है और समदर्शी पुरुषोंसे समदर्शी पुत्र उत्पन्न होता है। यजमान और ऋत्विज् स्वयं जैसे होते हैं, उनकी प्रजा भी वैसी ही होती है ॥ १० ॥

यज्ञात् प्रजा प्रभवति नभसोऽम्भ इवामलम् ।
अग्नौ प्रास्ताहुतिर्ब्रह्मन्नादित्यमुपगच्छति ॥ ११ ॥
आदित्याज्जायते वृष्टिर्वृष्टेरन्नं ततः प्रजाः ।

जिस प्रकार आकाशसे निर्मल जलकी वर्षा होती है उसी प्रकार शुद्ध भावसे किये हुए यज्ञसे योग्य प्रजाकी उत्पत्ति होती है। विप्रवर! अग्निमें डाली हुई आहुति सूर्यमण्डलको प्राप्त होती है, सूर्यसे जलकी वृष्टि होती है, वृष्टिसे अन्न उपजता है और अन्नसे सम्पूर्ण प्रजा जन्म तथा जीवन धारण करती है ॥ ११½ ॥

तस्मात् सुनिष्ठिताः पूर्वे सर्वान् कामांश्च लेभिरे ॥ १२ ॥
अकृष्टपच्या पृथिवी आशीर्भिर्वीरुधोऽभवन् ।

न ते यज्ञेष्वात्मसु वा फलं पश्यन्ति किंचन ॥ १३ ॥
शङ्कमानाः फलं यज्ञे ये यजेरन् कथंचन ।
जायन्तेऽसाधवो धूर्ता लुब्धा वित्तप्रयोजनाः ॥ १४ ॥

वे यज्ञोंमें अपने लिये किसी फलकी ओर दृष्टि नहीं रखते थे। जो मनुष्य यज्ञसे कोई फल मिलता है या नहीं, इस प्रकारका संदेह मनमें लेकर किसी तरह यज्ञोंमें प्रवृत्त होते हैं, वे धन चाहनेवाले लोभी, धूर्त और दुष्ट होते हैं ॥ १३-१४ ॥

स स्म पापकृतां लोकान् गच्छेदशुभकर्मणा ।
प्रमाणमप्रमाणेन यः कुर्यादशुभं नरः ॥ १५ ॥
पापात्मा सोऽकृतप्रज्ञः सदैवेह द्विजोत्तम ।

द्विजश्रेष्ठ! जो मनुष्य प्रमाणभूत वेदको अपने अप्रामाणिक कुतर्कद्वारा अमंगलकारी सिद्ध करता है, उसकी बुद्धि शुद्ध नहीं है, उसका मन सदा यहाँ पापोंमें ही लगा रहता है और वह अपने अशुभ कर्मके कारण पापाचारियोंके लोकों (नरकों) में ही जाता है ॥ १५½ ॥

कर्तव्यमिति कर्तव्यं वेत्ति वै ब्राह्मणो भयम् ॥ १६ ॥
ब्रह्मैव वर्तते लोके नैव कर्तव्यतां पुनः ।

जो करने योग्य कर्मोंको अपना कर्तव्य समझता है और उसका पालन न होनेपर भय मानता है, जिसकी दृष्टिमें (ऋत्विक्, हविष्य, मन्त्र और अग्नि आदि) सब कुछ ब्रह्म ही है तथा जो किसी भी कर्तव्यको अपना नहीं मानता—कर्तापनका अभिमान नहीं रखता—वही सच्चा ब्राह्मण है ॥ १६½ ॥

विगुणं च पुनः कर्म ज्यायः इत्यनुशुश्रुम ॥ १७ ॥
सर्वभूतोपघातश्च फलभावे च संयमः ।

हमने सुना है कि यदि कर्ममें किसी प्रकारकी त्रुटि हो जानेके कारण वह गुणहीन हो जाय तो भी यदि वह निष्कामभावसे किया जा रहा है तो श्रेष्ठ ही है अर्थात् वह कल्याणकारी ही होता है। निष्कामभावसे किये जानेवाले कर्ममें यदि कुत्ते आदि अपवित्र पशुओंके द्वारा स्पर्श हो जानेसे कोई बाधा भी आ जाय तथापि वह कर्म नष्ट नहीं होता, वह श्रेष्ठतम ही माना जाता है, अतः प्रत्येक कर्ममें फलकी भावना या कामनापर संयम—नियन्त्रण रखना आवश्यक है ॥ १७½ ॥

सत्ययज्ञा दमयज्ञा अलुब्धार्थतृप्तयः ॥ १८ ॥
उत्पन्नत्यागिनः सर्वे जना आसन्नमत्सराः ।

प्राचीन कालके ब्राह्मण सत्यभाषण और इन्द्रिय-संयमरूप यज्ञका अनुष्ठान करते थे। वे परम पुरुषार्थ (मोक्ष)के प्रति लोभ रखते थे, उन्हें लौकिक धनकी प्यास नहीं रहती थी, वे उस ओरसे सदा तृप्त रहते थे। वे सब लोग प्राप्त वस्तुका त्याग करनेवाले और ईर्ष्या-द्वेषसे रहित थे ॥ १८½ ॥

क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञतत्त्वज्ञाः स्वयज्ञपरिनिष्ठिताः ॥ १९ ॥
ब्राह्मं वेदमधीयन्तस्तोषयन्त्यपरानपि ।

वे क्षेत्र (शरीर) और क्षेत्रज्ञ (आत्मा) के तत्त्वको जाननेवाले और आत्मयज्ञ-परायण थे। उपनिषदोंके अध्ययनमें तत्पर रहते तथा स्वयं संतुष्ट होकर दूसरोंको भी संतोष देते थे ॥ १९½ ॥

अखिलं दैवतं सर्वं ब्रह्म ब्रह्मणि संश्रितम् ॥ २० ॥
तुष्यन्ति तृप्यतो देवास्तृप्तास्तृप्तस्य जाजले ।

ब्रह्म सर्वस्वरूप है, सम्पूर्ण देवता उसीके रूप हैं, वह ब्रह्मवेत्ता ब्राह्मणके भीतर विराजमान है। इसलिये जाजले! इसके तृप्त होनेपर सम्पूर्ण देवता तृप्त एवं संतुष्ट हो जाते हैं ॥ २०½ ॥

यथा सर्वरसैस्तृप्तो नाभिनन्दति किंचन ॥ २१ ॥
तथा प्रज्ञानतृप्तस्य नित्यतृप्तिः सुखोदया ।

जैसे सब प्रकारके रसोंसे तृप्त हुआ मनुष्य किसी भी रसका अभिनन्दन नहीं करता, उसी प्रकार जो ज्ञानानन्दसे परितृप्त है, उसे अक्षय सुख देनेवाली नित्य तृप्ति बनी रहती है ॥ २१½ ॥

धर्माधारा धर्मसुखाः कृत्स्नव्यवसितास्तथा ॥ २२ ॥
अस्ति नस्तत्त्वतो भूय इति प्राज्ञस्त्ववेक्षते ।

हममेंसे बहुत लोग ऐसे हैं, जिनका धर्म ही आधार है, जो धर्ममें ही सुख मानते हैं तथा जिन्होंने सम्पूर्ण कर्तव्य-अकर्तव्यका निश्चय कर लिया है; परंतु हमलोगोंका जो यथार्थरूप है, उसकी अपेक्षा बहुत महान् और व्यापक परमात्मा सर्वत्र सर्वात्मा रूपसे विराजमान है—ऐसा ज्ञानी पुरुष देखता है ॥ २२½ ॥

ज्ञानविज्ञानिनः केचित् परं पारं तितीर्षवः ॥ २३ ॥
अतीव पुण्यदं पुण्यं पुण्याभिजनसंहितम् ।
यत्र गत्वा न शोचन्ति न च्यवन्ति व्यथन्ति च ॥ २४ ॥

भवसागरसे पार उतरनेकी इच्छावाले कोई-कोई ज्ञान-विज्ञानसम्पन्न महात्मा पुरुष ही अत्यन्त पवित्र और पुण्यात्माओंसे सेवित पुण्यदायक ब्रह्मलोकको प्राप्त होते हैं, जहाँ जाकर वे न तो शोक करते हैं, न वहाँसे नीचे गिरते हैं और न मनमें किसी प्रकारकी व्यथाका ही अनुभव करते हैं ॥ २३-२४ ॥

ते तु तद् ब्रह्मणः स्थानं प्राप्नुवन्तीह सात्त्विकाः ।
नैव ते स्वर्गमिच्छन्ति न यजन्ति यशोधनैः ।। २५ ।।
सतां वर्त्मानुवर्तन्ते यजन्ते चाविहिंसया ।
वनस्पतीनोषधीश्च फलं मूलं च ते विदुः ।। २६ ।।
न चैतानृत्विजो लुब्धा याजयन्ति फलार्थिनः ।

वे सात्त्विक महापुरुष उस ब्रह्मधामको ही प्राप्त होते हैं, उन्हें स्वर्गकी इच्छा नहीं होती, वे यश और धनके लिये यज्ञ नहीं करते, सत्पुरुषोंके मार्गपर चलते और हिंसारहित यज्ञोंका अनुष्ठान करते हैं। वनस्पति, अन्न और फल-मूलको ही वे हविष्य मानते हैं, धनकी इच्छा रखनेवाले लोभी ऋत्विज् इनका यज्ञ नहीं कराते हैं ।। २५-२६½ ।।

स्वमेव चार्थं कुर्वाणा यज्ञं चक्रुः पुनर्द्विजाः ।। २७ ।।
परिनिष्ठितकर्माणः प्रजानुग्रहकाम्यया ।

ज्ञानी ब्राह्मणोंने अपनेको ही यज्ञका उपकरण मानकर मानसिक यज्ञका अनुष्ठान किया है। उन्होंने प्रजाहितकी कामनासे ही मानसिक यज्ञका अनुष्ठान किया है ।। २७½ ।।

तस्मात् तानृत्विजो लुब्धा याजयन्त्यशुभान् नरान् ।। २८ ।।
प्रापयेयुः प्रजाः स्वर्गं स्वधर्माचरणेन वै ।
इति मे वर्तते बुद्धिः समा सर्वत्र जाजले ।। २९ ।।

लोभी ऋत्विज् तो ऐसे लोगोंका ही यज्ञ कराते हैं, जो अशुभ (मोक्षकी इच्छासे रहित) होते हैं, श्रेष्ठ पुरुष तो स्वधर्मका आचरण करते हुए ही प्रजाको स्वर्गमें पहुँचा देते हैं। जाजले! यही सोचकर मेरी बुद्धि भी सर्वत्र समान भाव ही रखती है ।। २८-२९ ।।

यानि यज्ञेष्विहेज्यन्ति सदा प्राज्ञा द्विजर्षभाः ।
तेन ते देवयानेन पथा यान्ति महामुने ।। ३० ।।

महामुने! श्रेष्ठ विद्वान् ब्राह्मण सदा ही जिन द्रव्योंको लेकर उनका यज्ञोंमें उपयोग करते हैं, उन्हींके द्वारा वे दिव्य मार्गसे पुण्य लोकोंमें जाते हैं ।। ३० ।।

आवृत्तिस्तस्य चैकस्य नास्त्यावृत्तिर्मनीषिणः ।
उभौ तौ देवयानेन गच्छतो जाजले पथा ।। ३१ ।।

जाजले! जो कामनाओंमें आसक्त है, उसी मनुष्यकी इस संसारमें पुनरावृत्ति होती है; ज्ञानीका पुनः यहाँ जन्म नहीं होता। यद्यपि दोनों दिव्यमार्गसे ही पुण्यलोकोंमें जाते हैं, तथापि संकल्प-भेदसे ही उनकी आवृत्ति और अनावृत्ति होती है ।। ३१ ।।

स्वयं चैषामनडुहो युज्यन्ति च वहन्ति च ।
स्वयमुस्राश्च दुह्यन्ते मनःसंकल्पसिद्धिभिः ।। ३२ ।।

ज्ञानी महात्माओंकी इच्छा होते ही उनके मानसिक संकल्पकी सिद्धियोंके अनुसार बैल स्वयं गाड़ीमें जुतकर उनकी सवारी ढोने लगते हैं, दूध देनेवाली गौएँ स्वयं ही सब प्रकारके मनोरथोंकी सिद्धिरूप दुग्ध प्रदान करती हैं ।। ३२ ।।

स्वयं यूपानुपादाय यजन्ते स्वाप्तदक्षिणैः ।
यस्तथा भावितात्मा स्यात् स गामालब्धुमर्हति ।। ३३ ।।

योगसिद्ध पुरुषोंके पास स्वयं यज्ञयूप उपस्थित हो जाते हैं और उन्हें लेकर वे पर्याप्त दक्षिणाओंसे युक्त यज्ञोंद्वारा यजन करते हैं। उनके ऋत्विजोंके पास दक्षिणा भी स्वतः उपस्थित हो जाती है। जिसका अन्तःकरण इस प्रकार शुद्ध एवं सिद्ध हो गया है, वही पृथ्वीको उपलब्ध कर सकता है ।। ३३ ।।

ओषधीभिस्तथा ब्रह्मन् यजेरंस्ते न तादृशाः ।
इति त्यागं पुरस्कृत्य तादृशं प्रब्रवीमि ते ।। ३४ ।।

ब्रह्मन्! इसलिये वे योगसिद्ध पुरुष ओषधियों—अन्न आदिके द्वारा यज्ञ कर सकते हैं। जो पहले बताये अनुसार मूढ़ लोग हैं, वे उस तरहका यज्ञ नहीं कर सकते। कर्मफलका त्याग करनेवाले महात्माओंका ऐसा अद्भुत माहात्म्य है, इसलिये मैं त्यागको आगे रखकर तुमसे ऐसी बात कह रहा हूँ ।। ३४ ।।

निराशिषमनारम्भं निर्नमस्कारमस्तुतिम् ।
अक्षीणं क्षीणकर्माणं तं देवा ब्राह्मणं विदुः ।। ३५ ।।

जिसके मनमें कोई कामना नहीं है, जो किसी फलकी इच्छासे कर्मोंका आरम्भ नहीं करता, नमस्कार और स्तुतिसे अलग रहता है, जिसका धर्म नहीं क्षीण हुआ है, कर्म-बन्धन क्षीण हो गया है, उसी पुरुषको देवतालोग ब्राह्मण मानते हैं ।। ३५ ।।

न श्रावयन् न च यजन् न ददद् ब्राह्मणेषु च ।
काम्यां वृत्तिं लिप्समानः कां गतिं याति जाजले ।
इदं तु दैवतं कृत्वा यथा यज्ञमवाप्नुयात् ।। ३६ ।।

जाजले! जो ब्राह्मण वेदाध्ययन, यजन और ब्राह्मणोंको दान देना आदि वर्णोचित कर्म नहीं करता और मनोहर भोग-पदार्थोंकी लिप्सा रखता है, वह कुत्सित गतिको प्राप्त होता है। किंतु निष्काम धर्मको देवताके समान आराध्य बनानेवाला मनुष्य यज्ञके यथार्थ फल—मोक्षको प्राप्त कर लेता है ।। ३६।।

जाजलिरुवाच

न वै मुनीनां शृणुमः स्म तत्त्वं
पृच्छामि ते वाणिज कष्टमेतत् ।
पूर्वे पूर्वे चास्य नावेक्षमाणा
नातः परं तमृषयः स्थापयन्ति ।। ३७ ।।

जाजलिने पूछा—वैश्यप्रवर! मैंने आत्मयाजी मुनियोंके समीप तुम्हारेद्वारा प्रतिपादित तत्त्वको कभी नहीं सुना। सम्भवतः यह समझनेमें कठिन भी है, क्योंकि पूर्वकालीन महर्षियोंने इसके ऊपर विशेष विचार नहीं किया है। जिन्होंने विचार किया है, उन्होंने भी

उत्तम होनेपर भी इस धर्मकी जगत्‌में स्थापना नहीं की है; अतः मैं तुमसे ही पूछता हूँ ॥ ३७ ॥

यस्मिन्नेवात्मतीर्थे न पशवः प्राप्नुयुर्मखम् ।
अथ स्म कर्मणा केन वाणिज प्राप्नुयात् सुखम् ॥ ३८ ॥
शंस मे तन्महाप्राज्ञ भृशं वै श्रद्दधामि ते ।

वणिक्‌पुत्र! यदि इस प्रकार आत्मतीर्थमें पशु अर्थात् अज्ञानी मानव आत्मयज्ञका सौभाग्य नहीं पा सकते तो किस कर्मसे उन्हें सुखकी प्राप्ति हो सकती है? महामते! यह बात मुझे बताओ। मैं तुम्हारे कथनपर अधिक श्रद्धा रखता हूँ ॥ ३८½ ॥

तुलाधार उवाच

उत यज्ञा उतायज्ञा मखं नार्हन्ति ते क्वचित् ॥ ३९ ॥
आज्येन पयसा दध्ना पूर्णाहुत्या विशेषतः ।
वालैः शृङ्गेण पादेन सम्भवत्येव गौर्मखम् ॥ ४० ॥

तुलाधारने कहा—ब्रह्मन्! जिन दम्भी पुरुषोंके यज्ञ अश्रद्धा आदि दोषोंके कारण यज्ञ कहलानेयोग्य नहीं रह जाते, वे न तो मानसिक यज्ञके अधिकारी हैं और न क्रियात्मक यज्ञके ही। श्रद्धालु पुरुष तो घी, दूध, दही और विशेषतः पूर्णाहुतिसे ही अपना यज्ञ पूर्ण करते हैं। श्रद्धालुओंमें जो असमर्थ हैं, उनका यज्ञ गाय अपनी पूँछके बालोंके स्पर्शसे, शृंगजलसे और पैरोंकी धूलसे ही पूर्ण कर देती है ॥ ३९-४० ॥

पत्नीं चानेन विधिना प्रकरोति नियोजयन् ।
इष्टं तु दैवतं कृत्वा यथा यज्ञमवाप्नुयात् ॥ ४१ ॥

इसी विधिसे देवताके लिये घी आदि द्रव्य समर्पित करनेके लिये श्रद्धाको ही पत्नी बनाये और यज्ञको ही देवताके समान आराध्य बनाकर यथावत् रूपसे यज्ञपुरुष भगवान् विष्णुको प्राप्त करे ॥ ४१ ॥

पुरोडाशो हि सर्वेषां पशूनां मेध्य उच्यते ।
सर्वा नद्यः सरस्वत्यः सर्वे पुण्याः शिलोच्चयाः ॥ ४२ ॥

यज्ञविहित समस्त पशुओंके दुग्ध आदिसे निर्मित पुरोडाशको ही पवित्र बताया जाता है। सारी नदियाँ ही सरस्वतीका रूप हैं और समस्त पर्वत ही पुण्यमय प्रदेश हैं ॥ ४२ ॥

जाजले तीर्थमात्मैव मा स्म देशातिथिर्भव ।
एतानीदृशकान् धर्मानाचरन्निह जाजले ॥ ४३ ॥
कारणैर्धर्ममन्विच्छन् स लोकानाप्नुते शुभान् ।

जाजले! यह आत्मा ही प्रधान तीर्थ है। आप तीर्थसेवनके लिये देश-देशमें मत भटकिये। जो यहाँ मेरे बताये हुए अहिंसाप्रधान धर्मोंका आचरण करता है तथा विशेष कारणोंसे धर्मका अनुसंधान करता है, वह कल्याणकारी लोकोंको प्राप्त होता है ॥ ४३½ ॥

भीष्म उवाच

एतानीदृशकान् धर्मांस्तुलाधारः प्रशंसति ॥ ४४ ॥

Allegations-

Krishna recommended the slaughtering of animals for worshipping Govardhan Mountain and also consumed the flesh of animals that were offered by the people,

📚Vishnu Purana 5.10.36-49📚
Let prayer and offerings then be addressed to the mountain Govarddhana, and kill a victim in due form. Let the whole station collect their milk without delay, and feed with it the Brahmans and all who may desire to partake of it. When the oblations have been presented, and the Brahmans have been fed, let the Gopas circumambulate the cows, decorated with garlands of autumnal flowers. If the cowherds will attend to these suggestions, they will secure the favour of the mountain, of the cattle, and also mine." When Nanda and the other Gopas heard these words of Krishńa, their faces expanded with delight, and they said that he had spoken well. "You have judged rightly, child," exclaimed they; "we will do exactly as you have proposed, and offer adoration to the mountain." Accordingly the inhabitants of Vraja worshipped the mountain, presenting to it curds and milk and flesh; and they fed hundreds and thousands of Brahmans, and many other guests, who came to the ceremony, even as Krishńa had enjoined: and when they had made their offerings, they circumambulated the cows and the bulls, that bellowed as loud as roaring clouds. Upon the summit of Govarddhana, Krishńa presented himself, saying, "I am the mountain," and partook of much food presented by the Gopas; whilst in his own form as Krishńa he ascended the hill along with the cowherds, and worshipped his other self. Having promised them many blessings, the mountain-person of Krishńa vanished; and the ceremony being completed, the cowherds returned to their station."

Refutation-

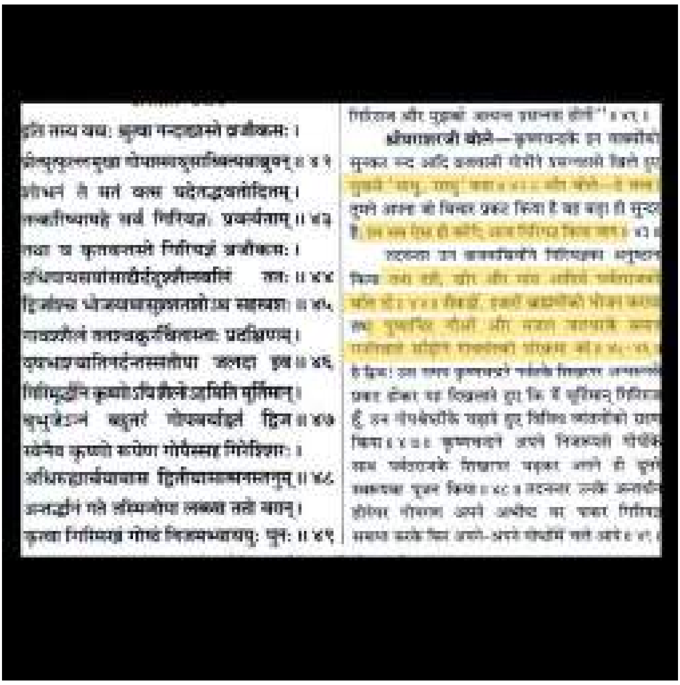
Next he alleged on Vishnu Purana 5.10.36-49 that Shree Krishna recommended the slaughtering of Animals and offering meat . Here is Vishnu Purana Geeta Press Gorakhpur

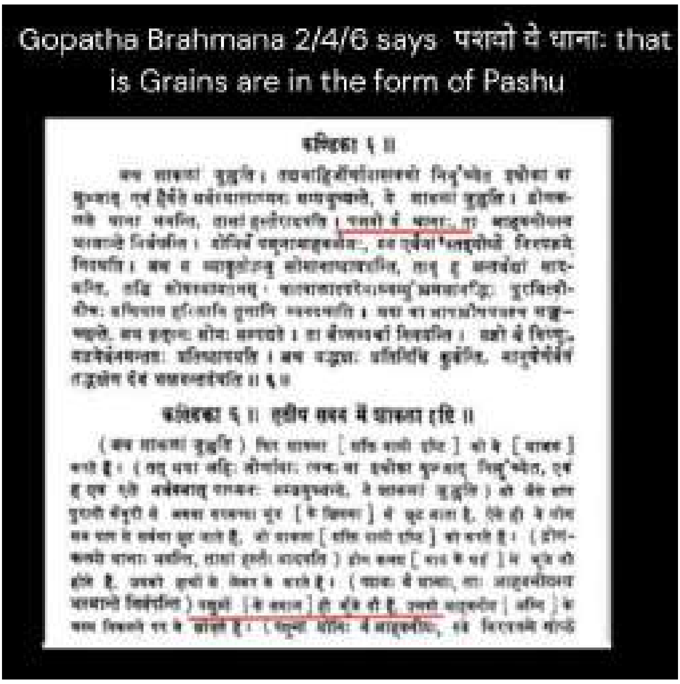


Here use of Pashu and Mans is mentioned but what is Pashu and Mans as per Shruti

Taittriya Brahmana 1/8/6/1-3 says पशवो वै पुरोडाशा: which means "Purodāśa [Sacrificial cake made up of Rice and Barley] is also called a Pashu (Animal) "

Taittriya Samhita 2.3.2.8 says दधि मधु घृतम् आपो धाना भवन्ति एतद् वै पशूनाः रूपम् which means The curd, honey, butter, water, and grains are forms of Pashu

Gopatha Brahmana 2/4/6 says पशवो वे धाना: that is Grains are in the form of Pashu



Thus keeping this Shruti Vakya in Mind here too Pashu should be interpreted as Purodosa .

Allegations-

📚Harivamsha Purana 2.17.15-21📚
Let us kill the animals such as buffalos to be eaten. Let this sacrifice be conducted with all gopas... Along with a pond of urd, a vortex of ghee, a river of milk, a variety of meat and a mountain of cooked rice, the entire complex of vraja including the happy gopa-s and beautiful gopi-s proceeded for the hill sacrifice... At the start of the sacrifice, the items were offered to the fire as ordained. The gopa-s performed the sacrifice along with brahmins on an auspicious day. At the end of the sacrifice, by illusion, Krishna became the hill and consumed the best rice, milk, curd and meat which were offered."

Refutation-

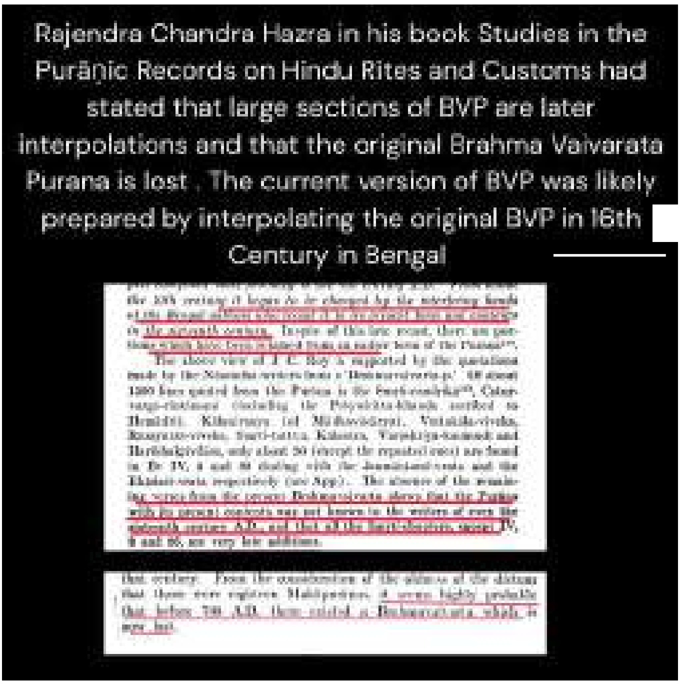
Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

What if certain Puranas and Smritis contain references to the use of cow or bull meat and Cow and Bull Slaughter would those specific references be considered valid and authoritative?

The Answer is No ! Manu Smriti , Vyasa Smriti , Mimasa Sutra all describe the Supreme Authority of Vedas . Vedas say that Cows and Bulls are Aghanya (Inviolable) and prohibits eating the meat of Cows and Bulls . So if any Smriti or Purana mentions any form of Cow or Bull Slaughter it will be immediately rejected being Anti Vedic . This supreme Authority of Vedas is confirmed by the following refrences sir can you explain the Manu Smriti Chapter 5 Verses which explicitly says that one should kill at Madhurparka, Sraadha & Yajna. Also the verse that says Svayambhu created Pasū for Yagya Karma so that they may attain Higher Yoni.

The verses of Manusmriti are contradictory as at one place it doesn't list meat as part of Sraddha. The Manusmriti version that is in circulation is considered forged over time by many scholars.
As for Pasū or animals being created by Svayambhu for higjer yoni, animal sacrifice was symbolic in older yugas or considered not akin to killing as the gods revived the animal. Therefore, animal sacrifice wasn't prohibited as all harm was undone.
However, animal sacrifice is prohibited in Kali Yuga as sacrifices aren't much effective anymore due to people being far more sinful.

even so there Is a Valid Bhashya of All 9 Acharaya's on the shlok and That has been frequently cited by Many Acharaya's prior to 12th century. Even Acharya Sayanna has accepted as places in his Commentary like on Atharva Veda 4.14.6-7 has Interpreted it as Goat Sacrifice and So have Acarya's like Mahidhara on Yajurveda 21.43 and Uvata the same.

morever All Acarya's of Vedanta Darshan have accepted Pasū Bali As Dharmik even if it involves killing in places like 3.1.24-25. The main problem here which none as addressed is Manu Smriti and Acarya's Vachana. Calling fake is one option but isn't there some other way which we have forgotten to Look.

Allegations-

Read the new article Hinduism and Lust for obscenity in other Hindu sciptures

This article is not intended to offend Hindus, I have written this article only for those Hindus who thinks only Hinduism is a pure religion free from obscenity and all other religions are full of obscenities. Such people are perverts that's why they only look for sex related things in other religions, their minds are filled with lust.

Sexuality was not a secret thing in Vedic period as it is evident from scriptures like Kama Sutra and various other Hindu texts which openly spoke or showed pornography.

It was only in recent times when Hinduism was influenced by other religions that it took shelter in modesty. Despite such facts some Hindu fanatics do not hesitate mocking other religions especially other religious personalities. I am reproducing some verses from Vedas, which is the oldest text of Hinduism.

PROHIBITION AND PUNISHMENT FOR RAPE AND ADULTERY AND LUSTFUL ACTIVITIES AND ALL OTHER SUCH ACTIVITIES IN ANY FORM AS PER SANATAN DHARMA AND SCRIPTURES

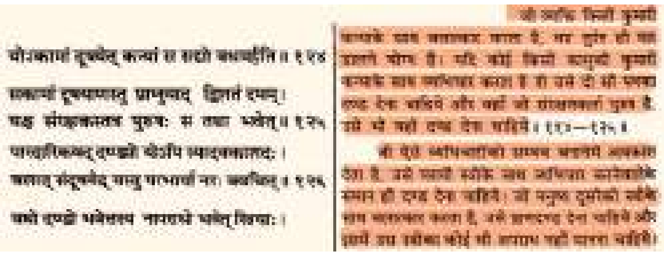
"When it comes to the allegations of sexuality, adultery, or rape in Hinduism, it must be clearly understood that such acts of lust, immorality, and violence are never endorsed but are in fact strongly condemned. The higher Vedic scriptures uphold dharma (righteous conduct), self-control, purity, and respect for all beings as supreme virtues. Any form of indulgence in uncontrolled lust, adultery, or exploitation is strictly prohibited and regarded as a grave deviation from the spiritual path. The Vedas, Upanishads, Smritis, and Puranas consistently emphasize that true spiritual progress is possible only through discipline, restraint, and adherence to moral values, not through indulgence in such condemnable actions."

Matsya Purana chapter 227 slokas 124-126 says

जो व्यक्ति किसी कुमारी
कन्याके साथ बलात्कार करता है, वह तुरंत ही मार डालने योग्य है। यदि कोई किसी कामुकी कुमारी कन्याके साथ व्यभिचार करता है तो उसे दो सौ पणका दण्ड देना चाहिये और वहाँ जो संरक्षणकर्ता पुरुष है, उसे भी यही दण्ड देना चाहिये ॥ १२४-१२५ ॥

जो ऐसे व्यभिचारोंको सम्भव बनानेमें अवकाश देता है, उसे परायी स्त्रीके साथ व्यभिचार करनेवालेके समान ही दण्ड देना चाहिये। जो मनुष्य दूसरेकी स्त्रीके साथ बलात्कार करता है, उसे प्राणदण्ड देना चाहिये और इसमें उस स्त्रीका कोई भी अपराध नहीं मानना चाहिये

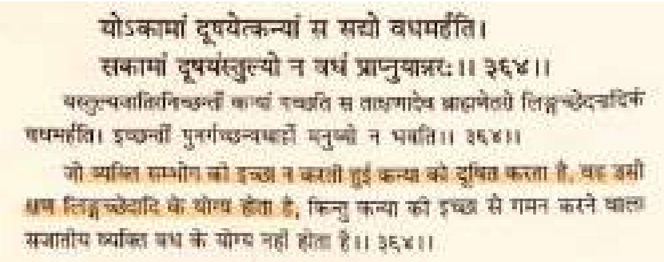
“A man who commits rape on an unmarried maiden (kumārī kanyā) deserves to be put to death immediately.
If anyone has illicit intercourse with a lustful (consenting but unprotected) maiden, he should be fined two hundred paṇas, and the guardian or protector who failed to safeguard her should be punished with the same fine.
Whoever allows such adulterous acts to happen through negligence shall be punished in the same way as the one who committed adultery with another man’s wife.
A man who rapes another man’s wife must be punished with the death penalty, and in this case, the woman herself is not to be considered guilty in any way.”



Manu Smriti 8.364

जो व्यक्ति सम्भोग की इच्छा न करती हुई कन्या को दूषित करता है, वह उसी क्षण लिङ्गच्छेदादि के योग्य होता है, किन्तु कन्या की इच्छा से गमन करने वाला सजातीय व्यक्ति वध के योग्य नहीं होता है।। ३६४ ।।

“A man who violates a maiden who has no desire for sexual union becomes, at that very moment, deserving of punishment such as the cutting off of his organ; however, if a man of the same caste unites with a maiden with her consent, he is not considered deserving of death.”



योऽकामां दूषयेत्कन्यां स सद्यो वधमर्हति।

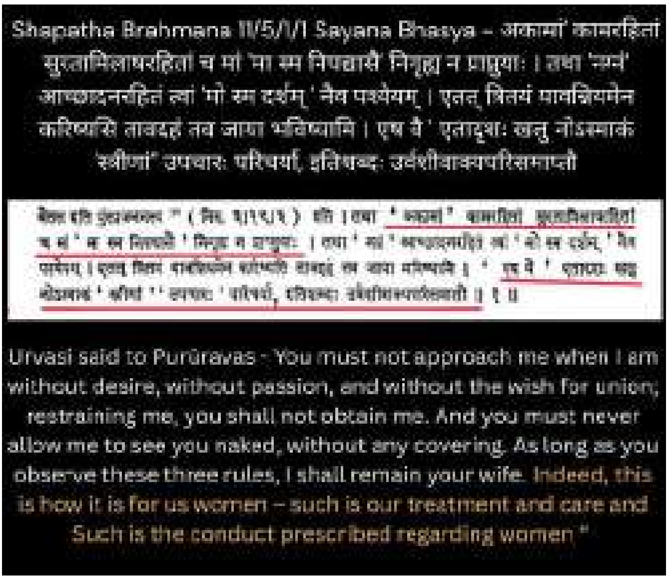
And you must never allow me to see you naked, without any covering. As long as you observe these three rules, I shall remain your wife. Indeed, this is how it is for us women – such is our treatment and care and Such is the conduct prescribed regarding women "



In Nirukta 6.27 Rishi Yaska the seven maryadas which are never to be practiced and it includes व्यभिचार meaning Adultery

'सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, जो जन में से एक को भी माप्तहोता है, वह पापी होता है' (१००५१६) सात मर्यादाएं ऋषिों ने बनाई हैं, उनमें से एक को भी प्राप्त होता हुआ पापी होता है। (वह सात यह हैं-) चोरी, व्यभिचार, ब्रह्म इत्या, गर्भ हत्या, सुरापान, दुष्कर्म का बार२ सेवन, पातक के विषय में झूठ बोलना (किसी पर झूठा पातक लगाना) । (११२) बत यह निपात है खेद और अनुकम्पा अर्थ में ॥२७॥

"Seven restrictions (or codes of conduct) have been established by the sages. Whoever among people violates even one of them is considered sinful. These seven are: theft, adultery, disrespect toward Brahman, abortion, consumption of alcohol, repeated indulgence in sinful acts, and lying about sins (i.e., falsely accusing someone of a sin). This is explained in the sense of causing sorrow and requiring compassion."

सो ! मारा जाने से पहले, कहाँ हो हे पुकार के सुनने वालो'। जाल में पड़े हुए मत्स्यों का यह आर्त (पड़ेपि वचन) बतलाते हैं। मत्स्याः = जल में चलते हैं। अथवा एक दूसरे को भक्षण के लिये मत्स्य होते हैं। जाल = जल में चलने वाला होता है, अथवा जल में होने वाला, या जल में खेलने वाला। (११९—) अंहुरः = पापवाला; अंहुरण भी इसी का होता है 'पापवाले (अन्य कृत) से यहाँ (रक्षा) करता हुआ' (१।१०५।१७) यह भी निगम होता है। 'सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, जो उन में से एक को भी प्राप्त होता है, वह पापी होता है' (१०।५।६) सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, उनमें से एक को भी प्राप्त होता हुआ पापी होता है। (वह सात यह हैं—) चोरी, व्यभिचार, ब्रह्म हत्या, गर्भ हत्या, सुरापान, दुष्कर्म का बारम्बार सेवन, पातक के विषय में झूठ बोलना (किसी पर झूठा पातक लगाना)। (१२२—) बत यह निपात है खेद और अनुकम्पा अर्थ में ॥२७॥

The wise made seven boundaries, a man going beyond even one of them becomes distressed. They are theft, adultery, killing of a learned man, abortion, drinking, habitual addiction to wickedness, and false accusation of heinous crime.[5]

Rig Veda 10/5/6 says that anyone who commits any of the seven Moral Restraints (Sapta Maryada) becomes a Big Sinner

मेधावियों ने सात मर्यादाओं को छोड दिया है. इन कार्यों में से एक को करने वाला भी पाप को प्राप्त करता है. मनुष्यों को पाप से रोकने वाले अग्नि समीपवर्ती मानवलोक में, सूर्यकिरणों के विचरने के स्थान में एवं जलों में रहते हैं

The wise have abandoned the seven moral restraints. Even one who commits any one of these actions incurs sin. Those who restrain humans from sin dwell near the sacred fire, in the realm of humans close to it, in the regions where the sun's rays roam, and in the waters.

Katha Upanishad 1.2.24 Geeta Press Gorakhpur-

जो पापकर्मोंसे निवृत्त नहीं हुआ है, जिसकी इन्द्रियाँ शान्त नहीं हैं और जिसका चित्त असमाहित या अशान्त है वह इसे आत्मज्ञानद्वारा प्राप्त नहीं कर सकता है॥ २४॥

"One who has not renounced sinful actions, whose senses are not tranquil, and whose mind is not composed or peaceful—such a person cannot attain this (Self-realization) through knowledge of the Self." (Verse 24)

Sankara Bhasya-

जो दुश्शील – प्रतिविद्ध कर्म यानी श्रुति – स्मृतिसे अविहित पापकर्मसे अविरत – अनुप्रत है वह नहीं, जो इन्द्रियोंकी चंचलताके कारण

अशान्त यानी उपरतिस्थ है वह भी नहीं, जो असमाहित अर्थात् जिसका चित्त एकाग्र नहीं है – जो विक्षिप्तचित्त है वह भी नहीं, तथा समाहितचित्त होनेपर भी उस एकाग्रताके फलका इच्छुक होनेके कारण जो अशान्तचित्त है – जिसका चित्त निरन्तर व्याप्त करता रहता है वह पुरुष भी इस प्रस्तुत आत्माको केवल आत्मज्ञानद्वारा नहीं प्राप्त कर सकता। अतः जो पापकर्म और इन्द्रियोंकी चंचलता हटाकर हुआ तथा समाहितचित्त होकर भी उस समाहितचित्तताके फलकी उपेक्षाकरके जो उपरतिस्थ है वह आत्मज्ञान साधक ही ब्रह्मविद्या उपयुक्त आत्माको प्राप्त कर सकता है॥ २४॥

One who is immoral—engaged in sinful actions not prescribed by the scriptures (Shruti and Smriti)—cannot attain the Self. Nor can one who is restless due to sensory distractions. Even one whose mind is scattered and lacks concentration cannot attain it. Moreover, even if the mind is concentrated, if the person desires the fruits of that concentration, and the mind remains constantly occupied, such a person too cannot attain the Self through mere knowledge. Therefore, only the seeker who has renounced sinful actions and sensory distractions, whose mind is concentrated yet detached from the fruits of concentration, and who is truly tranquil—such a person alone can attain the Self suitable for Brahmavidya (knowledge of Brahman). In Mahabharat 13/141/25-26 Maheshwar Shiva himself told to avoid the contact of other men wives as a sign of Dharma

Shri Maheshwara (Lord Shiva) said –
O Devi! Not causing harm to any living being, speaking the truth, showing compassion to all creatures, controlling the mind and senses, and giving charity according to one's capacity — these are the noble duties of a householder (Grihastha Ashrama). (Verse 25)

Maintaining these duties of household life — Staying away from relations with another's wife, protecting entrusted goods and the honor of women, not taking anything without giving in return, and renouncing meat and alcohol — these are five types (aspects) of Dharma that lead to happiness.
Each of these Dharmic principles has many branches.
Those who consider Dharma to be supreme should certainly follow this virtuous and meritorious path.

जो पुरुष दूसरोंके धन, सन्तान अथवा स्त्रियोंका हरण करता है, उसे अत्यन्त भयानक यमदूत कालपाशमें बाँधकर बलात् तामिस्र नरकमें गिरा देते हैं। उस अन्धकारमय नरकमें उसे अन्न-जल न देना, डंडे लगाना और भय दिखलाना आदि अनेक प्रकारके उपायोंसे पीड़ित किया जाता है। इससे अत्यन्त दु:खी होकर वह एकाएक मूर्च्छित हो जाता है ।।८।। इसी प्रकार जो पुरुष किसी दूसरेको धोखा देकर उसकी स्त्री आदिको भोगता है, वह अन्धतामिस्र नरकमें पड़ता है। वहाँकी यातनाओंमें पड़कर वह जड़से कटे हुए वृक्षके समान, वेदनाके मारे सारी सुध-बुध खो बैठता है और उसे कुछ भी नहीं सूझ पड़ता। इसीसे इस नरकको अन्धतामिस्र कहते हैं ।।९।।

Verse 8 (Tāmisra Hell): A man who abducts another's wealth, children, or wife is bound by terrifying messengers of Yama with the noose of time and forcibly thrown into Tāmisra, a hell of deep darkness. There, he is tormented by being denied food and water, beaten with sticks, and subjected to constant fear. Overwhelmed by suffering, he eventually faints.

Verse 9 (Andhatāmisra Hell): Similarly, a man who deceives another and enjoys his wife is cast into Andhatāmisra, a hell of utter blindness. The tortures there are so intense that he loses all awareness, like a tree uprooted from its roots. His mind becomes completely clouded by pain, and he is unable to perceive anything — hence the name "Andhatāmisra," meaning "blind darkness."

   In the previous stanza a true seeker is advised to give up all covetousness for the wealth of the world, and here he is advised to give up lusty passions for women. From the days of the Upanishads to our own times, we find in all masters this constant warning against wealth (kaanchana) and woman (kaaminee). But no insult is meant to either; this is a state-ment of a scientific truth. All intelligent living creatures have these two irresistible urges, ‘to possess more’ (wealth) and ‘to enjoy’ (woman).

Commentary by Swami Chinmayananda

Biologically, nature has made man and woman, with a natural affinity for the charms of the opposite sex. This natural urge is to be controlled, disciplined, purified, sub-limated. An intelligent intellect alone can achieve this. An animal cannot; to act according to its instincts and impulses is but its privilege. The glory of man is that he can, by his rational intellect, curb and control the flow of his instincts for carnal pleasures and redivert them, thus ultimately sublimat-ing himself into something nobler and more divine.

O King, on festival days, union with a woman causes loss of wealth; if done during the daytime, it brings sin; if upon the bare ground, it brings disease; and if in a body of water, it results in misfortune.

With another man’s wife, one should not engage—not even in speech, nor in thought—for those who commit intercourse with her are not even granted bone-formation [meaning, in rebirth they become boneless creatures such as worms, etc.].

Attachment to another man’s wife is a source of fear in both this world and the next; in this life, it shortens one’s lifespan, and upon death, one goes to hell.

Knowing this, a wise man should unite only with his own wife, free from the above-mentioned faults, during her season of fertility; and if she especially desires it, he may do so even outside her season.

One should control others with the goad of knowledge. Lust (kāma), anger (krodha), greed (lobha), delight (harṣa), pride (māna), and arrogance (mada) – these are called the sixfold enemies (ṣaḍ-varga). A king should completely renounce them. When all these are abandoned, he becomes happy. (6–7)

A king, endowed with the virtue of humility, should deliberate upon the four sciences – Ānvīkṣikī (the science of the self and logic), the triple Veda (Vedic knowledge), Vārttā (agriculture, commerce, and cattle-rearing), and Daṇḍanīti (science of governance and law enforcement) – together with learned scholars and capable men who practice these sciences according to their respective fields (so that they are properly propagated and spread among the people).
From Ānvīkṣikī comes knowledge of the self and understanding of the true nature of things. Knowledge of righteousness (dharma) and unrighteousness (adharma) rests upon the triple Veda. Wealth and misfortune depend upon the proper use of Vārttā. Justice and injustice are based upon the proper or improper application of Daṇḍanīti. (8–9)

Sūta said — Accepting the request of Kali Yuga, King Parīkṣit granted him four places to reside: gambling, intoxication, illicit relations with women, and violence. In these places dwell, respectively — falsehood, intoxication, attachment, and cruelty. (38)

He (Kali) asked for more places. Then the capable Parīkṣit granted him one more place — gold (wealth). Thus, Kali Yuga came to have five abodes: falsehood, intoxication, lust, enmity, and passion (rajo-guṇa). (39)

Abiding by the command of Parīkṣit, Kali Yuga, the root cause of irreligion, took up residence in these five allotted places. (40)

Therefore, a person seeking self-welfare should never indulge in these five. Especially religious kings, leaders of the people, and spiritual preceptors who instruct in dharma must give them up with great care. (41)

सिद्धपुरुषो ! जीव इस शरीरमें पाँच कर्मेन्द्रियोंसे लेना-देना, चलना-फिरना आदि काम करता है, पाँच ज्ञानेन्द्रियोंसे रूप-रस आदि पाँच विषयोंका अनुभव करता है और सोलहवें मनके साथ सत्रहवाँ वह स्वयं मिलकर अकेले ही मन, ज्ञानेन्द्रिय और कर्मेन्द्रिय – इन तीनोंके विषयोंको भोगता है ।।५०।। जीवका यह सोलह कला और सत्त्वादि तीन गुणोंवाला लिंगशरीर अनादि है। यही जीवको बार-बार हर्ष, शोक, भय और पीड़ा देनेवाले जन्म-मृत्युके चक्करमें डालता है ।। ५१ ।। जो जीव अज्ञानवश काम, क्रोध, लोभ, मोह, मद, मत्सर-इन छः शत्रुओंपर विजय प्राप्त नहीं कर लेता, उसे इच्छा न रहते हुए भी विभिन्न वासनाओंके अनुसार अनेकों कर्म करने पड़ते हैं। वैसी स्थितिमें वह रेशमके कीड़ेके समान अपनेको कर्मके जालमें जकड़ लेता है और इस प्रकार अपने हाथों मोहका शिकार बन जाता है ।।५२।। कोई शरीरधारी जीव बिना कर्म किये कभी एक क्षण भी नहीं रह सकता। प्रत्येक प्राणीके स्वाभाविक गुण बलपूर्वक विवश करके उससे कर्म कराते हैं ।। ५३।। जीव अपने पूर्वजन्मोंके पाप-पुण्यमय संस्कारोंके अनुसार स्थूल और सूक्ष्म शरीर प्राप्त करता है। उसकी स्वाभाविक एवं प्रबल वासनाएँ कभी उसे माताके-जैसा (स्त्रीरूप) बना देती हैं, तो कभी पिताके-जैसा (पुरुषरूप) ।।५४।। प्रकृतिका संसर्ग होनेसे ही पुरुष अपनेको अपने वास्तविक स्वरूपके विपरीत लिंगशरीर मान बैठा है। यह विपर्यय भगवान्के भजनसे शीघ्र ही दूर हो जाता है ।।५५।

O perfected beings! In this body, the jīva uses the five organs of action (karmendriyas) to perform activities such as taking, giving, moving, and walking. With the five organs of knowledge (jñānendriyas) he experiences the five sense-objects such as form and taste. Along with the mind as the sixteenth factor, and himself as the seventeenth, he alone enjoys the subjects of the mind, the sense organs, and the organs of action. (50)

This subtle body (liṅga-śarīra), consisting of sixteen parts and the three guṇas such as sattva, is without beginning. It is this which casts the jīva repeatedly into the cycle of birth and death, causing him joy, sorrow, fear, and suffering. (51)

The jīva who, out of ignorance, does not conquer the six enemies — lust, anger, greed, delusion, pride, and envy — is forced, even against his will, to perform many actions according to his various desires. In that condition, he binds himself in the web of karma just like a silkworm entangles itself in its own cocoon, thus becoming a victim of delusion by his own doing. (52)

No embodied being can remain even for a moment without action. The natural guṇas of every creature compel him to act by force. (53)

According to the pious and sinful impressions (saṃskāras) from his past lives, the jīva obtains both gross and subtle bodies. His inherent and powerful desires sometimes make him assume a mother-like (female) form, and at other times a father-like (male) form. (54)

It is only through contact with material nature that the soul mistakenly identifies himself with a body of the opposite nature to his true self. This false identification is quickly removed by the worship of the Supreme Lord. (55)

The moment lust arises in the heart, the senses, mind, life-force, body, righteousness, steadfastness, intellect, modesty, beauty, brilliance, memory, and truth — all of these are destroyed. (8)

O lotus-eyed One! The very moment a person abandons the lust dwelling in his mind, at that very moment he attains the divine form of the Lord. (9)

O Lord! My salutations unto You. You are the Supreme Brahman, the Supreme Soul, the crown jewel of generosity, dwelling in the hearts of all. I

शास्त्रोंमें जितने भी नियमसम्बन्धी आदेश हैं, उनका एकमात्र तात्पर्य यही है कि काम, क्रोध, लोभ, मोह, मद और मत्सर- इन छः शत्रुओंपर विजय प्राप्त कर ली जाय अथवा पाँचों इन्द्रिय और मन- ये छः वशमें हो जायँ। ऐसा होनेपर भी यदि उन नियमोंके द्वारा भगवान्‌के ध्यान-चिन्तन आदिकी प्राप्ति नहीं होती, तो उन्हें केवल श्रम-ही-श्रम समझना चाहिये ।। २८ ।।

All the injunctions found in the scriptures have but one purpose — that one should conquer the six enemies: lust, anger, greed, delusion, pride, and envy; or, that the five senses and the mind — these six — should come under control. Even if this is achieved, yet if through those rules one does not attain meditation and contemplation on the Lord, then such observances should be regarded as nothing but labor wasted. (28)

Hunting, gambling, daydreaming, slandering others, excessive association with women, intoxication, attachment to dancing, singing and playing musical instruments, and roaming about here and there aimlessly—these are described as the tenfold group that arises from desire (kāma).

Verse 48:
Tale-bearing (backbiting), reckless daring, treachery, jealousy, finding faults in others' virtues, the desire to seize another's wealth, speaking harsh words, and behaving with cruelty—these eight are said to arise from anger (krodha)

Verse 49:
All learned men consider greed (lobha) to be the root cause of both these groups. One should therefore strive with utmost effort to conquer greed, because these two groups spring forth from it.

The essential message of the śāstra here is that one must make an effort to restrain the senses. The additional elaboration (arthavāda) supports this. In the context of scriptural duties such as sandhyā (daily rituals), restraint means refraining from indulging in forbidden sense-objects. It also includes avoiding excessive attachment even to objects not explicitly forbidden.

Hence, the prohibition here extends not just to forbidden objects but also to over-attachment to permitted ones. Sense objects are naturally attractive—they seem to steal the mind and draw it in. This leads to dependence. Those who remain unaffected by such allure are considered wise.

So, when the senses move freely among objects, if they are not particularly active or indulging, then those objects are rendered harmless. But if the senses are unrestrained, they will lead one astray—even if the objects themselves are not tempting.

Therefore, one must make effort to restrain the senses, just as a charioteer tries to control the horses, which are by nature restless. If left unchecked, they pull the chariot off-course. So too the senses must be made obedient."

(2) Sarvajña Nārāyaṇaḥ's Commentary:

जप्ये अवश्योपसंहार्यमङ्गंदर्शयति इन्द्रियाणामित्यादिना ।
अपहारिग्विन्द्रियावकर्ष-केषु यन्तेवेत्येकाग्रतार्थ दृष्टान्तः ॥ ८८ ॥

"This verse emphasizes that even during japa (recitation of sacred mantras), the senses must be restrained. It shows that sense-restraint is an essential auxiliary part of such spiritual practice.

The senses are described as apahāri — that is, 'stealers' or 'distracters'. They draw the mind away.

The analogy of the charioteer is used to illustrate the need for one-pointed concentration (ekāgratā) — just as a driver controls the horses, one must control the wandering senses."

(3) Kuṭukaḥ's Commentary:

इदानींसर्ववर्णानुष्ठेयंसकलपुरुषार्थोपयुक्तमिन्द्रियसंयममाह

वर्तमानानांक्षयित्वादिविषयदोषाञ्जानन्संयमेयत्नं कुर्यात्सारथिरिवर
भनियुक्तानामश्वानाम् ॥ ८८ ॥

Now the topic of sense-restraint, which is applicable to all classes of society (sarva-varṇa) and necessary for all goals of life (puruṣārthas), is taken up.

Even when the senses are engaged in contact with sense-objects, knowing their defects—like causing decay, delusion, and bondage—a wise person should strive to control them.

Like a charioteer controlling the horses yoked to a chariot, one must discipline the senses."

(4) Rāghavānandaḥ's Commentary:

अनुपसंव्हतेन्द्रियाणांजपोपिनफला येति तदर्थप्रत्याहारमाह ।
इन्द्रियाणामिति । अपहारिषुई-न्द्रियाणि स्वमवणंकर्तुशीलेषु
यन्ताअश्वनियमनसारथिरिव संयमनंकुर्यात् ॥ ८८ ॥

"If the senses are not restrained, even japa (repetition of sacred mantras) will bear no fruit.

This verse is meant to support that view by encouraging sense-withdrawal (pratyāhāra). The senses are said to be 'stealers' (apahāriṣu)—they have a tendency to pull the mind outward.

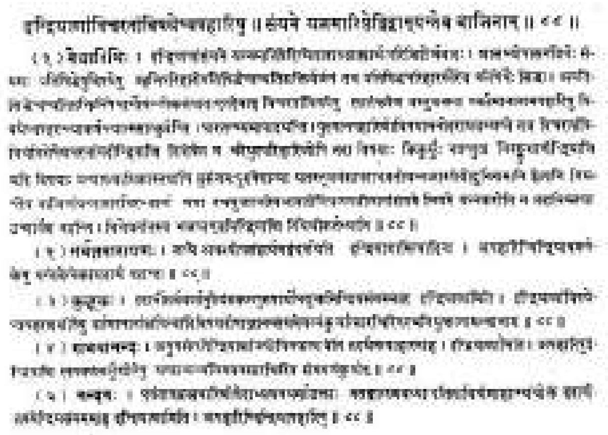
Just like a charioteer restrains horses from going wild, one must control the senses to prevent inner dissipation."

(5) Nandanaḥ's Commentary:

एवंतावद्ब्रह्मचारिणोवेदाध्ययनधर्माउक्ताः प्रसङ्गात्मणवव्या दृतिसावित्रीमाहात्म्यंचोक्तं इदानीं तस्येन्द्रियसंयममाह इन्द्रियाणामिति । अपहारिष्विन्द्रियापहारिषु ॥ ८८ ॥

"After explaining the duties of a brahmacārī such as Vedic study and the glory of the Gāyatrī mantra, now the importance of sense-restraint is described.

'Apahāriṣu indriyeṣu' — the senses are like thieves that carry the self away. The mind must be guarded from them, just as a charioteer restrains his horses.



इन्द्रियाणां विचरतां विषयेष्वपहारिषु ॥ संयमे यत्नमातिष्ठेद्विद्वान्यन्तेव वाजिनाम् ॥ ८८ ॥

Gautama-Dharmasūtra, 3.9—'One who behaves like this keeps the senses under control attains the regions of Brahman.'

Gautama-Dharmasūtra, 11.4.—'Pure, with senses under control, equipped with fully qualified-aids.'

As the wind carries away a ship from the intended course of the sailors and drives her astray, so the mind carries away the devotee's consciousness from the Self and turns it towards sense-objects.
Having explained in several ways the proposition enunci-ated in ii. 60-61, the Lord concludes by reaffirming the same proposition:

In the case of the man who possesses discriminative knowledge and whose knowledge has become steady, his experience of all matters, temporal and spiritual (laukika and vaidika, sensuous and supersensuous), ceases on the cessation of nescience (avidya); for, it is the effect of nescience: and nescience ceases because it is opposed to knowledge. Traditional Commentaries on Manu Smriti 2.93

(1) मेधातिथिः (Medhātithiḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

प्रसङ्गस्तत्परता तेन हेतुभूतेन दृष्टमदृष्टं च ऋच्छति प्रामोति। नात्र संशयो निश्चितमेतत्। संनियम्य तानि इन्द्रियाणि ततः सिद्धिम् अभिनेत; अर्थावामिश्रौतस्मार्तकर्मणाम् अनुष्ठानफलेनिःशेषं गच्छति प्रामोति॥

English Translation:

"Attachment (prasanga) here means an intense involvement with sense-objects. Through such attachment, one attains both visible (drishta) and invisible (adrishta) faults or negative consequences. There is no doubt about this.

However, after restraining those very senses (through discipline), one reaches perfection — namely, the complete fruition of Vedic (śrauta) and Smriti-based (smārta) duties. This includes attaining the ultimate goal (like moksha).
Thus, control over the senses leads to complete success."

(2) सर्वज्ञनारायणः (Sarvajña-Nārāyaṇaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

प्रसङ्गेन विषयेषु संगेन दोषं पापं ऋच्छति प्राप्नोति। तेषां नियमनात् सिद्धिं मोक्षं नियच्छति लभते॥

English Translation:

"Through attachment (prasanga) to sense-objects, one incurs sin or fault (doṣa, pāpa). But by restraining those senses, one attains siddhi, which here means liberation (mokṣa)."

---

(3) कुल्लूकः (Kuṭūkaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

मनोधर्मसङ्कल्पमूलत्वात् इन्द्रियाणां तदायत्तेन प्रवृत्तेः किमर्थं निग्रहः कर्तव्य इत्यतः आह 'इन्द्रियाणामिति'।
यः इन्द्रियाणां विषयेषु प्रवृत्त्या दृष्टादृष्टं च दोषं निःसन्देहं प्राप्नोति।
तानि एव पुनः इन्द्रियाणि सम्यङ् नियम्य सिद्धिं — मोक्षादि पुरुषार्थयोग्यता-रूपां लभते।
तस्मात् इन्द्रियसंयमं कुर्यात् इति शेषः॥

English Translation:

"Since the senses are rooted in the mind's tendency to imagine and desire (saṅkalpa), and act based on it, why should their control be emphasized?
In response, this verse says that by engaging the senses freely with their objects, one undoubtedly incurs both seen and unseen faults.

But by properly restraining the same senses, one attains siddhi, i.e., eligibility for moksha and other puruṣārthas (goals of life).
Hence, sense-restraint should be practiced."

(4) राघवानन्दः (Rāghavānandaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

अनुपसंहारे दोषं कीर्तयन् तत्करणे फलम् आह — इन्द्रियाणामिति'। प्रसङ्गेन इन्द्रियार्थेषु अभिषक्त्या दोषं — संसाराख्यं; सिद्धिं — मनःशुद्धिद्वारा मोक्षाख्यां। तथा च गीतायां — सिद्धिं आप्नोति यथा ब्रह्म, तथाप्नोति निबोध मे'इति॥

English Translation:

"This verse states the fault that arises when the senses are not withdrawn, and then declares the fruit of restraint.

Through attachment (prasanga) to sense-objects, one falls into worldly bondage (saṁsāra). But through control, one attains mental purity and thus liberation (moksha).

As the Gītā says: 'One attains perfection (siddhi), and then Brahman — understand that from Me.'"

(5) नन्दनः (Nandanaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

प्रसङ्गेन विषयेषु निरङ्कुशया प्रवृत्त्या॥

English Translation:

"By uncontrolled indulgence (nirankusha pravṛtti) in sense-objects, one incurs faults."

---

(6) रामचन्द्रः (Rāmachandraḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

पुरुषः इन्द्रियाणां प्रसङ्गेन संयोगेन दोषं ऋच्छति प्राप्नोति। असंशयं तानि इन्द्रियाणि संनियम्य जित्वा सिद्धिं नियच्छति प्राप्नोति॥

English Translation:

"A person, by the connection (saṅga) of the senses with their objects, certainly acquires fault (doṣa). There is no doubt: after properly restraining and conquering those senses, he surely attains siddhi (perfection)."

Vyāsa-ṣmrti (4.13), (also Vṛddha Śātātapa, 61). —'Having brought his senses under control, wherever a man may live,—that place is Kurukṣetra, Naimiṣa and Puṣkara.'

Vyāsasmṛti (4. 60-61).—'One does not become heroic by obtaining victory in battle; nor does he become learned by study; nor an orator by mere eloquence; nor liberal by making gifts of wealth; by conquering the organs does one become heroic; by following Dharma, learned,—by truthfulness, an orator; and liberal, by doing good to all beings.'

Vaśiṣṭha-smṛti (25. 8).—'Wisdom is attained by Yoga; Yoga is the characteristic of Dharma; Yoga is ever the highest penance; therefore one should be always addicted to Yoga.'

Manu Smriti 2.100-

English Translation:

> "This verse summarizes the prior teachings. Though the mind is technically part of the senses, it is here mentioned separately due to its prominence.
> 'Grāma' means the collective group of senses. Both mind and senses must be disciplined.
> With the help of the body, one can accomplish all goals connected to Vedic and Smriti duties – i.e., dharma, artha, kāma, mokṣa.

> Some postures or ascetic practices (e.g., sitting on hard seats, using black-deer skin coverings, etc.) can hurt delicate-bodied persons. Hence, 'through yoga' here implies proper method and balance.

English Translation:

> "The external group of senses should be controlled. Even higher goals like heaven (svarga) can be attained through yoga, especially through meditation on the desired deity.
> But it is not merely sense-control that matters — one must also preserve the body, not emaciate or torment it."

English Translation:

> "This verse shows that sense-control is the means to all puruṣārthas (goals of life).
> One should restrain the external senses and the mind, and thereby successfully achieve dharma, artha, kāma, and mokṣa.

English Translation:

> “This verse describes the fruit of sense-control.

जिसके इन्द्रिय, मन और बुद्धि वशमें किये हुए हैं, जो ईश्वरके स्वरूपका मनन करनेसे मुनि यानी संन्यासी है, जो शरीरमें रहता हुआ भी मोक्षपरायण है, अर्थात् जो मोक्षको ही परम आश्रय-परम गति समझनेवाला मुनि है तथा जो इच्छा, भय और क्रोधसे रहित हो चुका है-जिसके इच्छा, भय और क्रोध चले गये हैं- जो इस प्रकार बर्तता है वह संन्यासी सदा मुक्त ही है, उसे कोई दूसरी मुक्ति प्राप्त नहीं करनी है ॥ २८ ॥

"One whose senses, mind, and intellect are brought under control, who through contemplation of the Supreme has become a sage (muni or renunciate), who — though residing in the body — is devoted solely to liberation, who considers moksha to be the supreme goal and refuge, and who is free from desire, fear, and anger — such a sage is always liberated. He does not have to attain any other liberation; he is ever free." — Verse 28

"In the context of the marriage sacrament, the word dāra (wife) is used. When a man engages in another's wife with desire — through intercourse, embrace, or other acts that stir pleasure and affection — beginning with touch and ending in sexual union, even sending a messenger or inciting the woman — this is considered adultery. Such a man should be marked with distressing instruments like sharp weapons, spears, etc., and then punished with mutilation of the nose, etc., and banishment. As this is not a case of a general punishment, but a specific one, harsher penalties may apply if the act is repeated. In the case where another punishment (like exile) cannot be implemented, fines and exile together may be enforced, and this will be explained later."

(2) Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa:

“For those indulging in another’s wife within their own caste, the penalty is given here in the thirty-sixth verse beginning with ‘paradāra’. Baudhāyana (2.4.1-2).—‘Anybody but a Brāhmaṇa shall suffer corporal punishment for Adultery;—the Āpastamba (2.26.20).—'If a man has actually committed adultery, his organ shall be cut off together with the testicles.'

Bṛhaspati (23.10-12).—'If a man violates an unwilling woman, the King shall confiscate his entire property, have his penis and scrotum cut off and have him paraded on an ass. When a man enjoys a woman by fraud, bis punishment shall be confiscation of his entire wealth; and afterwards he shall be branded with the mark of the female organ and banished from the town. The highest fine shall be inflicted for connexion with a woman of equal caste; half that for connexion with a woman of a lower caste; and a man who has connexion with a woman of a higher caste shall be put to death.'

Yājñavalkya (2.287-218).—'A man who carries away a decorated maiden, of the same caste as himself, shall pay the highest amercement; but the lowest amercement, if she is not decorated; if she belongs to a higher caste, corporal punishment shall be inflicted. If the man has earned away a maiden of a caste lower than himself, there is no offence, if she has gone with her consent; otherwise, the fine inflicted shall be of the lowest degree. If the maiden has been defiled, the hands of the man shall he cut off; and he shall he killed if the maiden is of a higher caste.'

Śaṅkha-Likhita (Aparārka, p. 859).—'If the man has intercourse with an unwilling maiden, he shall have two of his fingers cut off, and he shall also pay a fine. Narada Smriti 12.71-72

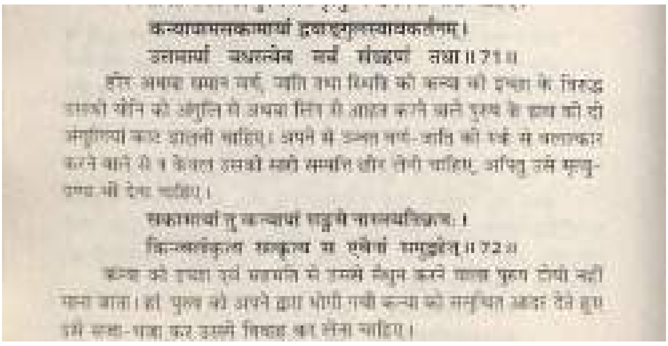
हीन अथवा समान वर्ण, जाति तथा स्थिति की कन्या की इच्छा के विरुद्ध उसकी योनि को अंगुलि से अथवा लिंग से आहत करने वाले पुरुष के हाथ की दो अंगुलियां काट डालनी चाहिए। अपने से उन्नत

वर्ण-जाति की स्त्री से बलात्कार करने वाले से न केवल उसकी सारी सम्पत्ति छीन लेनी चाहिए, अपितु उसे मृत्यु-दण्ड भी देना चाहिए। कन्या की इच्छा एवं सहमति से उससे मैथुन करने वाला पुरुष दोषी नहीं माना जाता। हां, पुरुष को अपने द्वारा भोगी गयी कन्या को समुचित आदर देते हुए उसे सजा-धजा कर उससे विवाह कर लेना चाहिए।

A man who injures the vagina of a girl of equal or lower caste, social status, or birth — against her will — by using his finger or penis, should have two fingers of his hand cut off.A man who rapes a girl of a higher caste or social rank should not only be deprived of all his wealth but should also be punished with the death penalty.However, if a man engages in sexual intercourse with a girl with her willing consent, he is not considered guilty. In such a case, the man should treat the girl with due respect, adorn and dress her properly, and marry her.



DEBUNKING FALSE ALLEGATIONS OF SEX POSITIONS IN VEDAS

SEX POSITIONS IN VEDAS

Rig Veda 10.110.5 Spacious doors remain wide open like beautiful wives for their husbands. O divine doors, great and all-impellers, be easy of access to the gods.

Yaska Acharya explains this verse as Nirukta 8.10 "Having spaciousness, make yourself wide open as exceedingly beautiful wives do their thighs for their husbands in sexual intercourse. The thighs are the most beautiful parts (of the body)..."

Refutation-

This is Rig Veda 10.110.5 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya. I dont understand whats obscene here or where does it mention Sex Positions as claimed by this Halala Putra Pedophile follower Basically this verse is a simile. Simile means comparing one thing with another. Here just like how a wife reveals herself before her husband dressed with good clothes similarly , the divine doors should be open. Nothing about sex position is mentioned here.

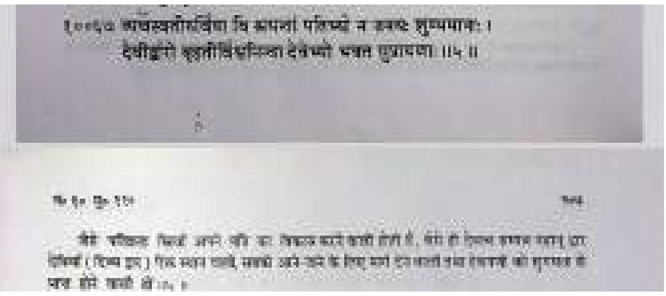
जैसे पतिव्रता स्त्रियाँ अपने पति का विकास करने वाली होती हैं, वैसे ही देवत्व सम्पन्न महान् द्वार देवियाँ (दिव्य द्वार) रिक्त स्थान वाली, सबको आने-जाने के लिए मार्ग देने वाली तथा देवगणों को सुगमता से प्राप्त होने वाली हों ॥५ ॥

“Just as chaste and devoted wives are those who foster and support the growth of their husbands, in the same way may the great divine Door-goddesses (the sacred gateways), endowed with divinity, be spacious, grant passage for all to come and go, and be easily accessible to the hosts of the gods.”



Another alternative hindi translation of Rig Veda 10.110.5 . Again nothing obscene here –

सुंदर पत्नियां अच्छे कपड़े पहनती हैं एवं पतियों के सामने जिस प्रकार अपना शरीर प्रकट करती हैं, उसी प्रकार यज्ञशाला के सभी द्वारों पर देवियां प्रकट हों. हे द्वारदेवियो ! द्वार इतने खुल जावें कि देवगण उन में होकर सरलता से जा सकें. (५)

“Just as beautiful wives, adorned in fine garments, reveal themselves before their husbands, in the same way may the goddesses manifest at all the doors of the sacrificial hall. O Door-goddesses! May the doors open wide, so that the hosts of the gods may pass through them with ease.”

Acharya Sayana Mool Sanskrit Bhasya on Rig Veda 10.110.5 – Again No Mention of any Sexual Act or Sex Position

“Vyacasvatīḥ — the word vyaca means ‘expansion, pervasion’; thus, those who possess this quality are called vyacasvatīḥ. In the Vedic usage, by the rule vā chhandasi there occurs pūrva-savarṇa-dīrgha (vowel lengthening). These are the deities of the doors (dvāra-devatāḥ).

The word urvyā (‘broad, wide’) comes from the stem uru, in the instrumental singular. According to the grammatical rule ‘iyāḍ-iyājī-kārāṇām upasaṁkhyānam’ (Pāṇini 7.1.39.1), īyādeśa substitution occurs. Hence, being wide, they should be specially resorted to (vi-śrayantām).

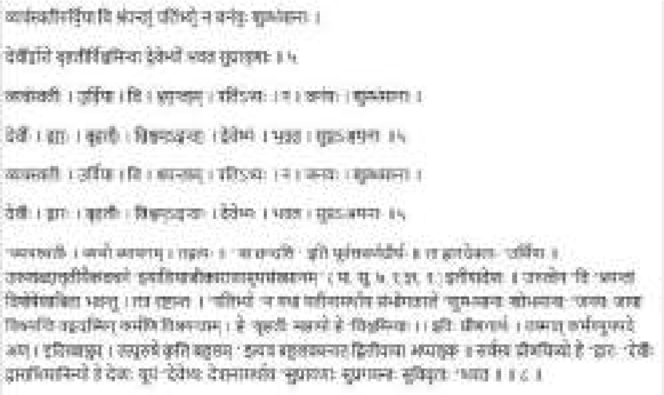
Here is the illustration: Just as wives, for the sake of their husbands get adorned and radiant, take shelter in their husbands, so too may these deities take their stand and support this sacrificial act.

O great ones (bṛhatīḥ), O all-encompassing ones (viśvaminvāḥ)! The affix -iviḥ is in the sense of pleasing. Therefore, in this context, since the word denotes an action, the affix aṇ is applied. Because the root is iḍit, the num-augment is also added. In a compound (tatpuruṣa), according to the rule ‘bahulam’ (‘variously’), the second case-ending also may remain without elision.

Thus, O all-pleasing ones, O goddesses of the doors, O you who preside over the doors! May you be auspicious guides (su-prāyaṇāḥ), gracious in leading, well-conducted, and well-opened (su-vivṛtāḥ) for the purpose of the gods, and may you facilitate the way for the hosts of the gods.”



Coming to Allegations on Nirukta 8.10 here is Nirukta 8.10 hindi translation –

“The verse in Ṛgveda 1.110.15 and Nirukta 8.10 uses poetic simile, not literal description. The sacrificial doors (or cosmic dawn and night) are compared to women adorning themselves for their husbands—broad, beautiful, and welcoming. The mention of thighs is a metaphor for attractiveness and openness, just as one might say ‘the sky weeps’ without meaning the sky literally cries. To take this imagery as sexual is a misreading that ignores the symbolic style of Vedic poetry.”

According to some, these are the doors of the sacrificial hall; others interpret them as Agni, the rays of fire. They are also understood as Dawn and Night, called Uṣas and Naktā, the latter moistening beings with dew, her form unmanifest unlike the day. Thus this hymn is addressed to the divine doors, both ritual and cosmic, as welcoming gateways for gods and men.”

Yajur Veda 19.88 "Just as a wife, the recipient of semen, at the time of cohabitation keeps her head opposite to the head of the husband, and her face opposite to that of his, so should both husband and wife perform together their domestic duties. A husband is a protector like a physician. He lives happily like a child, and with tranquillity produces progeny with penis keen with ardour."

इंद्र देव के इस शरीर में मुख और मस्तक सत्य से पवित्र हैं. सत् से जिह्वा और वाणी पवित्र है. अश्विनीकुमारों और सरस्वती देवी ने इसे पवित्र बनाया है. गुदा मलविसर्जन से शरीर को पवित्र बनाता है. वस्ति और शेष जननेंद्रिय हैं.

"In the body of Lord Indra, the mouth and head are sanctified by Truth. By Sat (pure being), the tongue and speech are made holy. The Ashvinī Kumāras and the goddess Sarasvatī have sanctified it. Through the functions of the two Ashvinī Kumāras and the goddess Sarasvatī, purity pervades these organs. The anus serves to expel waste, thereby keeping the body pure and calm, while the excreted hair (or waste products) act as healers, removing bodily impurities like a physician. Within the body, the bladder (vasti) is the place of urine, and the vigorous, semen-bearing organ serves as the generative faculty." (88)

“Sūkta 2 of Kāṇḍa 14 of the Atharva Veda is devoted to the subject of Vivāha (marriage) and the Garbhādhāna Saṃskāra (the conception rite). The context of these passages is clearly centered on the sacred process of conception, undertaken with the intent of securing righteous progeny. As I have already explained earlier in this article, Sanātana Dharma permits sexual union solely within the framework of dharmic injunctions and for the noble purpose of begetting children. It is never sanctioned as an act of indulgence in lustful desires or for mere sensual pleasure.”

One of the most important rites is the Garbhādhāraṇa Saṃskāra. In Sanātana Dharma, there are sixteen saṃskāras for a human being, among which Garbhādhāraṇa is performed before conceiving a child. This means that during the actual union, this sacrament is carried out with the chanting of mantras to invoke the blessings of God and to obtain virtuous, desired progeny.

'गर्भाधानं प्रथमतः' । (व्याससम्मृति १।१६)
यह संस्कार पितृ-ऋणके संशोधनार्थ और धार्मिक संततिके उत्पादनार्थ किया जाता है। इस संस्कारसे बीज एवं गर्भसे सम्बद्ध मलिनता नष्ट हो जाती है तथा क्षेत्रका संस्कार हो जाता है। इसमें कामभाव न करके धर्म-भाव किया जाता है। यह बालकका संस्कार नहीं; पर बालक बननेका संस्कार है। इसमें सावधानता न करनेसे बालकका भविष्य नष्ट हो जाता है। काममूलक-मैथुनसे सन्तान कामवाली उत्पन्न होती है; उसमें आगे चलकर व्यभिचारकी भी आशङ्का रहती है। संस्काररूपसे

वैध गर्भाधान होनेपर उसमें-'अमावास्यामष्टमीं च पौर्णमासीं चतुर्दशीम् । ब्रह्मचारी भवेन्नित्य-मप्युतौ स्नातको द्विजः' ।। (मनु० ४।१२८) ('स्नातक द्विजको चाहिए कि पत्नीका ऋतुकाल आने पर भी अमावास्या, अष्टमी, पूर्णिमा और चतुर्दशी तिथियोंको सदा ब्रह्मचर्यका ही पालन करे) ।' इन अमावास्या, अष्टमी, पूर्णिमा और चतुर्दशी आदिको ब्रह्मचारी रहने आदि नियमोंका पालन अनिवार्य होनेसे धर्मानुकूलता आ जाती है। 'धर्माविरुद्धो भूतेषु कामोऽस्मि भरतर्षभ ।' (गीता ७ । ११) (भरतश्रेष्ठ ! मैं सम्पूर्ण भूतोंमें धर्मानुकूल काम हूँ)। 'प्रजन-श्चास्मि कन्दर्पः' (गीता १०।२८) ('मैं शास्त्रोक्तरीतिसे सन्तानकी उत्पत्तिका हेतुभूत कामदेव हूँ।') इस प्रकार धर्मसे अविरुद्ध होने पर वही काम भगवद्रूप हो जाता है । यही समय भावी सन्तानके जीवनके मूल रखनेका होता है । इस समय माता-पिताकी मानसिक तथा शारीरिक स्थिति जैसी शुद्ध-पवित्र होगी; बालकका मन और शरीर भी उससे वैसा ही प्रभावित होगा ।
यदि माता-पिता केवल कामवासना रक्खेंगे तो उनकी सन्तान भी वैसी ही कामी होगी। अतः गर्भाधानके समय शरीरकी नीरोगताके साथ माता-पिताका मन भी स्वस्थ और धर्मान्वित हो-यह आवश्यक है। तब माता-पिताके विचार गर्भ-समयमें जैसे होंगे – उनका पुत्र भी वैसा ही होगा। जैसे कि सुश्रुतसंहिता शारीर-

"Garbhādhānam prathamataḥ" (Vyāsa Smṛti 1.16) — This sacrament is performed for the repayment of the debt to the ancestors (pitṛ-ṛṇa) and for the begetting of a righteous progeny. By this rite, the impurity connected with the seed (bīja) and the womb (garbha) is removed, and the kṣetra (the field — the wife's body) is sanctified. In this, the attitude is not one of lust, but of dharma. It is not a sacrament for the child already born, but a sacrament for the becoming of the child. If care is not taken in this rite, the future of the child is destroyed. From intercourse based on lust, lustful progeny is born; in such a child there is also the danger of future adultery.

When garbhādhāna is performed as a rite according to the law, then —
"Amāvāsyām aṣṭamīṃ ca paurṇamāsīṃ caturdaśīm | Brahmacārī bhaven nityam apy uta snātako dvijaḥ" (Manu 4.128)
("Even when his wife's ṛtukāla has arrived, the twice-born who has completed his studentship should observe celibacy on the amāvāsyā (new moon), aṣṭamī (8th lunar day), pūrṇimā (full moon), and caturdaśī (14th lunar day).")

The obligatory observance of such rules of continence during amāvāsyā, aṣṭamī, pūrṇimā, and caturdaśī brings harmony with dharma.

"I am desire (kāma) in beings which is not opposed to dharma, O best of the Bharatas." (Bhagavad Gītā 7.11)
"I am Kandarpa (the god of love) who causes generation according to the injunctions of the scriptures." (Bhagavad Gītā 10.28)

Thus, when it is not opposed to dharma, that very kāma becomes a form of the Lord. This is precisely the time to lay the foundation of the future child's life. At this time, the more pure and holy the mental and physical state of the parents, the more will the child's mind and body be influenced likewise.

If the parents maintain only lust, then their offspring will also be lustful. Therefore, at the time of garbhādhāna, along with the physical health of the body, the parents' mind must also be sound and dharmically oriented — this is essential. Then, whatever the parents' thoughts are during pregnancy, so will be the nature of their son.

CONCLUSION

"In conclusion, Atharva Veda 14.2.38 must be understood in its rightful context — as part of the sacred marriage and Garbhādhāna Saṃskāra hymns that elevate the act of conception into a dharmic rite. Far from being an indulgence in lust, the verse invokes Pūṣan to bless the fertile power of the wife so that righteous progeny may be born. The imagery is symbolic of fertility and creation, not sensuality. To misread such passages as erotic is to strip them of their ritual, moral, and spiritual meaning, and to ignore the consistent teaching of Sanātana Dharma — that sexual union is sanctioned only within dharma and solely for the noble purpose of progeny."

Addressing the allegations regarding Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad 6.4.9–10 and 6.4.20–22 — the context in these passages is clearly about the Garbhādhāna Saṃskāra (conception rite) and the process of reproduction aimed at obtaining progeny. As I have already established earlier in this article, Sanātana Dharma permits sexual intercourse solely for the purpose of begetting children in accordance with dharmic injunctions, and never as an act driven by lustful desires or mere sensual gratification.

The smelling of wine (in the Sautrāmani sacrifice) is laid down as its intake (and no drinking of liquor is permitted); a beast is to be (symbolically) offered to the deities (by touching it) in sacrifices, but no killing for meat-eating is allowed; similarly, sexual intercourse (with one's wife) is to be indulged in for procreation but not for sexual enjoyment. But people do not understand this pure course of their own dharma.

Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6th Adhaya 4th Brahmana Geeta Press Gorakhpur

जिस प्रकार जन्म लेनेवाला, जिस विधिसे उत्पन्न किया हुआ अथवा जिन गुणोंसे विशिष्टताको प्राप्त हुआ पुत्र अपने तथा पिताके लिये लोक-परलोकमें हितकारी होता है; वैसे पुत्रकी उत्पत्ति कैसे हो? यह बतानेके लिये अथवा ऐसे पुत्रकी प्राप्तिके उपायका सम्पादन करनेके लिये यह चतुर्थ ब्राह्मण प्रारम्भकिया जाता है। जिस प्राणोपासक पुरुषने श्रीमन्थ-कर्मका सम्पादन कर लिया है, उसीका पुत्रमन्थ कर्ममें अधिकार है। साधक जब पुत्रमन्थ करना चाहता है तब वह श्रीमन्थ-कर्मका अनुष्ठान करके पत्नीके ऋतुकालकी प्रतीक्षा करता है; यह बात रेतस् (शुक्र) को ओषधि आदिका रसतम (सारतम) बताकर उसकी प्रशंसा करनेसे जानी जाती है

Just as a son—by the manner in which he is born, the method by which he is begotten, or the qualities with which he is endowed—becomes beneficial for both himself and his father in this world and the next, so too arises the question: How should such a son be brought into being? In order to explain this, or to set forth the means for obtaining such a son, this fourth Brāhmaṇa is begun.

Only the son of a Prāṇopāsaka (one devoted to the worship of prāṇa) who has completed the Śrīmantha-karma is entitled to perform the Putramantha-karma. When the aspirant wishes to perform the Putramantha, he first undertakes the Śrīmantha-karma and then waits for his wife's ṛtukāla (the fertile period). This is understood from the praise of retas (semen), which is described as the very essence (sāratama) of plants, herbs, and the like.

Importance of Having Progeny in Sanātana Dharma

Manu Smriti 9.137

व्यक्ति पुत्र द्वारा स्वर्गादि लोकों को प्राप्त करता है तथा पौत्र द्वारा वहाँ चिरकाल तक विद्यमान रहता है। इसके अतिरिक्त पुत्र के पौत्र से तो वह आदित्यलोक को ही प्राप्त कर लेता है।। १३७ ।।

A man attains heavenly realms through his son, and through his grandson he remains there for a long time. Moreover, through his son's son, he attains even the world of the Sun (Āditya-loka). (137)

Acharya Kulluka Bhatta said in his commentary –

पुत्रेण जातेन स्वर्गादिलोकान्प्राप्नोतीति पौत्रेण तेष्वेव चिरकालमवतिष्ठते । तदनन्तरं पुत्रस्य पौत्रेणादित्यलोकं प्राप्नोति । अस्य च दायभागप्रकरणेऽभिधानं पितुर्धने पत्न्यादिसद्भावेऽपि पुत्रस्य तदभावे पौत्रस्येत्येवं पुत्रसंतानाधिकारबोध-नार्थम् ।। १३७ ।।

By a son being born, a man attains the heavenly realms such as Svarga; through a grandson, he remains established in those same realms for a long time; and thereafter, through the grandson of his son, he attains the world of the Sun (Āditya-loka).

Manu Smriti 9.138

क्योंकि पुत्र माता-पिता को 'पुम्' नामक नरक से बचाता है। इसलिए ब्रह्मा ने इसे स्वयं ही पुत्र कहा है।। १३८ ।।

For a son saves his mother and father from the hell called Pum. Therefore, Brahmā Himself has called him “putra” (son). (138)

Acharya Kulluka Bhatta said in his commentary –

Since a son (suta) saves his father from the hell named Puṃ, therefore, by reason of this deliverance, Brahmā Himself has called him putra (“son”).

Linga Purana 5.30-33 states –

पुन्नामक नरकसे पुत्री ही रक्षा करती है, यहाँपर ऐसी ही उक्ति है॥ ३०-३१॥

“It is stated here likewise that it is the daughter who delivers (her parents) from the hell called Punnāmaka.” (verses 30–31)

Thus, the significance of begetting progeny in Sanātana Dharma stands clearly established.

Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad 6.4.4 — Sexual union, when undertaken for the purpose of begetting progeny, is regarded as a yajña (sacred offering), not as an act for satisfying lust.

Indeed, this act of intercourse is described by Aruṇānandana Uddālaka, who knows it in the form connected with the Vājapeya (sacrifice); it is described in that form by Naka, son of Mudgala; and in the same way by the sage Kumārahārita. They say: 'There are many such Brahmins, merely so in name, who are subject to death, devoid of the senses (through negligence), devoid of merit, and ignorant of the knowledge of intercourse, yet engage in the act of intercourse with attachment—they become degraded in the next world. If, before the wife's ṛtukāla (fertile period) has arrived, the semen of this worshipper of life (prāṇopāsaka) is discharged—whether in greater or lesser quantity—while sleeping or while awake, (then he should perform the following expiations as prescribed).' One of the most important rites is the Garbhādhāraṇa Saṃskāra. In Sanātana Dharma, there are sixteen saṃskāras for a human being, among which Garbhādhāraṇa is performed before conceiving a child. This means that during the actual union, this sacrament is carried out with the chanting of mantras to invoke the blessings of God and to obtain virtuous, desired progeny.

जीवनके मूल रखनेका होता है। इस समय माता-पिताकी मानसिक तथा शारीरिक स्थिति जैसी शुद्ध-पवित्र होगी; बालकका मन और शरीर भी उससे वैसा ही प्रभावित होगा।
यदि माता-पिता केवल कामवासना रक्खेंगे तो उनकी सन्तान भी वैसी ही कामी होगी। अतः गर्भाधानके समय शरीरकी नीरोगताके साथ माता-पिताका मन भी स्वस्थ और धर्मान्वित हो-यह आवश्यक है। तब माता-पिताके विचार गर्भ-समयमें जैसे होंगे – उनका पुत्र भी वैसा ही होगा। जैसे कि सुश्रुतसंहिता शारीर-

"Garbhādhānam prathamatah" (Vyāsa Smṛti 1.16) — This sacrament is performed for the repayment of the debt to the ancestors (pitṛ-ṛṇa) and for the begetting of a righteous progeny. By this rite, the impurity connected with the seed (bīja) and the womb (garbha) is removed, and the kṣetra (the field — the wife's body) is sanctified. In this, the attitude is not one of lust, but of dharma. It is not a sacrament for the child already born, but a sacrament for the becoming of the child. If care is not taken in this rite, the future of the child is destroyed. From intercourse based on lust, lustful progeny is born; in such a child there is also the danger of future adultery.

When garbhādhāna is performed as a rite according to the law, then —
"Amāvāsyām aṣṭamīṃ ca paurṇamāsīṃ caturdaśīm | Brahmacārī bhaven nityam apy uta snātako dvijaḥ" (Manu 4.128)
("Even when his wife's ṛtukāla has arrived, the twice-born who has completed his studentship should observe celibacy on the amāvāsyā (new moon), aṣṭamī (8th lunar day), pūrṇimā (full moon), and caturdaśī (14th lunar day).")

The obligatory observance of such rules of continence during amāvāsyā, aṣṭamī, pūrṇimā, and caturdaśī brings harmony with dharma.

"I am desire (kāma) in beings which is not opposed to dharma, O best of the Bharatas." (Bhagavad Gītā 7.11)
"I am Kandarpa (the god of love) who causes generation according to the injunctions of the scriptures." (Bhagavad Gītā 10.28)

Thus, when it is not opposed to dharma, that very kāma becomes a form of the Lord. This is precisely the time to lay the foundation of the future child's life. At this time, the more pure and holy the mental and physical state of the parents, the more will the child's mind and body be influenced likewise.

If the parents maintain only lust, then their offspring will also be lustful. Therefore, at the time of garbhādhāna, along with the physical health of the body, the parents' mind must also be sound and dharmically oriented — this is essential. Then, whatever the parents' thoughts are during pregnancy, so will be the nature of their son.

Coming to Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6.4.9-10

Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad 6.4.9–10 forms part of the instructions for Garbhādhāna Saṃskāra, the first of the Vedic conception rites performed to beget righteous and virtuous progeny . In this sacred context, the described physical acts are not for sensual gratification but are procedural elements of a yajña-like union, accompanied by mantras invoking divine blessings for marital harmony and progeny of noble qualities. The imagery, such as the "deer pierced by a poisoned arrow," poetically conveys unwavering affection between husband and wife, essential for the child's upbringing, while verse 10 prescribes a regulated, mantra-based method to avoid conception during in auspicious times. Sanātana Dharma's injunctions — from the Vedas to the Bhagavad Gītā — permit intercourse solely within dharma for progeny, never for lust; thus, interpreting these verses as erotic is a gross misreading that strips them of their ritual, moral, and spiritual significance.

Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6.4.9-10 hindi translation by Geeta Press Gorakhpur

वह पुरुष अपनी जिस पत्नीके सम्बन्धमें ऐसी इच्छा करे कि यह मुझे हृदयसे चाहे, उसकी योनिमें अपनी जननेन्द्रियको स्थापित करके और अपने मुखसे उसके मुखको मिलाकर उसके उपस्थभागका स्पर्श करते हुए इस मन्त्रका जप करे- 'हे वीर्य ! तुम मेरे प्रत्येक अङ्गमें प्रकट होते हो, विशेषतः हृदयसे नाड़ीद्वारा तुम्हारा प्रादुर्भाव होता है, तुम मेरे अङ्गोंके रस हो। अतः जिस प्रकार विष लगाये हुए बाणसे घायल हुई हरिणी मूच्छित हो जाती है, उसी प्रकार तुम मेरी इस पत्नीको मेरे प्रति उन्मत्त बना दो- इसे मेरे अधीन कर दो' ॥ ९ ॥

"The man, in regard to that wife about whom he wishes, 'May she love me with all her heart,' should place his organ in her vagina, join his mouth with her mouth, touch her pubic region, and recite this mantra:

Coming to Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6.4.20-22

Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad 6.4.20–22 is a detailed liturgical guide for the Garbhādhāna Saṃskāra, the Vedic conception rite performed to beget virtuous progeny, not an erotic manual.. In Sanātana Dharma, as affirmed in Śrīmad Bhāgavatam 11.5.13, Manusmṛti 2.27, and Bhagavad Gītā 7.11, sexual union is sanctioned only within marriage and only for procreation, never for lustful indulgence. These verses meticulously combine ritual actions with sacred mantras — invoking Viṣṇu, Sūrya, Prajāpati, Dhātā, Sinīvālī, and the Aśvins — to sanctify the womb, harmonize the couple with cosmic forces, and ensure auspicious conception. The occasional mention of bodily gestures is procedural, just as other Vedic rites describe physical acts for offering or worship, and gains meaning only within the yajña-like context of the saṃskāra. Misinterpreting these sacramental passages as "sex positions" is a modern distortion that ignores their sacred intent, replacing their spiritual, moral, and ritual depth with a crude, sensationalized reading that demeans a solemn dharmic ceremony.

Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6.4.20-22 Geeta Press Gorakhpur hindi translation-

After that, the husband, according to his wish, should feed his wife with kheer or similar food, and at bedtime, reciting the mantra beginning with "Amo'hamasmi," should embrace her.

stroke the entire body of the wife — from head to feet — three times.]
During the stroking, he should recite the mantra beginning with “Viṣṇur yoniṃ kalpayatu,” the meaning of which is as follows:

“O beloved! May the all-pervading Lord Viṣṇu make your generative organ fit for producing a son. May the Sun God form and strengthen the limbs of both you and the child to be born, making them well-shaped and pleasing. May the Cosmic Person, Lord Prajāpati, abiding as one with me, deposit the seed in you. May Lord Dhātā, abiding as one with me, uphold and nourish your embryo. O Devi! You who are Sinīvālī, much praised (the lunar day of Amāvāsyā, when only one digit of the moon remains), sustain this embryo, sustain it. CONCLUSION-

Moreover, there is no place for "sex positions" or similar notions in Sanatan Dharma, as lust-driven intercourse is clearly condemned in the Shastras. Lust is described as a gateway to hell, leading to moral downfall and spiritual ruin. Sexual union is sanctioned solely for the sacred purpose of conceiving progeny, not for gratifying sensual desire.

Allegations-

We read in newspaper about some Hindu scholars condemning homosexuality. But do they have any evidence that prohibits homosexuality in Hinduism? Hindu scholars fail to furnish any reference from authoritative text like Vedas which condemns homosexuality but still some try to term homosexuality as irreligious act.

Acts of Homosexuality are prohibited in Scriptures

I have already debunked this in my Article under the sections

Be victorious, O Lord, who are an expert in the repetition of the (sexual) play over the body of Naranaya adopted by means of Maya (?)."

देवी कहती हैं- हे मेरुचाय, कैलासाचलवासी, नीहार (हिम) शैल के जामाता, शोणाचल रूपी, वरुणादि देवगण द्वारा अर्चनीय, तरुणादित्य के समान किरणों वाले, अरुणाचलेश्वर, करुणामूर्ति आपको प्रणाम ! हे जन्हुपुत्री (गंगा) तथा चन्द्रलेखा द्वारा अलंकृत मस्तक वाले, आप अपने सौन्दर्य से समस्त मुनियों के अन्तःकरण को मुग्ध करते हैं। आपको प्रणाम! आपकी जय हो। आप शैलपुत्री के साथ अनंग वैभव का पोषण करते हैं। आप मायानारायण के आभोगार्थ क्रीड़ा में पण्डित हैं। आपकी जय हो। हे सन्ध्यासमोपंत सम्भूतानन्द ताण्डव ! आप देव-गन्धर्व-सिद्ध-विद्याधर द्वारा पूजित हैं। आपकी जय हो। हे हेरम्बजनक! सम्मुखवत्सल (पार्वती) हैमवती द्वारा प्रार्थित, पार्थिवदुर्लभ ! आपकी जय हो।" उन ज्योतिपदार्थ के अवलोकन में तत्पर देवी को यह स्तव करते देखकर वृषध्वज देवदेव शिव वहीं विलीन हो गये तथा सुन्दर रूप धारण करके वृषभारूढ़ होकर पार्वती को दर्शन देने वहीं प्रकट हो गये। उन्होंने यह दर्शन भगवती शिवा को प्रदान किया, जो अतिशय मान के कारण सभी ऐश्वर्य का त्याग करके तप कर रही थीं। वे शंकर के प्रति मुग्ध शिवा को सान्त्वना देने का प्रयास करने लगे।।३०-३८।।
।। विंश अध्याय समाप्त।।

The goddess said:

"O Meruchaya (resplendent like Mount Meru), O resident of Mount Kailasa, son-in-law of the snowy mountain (Himavat), O embodiment of Shonachala (Arunachala), worshipped by gods like Varuna, one whose rays are like that of the rising sun, O Arunachaleshwara, embodiment of compassion—salutations to you!

O one adorned with the crescent moon and the holy river Ganga (Jahnavi) on your head, you enchant the hearts of all sages with your divine beauty—salutations to you! Victory to you!

You, along with Shailaputri (Parvati), nourish the bliss of divine love (Ananga Vaibhava). You are an expert in the divine play (Krida) intended for the delight of Maya-Narayana—victory to you!

O embodiment of the joyous Tandava dance performed at twilight, you are worshipped by devas, gandharvas, siddhas, and vidyadharas—victory to you!

O father of Heramba (Ganesha), prayed to by the affectionate daughter of Himavat, Parvati, you are rarely attainable even through severe penance—victory to you!"

Seeing the goddess engaged in such devotional praise while perceiving that effulgent form (jyoti), Lord Shiva—the Lord of all gods, Vrishadhvaja—merged into that very light and then manifested before Parvati in a beautiful form, mounted on his bull (Vrishabha).

He granted this divine vision to the supreme goddess Shiva (Parvati), who, out of great pride and resolve, had renounced all prosperity and was engaged in intense penance. Now, seeing her enamored with him, Lord Shankara began to console her.

So here Maya- Narayana is none other than Devi Parvati- the eteranal consort of Maheshwar Shiva . So the meaning here is –

आप मायानारायण के आभोगार्थ क्रीड़ा में पण्डित हैं।

You are an expert in the divine play meant for the enjoyment of Māyā-Nārāyaṇa Who is None other than Devi Parvati "

Moreover nowhere it's explicitly told about any Sexual intercourse here

Allegations-

Agni Purana 3.17-20 He [Vishnu] was then requested by Hara to show (this form) unto him. The Divine Hari then displayed his female form unto Rudra. Overpowered by his (Vishnu's) illusory power, Shambhu, renouncing Gouri, longed for that damsel. He became naked and looked like a maniac. He held the woman by the hair and she, releasing her hairs, ran away. He too followed her. Wherever dropped Hara's seminal fluid there sprang up fields of his phallic emblem and gold.

The story mentioned in Srimad Bhagavatam will briefly explain this,

Srimad Bhagavatam 8.12.15-16 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead said: When the demons took away the jug of nectar, I assumed the form of a beautiful woman to bewilder them by directly cheating them and thus to act in the interest of the demigods. O best of the demigods, I shall now show you My form that is very much appreciated by those who are lusty. Since you want to see that form, I shall reveal it in your presence. [19] Because the ball was falling down and bouncing up, as She played with it Her breasts trembled, and because of the weight of those breasts and Her heavy flower garlands, Her waist appeared to be all but breaking at every step, as Her two soft feet, which were reddish like coral, moved here and there. [21] As She played with the ball, the sari covering Her body became loose, and Her hair scattered. She tried to bind Her hair with Her beautiful left hand, and at the same time She played with the ball by striking it with Her right hand. This was so attractive that the Supreme Lord [Vishnu], by His internal potency, in this way captivated everyone. [24-26] Thus Lord Śiva saw the woman, every part of whose body was beautifully formed, and the beautiful woman also looked at him. Therefore, thinking that She was attracted to him, Lord Śiva became very much attracted to Her. Lord Śiva, his good sense taken away by the woman because of lusty desires to enjoy with Her, became so mad for Her that even in the presence of Bhavānī [Shiva's wife] he did not hesitate to approach Her. The beautiful woman was already naked, and when She saw Lord Śiva coming toward Her, She became extremely bashful. Thus She kept smiling, but She hid Herself among the trees and did not stand in one place. [28-32] After following Her with great speed, Lord Śiva caught Her by the braid of Her hair and dragged Her near him. Although She was unwilling, he embraced Her with his arms. Being embraced by Lord Śiva like a female elephant embraced by a male, the woman, whose hair was scattered, swirled like a snake. O King, this woman,

So the meaning is that on insistence of Lord Shiva in the form of Moon, the आग्नेय वाष्प in the form of Vishnu, on attaining density, assumed the form of Mohini in the form of the Earth. So, when the Earth became stable and the Earth also got an independent orbit due to the attraction and repulsion of other planets, the Moon started revolving around the Earth, as if Lord Shiva became infatuated with the beauty of the Earth in the form of Mohini. This is what Mahadev means by running after Mohini; the Moon ran around to its full capacity, spread its rays or hands, but could not get anything, that is, the Moon could not assimilate the Earth, this is the meaning of Mohini not coming in its hands.

Then whats the meaning of Maheshwar Shiva releasing his tejas behind Mohini . Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri explained

वर्तमान विज्ञानवेत्ता भी इस बात को स्वीकार करते हैं कि आरम्भमें यह पृथ्वी तपे हुवे सोने के बराबर जाज्वल्यमान एवं दमकते हुवे पिण्ड के समान थी सो ज्यों ही चांद पृथ्वीपिण्ड की अपरिमित ऊष्मा से संश्लिष्ट

हुवा तो उसका बहुत सा भास्वर हिम पिघल २ कर बहने लगा। गर्मी के संयोग से बर्फ का बह जाना विज्ञान सिद्ध बात है। सो यही शिव के वीर्यपात का आशय है।

The present day Science also accept that in the beginning, the earth was like a glowing and shining body like heated gold, (As provided in Vedic Shruti as well) so as soon as the moon was composed of the infinite heat of the earth, a lot of its shining snow melted and started flowing. It is a scientifically proven fact that snow starts flowing due to heat. So this is the meaning of Shiva's semen discharge in Srimad Bhagvatam 8.12. 32

Allegations-

Brahmanda Purana Lalita Mahatmya 6.7-9 "The second form appeared when the churning for the sake of Nectar was being carried out. That form fascinated Sarva (Siva). It cannot be comprehended by the mind or expressed through words. On seeing it, even isa (god Siva) became charmed and enchanted although he is omniscient. When prohibited by her, he left off Parvati all of a sudden and he indulged in sexual intercourse with her (i.e. Mohini). He begot of her (the son) Sasta, the supressor of Asuras." Tr. G.V. Tagare Shasta is popularly known as Ayyappa in south India. He is also known by the name Hari-Hara. As he was born from Hari (Vishnu) and Hara (Shiva).

Refutation-

The claim that Ayyappa (Shasta) was born from a homosexual union between Shiva and Vishnu is based on a superficial reading of the Brahmanda Purana Lalita Mahatmya 6.7–9 and ignores the clear theological framework given in the same Purana and other texts. Mohini is not "male Vishnu dressed as a woman" but the direct māyā form of the Supreme Goddess Lalita Tripurasundari (Uma), who is Vishnu's own Shakti. The Lalita Sahasranama (name 562) and Soundarya Lahari 5 state that Vishnu assumed the form of Mohini only after meditating upon and uniting with Uma's essence, thereby manifesting the Goddess Herself. The Brahmanda Purana explicitly narrates that Mohini was an incarnation of Lalita Devi, who disappeared after the birth of Shasta, revealing her true divine nature. According to the Rudra-hridayopanishad

(1.5), Uma Herself is Vishnu, showing the non-duality of Hari and Shakti. Thus, the union of Shiva with Mohini was a union of Shiva and Shakti, the eternal male–female cosmic principle, not two males. “Hari-Hara-putra” refers to the child born of this union of Hara (Shiva) with the Shakti manifested through Hari (Vishnu), not a homosexual relationship. The episode is symbolic of Śiva–Śakti unity and Advaita, in which Shasta’s birth served the dharmic purpose of subduing asuras, not as an expression of human sexual categories.

Thus, the Divine Mother who manifested and enchanted the demons was called MOHINI (the divine entrantress). Shiva, staying in Kailasha came to know of these events and wanted to note the speciality of the new form of Vishnu. Along with his consort Parvati, Shiva went to Vaikuntha, the abode of Vishnu and pressed Him to show the form of Mohini. Vishnu suddenly disappeared without saying yes or no.
While Shiva was searching for Vishnu, he happened to reach a new place where he continued to search. There he heard the music of Veena. He saw a beautiful young lady.who was Mohini an incaration of Lalitha Devi Unable to resist his infatuation, Shiva embraced her. At once a divine baby was born. He was named SHASTA (one who rules). He became a commander in Shiva's army.
At once the lady disappeared. Shiva realised that she was none else than Mohini, a form of Vishnu. He applauded her beauty and returned to Kailasha along with Parvati.
Thus the Divine Mother incarnated as Mohini and granted success of the activities of the celestials.9

Morever as I had explained earlier-

The union of Shiva and Shakti (Mohini) —who in this context is none other than Vishnu's own Māyā—cannot be equated with mortal relationships, for it represents the meeting of cosmic principles beyond the confines of human limitation. The Śāstras themselves declare that the very body of Maheshvara Shiva is the entire cosmic universe, not a human-like form (Śrīmad Bhāgavatam 8.7.27–30). Thus, such divine interactions are symbolic of universal creation and the interplay of transcendental energies, far removed from material or carnal interpretations.

Debunking False Allegations of Homosexuality on Indra Deva from Vedas

Before going to Debunk his allegations of Transgenderism in Vedas I will like to clarify a few basic things about Indra Deva

Shadvimsa Brahmana 1/6 –

In the Vedic tradition, Indra is not restricted to a single gender identity. The Ṣaḍviṁśa Brāhmaṇa of the Sāmaveda describes Indra by various names—Parjanya (masculine, rain-cloud), Vṛṣṭi (feminine, rain), and Vidyut (neuter, lightning). Thus, depending on the aspect and name invoked, Indra embodies masculine, feminine, or neuter forms, rather than a fixed male deity.
."

जो यह इन्द्र पर्जन्य (वर्षा करने वाला मेघ) होकर सबसे आगे देवताओं के सामने आया, तो यह पर्जन्य के (पुल्लिंग) होने से पुरुष हुआ। जो इसने वृष्टि से या अशनि से (वज्रपात) से असुरों का वध किया, तो 'वृष्टि' शब्द के स्त्रीलिंग होने से यह स्त्री हुआ। जो यह विद्युत (बिजली) होकर (असुरों का संहार किया) तो 'विद्युत' शब्द के नपुंसकलिंग में भी होने से यह नपुंसक हुआ (औणादिकः क्विप् बहुलवचनान्नपुंसकलिङ्गेऽप्यस्ति) ।

"When Indra, as Parjanya (the rain-bearing cloud), came forth foremost before the gods, then, since the word Parjanya is masculine, he was regarded as male. When he slew the demons with Vṛṣṭi (rain) or with Aśani (thunderbolt), since the word Vṛṣṭi is feminine, he was regarded as female. When, becoming Vidyut (lightning), he destroyed the demons, then, since the word Vidyut is also neuter (as explained by the grammatical rule—auṇādikaḥ kvip bahulavacanāt napuṁsaka-liṅge 'py asti), he was regarded as neuter."

Tha Bhasya on Shadvimsa Brahmana 1/6 says –

यद् येनेन्द्रः पर्जन्यो वर्षोन्मुखो मेघः सन्पुरोगामी बलाको भूत्वा अभिप्रैत् देवान् तेन पुंरूप पर्जन्यात्मकत्वेन पुमान्। यत् येन वृष्टया यत् येन वाशन्या असुरानवधीत् तेन स्त्रीरूपवृष्ट्यशन्यात्मकत्वेन स्त्री भवति। यत् येन विद्युताहन् । विद्युच्छन्दो नपुंसकलिङ्गोऽप्यस्ति । औणादिकः क्विप् बहुलवच-नान्नपुंसकलिङ्गेऽपि भवतीति । तेन नपुंसकविद्युदात्मकत्वेन नपुंसकम् । तस्मात् सुब्रह्मण्या सर्वमेव भवतीति ब्रूयादिति सूक्तमेव ॥ ६ ॥

"When Indra, becoming Parjanya (the rain-bearing cloud), advanced foremost like a cloud towards the gods, then, by the masculine form of Parjanya, he is regarded as male. When, by Vṛṣṭi (rain) or by Āśanī (thunderbolt), he slew the demons, then, by the feminine form of Vṛṣṭi and Āśanī, he becomes female. When he smote with Vidyut (lightning), since the word Vidyut is also neuter (for by the rule 'auṇādikaḥ kvip bahulavacanāt' it may be neuter), therefore, by the neuter form of Vidyut, he is neuter. Hence, Subrahmaṇya (Indra) is said to be verily everything; thus declares the hymn." (6)

Rig Veda 1.51.13 To old Kaksivin, Soma-presser, skilled in song, O Indra, thou didst give the youthful Vrcaya. Thou [Indra], very wise, was wife [Mena] of Vrisanaiva; those deeds of thine must all be told at Soma feasts.

Griffith has translated the word Mena as daughter/child but according to Brahmana, Purana and lexicons the word Mena denotes wife, woman, or female of any animal. Griffith wrote, “Mena: according to a later legend, Indra became, himself, the daughter of King Vrishanasva.”

Nirukta 3.21 ”Menah and Gnah are (synonyms) of Women.” Tr. Lakshman Swarup

”मेना Mena – Wife, female”- Cappeller’s Sanskrit English Dictionary

It is also confirmed in Satapatha Brahmana that Indra became the wife of Vrishanasva, Satapatha Brahmana 3.3.4.18. ‘Come, O Indra!’ Indra is the deity of the sacrifice: therefore he says, ‘Come, O Indra!’ ‘Come, O lord of the bay steeds! Ram of Medhatithi ! Wife of Vrishanasva ! Bestriding buffalo! Lover of Ahalya’ Thereby he wishes him joy in those affairs of his.

Baudhayana Srauta Sutra XIX.10 “…Indra, do thou come. Thou with the tawny seeds come, Ram of Medhatithi. Mena of Vrsanasva. Buffalo leaping down. Lover of Ahalya. Brahmana of Kusika’s clan. Thou that callest thyself Gautama…

Maitrayani Samhita 2.5.5 ”When Indra became Vrishanasva’s Mena [or wife] he was seized by Nirrti, Calamity. When he chased it away, that Calamity became a castrated animal. Whoever thinks he is seized by Calamity, Darkness, he should sacrifice this castrated animal to Indra.”-.

Refutation-

Here is Sāyaṇa Bhāṣya on Ṛgveda 1.51.15. It does not state that Indra became the wife (Menā) of Vṛṣaṇasva, but rather explains:

तथा च शाट्यायनिभिः सुब्रह्मण्यामन्त्रैकदेशव्याख्यानरूपं ब्राह्मणमेवमाम्नायते – “वृषणश्वस्य मेन इति । वृषणश्वस्य मेना भूत्वा मघवा कुल उवास” इति ।

And similarly it is recited in the Tāṇḍya tradition:

तथा च ताण्डिभिराम्नातं – “वृषणश्वस्य मेना नाम दुहितास । तामिन्द्रश्चकमे” इति ।

Translation:
“O Indra, O doer of auspicious deeds, you also became the husband of Menā, the daughter of King Vṛṣaṇasva." That Menā, having reached youth, was herself desired by Indra. Hence in the Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa it is recited: "Vṛṣaṇasva had a daughter named Menā. Indra desired her."

Thus, the passage makes clear that Indra married Menā, the daughter of Vṛṣaṇasva.

This is the story:

Once, the king of Aṅga, along with his queens, went to the river Gaṅgā for water-sport. At that time, the sage named Dīrghatamas, together with his wife, children, and servants, being weak and unable to do anything (to support them), was out of hatred thrown into the middle of the Gaṅgā. That sage, by means of some floating support, reached the place where the king of Aṅga was playing. The king, recognizing the sage as omniscient, lifted him up from the raft and said:

“O venerable one, I have no son. Here is my queen. Kindly cause a son to be born through her.”

The sage agreed and said, “So be it.” The queen, however, though saying “So be it” to the king, thought to herself: “This old and repulsive man is not suitable for me.” So, with this thought, she sent her maid named Uśik. The omniscient sage sprinkled her (Uśik) with water purified by mantras, and she became his wife. From her was born the sage Kakṣīvān. He was regarded as the son of the king. He (Kakṣīvān) performed many sacrifices such as the Rājasūya. Pleased with those sacrifices, Indra gave to that king a young maiden named Vṛcayā.

This meaning is conveyed in the first half (of the Vedic verse):

“O Indra! You, desiring praise, wish that speech (in the form of hymns) should belong to you, the giver of Soma in sacrifices to your deities, for Kakṣīvān (the king), this very one, by name, you gave the maiden Vṛcayā, a young girl, as a wife. O Indra, O doer of auspicious deeds, you also became the husband of Menā, the daughter of King Vṛṣaṇasva.”

And so, in the Śāṭyāyanin Brāhmaṇa (as part of the commentary on the Subrahmaṇyā litany), it is taught:
“Vṛṣaṇasva’s daughter was Menā. Indra, called Maghavān, dwelt with the family.”

That Menā, having reached youth, was herself desired by Indra. Hence in the Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa it is recited:
“Vṛṣaṇasva had a daughter named Menā. Indra desired her.”

Thus the meaning is: the deeds performed by you (Indra), those very deeds of yours are to be proclaimed in all sacrifices, to be spoken of in hymns, and to be praised in songs.

Acharya Venkat Madhav Bhasya on Rig Veda 1.51.15 too says the same thing that Mena the daughter of Vṛṣaṇasva married Indra and became the wife of Indra .

दत्तवानसि कन्याम् महते त्तुतिवच इच्छते वक्षीवते वृचयाम् नाम गायांम् इन्द्र । सुन्वते । तथा सेना व अभवः वृषणश्वस्य सुक्रतो ।। विचानि तानीमानि ते यज्ञेषु प्रचाच्यानि । अत्र शाख्यायनकम् – कृपणण्श्वस्य मेने इति । वृषणश्वस्य ह गेना भूत्वा मघवा कुल उबासे' (जैमि २,७९) इति । अप ताण्ठ्यकम्। वृषणश्वस्य मेने इति । वृपणश्वस्य ह मेनस्य मेनका नाम दुहिताऽऽस । ता हेन्द्रदवकये (पत्रा १.१) इति । दृषणश्वस्य राज्ञो मेना नाम दुहिता त्वमभवः स्वांशेन । श्रथ तां चकमे चेन्द्र इत्यर्थः ॥ ४३ ॥

"O Indra, you gave the maiden named Vṛcayā to Kakṣīvān, who is great, desirous of praise (in hymns), and the Soma-presser. To him, the sacrificer, you bestowed her. Likewise, O Indra, O doer of auspicious deeds, you became the consort of Menā, the daughter of King Vṛṣaṇasva.

These deeds of yours are to be proclaimed in sacrifices."

And in the Śākhyāyana (Śāṭyāyana) Brāhmaṇa it is said:

> "Of Vṛṣaṇasva (it is said), Menā. Indeed, having become (the consort of) Menā, Maghavan (Indra) lived with her household." (Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa 2.79).

And in the Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa it is said:

> "Of Vṛṣaṇasva (it is said), Menā. Indeed, Vṛṣaṇasva had a daughter named > Menakā. Indra desired her." (Pañcaviṃśa Brāhmaṇa 1.1).

Thus the meaning is: You, O Indra, by your own portion (sva-aṃśena), became (husband of) Menā, the daughter of King Vṛṣaṇasva. And indeed Indra desired her.

Coming to Satapatha Brahmana 3.3.4.18 Here is Satapatha Brahmana 3.3.4.18 Sayana Bhasya Nowhere told that Indra is wife of Vṛṣaṇasva Indra, come!"—thus. "Indra is indeed the deity of the sacrifice," and so on. Clear. The five sentences from "Haritra, come!" to "destroyer of Ahalyā", though capable of separate meanings, are here grouped with the intention of expressing a unified purport. He considered Hari (Indra) to be Medhātithi, the ram, the bull, and the horse. The cow, the calf, and the destroyer of Ahalyā. Therefore, whatever are his footsteps—by those very signs, he will be made to rejoice.

Coming to Maitrayani Samhita 2.5.5 here is Mool Sanskrit slokas of Maitrayani Samhita 2.5.5 . Here too its told that Mena the he daughter of King Vṛṣaṇasva married Indra Deva and dwelt with Indra Deva and not that Indra Deva became the wife of King Vṛṣaṇasva

One should touch (offer symbolically) the fire-animal (agneya) as a goat, and for Soma, a tawny or reddish bull, for the sake of prosperity. By that act he flourishes with strength, since Agni indeed is prosperity; and with Soma, he secures strength and vigor. The tawny, reddish form is the form of Soma, ensuring prosperity.

One should touch (offer) a wild animal to Vāyu, for one who is cursed. For he who is cursed becomes impure, but Vāyu is the purifier of the gods; with Vāyu, the purifier, he becomes purified. Moreover, neither in village nor in forest does such a one remain cursed, for this animal is neither a purely domestic nor a purely wild beast; therefore, with this deity, prosperity in animals is secured.

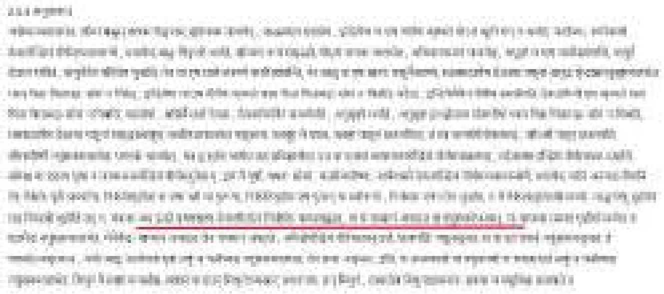
One should touch (offer) the Tvaṣṭṛ-animal, an unmarked one, for one desiring cattle. For Tvaṣṭṛ is the progenitor of animals; approaching him with his due share, he grants offspring of cattle.

For Soma and Pūṣan one should touch (offer) a neuter animal, to restore virility. For when one is born in a place where the seed is weakened, then Soma and Pūṣan together impart virility and vigor. Soma and Pūṣan are indeed strength and nourishment; by offering to them, one secures vitality.

As for acts that should not be imitated, the earlier rites to Nirṛti were of this kind. A woman who assumes a masculine role is held by Nirṛti, and a man who assumes the form of a woman is seized by Nirṛti. By this very rite she (Nirṛti) releases them. The offering to Nirṛti is not performed with full fire; when something is cast upon embers, it is not truly into the fire.

Once, when Indra dwelt with Menā, the daughter of Vṛṣaṇasva, Nirṛti, the power of sin, seized him. He cast off that sin and thereby became emasculated. He who thinks himself seized by sin and darkness should touch (offer) the neuter animal to Indra. By that very act by which Indra cast off sin, he too casts it off. And with the Indra-offering he regains his virility and vigor.

In the beginning Prajāpati created animals; first he created the neuter. The animals followed after it. Hence, they say, seed itself was first created; therefore Tvaṣṭṛ together with his wives touched (offered) the neuter animal and through that produced progeny. Thus, whoever desires offspring or cattle should touch the neuter animal to Tvaṣṭṛ and his wives, for Tvaṣṭṛ and his wives are a pair, and progeny comes from the pair. From that very union, the sacrificer too becomes possessed of offspring and cattle."



The passage in Baudhāyana Śrauta Sūtra XIX.10 should likewise be understood in the same way as it is interpreted in the Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā and the Ṛgveda.

Allegations-

we all know Indra lusted after Ahalya thus he is also called the lover of Ahalya in the Satapatha Brahmana.

Refutation-

This statement comes from Indra Ahilya Jarete in Satapatha Brahmana 3.3.4.18 . Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta had explained this statement in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7

(2) The word "Indra"-proceeding from the root 'Idi' which signi. flies great glory-would signify one possessed of a resplendent glory; and as such it is taken as another name of the Sun; and he is the 'jara'-des-troyer (jarati-naçayati) of 'Ahalya' (ahani liyate) that which disappears during the day, i.e., Night; as it is only when the Sun rises that the darkness of night is destroyed; and it is in this sense that we should take the sentence-" Indro' halyāyā jārah," which cannot be taken in its ordinary sense, of an illicit connection with a woman.

Allegations-

Another transgender story is mentioned in the Atharva Veda where Indra assumed the form of a woman to have sex with an Asuri named Vilistenga.

Atharva Veda 7.38.2 This Herb wherewith the Asuri drew Indra downward from the Gods, With this same Herb I draw thee close that I may be most dear to thee.

Kathaka Samhita 13.5 "Indra desired the Danavi Vilistenga. He went to the Asuras and became a woman among women and a man among men. He thought he was seized by Nirrti (the goddess of Calamity or Misfortune). He saw (as a sacrificial offering) this castrated animal consecrated to Indra and to Nirrti. In that form in which he went about (i.e. castrated), such an animal he offered in sacrifice."

This story is further elaborated in Brhaddevata. According to Shaunaka Rishi, Indra after transforming himself into a woman had sex with a Danavi which can be considered Lesbianism.

Brhaddevata VI.76-76 "In 'Downward' (adhaḥ: viii.33.19) a girl addressed Indra (who appeared) with the characteristics of a woman' for the chastiser of Paka (Indra) made love to that Danava maiden, the eldest sister of Vyamsa, by reason of his (Indra's youthful desire (yuva-kamya)…"

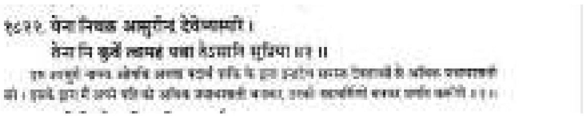
Refutation-

This is Atharva Veda 7.38.2 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya nowhere its told that Indra assumed the form of a woman to have sex with an Asuri named Vilistenga.

Atharva Veda 7.38.2

इस आसुरी नामक ओषधि अथवा पदार्थ शक्ति के द्वारा इन्द्रदेव समस्त देवताओं से अधिक प्रभावशाली बने । इसके द्वारा मैं अपने पति को अधिक प्रभावशाली बनाकर, उनकी सहधर्मिणी बनकर प्रगति करूँगी

*"By means of this substance or energy called 'Āsurī', Indra Deva became more powerful than all the other Devas. Through this, I shall enhance my husband's potency, and by becoming his devoted consort (*sahadharmiṇī), I shall progress."



In Kathaka Saṁhitā (13.5) it is mentioned that Indra once desired a Dānavī, assumed a female form, wandered among the Asuras, and was seized by Nirṛti but later released. The text does not state that Indra had any sexual union with the Dānavī. Indra then beheld the form of Indra-Nirṛti and made an offering; pleased with this, Nirṛti withdrew, and Indra was restored to his strength and power. Therefore, one who feels overcome by Nirṛti should perform the Indra-Nirṛti offering to regain balance and vitality.

“One should offer the Agni-related black goat and the gentle bull whose father and grandfather were virtuous—if not, the result is not attained. Agni is the mouth of all Devas; offerings are made either through the mouth or through the senses. One grows through the Soma-drinking lineage—if the father and grandfather drank Soma, the son becomes potent; otherwise, he does not attain that growth. The gentle Brāhmaṇa, through his senses, empowers the deity with Soma-drinking potency.

One should offer the pervading cow on earth and heaven—if obstructed, the light is obstructed. The one who is obstructed becomes divided from the cosmic order. The cow belongs to the Deity of pervasion (paryāriṇī) ; she is his own. One should offer the calf of the wind in her—either black or white. Vāyu nourishes both calves and grants them. He approaches with his share and grants them.

One should offer the Indrāgni-related animal that has not descended from Soma-drinking ancestors —such a person becomes thirsty. The Soma-drinking lineage empowers the senses. If the father and grandfather did not drink Soma, the Agni-related Brāhmaṇa must empower the deity through the senses. Indrāgni, by its own deity, transmits Soma potency. The animal offered must reflect the form of the dual deity (dvivatya), such as the Tvaṣṭṛ-created malformed one, if one desires a son with special traits. Tvaṣṭṛ is the shaper of forms and grants them accordingly.

One should offer the Ashvin-related black-marked animal. The Devas once defeated the Asuras and took what was theirs—wealth, knowledge, and night. They saw this Ashvin-marked animal and offered it, thereby regaining the night. The Ashvins are associated with heaven and earth. By binding the enemy with the sun beyond the night, they reclaimed what was lost. Thus, the Devas prevailed, and the Asuras were defeated.

Indra once desired a Dānavai and wandered among the Asuras, becoming like them—woman among women, man among men—thinking he was possessed by Nirṛti. He saw the Indra-Nirṛti hybrid form and offered it. Whatever was unmentionable in him, he used that to move forward. Nirṛti, pleased with the offering, withdrew. Indra was re-established, and his virility and power were restored. Thus, one should offer the Indra-Nirṛti hybrid if one feels possessed by Nirṛti, using the unmentionable part to move forward, and then re-establish Indra's power

One should offer the great bull to Indra if one desires victory in battle. Indra is the conqueror of battles and the one who subdues. He grants victory to those who approach him with rightful share. The form of vastness belongs to Indra the subduer.

In the union of two peoples, if one desires harmony, one should offer the vast bull. It leads both peoples to mutual agreement. The one who moves with vastness leads them forward."

In Bṛhaddevatā VI.76–77 states that the maiden Agha, sister of Vyansa, addressed Indra, and that Indra (Pākashāsana) desired her The passage then notes the sequence of hymns to Agni, Aśvins, and Indra. Nowhere it explicitly speaks of any sexual union with the Dānavī."

अधः' (ऋग्वेद ८ ३३, १९) में एक कया ने स्त्रीलिङ्ग से युक्त इन्द्र को सम्बोधित किया है, क्योंकि पाकशासन (इन्द्र) ने अपने युवा काम के कारण व्यस की ज्येष्ठ वहन उस दानव कन्या के साथ प्रेम किया था। 'अग्निना' (ऋग्वेद ८ ३५) अश्विनों को सम्बोधित सूक्त है। इसके बाद इन्द्र को सम्बोधित दो सूक्त (लग्वेद ८ ३६-३७) आते हैं।

There, a maiden named Agha (अघ) addressed Indra in the feminine gender.
The lord of sacrifice, Indra (called Pākashāsana, "eater of the oblation"), desired her — the Dānavī maiden. he was the elder sister of Vyansa (व्यंस), and because of her youthful beauty she was longed for.
After this comes the Agni hymn, then the Aśvin hymn, and afterwards the Indra hymn.

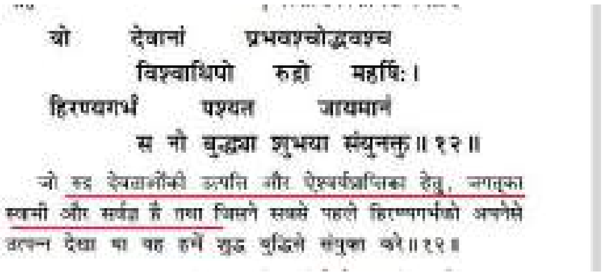
Moreover we have to remember one basic fact that all Devas including Indra are born from Ishwar (God) as per Vedas . The position of Devas including Devraj Indra is a temporary position and are occupied by Various Persons over time

Ishwar created Devas

Svetasvatara Upanishad chapter 4 Mantra 12 says

जो रुद्र देवताओंकी उत्पत्ति और ऐश्वर्यप्राप्तिका हेतु, जगत्का स्वामी और सर्वज्ञ है तथा जिसने सबसे पहले हिरण्यगर्भको अपनेसे उत्पन्न देखा था वह हमें शुद्ध बुद्धिसे संयुक्त करे ॥ १२

He who is Rudra, the originator and bestower of strength to the Devas ,
He who has become the Lord of the universe and its dissolution,
He who rules over both bipeds and quadrupeds —
May He unite us with pure and auspicious intellect



यो देवानां प्रभवश्चोद्भवश्च

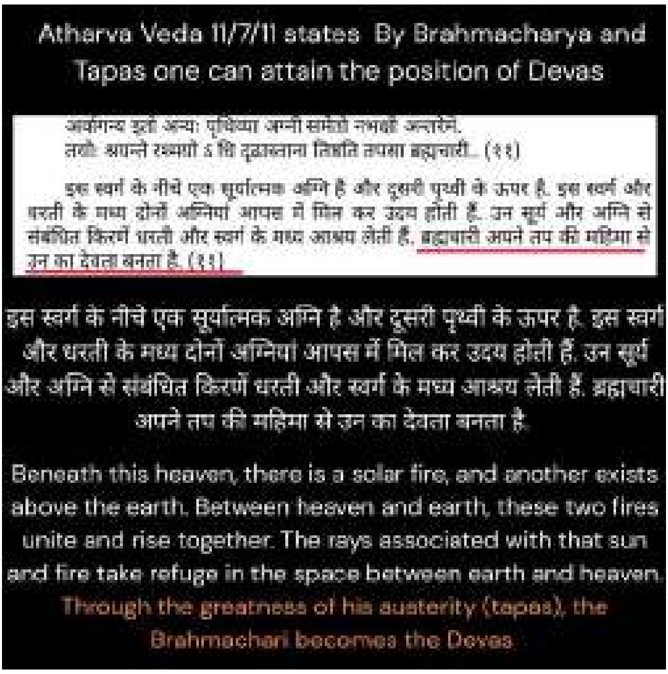
जो रुद्र देवताओंकी उत्पत्ति और ऐश्वर्यप्राप्तिका हेतु, जगत्का स्वामी और सर्वज्ञ है तथा जिसने सबसे पहले हिरण्यगर्भको अपनेसे उत्पन्न देखा था वह हमें शुद्ध बुद्धिसे संयुक्त करे॥१२॥

Atharva Veda 11/7/11 states only By Brahmacharya one can attain the postion of Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas

इस स्वर्ग के नीचे एक सूर्यात्मक अग्नि है और दूसरी पृथ्वी के ऊपर है. इस स्वर्ग और धरती के मध्य दोनों अग्नियां आपस में मिल कर उदय होती हैं. उन सूर्य और अग्नि से संबंधित किरणें धरती और स्वर्ग के मध्य आश्रय लेती हैं. ब्रह्मचारी अपने तप की महिमा से उन का देवता बनता है.

Beneath this heaven, there is a solar fire, and another exists above the earth. Between heaven and earth, these two fires unite and rise together. The rays associated with that sun and fire take refuge in the space between earth and heaven. Through the greatness of his austerity (tapas), the Brahmachari becomes the Devas



Atharva Veda 11/7/22 – Prajapati (Ishwar) created all Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas

प्रजापति के द्वारा उत्पन्न देव, मनुष्य आदि सभी अपने शरीरों में प्राणों को धारण करते हैं. उन सभी की रक्षा आचार्य के द्वारा ब्रह्मचारी में धारण किया हुआ अर्थात् पढ़ाया हुआ वेद करता है. (२२)

"The Devas , humans, and others created by Prajāpati all sustain the vital breaths (prāṇas) within their bodies. The protection of all these beings is accomplished by the Veda, which is preserved in the Brahmacārin (celibate student) through instruction by the Ācārya (teacher)."

Srimad Bhagavatam 3.11.24-26 tells that in every period of Brahma – Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas are born again and again and attain their position per their karma

॥ प्रत्येक मनु इकहत्तर चतुर्युगीसे कुछ अधिक काल (७१ ६/१४ चतुर्युगी) तक अपना अधिकार भोगता है। प्रत्येक मन्वन्तरमें भिन्न-भिन्न मनुवंशी राजालोग, सप्तर्षि, देवगण, इन्द्र और उनके अनुयायी गन्धर्वादि साथ-साथ ही अपना अधिकार भोगते हैं ।॥ २४ ॥ यह ब्रह्माजीकी प्रतिदिनकी सृष्टि है, जिसमें तीनों लोकोंकी रचना होती है। उसमें अपने-अपने कर्मानुसार पशु-पक्षी, मनुष्य, पितर और देवताओंकी उत्पत्ति होती है ॥ २५ ॥ इन मन्वन्तरोंमें भगवान् सत्त्वगुणका आश्रय ले, अपनी मनु आदि मूर्तियोंके द्वारा पौरुष प्रकट करते हुए इस विश्वका पालन करते हैं॥ २६

Verse 24:
"Each Manu enjoys his reign for a duration slightly more than seventy-one Chaturyugas (specifically 71 6/14 Chaturyugas). In every Manvantara, different rulers of the Manu lineage, the Saptarishis (seven sages), groups of gods (Devas), Indra, and their attendants like the Gandharvas also enjoy their respective domains."

Verse 25:
"This is the daily creation (nitya-srishti) of Brahma, in which the three worlds are created. According to their individual karmas, various beings such as animals, birds, humans, ancestors (Pitṛs), and Devas are born."

Verse 26:
"In these Manvantaras, the Lord, taking refuge in the quality of Sattva (goodness), assumes forms such as Manu and others to manifest His divine power (Pauruṣa) and uphold the order of the universe through protection and sustenance."

Srimad Bhagvatam 3/20/50 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

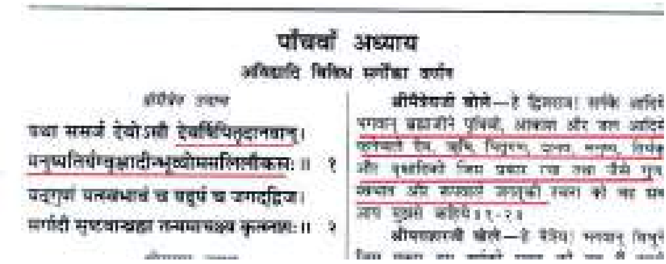
Maitreya said:
O chief among the twice-born (Brahmins), at the beginning of creation, Brahma ji created the Devas, sages, ancestors (Pitṛs), demons (Dānavas), humans, animals, birds, and trees, who dwell in the earth, sky, water, and other realms. Please describe to me how he created them, and how he gave them their qualities, natures, and forms. (Verses 1–2)

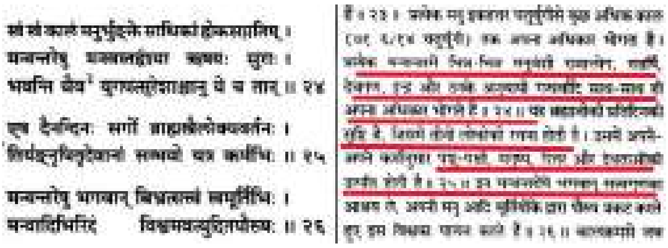
Verse 24:
Each Manu enjoys his rule for a period slightly longer than seventy-one Chaturyugas (specifically, 71 6/14 Chaturyugas). In each Manvantara (the reign of a Manu), different kings of the lineage of that Manu, the seven great sages (Saptarishis), groups of Devas , Indra, and their followers like the Gandharvas exercise their respective authorities.

Verse 25:
This is the daily creation (naimittika sṛṣṭi) of Lord Brahma, in which the three worlds are formed. According to their individual karmas, beings such as animals, birds, humans, ancestors, and Devas come into existence.

Verse 26:
In these Manvantaras, the Lord, taking refuge in the quality of Sattva (purity), manifests his divine energy (Pauruṣa) through forms like Manu and sustains the universe.

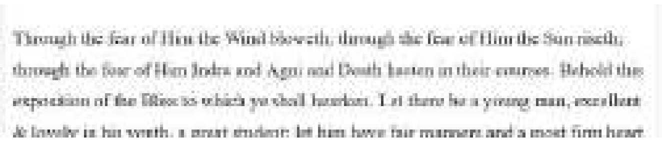


पाँचवाँ अध्याय



Taittriya Aranyaka 5.14.8 as well as Taittriya Upanishad 2.8.1 of Krishna Yajurveda clearly says devatas such as Indra, wind god, Agni, and Yama perform their duties because they are afraid of the Supreme Brahman.

भीषाऽस्माद्वातः पवते । भीषोदंति सूर्यः । भीषाऽस्मादग्निंश्चेन्द्रश्च । मृत्युर्धावति पञ्चंम इति
Meaning: From the fear of Him, Vatah (the wind) blows, from fear of Him the sun rises. From fear of Him the five divinities such as Agni (fire), Indra, and Mrityu (death) work.



Through the fear of Him the Wind bloweth, through the fear of Him the Sun riseth; through the fear of Him Indra and Agni and Death hasten in their courses. Behold this exposition of the Bliss to which ye shall hearken. Let there be a young man, excellent & lovely in his youth, a great student; let him have fair manners and a most firm heart

Katha Upanishad 2.3.3 of Krishna Yajurveda also clearly says how devatas perform all their duties out of fear of the Supreme Brahman.

भयादस्याग्निस्तपति भयात्तपति सूर्यः । भयादिन्द्रश्चाग्निश्च मृत्युर्धावति पंचमः ॥
Meaning: Out of fear of God, the fire burns, the sun heats, and Indra, Vayu as well and Yama function briskly

For fear of Him the fire burneth, for fear of Him the sun giveth heat, for fear of Him Indra and Vayu and Death hasten in their courses.

Allegations-

There is another transgender story mentioned in Rig Veda which says that Asanga son of Playoga had become a woman after he was cursed by gods,

Rig Veda 8.33.19 Cast down thine eyes and look not up. More closely set thy feet. Let none See what thy garment veils, for thou, a Brahman, hast become a dame.

This is elaborated in later texts as,

Brhaddevata of Shaunaka VI.41 “The seer turned that Asanga, who had been a woman, into a man (again)…”

Sankhayana Srauta Sutra XVI.11.16-18 “The sixth is that relating to Medhatithi, how Asanga, the son of Plyoga, being a woman became a man…”

Refutation-

This is Rig Veda 8.33.19 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya

(शापवश स्त्री बने हुए प्रायोगि से इन्द्रदेव ने कहा) अब तुम नीचे की ओर दृष्टि रखो, ऊपर की ओर नहीं । पैरों को पास-पास रखकर (छोटे कदमों से) चलो। तुम्हारे दोनों अंग-मुख एवं पिण्डलियाँ दिखाई न दें (वस्त्र से ढकी रहे), तुम ज्ञानी होकर भी (शाप वश) स्त्री बने हो ॥ १९ ॥

(Cursed and transformed into a woman, Prayogi was addressed by Indra:)
Now you must keep your eyes cast downwards, not upwards. Walk with your feet placed close together (taking small steps). Let not your limbs — your face and your calves — be exposed (but remain covered with garments). Though wise in nature, by the force of a curse you have become a woman.” (19)

When we speak of transgenderism today, it generally refers to a condition where, due to psychological or biological factors, a boy may begin to resemble a girl or a girl may begin to resemble a boy, yet without ever transforming fully into the other sex biologically. But in the scriptural account being discussed, nothing of this sort is mentioned. There is no reference to hormones, psychology, or any gradual transition. Instead, the narrative clearly states that Asanga, the son of Playoga, was transformed into a female purely by the power of a curse.

This was not a matter of personal choice, identity, or gradual change—it was a sudden, supernatural transformation brought about by divine will or curse. Therefore, it is misleading to equate such scriptural stories with transgenderism. The text speaks only of a curse-induced transformation, not of hormonal or biological causes.

Same Explanation holds for Brhad Devata of Shaunaka VI.41 and Sankhayana Srauta Sutra XVI.11.16-18 as well .

Allegations-

Rape

There's a verse in Rig Veda which reads as,

यः सत्राहा विचर्षणिरिन्द्रं तं हूमहे वयम ।
सहस्रमुष्क तुविन्रम्ण सत्पते भवा समत्सु नो वर्धे ।। yaḥ satrāhā vicarṣaṇirindraṃ taṃ hūmahe vayam I sahasramuṣka tuvinṛmṇa satpate bhavā samatsu no vṛdhe II

Rig Veda 6.46.3 "We invoke that Indra who is the destroyer of mighty foes, the supervisor (of all things): do thou, the many-organed, the protector of the good, the distributor of wealth, be unto us (the insurer of) success in combats." Tr. H.H. Wilson

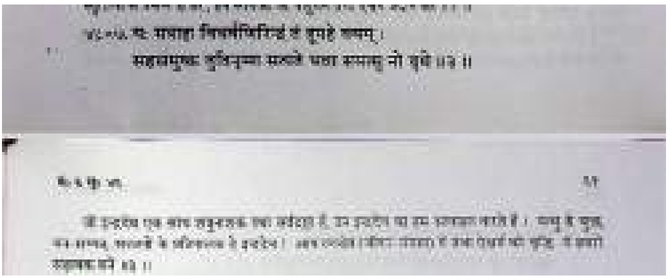
The Sanskrit word mentioned here to describe Indra is Sahastra+Mushka which means thousand vaginas/testicles. Some translators including Griffith has translated this word as "thousand powers" but I do not agree with it since the word Mushka (मुष्क) clearly means Vagina/Testicles, Mushka here definitely means vagina because there is evidence from other Hindu text to support "thousand vagina" definition. Whether the word Mushka means Vagina or testicle is not an issue but a Vedic god described as being with "A Thousand Testicles" in holy scripture is surely obscene.

Refutation-

Here is Rig Veda 6.46.3 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya . Nowhere it mentions that Indra Deva had 1000 penises or anything like that

जो इन्द्रदेव एक साथ शत्रुनाशक तथा सर्वद्रष्टा हैं, उन इन्द्रदेव का हम आवाहन करते हैं। मन्यु से युक्त, धन-सम्पन्न, सज्जनों के प्रतिपालक हे इन्द्रदेव ! आप रणक्षेत्र (जीवन-संग्राम) में तथा ऐश्वर्य की वृद्धि में हमारे सहायक बनें ॥३ ॥

"That Indra, who is both the destroyer of enemies and the all-seeing, we invoke with our praises. O Indra, endowed with might, wealth, and protector of the noble! May you assist us in the battlefield (the struggle of life) and in the increase of prosperity."



A Traditional Acharya Venkat Madhav who is also Interpreted it in the same Way . He Interpreted सहस्रमुष्क as thousand powers and not thousand penises in this Context of Rig Veda 6.46.3

य. महतो इन्वा विचर्षणिः इन्द्रम् तम् हमहे वयम्। 'इन्द्रः पर्वणिपर्वणि रोका हत्या कांचन स्विधं समभवत्' इस्याथवैणिकम् । हे राहस्रमुष्क ! बहुधन ! सत्यते ।" भव सद्मामे भस्माकम् वर्धनाय ॥ ३ ॥

"That Indra, the mighty, the all-seeing, him we invoke with praises. Indra, at every juncture, became the slayer of foes and the bestower of golden wealth. O Indra of the thousand powers, possessor of abundant riches, ever true—may you be for us a protector and an increaser of our prosperity."

Another Traditional Acharya and Famous Commentator on Rig Veda Acharya Skanda also took such a meaning . He Interpreted सहस्रमुष्क as thousand powers and not thousand penises in this Context of Rig Veda 6.46.3

स्कन्द० यः श्वम् सत्राहा 'राना' (निष ३,१०) इति सक्ष्यनाम सदापर्यायो वा । भ्रय सदा वा हन्ता विचर्षणिः विद्रष्टा सर्वस्य, इन्द्रम् तम् त्वाम् इमहे श्राद्धषामः वयम् । आहूतश्च स है सहस्रमुष्क । सत्रेतिहासमाह्मण शाड्सायना वधीयते 'असुरीन्द्र प्रत्यक्मत पर्वन्पवेन् सुष्वान् कृत्या

"Skanda says: Indra is śvám sattrāhā (the slayer in sacrifice), 'rāṇā' (the victorious one) (Nirukta 3.10). This is a synonym, meaning ever the destroyer, ever the vanquisher, the seer of all. That Indra we invoke with reverence. When invoked, he is indeed sahasra-muṣka (thousand-powered). The Itihāsa says in the Śatapatha (23.4): 'When the Asuras opposed Indra, he pressed forward at every juncture; having drunk the Soma, intent on victory, he struck down the ritual and the enemies at every stage. Whatever is conquered, it is by Indra's conquest.' With reference to this, the epithet sahasra-muṣka is applied.

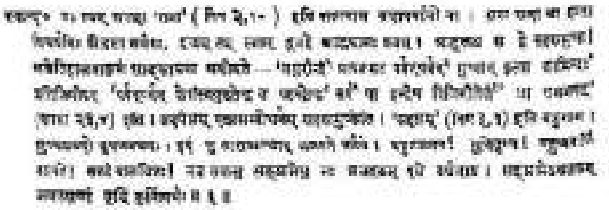
The word sad-dakṣam (Nirukta 3.1) means 'of many powers.' The word muṣka normally signifies 'the weak' or 'miserly,' but here, by association, it denotes great fecundity and strength. Thus it means: 'O greatly generative one! O possessor of mighty strength! O wielder of vast wealth! O lord of truth! O protector of the virtuous! Be our aid in battles, may you grant us growth and prosperity. In battle, increase our distinguishing mark, our strength and fortune.' (Verse 1).

Again, 'That Indra of a thousand powers, the all-seeing, him we invoke with hymns. Indra, at every juncture, accomplished the striking down of foes and destruction of obstacles…'"



Acharya Skanda clearly explained the meaning of सहस्रमुष्क as – तदपेक्षम् एतत्सम्बोधनम् सहस्रमुष्केति । 'सद्दक्षम्' (निए ३,१) इति बहुनाम । मुष्कशब्दो कृपणवचनः । इवें तु तत्सम्बन्धात् भजनले चर्तते । बहुप्रजनन ! तुवितृम्ण ! यहुधन ! सत्पते। सहां पालयितः ! मव समत्सु सङ्ग्रामेषु नः शस्माकम् वृधे वर्धनाय । सङ्ग्रामेऽस्माकम् अयलक्षणां वृद्धि कुर्वित्यर्थः ॥ १ ॥ बेछूट० य. सहस्रो इन्वा विचयेणिः" इन्द्रम् तम् हूमहे वयम् । 'इन्द्रः पर्वणिपर्वणि शेफा कृत्या

The word sad-dakṣam (Nirukta 3.1) means 'of many powers.' The word muṣka normally signifies 'the weak' or 'miserly,' but here, by association, it denotes great fecundity and strength. Thus it means: 'O greatly generative one! O possessor of mighty strength! O wielder of vast wealth! O lord of truth! O protector of the virtuous! Be our aid in battles, may you grant us growth and prosperity. In battle, increase our distinguishing mark, our strength and fortune.' (Verse 1).

Again, 'That Indra of a thousand powers, the all-seeing, him we invoke with hymns. Indra, at every juncture, accomplished the striking down of foes and destruction of obstacles…'"

Allegations-

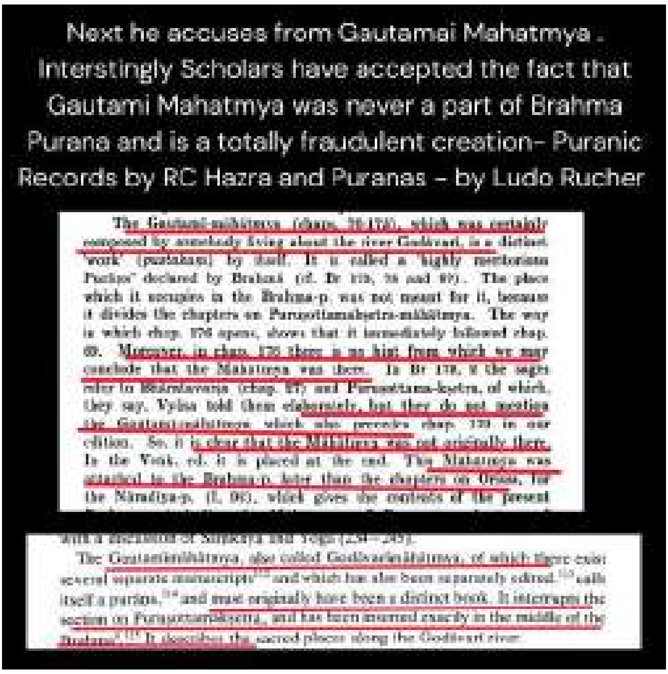
The story as mentioned in Skanda Purana V.iii.136.2-16; Brahma Purana, Gautami-Mahatmya 16.59 states that Indra was cursed by Sage Gautama to be with one thousand Vaginas all over the body as Indra had raped Sage Gautam's wife Ahalya which I have explained briefly in Hinduism and Lust article.

Refutation-

I have already debunked these Allegations in My Article under the section. I will again attach the same debunk here

"Debunking Misconceptions about Indra Deva: A Critical Study of the Indra–Ahalyā Episode, the Indra–Rambhā Narrative, and Allegations from the Harivaṁśa Purāṇa"

He accuses from Gautami Mahatmya . Interestingly Scholars have accepted the fact that Gautami Mahatmya was never a part of Brahma Purana and is a totally fraudulent creation- Puranic Records by RC Hazra and Puranas – by Ludo Rucher



INDRA AHILYA PRAKARAN EXPLAINED

Indra is called the जार (Destroyer) of Ahalya (Night) in these sections of Shruti :

ShadVimsa Brahmana 1.1: -अहल्यायै जारोऽसी।अहलायाया ह मैत्रेय्या जार आस that is Indra is Destroyer of Ahilya

Shatpath Brahmana 3.3.4.18: -अहल्यायै जारोऽसी that is Indra (Sun) is destroyed of Ahilya (Night)

Satapatha Brahmana 4.5.9.4 says वै शुक्रो य एष तपत्येष उ एवेन्द्रस्तस्माच्छुक्राग्रान्गृह्णाति that is Sun is Indra

Taittriya Aranyaka Prapathak 1 Anuvak 12 says इन्द्राऽऽगच्छ हरिव आगच्छ मेधातिथेः । मेष वृषणश्वस्य मेने (३) । गौरावस्क-न्दिन्नहल्यायै जार that is Indra (sun) is the destroyer of Ahilya (night) and Indra comes to the sacrifice of Medhatithi

Drahyāyaṇa Śrautasūtram Patala 1 khanda 3 says इन्द्रागच्छ हरिव आगच्छ मेधातिथेर्मेषवृषणश्वस्य मेने गौरावास्कन्दिन्नहल्यायै जारकौशिकब्राह्मण गौतमब्रुवाणेति that is Indra comes to the Sacrifice of Medhatithi and Indra (Sun) is the destroyer of Ahilya (night)

In Nirukta 3.16, 3.3.4- सूर्य (Sun) is clearly called the जार (destroyer) of रात्रि (Night).

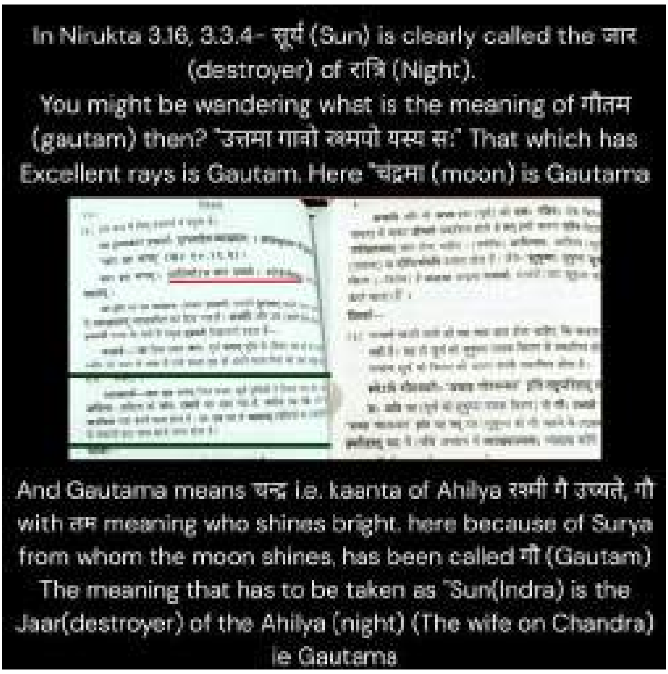
You might be wandering what is the meaning of गौतम (gautam) then? "उत्तमा गावो रश्मयो यस्य सः" That which has Excellent rays is Gautam. Here "चंद्रमा (moon) is Gautama

And Gautama means चन्द्र i.e. kaanta of Ahilya रश्मी गै उच्यते, गौ with तम meaning who shines bright. here because of Surya from whom the moon shines, has been called गौ (Gautam) The meaning that has to be taken as "Sun(Indra) is the Jaar(destroyer) of the Ahilya (night) (The wife on Chandra) ie Gautama



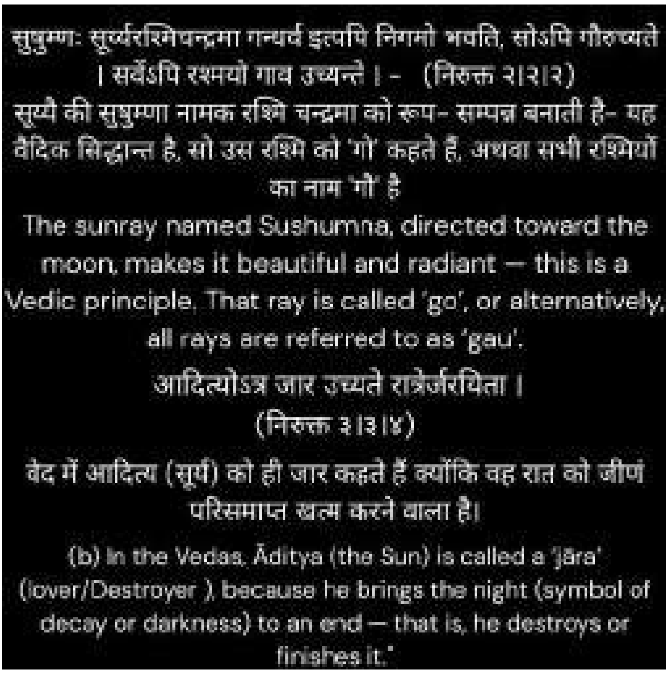
सुषुम्णः सूर्य्यरश्मिचन्द्रमा गन्धर्व इत्यपि निगमो भवति, सोऽपि गौरुच्यते। सर्वेऽपि रश्मयो गाव उच्यन्ते। – (निरुक्त २।२।२)

सूय्यै की सुषुम्णा नामक रश्मि चन्द्रमा को रूप- सम्पन्न बनाती है- यह वैदिक सिद्धान्त है, सो उस रश्मि को 'गो' कहते हैं, अथवा सभी रश्मियों का नाम 'गौ' है

The sunray named Sushumna, directed toward the moon, makes it beautiful and radiant — this is a Vedic principle. That ray is called 'go', or alternatively, all rays are referred to as 'gau'.

वेद में आदित्य (सूर्य) को ही जार कहते हैं क्योंकि वह रात को जीणं परिसमाप्त खत्म करने वाला है।

(b) In the Vedas, Āditya (the Sun) is called a 'jāra' (lover/Destroyer), because he brings the night (symbol of decay or darkness) to an end — that is, he destroys or finishes it."



Ancient Acharya Sri Kumarilla Bhatta had explained in his book Tantra Vartika 11.3.7

(2) The word "Indra"—proceeding from the root 'Idi' which signifies great glory—would signify one possessed of a resplendent glory; and as such it is taken as another name of the Sun; and he is the 'jāra'—destroyer (jarati-adṛçyate)—of 'Ahalyā'—(ahani līyate) that which disappears during the day, i.e., Night; as it is only when the Sun rises that the darkness of night is destroyed; and it is in this sense that we should take the sentence—"Indra' halyāyā jārah,"—which cannot be taken in its ordinary sense, of an illicit connection with a woman.

According to Ancient Acharya Kumarila Bhatta, in his commentary Tantravartika on the Mimamsa Darshan (page 189), writes that the name "Indra" refers to the Sun, and "Ahalya" refers to the night. When the Sun rises, the night is destroyed. This is why Indra is called the "Destroyer" (jar) of Ahalya. This does not mean that a deity named Indra had an illicit relationship with a woman named Ahalya. In Texts like Ramayana and Mahabharat this Scientific philosphy was adopted only in the form of a narrative and this is the real meaning of that Narrative and it should be understood within this context only

THE TRUE CHARACTER AND TATTVA OF INDRA DEVA

The Indra Dev descibed in Puranas and Itihasaas is a a temporary position that can be occupied by mortals who attain immense merit through virtuous deeds and penance. This is evident from following pramanas Mahabharta Anushashan Parva Adhaya 18

'भगवान् रुद्र संतुष्ट हो जायँ तो वे ब्रह्मपद, विष्णुपद, देवताओंसहित देवेन्द्रपद अथवा तीनों लोकोंका आधिपत्य प्रदान कर सकते हैं ।। ६४ ।।

If Lord Rudra is satisfied, he can grant position of Brahma (Brahmapad), Position of Indra (Devandrapada) with the Devas or dominion over the three worlds

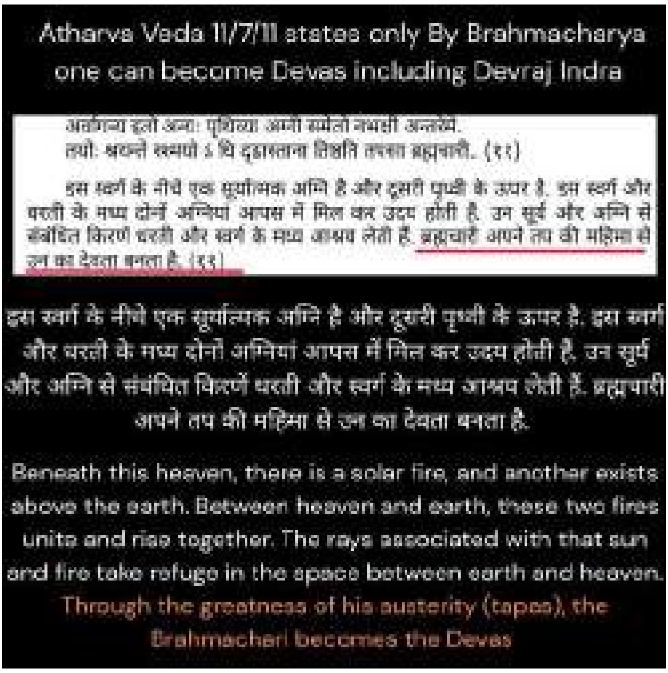
Atharva Veda 11/7/11 states only By Brahmacharya one can become Devas including Devraj Indra

इस स्वर्ग के नीचे एक सूर्यात्मक अग्नि है और दूसरी पृथ्वी के ऊपर है. इस स्वर्ग और धरती के मध्य दोनों अग्नियां आपस में मिल कर उदय होती हैं. उन सूर्य और अग्नि से संबंधित किरणें धरती और स्वर्ग के मध्य आश्रय लेती हैं. ब्रह्मचारी अपने तप की महिमा से उन का देवता बनता है.

Beneath this heaven, there is a solar fire, and another exists above the earth. Between heaven and earth, these two fires unite and rise together. The rays associated with that sun and fire take refuge in the space between earth and heaven. Through the greatness of his austerity (tapas), the Brahmachari becomes the Devas



Srimad Bhagvatam 3.11.24-26 also tells the same thing that in every period of Brahma – Devas including Devraj Indra are born again and again and attain their position per their karma

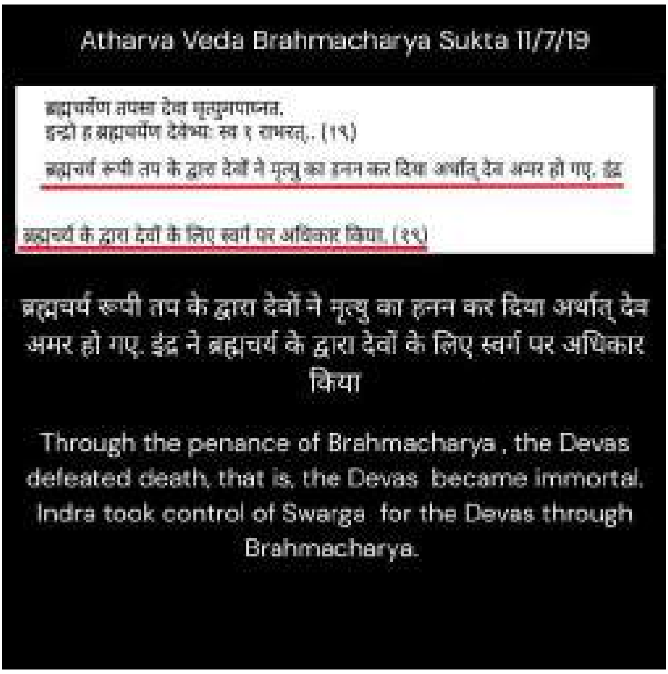
Indra Deva is a Brahmachari

Atharva Veda Brahmacharya Sukta 11/7/19

ब्रह्मचर्य रूपी तप के द्वारा देवों ने मृत्यु का हनन कर दिया अर्थात् देव अमर हो गए. इंद्र ने ब्रह्मचर्य के द्वारा देवों के लिए स्वर्ग पर अधिकार किया

Through the penance of Brahmacharya , the Devas defeated death, that is, the Devas became immortal. Indra took control of Swarga for the Devas through Brahmacharya.



Atharva Veda 11/7/14 states all Devas including Devraj Indra follow Strict Brahmacharya and live in Brahmacharya

ब्रह्मचर्य का पालन करने वाला पुरुष दीप्ति वाले वेदरूपी ब्रह्म को धारण करता है. उस वेद से सभी देव संबंधित हैं. देवों का निवास बना हुआ ब्रह्मचारी प्राण और अपान के बाद ज्ञान को, मन, वाणी, हृदय और मेधा को उत्पन्न करता है

A man who practices Brahmacharya attains the Brahm in the form of the Veda which is full of light. All the Devas are related to that Veda. Brahmacharya is the abode of the Devas it produces knowledge, mind, speech, heart and intelligence after Prana and Apan.

Aitreya Brahmana 7/16 says amongst all Devas Indra Deva practices the most righteous path according to Dharma

विश्वेदेव उससे बोले 'इन्द्र ही देवताओं में सबसे अधिक ओजस्वी, बलवान्, महिष्णु, सत्यपर चलनेवाले तथा प्रभावशाली है, उन्हीं की स्तुति करो तो तुम्हें छोड़ दें।

Vishwadev said to him, 'Indra is the most powerful, tolerant, truthful and righteous among all the Devas .

ALLEGATIONS-

Maharshi Yaska mentions a strange story about the birth of Asvins (the twin horsemen). Which is a elaboration of Rig Veda Mandal 10, hymn 17. The story says Saranyu was unwilling to have sex with Vivasvat and ran away but Vivasvat chased her and raped her. Yaska writes, Nirukta 12.10 "Saranyu daughter of Tvastr bore twins, Yama and Yami, to Vivasvat the sun. She having substituted another lady of similar appearance, and having assumed the shape of a mare, ran away. He, Vivasvat, the sun, having also assumed the shape of a horse, pursued her, and joined her. Thence the Asvins were born. Manu was born from the lady of similar appearance." Tr. Lakshman Swarup

Rig Veda 10.17.1-2 –

"Tvaṣṭā celebrates the marriage of his daughter; therefore, the whole world is assembled; but themother of Yama, the newly-married wife of the mighty Vivasvat, disappeared."

"The gods concealing the immortal (Sarṇyū) for th esake of mortals and having formed her, gave herto Vivasvat. She bore the two Aśvins when this had happened and then Saraṇyū gave birth to two twins."

Refutation-

In Nirukta 12.10 (Hindi translation, Chaukhamba Publications), the birth of the Ashvinī Kumāras is described from the Ashva-rūpa Āditya (Sun) and Saraṇyū. The text itself defines Saraṇyū not as a mortal woman, but as a personification of a cosmic phenomenon—specifically, the shadow or night that follows when Prabhā (light) departs from the Earth. It states that the period of Saraṇyū lies between Vṛṣākapāyī and Uṣā, meaning after the evening twilight and before the morning twilight. Āditya here refers to the Sun, which is also a celestial deity, not a human being. This makes it absolutely clear that the account is symbolic and cosmological, involving deified natural forces—not a literal human relationship—thus the vulgar interpretations pushed by detractors are baseless distortions of Vedic metaphor.

सरण्यू (क) जब प्रभा पृथिवी से चली जाती है तब उस छाया या रात्रि को सरण्यू कहा जाता है। सरण्यू का काल वृषाकपायी के बाद और उषा के पूर्व होता है अर्थात् सायंकालीन सन्ध्या के पश्चात् और प्रातः कालीन सन्ध्या के पूर्व तक के समय को सरण्यू कहा जाता है। that is Saraṇyū (a): When Prabhā (light) departs from the Earth, the shadow or night that follows is referred to as Saraṇyū. The period of Saraṇyū comes after Vṛṣākapāyī and before Uṣā, meaning it refers to the time after the evening twilight (sāyaṁkālīn sandhyā) and before the morning twilight (prātaḥkālīn sandhyā) and Aditya is Sun here .

त्वष्टा दुहित्रे वहतुं कृणोतीतीदं विश्वं भुवनं समेति।
यमस्य माता पर्युह्यमाना महो जाया विवस्वतो ननाश॥
(ऋ० १०.१७.१)

Ācārya Skanda Svāmi in his Bhāṣya on Nirukta 12.10, explained that Saraṇyū is not a human woman nor an anthropomorphic figure, but the reddish sky at the junction of night and day. The Vedic statement that the rays of the Sun "hide" something means that they conceal the tender reddish glow of dawn (Vṛṣākapāyinī) from mortals, who cannot perceive that subtle stage. When the reddish orb (Aruṇa) rises, the rays reveal another form of the same hue—Saraṇyū—making the dawn-light more visible. The Aśvins are said to "carry" this light, not physically, but symbolically, as they represent the twofold state of darkness and brightness that mediates the transition from night into day. As this reddish form intensifies into daylight, it also embodies duality (Yama–Yamī), form, and speech.

In another symbolic verse, Tvaṣṭṛ is described as the "middle portion," and his daughter is Uṣas (the dawn). Her "union" with the Sun is nothing but the merging of dawn into the rising orb. Thus the imagery of "wife," "mother," or "marriage" is only metaphorical: dawn belongs to the Sun, accompanies him, dissolves into him, and inspires all beings to awaken and act in accordance with their natural duties. By divine law, night and dawn are spoken of as the Sun's companions and even "mother," not in a physical sense but in a cosmic one. Therefore this story is, in fact, a profound Vedic allegory of light, transition, and cosmic action, confirmed by the ancient commentary tradition.

The Vedic sages received divine knowledge. The rays of the sun are said to hide or take away something — what do they hide?
They hide the reddish light of dawn (called Vṛṣākapāyinī) — the early light seen at sunrise.

From whom is it hidden?
From humans — meaning, ordinary people can't see or grasp that divine light clearly.

Later, another form, similar in color and name, was made — called Saraṇyū. When the reddish dawn (Aruṇa) appears, the light of Saraṇyū is given again by the sun's rays, making it more visible.

That light is then carried by the Ashvin twins, not in a physical way, but meaning they hold within themselves both darkness and light — they are a balance of night and day.

That reddish form of dawn gradually becomes more and more bright as the sun rises.

Now, the two twins (male and female — Yama and Yamī) represent this dual nature, and even middle speech (the kind of speech that exists between thought and voice) is connected with this form. So, this reddish form includes three things: form, duality, and speech.

In this Vedic verse (ṛc), Tvaṣṭā is in the middle portion (madhyamastama-bhāgaḥ – middle-most part), and his daughter is Uṣas (the dawn).
Since she is born at sunrise, she is carried or enters (vahati) into the Sun (āditya) — thus the 'marriage' is symbolic of union.

The Sun (Tvaṣṭā or Vivasvat), by entering the night (his daughter in the form of darkness or Uṣas), 'performs the act' (karoti) — this represents the transition between night and day.

Therefore, this entire world (sarvaṁ bhūtajātaṁ) comes together (sameti) and unites with its respective actions (svaiḥ karmabhiḥ saṁbadhyate).
As the dawn rises, darkness fades; hence at sunrise (udite uṣasi), darkness (tam) disappears, and the Sun rises (udeti ādityaḥ).

This belief or metaphysical understanding leads all living beings (sarvaprāṇinaḥ) to begin performing their natural duties or actions (svakarmāṇi).
That is the meaning here: the cosmic process inspires action.

Thus, the Sun (Yama āditya) has his 'mother' in this symbolic relationship — either due to companionship (sāhacaryāt) or the act of essence transfer (rasa-haraṇa – absorption of essence).
She becomes his 'mother', but not only in that sense.

What more?
Because of shared union (abhigamana-sāmānyāt) with Vivasvat, she becomes his wife (jāyā) — and, as Viśvarūpā (universal form), she disappears (nanāśa), gets dissolved.
When the Sun rises, she merges into it — meaning she dissolves into that very form.

"Abhisamāgacchatīti svaiḥ karmabhiriti vākyasheṣaḥ" – She enters or unites, the sentence implies, with her own natural actions.

Also: "rātriḥ ādityasya" — the night is said to belong to the Sun, and by the term 'rātri' (night), since Uṣas (dawn) is a part of it (eka-deśa), she is being referred to here.
Owing to this relationship, she is called his mother by divine law (deva-dharma).

She is born… (ja—) but not to be given as a gift (na dāna-yena antar-dhīyata) – i.e., she is not transferred in the ordinary worldly sense, hence her transcendental or divine nature is established (iti siddham).

Allegations-

This story of Vivasvat raping his wife by inserting penis in her mouth is further elaborated in Brahma Purana 4.42-43; Shiva Purana, UmaSamhita 5.35.32-34; Matsya Purana 11.34-37 and Brahmanda Purana 2.3.59.74-76 which I have mentioned in Hinduism and Lust article under Oral Sex category. The question is how sun god was aroused seeing his wife who was in the form of a mare? It must have been that Vedic god Vivaswat was sexually attracted towards animals that's the reason he raped his wife whilst she was in the form of a mare.

Refutation-

I have already debunked these allegations in My Article under the section

"Debunking False Allegations of Oral Sex"

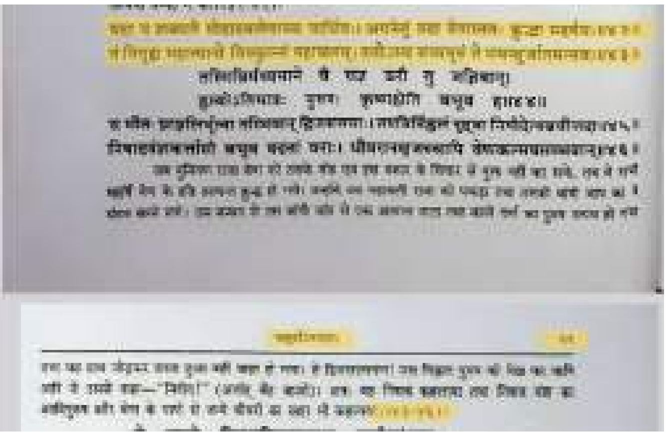
I will again attach the same debunk here as well

Here is Brahma Purana 4.42-43 hindi translation by Chaukhamba Publications

जब मुनिगण राजा वेण को उसके मोह एवं इस प्रकार के विचार से मुक्त नहीं कर सके, तब वे सभी महर्षि वेण के प्रति अत्यन्त क्रुद्ध हो गये।

उन्होंने उस महाबली राजा को पकड़ा तथा उसकी बांयी जांघ का वे मंथन करने लगे। उस मन्थन से उस बांयी जांघ से एक अत्यन्त नाटा तथा काले वर्ण का पुरुष उत्पन्न हो गया तथा वह हाथ जोड़कर डरता हुआ वहीं खड़ा हो गया। हे द्विजसत्तमगण! उस विह्वल पुरुष को देख कर ऋषि अत्रि ने उससे कहा- "निषीद!" (अर्थात् बैठ जाओ)। अतः वह निषाद कहलाया तथा निषाद वंश का आदिपुरुष और वेण के पापों से जन्मे धीवरों का स्रष्टा भी कहलाया।।४२-४६।।

When the assembly of sages could not free King Veṇa from his attachment and such thoughts, all the great sages became extremely angry with him. They seized the mighty king and began churning his left thigh. From that churning of his left thigh, a very short man of dark complexion emerged, who stood there folding his hands in fear. O best of the twice-born! Seeing this distressed man, Sage Atri said to him: "Nishīd!" (meaning, "Sit down!"). Hence, he was called Nishad, and he became the progenitor of the Nishad lineage as well as the creator of the fishermen, born from the sins of Veṇa.



This is also mentioned in Shiva Purana,

Shiva Purana, UmaSamhita 5.35.32-34 "He assumed the form of a horse and approached her for sexual indulgence with her who could not be overwhelmed by any living being due to her lustre and observance of restraint. O sage, in the course of the sexual activity she suspected him to be another man. Hence she received the semen through the mouth into the nostril.

Refutation-

Coming on to Shiva Purana, UmaSamhita 5.35.32-34 –

According to R.C. Hazra, the Uma Saṁhitā of the Shiva Purāṇa is a very late addition. He notes that it draws heavily from the Jñāna Saṁhitā, which itself is dated to around 950 CE. Based on this, it can be reasonably inferred that the Uma Saṁhitā was incorporated into the Shiva Purāṇa sometime after the 10th century CE.

IV. The Umāsaṃhitā,[?] also called Auma/Umāsaṃhitā, is represented in the class B editions only. The text introduces Kṛṣṇa on a visit to Kailāsa and performing penance there to Śiva, in order to obtain a son. He meets Upamanyu, and requests him to tell him about the greatness of Śiva. Upamanyu complies, and praises Śiva and his trident; he extols Śiva's power to save his devotees from hell. This discussion leads into several chapters on different types of sins, and on the description of hell and the suffering in it. Ways to avoid this suffering include gifts of food, performing penance, listening to the purāṇas, etc. The saṃhitā subsequently describes the seven dvīpas of the earth, and other component parts of the universe. It ends with discourses on a variety of topics, such as the development of man, from the foetus, through childhood, youth, marriage, old age, etc.; creation and manvantaras, etc. In Hazra's opinion the text borrows most of its chapters from the Jñānasaṃhitā.

XIII. The Jñānasaṃhitā[?] has already been referred to on several occasions in this description of the Śiva°, because, in Hazra's opinion, other saṃhitās borrowed verses and even chapters from it. The text recognizes the Vedas as the highest authority, but it was Śiva, as [illegible], who communicated them to Viṣṇu. Śiva shall be worshiped with Vedic mantras, even though the saṃhitā does not, therefore, reject the authority of the Tantras and eventual Śiva worship with Āgamic rather than Vedic mantras. The nirguṇa Śiva is identical with the parabrahman; in his saguṇa form he manifests himself as Rudra. Prakṛti was born from Śiva's wish, and, from her, were born the other gods including Brahmā and Viṣṇu. This saṃhitā, like some of those discussed earlier, strongly encourages liṅga worship as the ideal way to worship Śiva himself. It urges worship under the guidance of a competent teacher; worship will lead to bhakti, then to jñāna, and, ultimately, to vijñāna, i.e. the realization that the only real thing is Śiva. Hazra points out that the text was influenced by the Kumārasaṃbhava, Raghuvaṃśa, and Kirātārjunīya. He surmises that it may have been composed in Benares, by someone who was also familiar with the banks of the Narmadā, not before A.D. 950.

The Śiva Purāṇa, as a whole, is one of the most composite and unwieldy Purāṇas, having been composed and expanded by different authors over various periods. There exist two primary versions: the Bombay 1884, Venkat 1895–96, and Venga Manuscript (Class A); and the Venkat 1906, 1965 Pandita Pustakalaya Manuscript (Class B). According to R.C. Hazra, the sections found in the Class A Manuscript are older and more authentic, whereas those in the Class B Manuscript (Including Uma Samhita) are very recent compositions . Most significantly, the older and more authentic Class A Manuscript does not contain the Uma Saṁhitā.

saṃhitās, with different titles and different arrangements; two of their saṃhitās are not even listed in the Śiva° passages.[?] The following is a comparative survey of the saṃhitās, in the two passages of the Śiva° itself, and in the two sets of editions — which from now on I will refer to as class A and class B editions.

त्वष्टाद्वारा संज्ञाका पता बतला दिये जानेपर वे देवेश्वर भगवान् सूर्य भूलोकमें जा पहुँचे। वहाँ उनके द्वारा संज्ञासे अश्विनीकुमारोंकी उत्पत्ति हुई- यह एकदम तथ्य बात है। संज्ञाकी नासिकाके अग्रभागसे उत्पन्न होनेके कारण वे दोनों नासत्य और दस्त्र नामसे भी विख्यात हुए। कुछ दिनोंके पश्चात् अश्वरूपधारी सूर्यदेवको पहचानकर त्वाष्ट्री (संज्ञा) परम सन्तुष्ट हुई और हर्षपूर्ण चित्तसे पतिके साथ विमानपर बैठकर स्वर्गलोक (आकाश) को चली गयी। (छायाकी संतानोंमें) तपोधन सावर्णि मनु आज भी सुमेरुगिरिपर विराजमान हैं। शनिने अपनी तपस्याके प्रभावसे ग्रहोंकी समता प्राप्त की।

After Tvaṣṭṛ revealed the identity, the lord of the gods, Surya, reached the earthly realm. There, through her, the Ashvini Kumāras were born—this is an established fact. Since they emerged from the front part of her nose, they also became famous by the names Nāstya and Dāstra. After a few days, recognizing the horse-shaped Surya Deva, Tvaṣṭṛ's daughter (Sanjñā) was fully satisfied, and with a joyful heart, she boarded a celestial vehicle with her husband and went to Svarga-loka (heaven). Among the children of Chhāyā, Tapodhana Sāvarṇi Manu still reigns on Mount Sumeru. Shani attained equality among the planets through the influence of his penance.

ASHVAMEDHA YAJNA

Read the article Ashvamedha Yajna The Obscene for more evidence

Ashvamedha Yajna is a ritual performed by Queens (particularly by chief queen) for fertility and also to gain power in the kingdom. The Ashvamedha Yajna includes slaughtering the horse, then follows the obscene Queen’s intercourse with the horse, then the horse is cut into pieces and cooked. However some Hindus due to extreme obscenity reject these facts and are giving their personal interpretations. They even deny the fact that Horse was slaughtered during the ritual, I request the readers to go through the article Meat Consumption in Hinduism.

It is mentioned both in Krishna and Yajur Veda, but the this sacrifice mentioned in Krishna Yajur Veda is obscure because the author has omitted those verses,

Krishna Yajur Veda 7.4.19 The wicked horse is sleeping. O fair one, clad in fair raiment in the world of heaven be ye two covered …. {…several verses omitted from original translation…} Sacred-texts.com

It is mentioned in Shukla Yajur Veda,

Yajur Veda 23.19-21 All wife of the host reciting three mantras go round the horse. While praying, they say: 'O horse, you are, protector of the community on the basis of good qualities, you are, protector or treasure of happiness. O horse, you become my husband'. After the animal is purified by the priest, the principal wife sleeps near the horse and says: 'O Horse, I extract the semen worth conception and you release the semen worth conception. The horse and principal wife spread two legs each. Then the Ardhvaryu(priest) orders to cover the oblation place, raise canopy etc. After this, the principal wife of the host pulls penis of the horse and puts it in her vagina and says: "This horse may release semen in me. Then the host, while praying to the horse says: "O horse, please throw semen on the upper part of the anus of my wife. Expand your penis and insert it in the vagina because after insertion, this penis makes women happy and lively.

Refutation-

"This is the correct Hindi translation of Yajurveda 23.19–21 by Rekha Vyas — it clearly shows that nowhere is any intercourse with a horse mentioned."

Yajur Veda 23.19 –

आप गणों के स्वामी हैं. हम आप गणपति का आह्वान करते हैं. आप प्रियों के बीच प्रिय हैं. हम आप प्रियपति का आह्वान करते हैं. आप निधियों के बीच प्रिय हैं.
हम निधिपति का आह्वान करते हैं. जगत् को आप ने बसाया है. आप हमारे होइए. आप संसार के गर्भधारी हैं. हम आप की इस गर्भधारण क्षमता को जानें. (१९)

Yajur Veda 23.20 –

व्याप्त करने की कृपा करें. दोनों शक्तियां बलवान हैं. वे हमें बलशाली व वीर्यवान बनाएं. हमारे लिए शक्ति और शौर्य धारण करें. (२०

It is expected from both Yagya Shakti and Dev Shakti that they should kindly spread their four legs. Both the powers should kindly spread themselves in heaven and earth. Both the powers are powerful. May they make us strong and virile. May they bestow strength and courage on us.

Yajur Veda 23.21 –

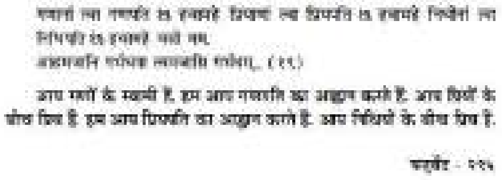
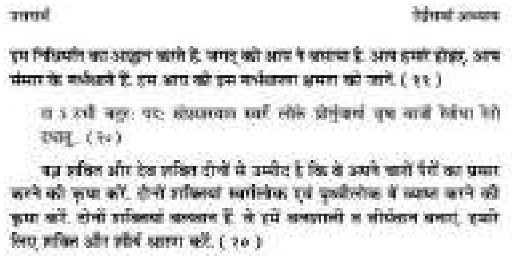
O supreme power! You are the suppressor of the wicked and are all-powerful. Those people who earn their livelihood and food from women, you should torture them.





REGARDING KRISHNA YAJUR VEDA 7.4.19 AND ALLEGATIONS ON ASHWAMEDHA YAGYA – I had already debunked allegations of Bestiality in Ashwamedha Yagya in my Article under the Section

Debunking False Allegations of Bestiality in Ashwamedha Yagya

. I will again attach the same refutation here –

Pandit Nath Sharma Shastri Saraswat explained in his book " Sanatan Dharmaloka Volume 5 page 798 " answering these controversial objections on Ashwamedha Yagya

English Translation

"'Purnamasi bhavati' (Shatapatha 13.4.1.4):
On the full moon of the Phalguna month, during the occasion of Holika, verses from the Ashvamedha Yajna used to be recited. As a result of this tradition, even today, the style of suggestive and humorous banter (obscene jests) is found in Holi celebrations. We will explain this further in the section on 'Holika-Vijnana' (the science/philosophy behind Holika). This affirms the Vedic roots of the festival.

(6) Regarding those critics who have misunderstood this (thinking that there was a sexual union between the queen and the horse), their error stems from the belief that the horse was alive at that time. However, such an event is not possible even during the horse's lifetime — a horse cannot have intercourse with a human, nor can a human conceive from the horse's semen. Hence, this belief of the critics is a great delusion.

At the time of the Ashvamedha sacrifice, the horse is sanjñapta (i.e., dead). Its body parts are separated and purified before being laid down. Earlier, we have already quoted from the Shatapatha Brahmana: 'saṁjñapteṣu paśuṣu' — sanjñapta means 'dead.' Refer to Vedic grammar (Vedanga Vyakarana) and the Dhatu Patha of sage Panini. In that, for roots with the prefix mit-sañjñaka, the root 'jñā' (ज्ञा) primarily means 'to kill'. In the grammatical commentary Vayyakarana Siddhanta Kaumudi, the same meaning is given: 'jñāpa mitch' — the meaning of 'jñā' is communication or killing, etc. The commentary Tattvabodhini says, 'paśuṁ sañjñapayati' means 'he kills the animal'. Likewise, Bala Manorama explains it as: 'paśuṁ sañjñapayati — he kills the uninjured animal'. This is also clearly stated in the Dhatu Patha published by Swami Dayananda Saraswati (page 12): 'jñā — in the sense of killing, pleasing, and observing'. Thus, the primary meaning of the root 'jñā' is killing. Swami Dayananda also affirms this in his Akhyatika Bhvadi-Gana (page 83).

If the opponents do not believe in the authority of Vedanga grammar, then we offer the direct evidence from the Brahmana portion of the Vedas: 'ghnanti vai etat paśum, yad enam sañjñapayanti'

(Shatapatha 13.2.8.2) — "They indeed kill the animal when they declare it sanjñapta."
So, when the animal (horse) is dead at that time, how can the malicious interpretation of the opponents be logically sustained?

(7) When the queen (Mahishi) is made to lie beside the horse, the horse is already dead — we have already provided scriptural (Brahmana) testimony for this. Now let the readers consider the evidence from historical tradition as well.

(a) From the Valmiki Ramayana:

To perform the Putreshti Yajna (sacrifice for begetting sons), an Ashvamedha Yajna was first performed to atone for sins (from previous lives) that obstructed the desired results of actions. The description from the Ramayana says:

> "Kausalya tam iyam tatra paricarya (parikramya) samantatah, kr̥pāṇair viśaśāsainaṁ tribhiḥ paramayā mudā" > (Valmiki Ramayana 1.14.33)

Translation:
"Kausalya (the chief queen) circumambulated the horse from all sides and, with great joy, slaughtered it with three knives."

This corresponds with the Shatapatha Brahmana (13.2.8.4) statement:

> "patnyaḥ enaṁ triḥ pariyanti" — "The wives circumambulate it (the horse) three times."

And according to Shatapatha Brahmana 13.2.8.2, the horse is to be slain by Kausalya.

Further in the Ramayana:

> "Patatriṇā tadā sārdhaṁ susthitena ca cetasā, avasad rajanim ekām Kausalya dharmakāmyayā"
> (1.14.34)

Translation:
"Kausalya, with a composed mind and accompanied by a bird (symbolic or a priest), spent one night beside the horse out of religious duty (dharmakāma), not out of carnal desire."

Thus, staying beside the horse was for dharmic reasons, not for sexual union. The horse was already dead, and the presence beside it was ritualistic, symbolic, and spiritual.

(b) In Taittiriya Brahmana Commentary:

The commentator Bhattabhaskara explains similarly:

> "Tap eva santāpahetutvāt asyā (mahiṣyā)"
> (Taittiriya Brahmana 3.6.6.26)

Meaning:
The queen (Mahishi) endures the heat (tapas) of the ritual due to the pain caused by the spiritual austerity, not due to physical contact. This again confirms that the horse was dead during the ritual.

(c) Supporting evidence from the Mahabharata:

> "Tataḥ sañjñapya turagaṁ vidhivad yājakas tadā, upāsaṁveśayan rājan! tataḥ tāṁ Drupadātmajām" > (Ashvamedhika Parva, 86.12)

Translation:
"Then the priest, having ritually slain the horse (sañjñapya), made Draupadi (daughter of Drupada) sit beside it according to proper procedure."

This again shows that the horse was already dead, and Draupadi merely sat beside it, following ritual norms — not for any physical act.

Refutation of Misinterpretations:

Critics argue that commentators have interpreted Ashwamedha Yagya in a vulgar or obscene manner (i.e., suggesting sexual union).
But this criticism is refuted here by clearly showing:

- The horse was dead (sanjñapta).
- It was invoked symbolically as Ganapati, the deity of multitudes, not a literal horse.
- The ritual involves symbolic offerings like śiśna, retas, but these are metaphorical and refer to Ganapati, not the dead horse.

In Vedic mantras, like:

> “Havāmahe” — “We invoke…”

…such calls are addressed to conscious deities, not to physical or dead beings. So, retas and related symbols belong to Ganapati, not to a lifeless horse.

Thus, the entire act is highly symbolic, and those who misinterpret it as literal or obscene are gravely mistaken.

Final Thought:

If critics would understand the references to “Ganapati”, especially in the context of the mantra:

> “Gaṇānāṁ tvā gaṇapatiṁ havāmahe…”

…as being directed toward the divine leader Ganapati, and not a physical horse, they would not fall into such misinterpretations or make accusations.

This perspective also aligns with the Arya Samaj’s printed editions of the Yajurveda, where the deity of this mantra is accepted as Ganapati.

When such a prayer cannot even logically apply to a living horse—since a living horse can neither be a lord of wealth (nidhīpati), nor a beloved lord (priyapati), nor the lord of the hosts (Gana-pati)—then how can such a prayer be applicable to a dead horse?

A living horse cannot be invoked in this manner. There is no biological or ritual connection between a horse’s semen and conception in a human woman, nor is there any legitimate basis for an actual union between a horse and a human.

Hence, this entire misunderstanding arises from the distorted minds of those critics who project their own perverse imaginings onto the Vedic texts. These ideas have no connection whatsoever with the ancient scriptures.

In reality, the invocation in the Ashvamedha sacrifice is directed not to a horse, but to the Prajapati-Ganapati (the cosmic deity of creation), symbolically represented in the form of a horse. As the Shatapatha Brahmana (13.3.3.4) says:

> "Prājāpatyo vai aśvaḥ"
> "The horse is indeed Prajapatya (of Prajapati)."

Thus, the prayer is addressed to Ganapati, who, according to the earlier sections of the Mayūkha text, is none other than Vighneshwara (Remover of Obstacles) and Sarveshwara (Lord of All)—

- the protector of people (praja-pati),
- the guardian of wealth (nidhi-pati),
- the lord of the ganas (like Vasus, Kushmandas, Sadhyas, etc.),
- the lord of Padma, Mahapadma and other treasures,
- and also the lord of everything beloved, like sons, life, wealth, and so on.

He alone, by virtue of his all-pervasive presence in the universe, is addressed as Vasu. A dead horse cannot be so addressed. The dead horse is merely a symbolic ritual object, like an idol in image worship (murtipuja), where the invocation is not to the stone image, but to the divine power that resides in it.

In the same way, in the Ashvamedha ritual, the invocation is made not to the horse, but to Ganapati, the divine being represented through the ritual horse. Hence, the mantra:

> "Gaṇānāṁ tvā Gaṇapatiṁ havāmahe"
> (Yajurveda 23.16)
> "We invoke you, O Ganapati, the lord of hosts…"

The next part of the same mantra is:

> "Vaso! mama āhamajāni garbhadhāma tvamajāsi garbhadhām"

Explanation:

- Garbhadhāma = the womb-holder, or source of conception
- Aham ā-ajāni = "I draw forth (the seed)"
- Tvam ajāsi garbhadhām = "You also draw forth (the seed) into the womb"

Now, people create a huge controversy over the commentary of Mahīdhara, interpreting "retas" (semen) as something obscene. But Mahīdhara simply explains:

> "Garbhadhām = retas . I draw it forth; you too draw it forth."

This is in fact in alignment with the Vedas themselves, which explicitly declare:

> "Vṛṣā vājī retodhā reto dadhātu"
> (Yajurveda 23.20)
> "Let the powerful stallion (vājī), bearer of retodhā , deposit the retas ."

Thus, the term "retas" (semen/seed) is not hidden by the Vedas—it is clearly mentioned and understood symbolically, referring not to physical horse semen, but to cosmic creative potency represented by Ganapati or Prajapati.

In conclusion, this passage argues that:

- The ritual is symbolic and divine, not literal or carnal.
- Misinterpretations come from projecting modern materialistic views onto ancient spiritual symbols.
- The invocation is to Ganapati, a deity, not to any actual horse, whether dead or alive.

If the objector interprets the word "retas" (रेतः) as simply meaning "strength" (bal), then it should be remembered that even the word "vīrya" (वीर्य, semen) also fundamentally means "strength"—and hence, both imply "tejas" (spiritual or vital energy).

Then with what face can Mahīdhara be blamed or maligned? The meaning and intent of the Vedic mantra "vājī reto dadhātu" (Let the stallion deposit the seed) is the same as that of Mahīdhara's commentary. Why is this not acknowledged?

Now let the readers themselves consider the deeper meaning. In reference to "garbhadhām" (source of conception), the Shatapatha Brāhmaṇa (13.2.2.5) says:

> "Prajā vai paśavo garbhaḥ, prajāṁ vai paśūn ātman dhatte"

> "All living beings (paśu) are indeed progeny (garbha), and the self bears that progeny within."

This Vedic statement clarifies that the word "garbha" (womb/progeny) refers to both offspring and animals (beings). Hence, the "garbhadhām" in the mantra is not referring to some physical womb or carnal conception, but to the divine seed of life, that is, the divine energy (retas/tejas) of Ganapati being invoked to attract and sustain cosmic progeny—not any material semen of a physical horse.

After all, how could there possibly be a relationship between the semen of a dead horse and the conception in a human woman? Is it even conceivable that the semen of a dead creature still exists?

In fact, death itself occurs due to the drying up of "virility" or "vital force" (vīrya), so the notion of any remaining fertile potency in a dead horse is both scientifically and scripturally absurd.

(b) Do the objectors' own maidens or women pray in this way: "Vīryam asi, vīrya mayi gṛhi" — "You are vigor; place that vigor within me" (Yajurveda 16.6)? Or "Agniḥ prajāṁ bahulāṁ me karotu, annaṁ payo reto 'smāsu dhatta" (Yajurveda 16.48)?
Do they truly believe that these women are praying for a physical deposition of semen or retas (seed) into themselves?

(c) According to Āryābhivinaya (p. 46), women pray: "Enter into our hearts with love" (Ṛgveda 1.161.13).
So, are these women—of the objectors themselves—also praying for physical semen and carnal union, as these critics are suggesting here?

(d) In the marriage ritual detailed in the Sanskaravidhi by Swami Dayananda (Swa. 60), the following mantra is used:
"I unite your womb (upastha) with sweetness (madhu)"
Should it then be understood that the objectors are themselves sanctifying the woman's genital organ with "sweetness" in a vulgar sense?
If so, then why do they object when someone else interprets with dignity?

(e) The Shatapatha Brāhmaṇa (2.4.2.3) says:
"Atha enaṁ manuṣyāḥ upasthaṁ kṛtvā upāsīdan"
— "Then the men, having prepared the lower part (upastha), sat down."

Shall we say here that people exposed their private parts in front of Prajāpati?
If not, then how can the meanings of "vīrya" or "upastha" used by Mahīdhara be condemned while accepting the same words elsewhere?

(g) The Bhagavad Gītā verse says:
"Mama yoniḥ mahad brahma tasmin garbhaṁ dhāmy aham" (Gītā 14.3)
"My womb is the great Brahman; into that I cast the seed."
And in the Yajurveda (31.16): "Tasya yoniṁ paripaśyanti dhīrāḥ" —
"The wise behold His womb."
Should the word "yoni" here too be interpreted in a vulgar, sexualized sense?

Likewise, in Ṛgveda 10.125.7:
"Mama yoniḥ apsv antaḥ samudre"
"My womb is in the cosmic waters, in the ocean" — spoken by the female seer Vāk Ambhṛṇī.
And in Prādhānika Rahasya (verse 5):
"Nāgaṁ yoniṁ ca liṅgaṁ ca bibhṛtī nṛpa ! mūrdhani" —
"Durga Devī holds the womb and the Linga symbol on her head."
Are these also to be interpreted lewdly?

(h) If not, then even in Vedic ritual, no such obscene meaning should be implied.
In the Ashvamedha, the horse is dead, and the mantra "meḍhū te śundhāmi" (Yajurveda 6.14) says the horse's organs are purified and ritually separated—how, then, could there be any question of sexual union?

(i) The objectors say that the Yajurveda mantra "Gaṇānāṁ tvā gaṇapatiṁ havāmahe" refers to Bṛhaspati, based on the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, where "Gaṇapati" is glossed as "Brahmaṇaspati".
But they don't realize: that is the Ṛgveda mantra, not the Yajurveda one. The Yajurvedic mantra, which includes "garbhadhām", does not appear in the Ṛgvedic Brāhmaṇa, nor is it explained there.
So those who don't even distinguish between the Vedas, come forward to criticize Mahīdhara's interpretations?

Even if the Gaṇapati in both Ṛgveda and Yajurveda is the same divine being, and one explains the other, then too, our position is established—that in the Ashvamedha ritual, the invocation is addressed to Gaṇapati, and it is a prayer to attract His divine energy (retas/tejas)—not to a physical horse or its biological semen.

In the phrase "ā ajāsi", the root "aj" (from aj gati-kṣepaṇayoḥ — meaning "to move" or "to hurl/throw") originally has the contextual sense of "projection" or "impulsion". However, the objectors cleverly modify the meaning to "ā samantāt jānāsi"—"you know completely"—just to save their position.
If that much interpretive flexibility is permitted, then why object to Mahīdhara's interpretation, whose intent can also be understood in a meaningful and symbolic sense?

Therefore,the phrases like:

- "garbhadham retaḥ sva-yonyau sthāpayati"
- "aśva-śiśnam upasthe kurute"

...should be understood to mean the following:
The woman is concentrating upon attracting the divine energy (tejas) of Gaṇapati, the deity who carries the power of divine procreation, in the form of soma . As said in the Veda (Yajurveda 23.62):

> "Ayathaṁ somo vṛṣṇo 'śvasya retaḥ"
> — "As Soma is the seed (retaḥ) of the mighty horse."

Thus, the inner prayerful intent is to draw that divine energy into herself, so that, as a result of that spiritual conception, she may give birth to a chakravartin (universal emperor) son.

In the marriage ritual, Swami 060 has written in his Saṁskāra Vidhi (pp. 154–155) the mantra:

> "Indrāgnī... Bṛhaspatir-Maruto Brahma Soma imāṁ nārīṁ prajayā vardhayantu" > — "May Indra and Agni... Bṛhaspati, the Maruts, Brahma, and Soma increase this woman (the bride) with progeny."

He interprets "Bṛhaspati" as "king," "Maruts" as "noble men (sabhyamānavāḥ)," and explains the mantra as a statement by the groom:

> "These (king and noble men) will cause this my wife to grow (prosper) with progeny."

Then the question arises: Does this mean the king and other men have sexual relations with the bride?
Obviously not. This is clearly an auspicious blessing (āśīrvāda) for the bride to be prosperous in terms of family and offspring.

Similarly, in the Ashvamedha context (or in the mantra involving "aśva-śiśnam upasthe kurute"), it should be understood not as a physical act but as an inner devotional and symbolic gesture—a prayer to attract the divine energy (tejas) of Gaṇapati, the Lord of hosts.

Now consider the inner meaning:

- "Aśvasya": The word aśva means "that which pervades or moves through all" (ashnute sarvaṁ jagad), i.e., that which pervades the universe—a symbol of omnipresence.
- "Gaṇapati": According to the Gaṇapati Upaniṣad, "Namaste Gaṇapataye... tvam eva sarvaṁ khalvidaṁ brahmāsi" – "Salutations to Gaṇapati... You alone are indeed all this (Brahman)."
  So, here Gaṇapati is Brahman itself—all-pervading divine power.
- "Śiśnaṁ": Interpreted from the Nirukta (4.16.6):
  - From the root śnathate — "to strike, to injure": thus, that which destroys obstacles (vighna).
  - From śeṣate — "to obstruct": so it means that which removes obstructions.
  - From śaś, pluna-gatau — "to move swiftly or flow", hence that which pervades or penetrates.
  - From śinoti — "to sharpen", signifying tejas (brilliance, energy).

Thus, "śiśnaṁ" here is not a vulgar or sexual reference, but a symbolic representation of observing and accepting divine energy, or tejas of Gaṇapati, that destroys inner ignorance and obstacles, and initiates creative or spiritual fertility.

Hence, when it is said that the woman draws this Gaṇapati-tejas into her "yoni", it means:

> She spiritually attracts the universal creative force of Gaṇapati (symbolized in soma, the divine vitality), and holds it in her subtle body, in the karmic or metaphysical > womb—the inner source from which the fruit of spiritual or noble progeny arises.

Thus, the vajī (horse) here symbolizes:

> Vigorous, swift, potent, and spiritually dynamic force, not a literal beast or sexual agent.

Among fruits, Vaṣukaḥ; among progenitors, Gaṇapati; may he place his tejas in me."

The Queen (Mahishī) here prays to Gaṇapati for his divine energy (tejas) and expresses a devotional longing to attract that tejas into herself.

Just as the Vedic mantras say:

- "Vīryam asi, vīryaṁ mayi ghehi" – "You are virility; may that virility enter into me." (Yajurveda 16.6)
- "Reto asmāsu ghatt" – "Let the seed be poured into us." (Yajurveda 16.48)

The women of the sacrificers (ācheptā) chant such mantras to invoke the infusion of divine virility (vīrya) into themselves — not physical semen, but spiritual or cosmic vitality.

Alternatively, from the perspective of the Bhagavad Gītā (14.3):

> "Mama yonir mahad brahma, tasmin garbha dhāmy aham"
> "My womb is the great Brahman (Prakṛti); into it I place the embryo (conscious reflection)."

In this sense, the wife (queen), who represents Prakṛti (nature), invokes Gaṇapati, the supreme consciousness, to implant the embryo of divine awareness (cid-ābhāsa) into her spiritual womb. The rest of the meaning follows as before.

Now, it must be stressed that in this ritual:

- The horse (aśva) is dead — hence, no question of sexual union arises.
- Even with a living being, such an act would be strictly forbidden.

- And in a Vedic sacrifice, where even lustful contact with one's own husband is prohibited, how can any act of sexual desire with a dead horse be even conceived?

Therefore, the earlier interpretation, where the horse is symbolic, and the real intent is a devotional invocation of divine energy, is the authentic meaning.

The use of terms like "śiśna" etc., are parokṣa-vṛtti — indirect, symbolic expressions common in Vedic style.

After all, would the wives of the objectors (ākṣepakās) ever have intercourse with their dead husbands?
If not, how can they accuse the Veda of prescribing intercourse with a dead horse?

Hence, it is only Gaṇapati's tejas (spiritual power) that is prayed for and invoked here.

At this moment in the ritual, the Queen circumambulates the horse three times, as mentioned in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (13.2.8.4) and Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra (20.6.13).
Such circumambulation (parikrama) is always a part of divine worship (devapūjā).

Therefore, this whole act is evidently a form of worship, not any literal or physical activity.

As a result of attracting this divine energy, the Queen gives birth to a universal sovereign (cakravartin putra)—a son destined for greatness.

Even in the Karma-kāṇḍa (ritualistic portion of the Vedas), in the episode of the Aśvamedha (horse sacrifice) involving the queen and the horse, there is no reference to any actual sexual intercourse. The horse is dead, and thus, only touching its separated and sanctified body parts—and placing them near or upon oneself (such as in the lap, on the chest, or limbs)—is what is prescribed.

There is no indulgence, no lasciviousness; and since the intention is pure, there is no question of a violation of marital chastity (pātivratya).
Moreover, this is done in accordance with the husband's command and for the fulfillment of his sacrificial rite, as laid down in the Vedic branches (śākhās).

Take for example: when men touch the udders of a cow or the genital area of a cow during treatment or milking, do they begin to think about sexual desire toward the cow? Do they develop lustful feelings from such touch?

If not, then how can it be claimed that a woman, by merely touching the organ of a dead horse, would develop lustful thoughts? Is she not a rational human being?

If the opponents do feel such lust, the real cause is that their minds have been corrupted by the propagation of licentious ideas

These very critics promote systems where, under Halala divorced woman is touched by another man, but even sensual union is sanctioned—yet they raise no concern about the woman's pātivratya (chastity) being compromised.
If in their own shāstra-based frameworks, they feel no violation occurs, then why raise objections in this Vedic rite, which is entirely symbolic and devotional?

To mock the Vedic ritual (like they do) is to expose themselves to equal ridicule in their own practices like Halala , if assessed critically.
Upon thoughtful reflection, all these objections collapse.

Even during childbirth, doctors touch a woman's private parts—even insert their hands for medical reasons. Does that mean the woman's marital chastity is violated?
Or, consider marriage itself: in the ritual of garbhādhāna (conception rite), there is inherent reference to intercourse. But since it is performed according to śāstra, it is regarded as dharma, not vulgarity.

In the Aśvamedha, however, there is neither sensual pleasure, nor lust, nor any actual intercourse.
Therefore, to forcibly interpret this act as sexual union is nothing but a projection of the critics' own corrupted minds.
In the actual Vedic context, no such perverse intent exists.

पूर्णाहुती भवति' (शतपथ० १३।४।१।४)। फाल्गुनकी पूर्णिमामें होलिकाके अवसरपर अश्वमेध-यज्ञमें कहे जाते थे; इसी परम्पराके फल-स्वरूप होलियोंमें अश्लील-परिहास की शैली अब भी मिलती है। इसे हम 'होलिका-विज्ञान' में स्पष्ट करेंगे। इससे इसकी वैदिकता सिद्ध हो रही है।

(६) इन आक्षेप्ताओंको जो कि यह (रानीसे घोड़ेके मैथुनका) भ्रम हुआ है, उसका कारण यह है कि—वे लोग उस समय घोड़ेको जीवित समझते हैं, यद्यपि यह घोड़ेके जीवनमें भी उपपन्न नहीं हो सकता। क्योंकि घोड़ेका मानुषीसे समागम तथा घोड़ेके वीर्यसे मानुषीमें गर्भ उत्पन्न नहीं। अतः आक्षेप्ताओंका यह महामोह है। उस समय अश्वोपका अश्व संज्ञप्त (मृतक) है; उसके अङ्ग भी पृथक्-पृथक् संशोधित होकर पड़े होते हैं। हम पहले शतपथका पाठ लिख चुके हैं कि—'संज्ञप्तेषु पशुषु'। 'संज्ञप्त' का अर्थ 'मृतक' है। देखो—वेदाङ्ग-व्याकरण, श्रीपाणिनिमुनिका धातुपाठ। उसमें 'मारणतोषणनिशामनेषु ज्ञा' (८११) यहां मित्संज्ञक धातुओंमें 'ज्ञा' धातुका अर्थ 'मारना' सबसे पूर्व लिखा है। 'वैयाकरणसिद्धान्तकौमुदी' में भी यही है। इतना अधिक लिखा है—'ज्ञप मिच' इति चुरादौ। ज्ञापनं मारणादिकं च तदर्थः'। यहां 'तत्त्वबोधिनी' में लिखा है—'पशुं संज्ञपयति-मारयति इत्यर्थः'। 'बालमनोरमा' में भी यही लिखा है—'पशुं संज्ञपयति-अथवा मारयतीत्यर्थः'। यही स्वा० द०-संगृहीत 'धातुपाठ' में लिखा है—'मारणतोषण-निशामनेषु ज्ञा' (पृ० १२) यहां मित्संज्ञक 'ज्ञा'

धातुका पहला अर्थ मारना है। यही बात स्वामी दयानन्दके आख्यातिक व्याकरण (पृ० ८३) में लिखी है। यदि प्रतिपक्षियोंको वेदाङ्गपर विश्वास न हो; तो हम 'संज्ञप्त' शब्दपर वेदभाग 'ब्राह्मण' की सम्मति देते हैं; देखिये—'अग्नि वै एतत् पशून् यद् एनान् संज्ञपयन्ति' (शत० १३।२।८।२)। तो जब पशु उस समय संज्ञप्त (मृतक) है; तो उस समय प्रतिपक्षियोंका दुरभिप्राय कैसे संगत हो सकता है?

(७) जब घोड़ेके पास महिषीको रखा जाता है; उस समय अश्व मृतक होता है—इस विषयकी ब्राह्मणभागकी साक्षी हम दे चुके। अब इसमें इतिहासकी साक्षी भी पाठकगण देखें—

(क) वाल्मीकि-रामायणमें पुत्रेष्टियज्ञ करनेके लिए पूर्वमन्त्रयुक्त, कार्य-प्रतिबन्धक पापके दूरार्थ पहले अश्वमेध-यज्ञ किया गया था। उस समयका यहां वर्णन है—'कौसल्या तं हयं तत्र परिचर्य (परिक्रम्य) समन्ततः। कृपाणैर्विशशासैनं त्रिभिः परमया मुदा' (१।१४।३३) यहां अश्वकी 'पत्न्यः एनं त्रिः परियन्ति' (शत० १३।२।८।४) इस कथनसे परिक्रमा और (शत० १३।२।८।२ के अनुसार) कौशल्या-द्वारा अश्वका विशसन (हनन) कहा है। फिर आगे लिखा है—'पतत्रिणा तदा सार्धं सुस्थितेन च चेतसा। अवसद् रजनीमेकां कौसल्या धर्मकाम्यया' (१४।३४) यहां पर मृतक-घोड़ेके पास रहना धर्मेच्छासे कहा है, कामेच्छासे नहीं।

(ख) इसी प्रकरणके तैत्तिरीयब्राह्मणके भाष्यमें श्रीभट्टभास्करने भी यही भाष्य किया है—'तप एव सन्तापहेतुत्वात् अश्वा (महिष्या)

पत्नत् शतस्थानीयं यद् ध्रौव सम्मिथुनीभवनम् [सह शयीतानम्]* (१३।५।२।८) यहां भी अश्वकी मृतकता स्पष्ट है। (ग) अब इसकी अन्य साक्षी महाभारतमें देखें—'ततः संज्ञप्य तुरगं विधिवद् याजकास्तदा। उपासंवेशयन् राजन्! ततस्तां द्रुपदात्मजाम्' (आश्वमेधिकपर्व ८९।२) यहां भी मृतक-घोड़ेके साथ द्रौपदीको बैठाया गया है। जब अश्व मृतक है; तब यहां आक्षेप्ताओंके आक्षेप व्यर्थ हैं। जैसे कि—'वेदोंका सार्वभौम संदेश' (पृ० ६६) में उसके व्याख्याताका यह कहना कि—महीधरके अपने वेदभाष्यमें किये अर्थ स्पष्टतया अश्लील मन्त्रार्थ (संभोगादि)-परक हैं; यह निष्पक्ष विद्वानोंको लज्जाके साथ स्वीकार करना पड़ेगा' इत्यादि निराकृत हो गया।

यहां बतलाया जा चुका है कि अश्व मृतक है, और उसे गणपतिदेवके रूपमें आहूत किया गया है; जैसा कि हम आरम्भिक-प्रसूनमें विस्तारसे बता चुके हैं। 'हवामहे' ऐसा आह्वान भी वैदिक-रीतिसे चेतन-देवताका होता है; उसमें प्राकृत अश्व, उसमें भी मृतकका आह्वान नहीं हुआ करता। सो 'शिश्न' वा 'रेत' एवं वीर्य उसी गणपतिदेवका इष्ट है, मृतक-अश्वका नहीं। इस बात पर न विचारनेसे ही प्रतिपक्षी भ्रमकूपमें गिरे हुए हैं। यदि यहां प्रतिपक्षी भी प्राकृत अश्वका वर्णन न समझकर 'गणपति' देवका वर्णन समझ लें, क्योंकि—'गणानां त्वा' मन्त्रका देवता आर्यसमाज

* 'मिथुनीभवनम्'का अर्थ इकट्ठा होना है। वेदादि-शास्त्रोंमें भाई-बहिनके जोड़ेको भी 'मिथुन' कहा जाता है। जैसे कि—निरुक्त (१।२१६)में।

की छपाई हुई यजुर्वेदकी संहितानुसार भी 'गणपति' है; तब उन्हें यह भ्रम वा दूसरोंपर आक्षेप करनेका अवसर ही न रहे। जब जीवित-अश्वसे भी यह प्रार्थना सङ्गत नहीं हो सकती, जीवित-अश्व भी न निधिपति, न प्रियपति, और न गणपति बन सकता है, न उसका आह्वान ही उपपन्न हो सकता है; न उसके वीर्यका मनुष्योंमें गर्भ करनेसे कोई सम्बन्ध है, न अश्वका मानुषीसे सन्तानमें कोई सम्बन्ध है; तब मृतक-घोड़ेसे यह प्रार्थना सङ्गत कैसे हो सकती है? तब वादियोंकी यह अपने नियोग आदिकी कल्पनासे विकृत हुए मस्तिष्ककी उपज है, प्राचीन-ग्रन्थोंसे इसका कोई भी सम्बन्ध नहीं। अतः यहां अश्वरूपमें प्रजापति-गणपतिकी ही प्रार्थना है, जैसे कि शतपथमें कहा है—'प्राजापत्यो वै अश्वः' (शतपथ० १३।३।३।४) 'प्रजापतिर्देवता अस्य—इति प्राजापत्यः अश्वः'। वही गणपतिदेव आरम्भिक-प्रसूनमें निदर्शित की हुई सरणिसे विश्वेश्वर एवं सर्वेश्वर होनेसे प्रजाके पति-रक्षक, हमारी निधिके रक्षक, वसु आदि वा कुष्माण्ड-आदि गणों तथा साध्य आदि गणदेवताओंके पति, पद्म-महापद्म आदि निधियोंके पति, पति-पुत्र, धन-धान्य आदि प्रिय वस्तुओंके भी पति होते हैं। वही सम्पूर्ण जगत्में व्यापकतासे निवास करनेसे 'वसु' नामसे सम्बोधित किये जाते हैं, मरा हुआ अश्व सम्बोधित नहीं किया जाता। वह मृतक-अश्व तो केवल मूर्तिपूजाकी मूर्तिकी तरह सम्बोधन वा अर्चनका साधन है, मूर्तिपूजामें पत्थरकी मूर्तिका आह्वान न करके मूर्तिस्थित देवतादिकोंको आहूत किया जाता है। इसी प्रकार यहांके वाचक

आरम्भमें भी 'गणपति-देवताको ही आहूत किया जाता है कि—'गणानां त्वा गणपतिं हवामहे, (यजुः २३।१९)। अब इस मन्त्र का शेष भाग है—'वसो! मम आहमजानि गर्भधमा त्वमजासि गर्भधम्'।

यहां पर 'गर्भधं—गर्भं दधातीति गर्भधं रेतः आहम् आ अजानि—आकृष्य क्षिपामि, त्वं गर्भधं रेतः आ अजासि—आकृष्य क्षिपसि' इस महीधरकी व्याख्यापर बिना-विचारके ही बड़ा हौआ मचाया जाता है। यहां 'रेतः'का अर्थ 'वीर्य' किया जाता है; जो अश्वके जिस रेतः (वीर्य)को प्राप्त करना श्रीमहीधरने लिखा है, वही वेदने स्वयं कहा है, देखिये—'वृषा वाजी रेतोधा रेतो दधातु' (यजुः २३।२०) यहां 'रेतः'का अर्थ छिपा लिया जाता है। यदि आर्येतर 'रेतः'का 'बल' अर्थ करते हैं; तो 'वीर्य'का भी 'बल'ही अर्थ होता है; वही 'तेज'का आशय निकला। फिर किस मुंहसे महीधरको बदनाम किया जाता है? जो 'वाजी रेतो दधातु' वाले मन्त्रका अर्थ एवं आशय है, वही महीधरके भाष्यका भी है—यह क्यों नहीं सोचा जाता? अब इस विषयमें पाठकगण देखें—

(क) 'गर्भधं' पर 'शतपथब्राह्मण'में लिखा है—'प्रजा वै पशवो गर्भः, प्रजां वै पशून् आत्मन् धत्ते' (१३।२।९।४) इस श्रुतिसे 'गर्भ' शब्द यहां प्रजा एवं पशु-वाचक है। उस प्रजा-पशुरूप गर्भके धारण करनेवाले दैवी रेतः—गणपतिदेवके तेजके आकर्षणकी प्रार्थना की गई है, प्राकृत घोड़ेके प्राकृत-वीर्यकी नहीं; क्योंकि—अश्वके वीर्यका और फिर उसमें एक-अश्वके वीर्यका मानुषी-स्त्रीमें गर्भसे सम्बन्ध ही

भला क्या हो सकता है? क्या मृतकका वीर्य भी बढ़ जाता है? वीर्य-की शुष्कतासे ही तो मृत्यु होती है।

(ख) आर्यसमाजियोंकी कुमारियां वा स्त्रियां प्रार्थना करती हैं—'वीर्यमसि वीर्यं मयि धेहि' (यजुः १९।९) 'अग्निः प्रजां बहुलां मे करोतु, अन्नं पयो रेतो अस्मासु धत्त' (यजुः १९।४८) इत्यादि मन्त्रोंसे वे कुमारियाँ वा स्त्रियाँ अपनेमें रेतः या वीर्यके आधानकी प्रार्थना करती हैं क्या?

(ग) 'आर्याभिविनय' (पृ० ४९)के अनुसार वे प्रार्थना करती हैं—'हमारे हृदयमें रमण कीजिये' (ऋ० १।९१।१३); तो क्या वे आर्यसमाजियोंकी स्त्रियाँ वही 'प्राकृत वीर्य' तथा 'रमण'की प्रार्थना कर रही होती हैं, जिसे प्रतिपक्षी यहाँ बताते हैं?

(घ) 'इमं ते उपस्थं मधुना संसृजामि' इस स्वा० द०जीकी संस्कारविधिमें लिखे, विवाहकालीन-मन्त्रमें भी आर्यसमाजिए क्या स्त्रीके उसी उपस्थको मधुसे युक्त कर रहे होते हैं? यदि ऐसा है; तो दूसरों पर आक्षेप क्यों?

(ङ) 'अर्चेन्तं मनुष्याः उपस्थं कृत्वा उपासीदन्' (शतपथ ३।७।२।३) यहाँ क्या प्रजापतिके सामने मनुष्योंका गुह्य-अङ्ग निकालना माना जायेगा? जो अर्थ 'वीर्य, उपस्थ' आदिका प्रतिपक्षी यहाँ करेंगे, वही महीधरभाष्यमें भी हो जायगा?

(च) पत्नीभ्यर्थके लिए, बैलसे, बेटीसे भोग करें [उपयोग लें] (यजुः २३।६०) यह स्वा० द०जीका किया अर्थ है; तब क्या आर्यसमाजों-की वेद पढ़नेवाली स्त्रियोंका बैलसे और उनका स्वयं बेटीसे भोग

या उपयोग लेना यही तथाकथित अर्थके योग या उपयोग जैसा माना जायेगा या नहीं ?

(छ) 'मम योनिर्महद् ब्रह्म तस्मिन् गर्भं दधाम्यहम्' (१४।३) इस गीताके पद्यमें भी योनिमें गर्भ-धारण करनेका 'तत्र योनिं परिपश्यन्ति धीराः' (यजुः ३१।१९) यहाँ भी क्या योनिका वही अश्लील अर्थ किया जायेगा ? 'मम योनिरप्स्वन्तः समुद्रे' (ऋ० १०।१२५।७) यहाँ वागाम्भृणी-ऋषिकाकी योनि, 'नागं योनिं च लिङ्गं च बिभ्रती नृप ! सूर्योनि' (प्राधानिकरहस्य ५) क्या यहाँ भी श्रीदुर्गादेवीकी योनिका वही अश्लील अर्थ किया जायेगा ?

(ज) यदि नहीं, तो याज्ञिक-प्रक्रियामें भी ऐसी बात नहीं; वहाँ-पर जब स्नातक है, 'मेढ्रं ते शुन्धामि' (यजुः ६।१४) इसके अंग पृथक्-पृथक् शोधित कर रखे हैं; उससे मैथुन हो ही कैसे सकता है ? 'गणानां त्वा' इस यजुर्वेदके मन्त्रका ऐतरेय-ब्राह्मणसे 'ब्रह्मणस्पत्यम्' यह जो आक्षेपकों-द्वारा अर्थ बताया जाता है, उन लोगोंको यह पता नहीं कि—यह यजुष-मन्त्रका अर्थ नहीं, किन्तु ऋग्वेदके 'गणानां' इस ब्रह्मणस्पतिवाले मन्त्रका अर्थ है। उसमें 'गर्भधं' आदि यजुषमन्त्रके पदोंकी व्याख्या है ही नहीं। जिन्हें यह पता नहीं; वे चले हैं महीधरके अर्थपर आक्षेप करने। यदि दोनों ऋग्वेद एवं यजुर्वेदके गणपति एक हैं; इसलिए यजुष-मन्त्रका ऋग्वेदके ऐतरेय-ब्राह्मणसे अर्थ किया जाता है; तब भी हमारा ही पक्ष सिद्ध हुआ कि यज्ञमें उसी गणपति-देवताका आह्वान किया जा रहा है; उसी गणपतिदेवके तेजके आकर्षणार्थ प्रार्थना है; तब

भी हमारा ही पक्ष सिद्ध हुआ। 'आ अजानि'में 'अज' धातुका 'क्षेपण' ('अज गतिक्षेपणयोः' इस धातुके अनुकूल) अर्थ प्राकरणिक था; पर आक्षेपकों-द्वारा 'आ सन्तानमाजानासि' यह अर्थ बदलकर अपनी जान बचा ली जाती है। इस प्रकार श्रीमहीधरके अर्थका आशय भी जान लिया जा सकता है; तब उसपर आक्षेप क्यों ?

(९) प्रतिपक्षिगण अश्वके ... करते हैं और उससे स्त्रीके जीवित न रहनेकी शङ्का प्रकट करते हैं; पर अथर्व-आयुर्वेद पुरुषको ही 'वाजीकरण' औषधि देकर स्त्रीके लिए 'अश्व' बनाना चाहता है; और वेद भी पुरुषके अंगको 'अश्वका अङ्ग' बनाना चाहता है। देखिये—'यावदङ्गीनं पारस्वतं हास्तिनं गार्दभं च यत्। यावदश्वस्य वाजिनस्तावत् ते (पुरुषस्य) वर्धतां पसः,' (अथर्व० ६।७२।३) पस 'शिश्न' को कहते हैं; देखिये इसपर स्वा० दयानन्दका यजुर्वेदभाष्य (२३।६)। तो क्या स्त्री उस पुरुषके अश्वके शिश्नसे जीवित रह सकेगी, जिसका वेद विधान कर रहा है ? यदि यहाँ प्रतिपक्षी 'अश्व'का साक्षात् 'अश्व' अर्थ नहीं लेते; वैसे वहाँ पर भी वे 'अश्वशिश्न' खास अर्थ कैसे करते हैं ?

(१०) यह स्पष्ट किया जा चुका है कि—जो अर्थ श्रीमहीधराचार्यने किया है; वह शतपथब्राह्मणसे लिया है। सो जो तात्पर्य शतपथमें होगा, महीधरभाष्यमें भी वही तात्पर्य होगा। तो 'गर्भधं रेतः स्त्रयोनौ स्थापयति, अश्वशिश्नतुल्यं कुरुते' आदिका अर्थ भी यही जान लेना चाहिये कि—स्त्री प्रजा-अनुरूप गर्भको धारण करनेवाले

गणपतिदेवके सोमरूप तेजको—जैसे कि वेदमें कहा है—'अथा३ सोमो वृष्णोऽश्वस्य रेतः' (यजुः २३।६२)—प्रार्थित करके उसे अपने भीतर आकर्षित करनेकी भावना करती है। इसी भावनाके फलस्वरूप उसे चक्रवर्ती पुत्र पैदा होता है।

विवाह-संस्कारमें स्वा० द० ने संस्कारविधिमें 'इन्द्राग्नी... बृहस्पतिर्मरुतो ब्रह्म सोम इमां नारीं प्रजया वर्धयन्तु' (पृ० १४४-१४५) यह मन्त्र लिखा है। उसका अर्थ किया है—बृहस्पतिः—राजा, मरुतः—सभ्य मनुष्य... इस मेरी स्त्रीको प्रजासे बढ़ाया करते हैं' यह उनकी उक्ति है। तो क्या उनकी स्त्रीमें राजा और सभ्य मनुष्य मैथुन करते हैं? यदि नहीं, यह केवल आशीर्वादमात्र है, वैसे यहां भी गणपतिके तेजके आकर्षणकी भावनामात्र है। सो यहां अर्थ यह है—

'अश्वस्य—अश्नुते व्याप्नोति सर्वं जगत्-इति अश्वः, गणपतिदेवः (नमस्ते गणपतये... त्वमेव सर्वं खल्विदं ब्रह्मासि' इति गणपत्युपनिषदुक्तेः) अस्य गणपतिदेवस्य शिश्नम्-'शिश्नं श्नथतेः' (निरुक्त ४।१९।८) श्नथयति—उत्पादयति हिनस्ति वा विघ्नरूपं तम इति शिश्नम्, शेवधि—हिनस्ति वा प्रतिबन्धकतामिति वा शिश्नम्, यथा 'शुनमहो-शशाति शरीरं' व्याप्नोति इति वा शिश्नम्, शिनोति-तीव्रशीभवति इति वा शिश्नम्' (सर्वत्र पृषोदरादिः (६।३।१०९) शिश्न-तेज इत्यर्थः; तत् व्यापकं गणपति-तेज आकृष्य भक्त्या स्वयोनौ—कर्मसमोलनादके कारणभूतस्वसूक्ष्म शरीरान्तः फलोत्पादन-पर्यन्तं सूक्ष्मरूपेण धारयति। वाजी—वेगवान् बलवान् वृषा—

अथवा—'मम योनिर्महद् ब्रह्म तस्मिन् गर्भं दधाम्यहम्' (गीता १४।३)के अनुसार प्रकृतिरूप-पत्नीमें चिदाभासरूप गर्भका आधान करनेवाले गणपतिदेवका मैं आह्वान करती हूं, यह अर्थ है, शेष पूर्ववत्।

यहां अश्वके मृतक होनेसे उससे मैथुन असम्भव है; जबकि जीवितके साथ भी वैसा नहीं हो सकता। तब जिस-यज्ञमें अपने पतिसे भी कामवासना आदिका निषेध होता है, उसीमें मृत-अश्वके साथ वासनारूप-अन्यधर्म कैसे हो सकता है? तब यहां पूर्व कहा हुआ अर्थ ही वास्तविक है। उक्त शब्द परोक्ष-दृष्टिसे कहे गये हैं। क्या कभी आर्यसमाजियोंकी स्त्रियां अपने मृतक-पतिसे मैथुन कर सकती हैं? यदि नहीं; तब मृतक-अश्वसे ही वैसे कैसे हो सकता है? अतः गणपतिदेवका तेज ही यहां प्रार्थित किया गया है। इस अवसरपर अश्वकी तीन-परिक्रमा शतपथ (१३।२।८।४) और कात्यायनश्रौतसूत्र (२०।६।१३) के अनुसार की जाती हैं, परिक्रमा देवपूजामें ही हुआ करती है; सो यह स्पष्ट देवपूजा ही है। इसी दैवी तेजके आकर्षणके फलस्वरूप महिषीका चक्रवर्ती-सम्राट् उत्पन्न

होता है।

कर्मकाण्डमें भी अश्वमहिषी-प्रसङ्गमें कोई सम्भोगका सम्बन्ध नहीं दीखता; क्योंकि अश्व मृतक है; तब केवल मृतक-अश्वके पृथग्भूत और संशोधित अङ्गका स्पर्शमात्र, ऊर्ध्वस्थ (उत्सङ्ग, गोदमें, अथवा अपने अङ्गपर) स्थापनमात्र ही इष्ट है, वहाँ विलासिता न होनेसे तथा भावना दूषित न होनेसे पातिव्रत्य-भंगकी आशङ्का भी नहीं होती, क्योंकि—वह भी शास्त्राज्ञानुसार पतिकी आज्ञासे उसके यज्ञकी पूर्त्यर्थ किया जाता है। गायके स्तन या मूत्रस्थानका पुरुष स्पर्श करते हैं; तो क्या वहाँ पुरुषोंको स्त्रीके अङ्गोंके स्पर्शका विचार आ जाता है? या उन्हें उससे काम-वासना हो जाती है? यदि नहीं; तब स्त्रीको ही घोड़ेके अङ्गके स्पर्शमात्रसे काम-वासना कैसे उत्पन्न हो जावेगी? क्या वह मनुष्य है? प्रतिपक्षियोंको जो ऐसी-वासना उत्पन्न हो जाती है; उसका कारण नियोग आदिकी कुकथाके प्रचारसे मस्तिष्कमें विकृतिका उत्पन्न हो जाना है। प्रतिपक्षी लोग नियोगसे वा विधवा-विवाहसे मृतककी पत्नीके अङ्गमें अन्य पुरुषके अङ्गका स्पर्शमात्र तो क्या; उसमें तो विलास भी करवाते हैं; वहाँ उनको उस पत्नीके पातिव्रत्य-भङ्गकी शङ्का ही नहीं होती। यदि वे उसे अपने अभिमत-शास्त्रके अर्थके अनुसार व्यवहार करानेसे उसके पातिव्रत्यके भङ्गकी शङ्का नहीं करते; तब इस-कर्मकाण्डमें शङ्का करना अपने नियोग वा विधवा-विवाहसे आँख मूँद लेना है। जिस प्रकार आप लोग यहाँ उपहास

कात्यायनके उपलक्ष-कर्ममें शतपथ-ब्राह्मणकी साक्षी हम दे चुके हैं।

करते हैं; वैसे नियोगमें आप लोगोंका भी उपहास होता है, पर विचार करनेसे यह सब आक्षेप कट जाते हैं। प्रसव करनेमें डाक्टर भी स्त्रीकी योनिका स्पर्श कर रहे होते हैं। उसमें हाथ भी डाल रहे होते हैं; इससे क्या उस स्त्रीका आप पातिव्रत्यभङ्ग मान लेंगे? विवाहको ही ले लीजिये; इसके अङ्ग-गर्भाधानमें ही क्या अश्लीलता नहीं है? पर शास्त्रानुसार व्यवहारसे वहाँ धर्म्यता मान ली जाती है; अश्वमेधमें तो न कोई कामवासना है, न ही विलास वा सम्भोग है; तब बलात् वहाँ समागम वा सम्भोग बताना प्रतिपक्षियोंका अपने कलुषित-हृदयका ही यह कलुषित-विचार है, प्रकृतमें ऐसी कोई बात नहीं।

यदि वादी ऐसा मानते हैं; और अपनेको वेद-प्रेमी मानते हैं; तो वे जरा अथर्ववेदके कुन्तापसूक्तपर दृष्टि डालें। उसमें मन्त्र है—'महानग्नी उपब्रूते भ्रष्टस्य आविशितं पसः' (२०।१३६।६) इस मन्त्रमें महानग्नी स्त्रीमें 'भ्रष्टस्य पस आवेशितम्'का अर्थ क्या करेंगे? इन्हीं अश्वमेधके मन्त्रों तथा कुन्तापसूक्तोंसे त्रस्त होकर आर्यसमाज के एक अन्वेषक-विद्वान्ने अपने चौथी वेद-सम्मेलनके सभापति-भाषण (११ अप्रैल १९४०)के ४९ पृष्ठमें कहा है—'प्रतिवर्ष भारतके भिन्न-भिन्न प्रदेशोंके वेदोंके विद्वान् एक केन्द्रिय-स्थानपर एकत्रित हों;''अश्वमेधप्रकरण, कुन्तापसूक्त, तथा 'त्रीणि शता त्री सहस्राणि अग्निं त्रिंशच्च देवाः' 'इन्द्रो दधीचो अस्थभिः' इत्यादि मन्त्रोंमें विशेषरूपसे विचार किया जाए, जो वेदोंका अनुशीलन करने वालोंकेलिए विशेष कठिनाई उपस्थित करते हैं'। इससे स्पष्ट है कि—

८१७ [illegible] (४)

सत्यार्थप्रकाशके उक्त मन्त्रोंका जो अर्थ स्वा० द० जीने किया है, वह उन्हें भी सन्तोषप्रद प्रतीत नहीं हुआ। उसमें उन्हें भी उसकी प्रसङ्गकारिता मालूम होती है।

(१६) शेष प्रश्न यह रहता है कि—वेदमें तथाकथित अश्लील मन्त्र ही नहीं होते। 'आहन्ति गभे पसो निगल्गलीति धारका' (यजु: २३।२२) आदि मन्त्रोंका महीधरने अश्लील अर्थ किया है कि—'यदा भगे-योनौ शिश्नमागच्छति, तदा धारका-धरति लिङ्गमिति धारका-योनिः (जन्नेदानी) निगल्गलीति—वीर्यं क्षरति, गल्गलेति शब्दं वा करोति'।

इसपर उत्तर यह है कि—इन अर्थोंके करनेसे यदि श्री-महीधराचार्यको अपवादित किया जाता है, तो इसका भाव यह हुआ कि—वेदमें तथाकथित अश्लील वर्णन नहीं हो सकता। पर ऐसा कहना अज्ञान है। वेदमें सर्वाङ्गीणता होती है। सर्वाङ्गतामें सब कुछ होता है। यदि वेदमें ऐसे वर्णन अश्लील माने जावें, तो 'रेतो मूत्रं विजहाति योनिं प्रविशदिन्द्रियम्' (यजु: १९।७६) इस मन्त्रका अर्थ आर्यसमाजी-आचार्य अपने पास वेद पढ़नेवाली १०-१२ वर्षकी कुमारियोंको क्या बताते हैं? 'यस्यां बीजं मनुष्या वपन्ति। यस्यामुशन्तः प्रहराम शेपं' (ऋ० १०।८५।३७) इस मन्त्रका अर्थ कुमारियोंको क्या पढ़ाते हैं? या विवाहित हो रही हुईको स्पष्ट बताते हैं? 'मेढ्रं ते शुन्धामि पायुं ते शुन्धामि' (यजु० ६।१४) इस मन्त्रका अर्थ कुमारियोंको क्या पढ़ाते हैं? क्या यह तथाकथित अश्लीलता है या नहीं?

LICENTIOUS ACT OF VEDIC GODS

Rig Veda 7.33.11 Born of their love for Urvasi, Vasistha thou, priest, art son of Varuna and Mitra; And as a fallen drop, in heavenly fervour, all the Gods laid thee on a lotus-blossorn.

Above is Pundit Ram Govind Trivedi's Hindi translation. Yaska Acharya writes on this verse, Nirukta 5.13 "Urvashi is (the name of) a naiad, (so called because) she pervades wide regions (uru + as- to pervade '), or she pervades by means of thighs [Sexual Intercourse] …On seeing her, the seminal fluid of Mitra and Varuna fell down. Tr. Lakshman Swarup

It is mentioned in Bhagwad Purana/Srimad Bhagavatam (ISKCON translation)

Bhagavad Purana (Srimad Bhagavatam) 6.18.6 Upon seeing Urvaśī, the celestial society girl, both Mitra and Varuṇa discharged semen, which they preserved in an earthen pot. The two sons Agastya and Vasiṣṭha later appeared from that pot, and they are therefore the common sons of Mitra and Varuṇa. Mitra begot three sons in the womb of his wife, whose name was Revatī. Their names were Utsarga, Ariṣṭa and Pippala.

Bhagavad Purana (Srimad Bhagavatam) 9.13.6 After saying this, Mahārāja Nimi, who was expert in the science of spiritual knowledge, gave up his body. Vasiṣṭha, the great-grandfather, gave up his body also, but through the semen discharged by Mitra and Varuṇa when they saw Urvaśī, he was born again.

Brhaddevata V.149-150 “Of these two Adityas, when they saw the nymph Urvasi at a sacrificial session, the semen was effused. It fell into a jar containing water that stood overnight. Now at the same moment two vigorous ascetics, the seers Agastya and Vasistha, there came into being.” Tr. Arthu Anthony Macdonnel

Refutation-

I have already debunked these Allegations on the birth of Vasistha ji from Mitra and Varuna in my Article under the section

“Debunking False Allegation on Mitra and Varuna Ejaculating after seeing Urvashi from Srimad Bhagavatam and Vedas“

I will again Attach the same refutation here –

Indeed we’ll be explaining the meaning of this mantra as explained by purvacharyas.

Acharya Skandaswami ji wrote that Urvashi refers to vidyut (electricity/lightning) and Vasistha refers to hidden collected water. Mitra and Varuna are air and sun respectively, and Vishvadeva is light rays. The water on earth is drawn upwards due to sun and air therefore, it has been referred to as Maitravaruna (born from Mitra and Varuna).
Here kumbha has been interpreted as Pushkara which refers to water and antariksha (space/atmosphere). But here it has been referred to as antariksha. So the virya of Mitra and Varuna (rainwater) is held up in the atmosphere.

The lightning, flashing above, uniting together, becoming one, became a compact mass of radiance — that is the meaning of 'a body of light.' When Mitra and Varuṇa beheld you, O Vasiṣṭha, that was one birth of yours. But there is also another birth. Which is that? It is said: from Mitra and Varuṇa. How so? When the sage Agastya came forth among men, then Vasiṣṭha too came forth. Therefore it is said that Agastya, at the same time of his coming, drew forth Vasiṣṭha also. Thus in this Ṛc, by the word uta ('and'), the sense of combination (samucchaya) is conveyed: the birth from Mitra and Varuṇa that was shown before, is here further described in detail in the next verse.

And here too the word uta has the sense of api ('also'). By this it is indicated: 'O Vasiṣṭha! you are also, in this second way, the offspring of Mitra and Varuṇa.' By which way? It is said: from the desire (manas) of the Apsaras Urvaśī. O Brāhmaṇa! the longing of her mind — from Mitra and Varuṇa — from that, you were born. By her sight, their own seed (dṛpsa) fell. The word dṛpsa here means the drops of semen, not fully concealed, plentiful, produced by strong exertion. And here, by implication, that seed is meant.

By the divine Brahman — that is, by the Veda which belongs to the gods — in the hymns of the Ṛk, you are praised. The All-gods sustained you, who were born from that seed fallen into the lotus (Puṣkara), whether in the atmosphere or upon the earth. Adadanta ('they gave') here means 'they upheld, they sustained.' Or, it may mean that the All-gods together with four-faced Brahmā sustained you. Or else, that your own inner Brahman, the kṣetrajña (knower of the field, inner self), bore you, when your body had fallen apart for an instant.

The word dṛpsa means 'collected, accumulated,' and is derived from psa ('to eat').

As for Puṣkara: when the word is read as a name of the mid-region (antarikṣa), it is brought in here only to show its manifold meanings. Puṣkara nourishes beings by giving space, holding water, and thus supporting. Water itself is puṣkara, because it is an object of worship for gods, ancestors, and men. Or because it is divine in form. For the Śruti says: 'Verily, the waters are all the gods' (Ait. Br. 2.16; Kauṣ. Br. 11.4). Thus, puṣkara is to be worshipped.

Or again, puṣkara is the lotus, from the same root (puṣ, 'to nourish, to adorn'). Hence it is so called, because it is beautiful. Or, being 'vapushkara' ('beauty-maker'), by elision of va it becomes puṣkara. From similarity of letters with puṣpa ('flower'), it is also connected with that meaning:

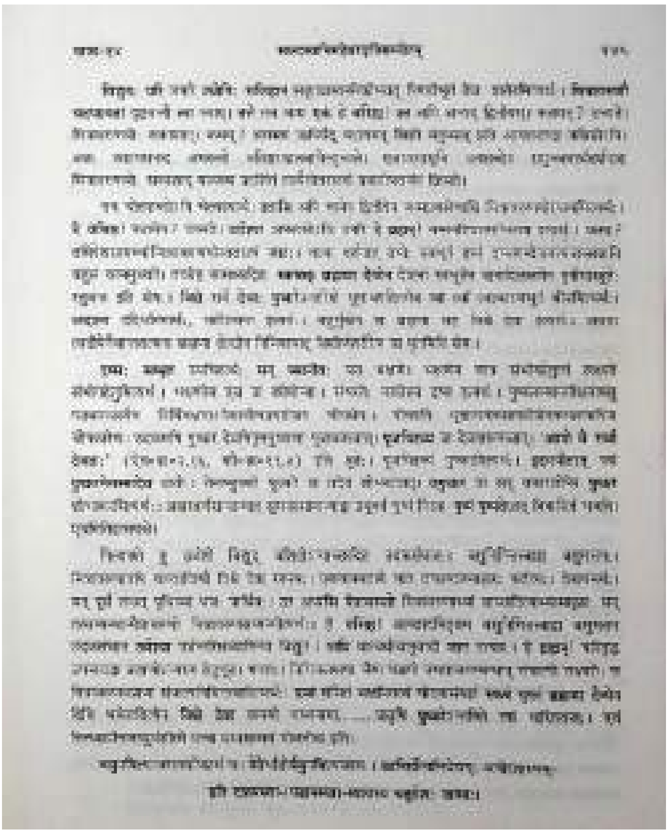
just as the flower blooms, so does the lotus. Thus in the Itihāsa (traditional) interpretation.

In the eternal (nitya) interpretation, Urvaśī is lightning, Vasiṣṭha is enveloped water-cluster (cloud). By reason of wealth (vasu), he is called Vasumattama. Mitra and Varuṇa are the Ādityas as wind and sun, the viśve devāḥ are the rays. For unity of sentence, the word tad is to be supplied.

Thus the meaning is: formerly, O Vasiṣṭha, your birth was terrestrial (pārthiva). But you are also Maitrāvaruṇa, drawn by Mitra and Varuṇa, the wind and the sun; and from connection with them you are called Maitrāvaruṇa. O Vasiṣṭha! You are covered, as it were, by waters, or are 'Vasumattama' from wealth. Urvaśī is the lightning pervading the mid-region. The word adhi here is explanatory of the verb 'to be born, to arise.' O Brāhmaṇa! or, from the further exalted sense, you are connected with Brahman, or caused by Brahman, or by resolve of mind (manas). This is the sense of the instrumental ending in manasaḥ — it indicates cause, i.e. the resolve.

Since that resolve belonged to Mitra and Varuṇa, therefore you are their son. The dṛpsa ('drops') were eaten, i.e. taken up; they fell into the water-mass, and were sustained by the divine Brahman, i.e. by the Sun. The viśve devāḥ, the rays, in the mid-region during the rains, sustained you in Puṣkara (the atmosphere).

In the same way, in the case of rivers and others too, Urvaśī is to be applied, as the hymns permit.



Allegations-

VEDIC GODS HAVING SEX WITH THE SAME WOMAN AND IMPREGNATING HER

”Pushan, inspire her who is most auspicious, in whom men may sow seed, who most affectionate. may be devoted to us, and in whom animated by desire we may beget progeny. (The Gandharvas) gave Surya to thee, Agni, with her bridal ornaments ; do thou, Agni, give (us) husbands our wife back again with male offspring. Agni gave the wife back again with life and splendour; may he who is her husband enjoying long life live a hundred years. Soma first obtained the bride;the Gandharva obtained her next ; Agni was thy third husband ; thy fourth (husband) is born of man. Soma gave her to the Gandharva; the Gandharva gave her to Agni ; Agni has given her to me and wealth and sons.” Rig Veda 10.85.37-41,

This is also mentioned in Atharva Veda,

Atharva Veda 14.2.3-4 She was the wife of Soma first: next the Gandharva was thy lord. Agni was the third husband: now one born of woman is thy fourth. Soma to the Gandharva, and to Agni the Gandharva gave. Now, Agni hath bestowed on me riches and sons and this my bride.

It is mentioned in Agni Purana,

Agni Purana 165.19-20 ”The gods first enjoy the women, then the Moon-god, after them the Gandharvas, subsequently the Fire-god, and last of all the mortals; and hence they can never be polluted."

Atri Samhita 1.190 "Women were first enjoyed by the Celestials; then by the moon, the Gandharvas and the Fires. Afterwards came men to enjoy them. They are never affected by any sin."

Refutation-

The passages from the Rig Veda (10.85.37–41), Atharva Veda (14.2.3–4), and later in texts like the Agni Purāṇa and Atri Saṁhitā speak of a sacred sequence where the bride is successively linked with Soma, the Gandharva, Agni, and finally with man. This does not mean that the Devas physically had sex with same woman; rather, each divine figure represents a stage of sanctification—Soma symbolizes divine vitality, the Gandharva represents protection, Agni embodies purity through fire, and man becomes the rightful human husband. The purpose is to show that marriage is blessed and safeguarded by higher powers, not to describe intercourse.

This is Rig Veda 10.85.37-41 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya

हे पूषा (पोषण में समर्थ) देव ! आप शिवतम (सबसे अधिक कल्याणप्रदा) उस (उर्वरा शक्ति) को प्रेरित करें, जिसमें मनुष्य बीज को स्थापित करते हैं। जो हम (मनुष्यों) के प्रति उल्लसित होती हुई, अपने ऊरु प्रदेश को विस्तारित करती हैं। जिसके गर्भ में उत्साहपूर्वक (फलित होने के विश्वास से) बीज स्थापित किया जा सके ॥ ३७ ॥

Verse 37
O Pūṣan (the nourisher), you who are capable of sustaining all, inspire that fertile power in which men deposit the seed. She, delighted towards us, expands her thigh-region, into whose womb the seed may be eagerly placed with the faith of fruitful outcome.

हे अग्निदेव ! दहेज (कन्याधन) के रूप में सूर्या को सर्वप्रथम आपके ही समीप ले जाया जाता है (अर्थात् विवाह के समय, यज्ञ समय तथा परिक्रमा इत्यादि में वर-वधू अग्नि के समीप रहते हैं) आप पति को श्रेष्ठ सुसन्तति प्रदान करने वाली स्त्री प्रदान करें अर्थात् विवाहितों को सुसन्तति से सम्पन्न बनाएँ ॥३८ ॥

O Agni, at the time of marriage the bride (Sūryā) is first led near you as dowry (the divine witness of the union). At yajña, marriage, and sacred circumambulation, the bride and groom come before you. You, O Agni, grant the husband a wife who will bestow noble progeny, making the married couple blessed with good children.

अग्नि ने पुनः दीर्घायु, तेजस्वी और कान्तियुक्त पत्नी को प्रदान किया। इसके जो पति हैं, वे चिरंजीवी होकर शतायु तक जीवित रहें ॥ ३९ ॥

Verse 39
Agni, in return, bestows a wife who is long-lived, radiant, and endowed with beauty. May her husband, by that blessing, live long, enduring for a full hundred years

मंत्र क्र० ४० और ४१ में सूर्या के अवतरण का क्रम वर्णित है। सूर्या प्रकृतिगत उर्वरा शक्ति है। उसका प्रथम स्वामी सोम (सूक्ष्म पोषक विकिरण) हुआ, इस समय वह सावित्री थी। सोम से गन्धर्व (गां-किरणों को धारण करने वाले) आदित्य को वह शक्ति प्राप्त हुई। आदित्य-सूर्य ने उसे भूमि पर अग्नि को प्रदान किया, तब वह सूर्या हुई। अग्नि से वह उर्वरा शक्ति मनुष्यों को प्राप्त हुई। मनुष्यों या प्राणियों को वह भूमिगत तथा नारी जातिगत उर्वरता के रूप में प्राप्त हुई। अश्व सम्बोधन शक्ति का द्योतक है। इस द्विधा (जड़ एवं चेतन प्रकृतिगत) उर्वरता को फलित करने वाले शक्ति-प्रवाह को अश्विनीकुमार कहना युक्तिसंगत है। पृथ्वी की उर्वरता से प्राणियों तथा प्राणियों के कारण भूमि के उत्पादन का क्रम जुड़ा हुआ है, यह दोनों प्रवाह एक साथ जुड़े होने से अश्विनीकुमारों को जुड़वाँ कहा जाना भी समीचीन है। सूर्या का वरण सोम द्वारा, फिर गन्धर्व द्वारा फिर अग्नि के द्वारा तथा अन्त में अश्विनीकुमारों द्वारा होने का आलंकारिक वर्णन इस प्रक्रिया में भली प्रकार सिद्ध होता है –

The hymns describe the symbolic journey of Sūryā (the power of natural fertility). First, she belonged to Soma (the subtle nourishing rays), at that stage she was called Sāvitrī. From Soma, she passed to the Gandharva (the bearer of sun-rays). From Gandharva, she was given to Agni (the terrestrial fire and life-power). Through Agni, she descended to mankind, appearing both as earthly fertility (soil) and as womanly fertility (the womb).
The invocation of Aśvins (the twin gods) symbolizes the dual streams of fertility—earth's productivity and the generative continuity of living beings. Since both streams are interlinked (earth sustains creatures, and creatures sustain the earth), the Aśvins are fittingly described as twins. Thus, the allegorical description of Sūryā being wedded successively to Soma, Gandharva, Agni, and finally Man is fully justified.

हे सूर्या ! सोम ने सर्वप्रथम पत्नी रूप में आपको प्राप्त किया। तदनन्तर गन्धर्व आपके पति हुए, आपके तीसरे पति अग्निदेव हैं। मनुष्य वंशज आपके चौथे पति हैं ॥४० ॥

O Sūryā, Soma was your first husband. Thereafter, Gandharva became your consort. Your third husband was Agni, and mankind, the descendants of men, became your fourth.

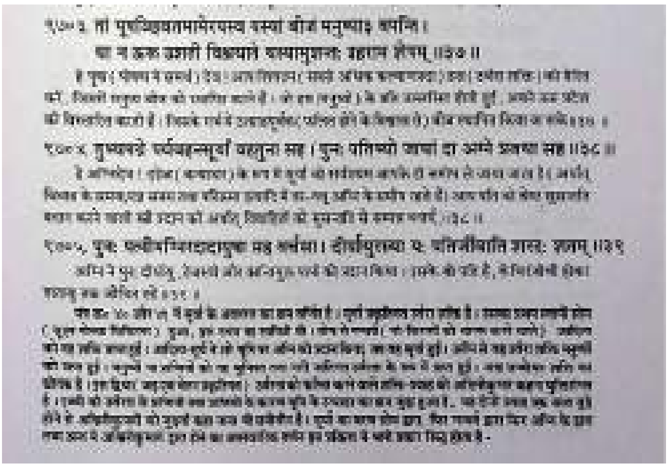
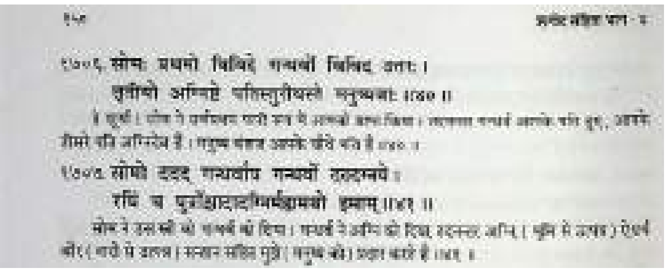
सोम ने उस स्त्री को गन्धर्व को दिया। गन्धर्व ने अग्नि को दिया, तदनन्तर अग्नि, (भूमि से उत्पन्न) ऐश्वर्य और (नारी से उत्पन्न) सन्तान सहित मुझे (मनुष्य को) प्रदान करते हैं ॥४१ ॥

Soma gave you, the bride, to Gandharva. Gandharva gave you to Agni. Then Agni, together with wealth (arising from the earth) and progeny (arising from woman), finally bestowed you upon me, the human being.





Sayanacharya commentary on Rig Veda 10.85.40

Atharva Veda 14.2.3-4 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya

मन्त्र क्र० ३ और ४ में सूर्या के अवतरण का क्रम वर्णित है। सूर्या प्रकृतिगत पदार्थ उत्पादक विधा है। उसका प्रथम स्वामी सोम (सूक्ष्म पोषक विकिरण) हुआ, इस समय वह सावित्री थी। सोम से गन्धर्व (गां- किरणों को धारण करने वाले आदित्य) को वह शक्ति प्राप्त हुई। आदित्य- सूर्य ने उसे भूमि पर अग्नि को प्रदान किया, तब वह सूर्या हुई। अग्नि से वह उर्वरा शक्ति मनुष्यों को प्राप्त हुई। मनुष्यों या प्राणियों को वह भूमिगत तथा नारी जातिगत उर्वरता के रूप में प्राप्त हुई। अश्व सम्बोधन शक्ति का द्योतक है। इस द्विधा (जड़ एवं चेतन प्रकृतिगत) उर्वरता को फलित करने वाले शक्ति-प्रवाहों को अश्विनीकुमार कहना युक्ति संगत है। पृथ्वी की उर्वरता से प्राणियों तथा प्राणियों के कारण भूमि के उत्पादन का क्रम जुड़ा हुआ है, यह दोनों प्रवाह एक साथ जुड़े होने से अश्विनीकुमारों को जुड़वाँ कहा जाना भी समीचीन है। सूर्या का वरण सोम द्वारा, फिर गन्धर्व द्वारा, फिर अग्नि के द्वारा तथा अन्त में अश्विनीकुमारों द्वारा होने का आलंकारिक वर्णन इस प्रक्रिया में भलीप्रकार सिद्ध होता है-

In mantras 3 and 4, the descent of Sūryā (the fertility power of nature) is described. Sūryā is the productive principle of prakṛti (nature).

Her first lord was Soma (the subtle nourishing radiance). At that stage, she was called Sāvitrī. From Soma, the Gandharva (the solar Aditya who holds the rays) received that power. The solar deity then entrusted her to Agni (the terrestrial fire), and thus she became Sūryā. From Agni, this fertility power descended to mankind. For humans and living beings, she manifests both as earth's fertility (soil, crops) and womanly fertility (the womb).

The invocation of the horse (aśva) is symbolic of power. The dual currents of fertility—material (earthly) and conscious (living beings)—are sustained by the twin powers known as the Aśvinī-kumāras. Since the fertility of the earth sustains creatures, and creatures in turn sustain the fertility of the earth, these two currents are inseparably linked. Hence, the Aśvins are fittingly called twins.

Thus, the successive union of Sūryā with Soma, then Gandharva, then Agni, and finally mankind, is an allegorical description of this natural process.

हे सूर्ये ! सोम ने सर्वप्रथम पत्नीरूप में आपको प्राप्त किया। तदनन्तर गन्धर्व आपके पति हुए, आपके तीसरे पति अग्निदेव हैं। मनुष्य वंशज आपके चौथे पति हैं ॥३ ॥

O Sūryā! Soma first obtained you as his wife. Thereafter Gandharva became your husband. Your third husband was Agni, and the descendants of men became your fourth.

सोम ने, (स्त्री को) गन्धर्व को दिया। गंधर्व ने अग्नि को दिया, तदनन्तर अग्नि ने (भूमि से उत्पन्न) ऐश्वर्य और (नारी से उत्पन्न) सन्तानसहित मुझे (मनुष्य को) प्रदान किया ॥४ ॥

Soma gave the bride (you) to Gandharva. Gandharva gave you to Agni. Then Agni, together with wealth (born of the earth) and progeny (born of woman), bestowed you upon me, the human being.

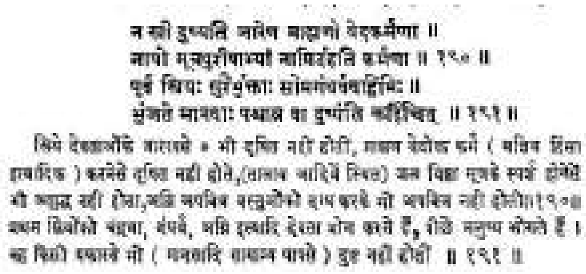
है। वह परम पावन माना गया है। पहले क्रमशः सोम, गन्धर्व और अग्नि—ये तीन देवता समस्त स्त्रियोंका उपभोग करते हैं। फिर मनुष्य उनका उपभोग करते हैं। इससे स्त्रियाँ किसीसे दूषित

Atri Smriti 1.190

प्रथम वियोंको चंद्रमा, गंधर्व, अग्नि इत्यादि देवता भोग करते हैं, पीछे मनुष्य भोगते हैं। वह किसी प्रकारसे भी (मानसादि सामान्य पापसे) दुष्ट नहीं होतीं ॥ १९१ ॥

In the beginning, women are obtained by Devas such as Soma, Gandharva, and Agni; afterwards, they are obtained by men. Yet in no way do they become corrupted (not even by ordinary sins of the mind, etc.).



Mlecchas may raise objections on the word "upabhoga" in Agni Purāṇa (165.19–20) and Atri Saṁhitā (1.190), deliberately mistranslating it as if it meant the Devas having sexual intercourse with women. However, उपभोग does not mean sexual enjoyment. If one interprets it in that crude sense, then it becomes impossible to explain parallel Smṛti passages which clearly state the symbolic roles of Soma, Gandharvas, and Agni in the marriage ceremony:

सोमः शौचं ददावासां गन्धर्वश्च शुभां गिरम् । पावकः सर्वमेध्यत्वं मेध्या वै योषितो ह्यतः।।
(Yājñavalkya Smṛti / Ācārādhyāyaḥ / Vivāha Prakaraṇam)

Here Soma is said to bestow purity (śauca), the Gandharva to grant sweet speech (śubhāṁ giram), and Agni to confer auspiciousness (sarvamedhyatva). The Mitākṣarā commentary explains:

परिणयनात्पूर्वं सोमगन्धर्ववह्नयः स्त्रीर्भुक्त्वा यथाक्रमं तासां शौचमधुरवचसर्वमेध्यत्वानि दत्तवन्तः।

—meaning, "Before marriage, Soma, Gandharva, and Agni, in due order, obtained the women; that is, they imparted purity, sweet speech, and auspiciousness to them." Clearly here bhukta does not imply intercourse, but sanctification.

The root/dhātu of भोग in upabhoga is भुज्, which also means to possess, obtain, or partake. Hence, upabhoga should be interpreted as "possessing" or "receiving." This is exactly how Sāyaṇācārya explains the same Rigvedic verse (10.85.40):

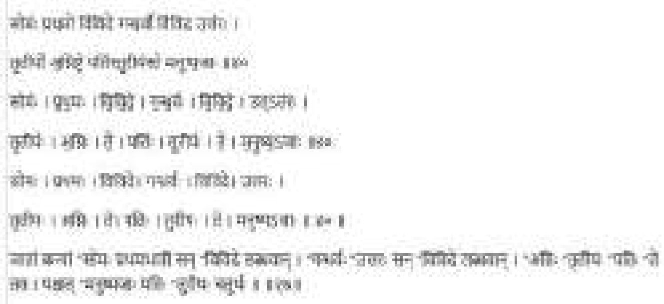
जातां कन्यां "सोमः प्रथमभावी सन् "विविदे लब्धवान् । "गन्धर्वः "उत्तरः सन् "विविदे लब्धवान् । "अग्निः "तृतीयः "पतिः "ते तव । पश्चात् "मनुष्यजाः पतिः "तुरीयः चतुर्थः ॥

Here Sāyaṇa glosses viveda with लब्धवान् ("obtained/received"). Thus, it is not about sexual relations, but about succession of divine guardianship and blessings bestowed upon the bride before she is united with her human husband.

Sayanacharya commentary on Rig Veda 10.85.40

जातां कन्यां "सोमः प्रथमभावी सन् "विविदे लब्धवान् । "गन्धर्वः "उत्तरः सन् "विविदे लब्धवान् । "अग्निः "तृतीयः "पतिः "ते तव । पश्चात् "मनुष्यजाः पतिः "तुरीयः चतुर्थः ॥ ॥२७॥

"The maiden, when born, was first obtained by Soma. Afterwards, the Gandharva obtained her. Agni was her third husband. And after them, a man born of humans became her fourth husband."



Allegations-

This can be used to prove Polyandry in the Vedas

Refutation-

“Polyandry is explicitly prohibited in the Vedas, as affirmed in Sāyaṇa’s commentary on the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (3.12.12.1).”

तस्मादेकस्य बह्वघो जाया भवन्ति, नैकस्यै बहवः सह पतयो यद्व तत्सा

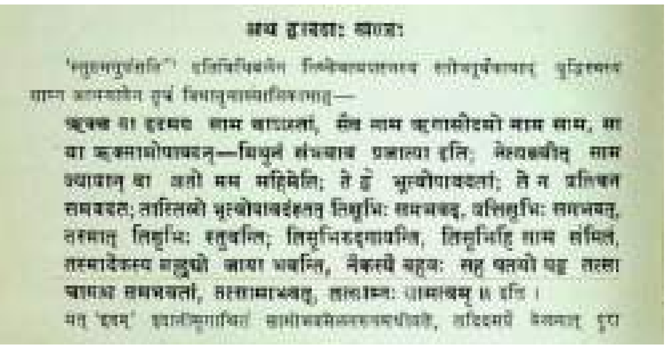
अतः लोक में भी एक [सामस्थानीय] पुरुष के बहुत सी ऋक्स्थानीय पत्नियाँ होती हैं। किन्तु एक स्त्री के कई पति नहीं होते ।

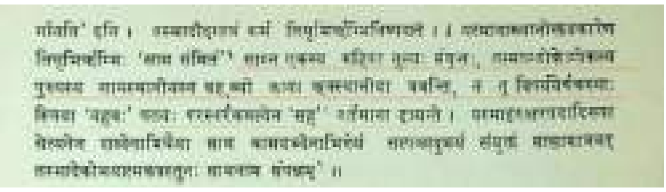
“Thus, even in the world, a man of high status has many wives belonging to different ṛk-stations (families/lineages), but a woman does not have many husbands.”

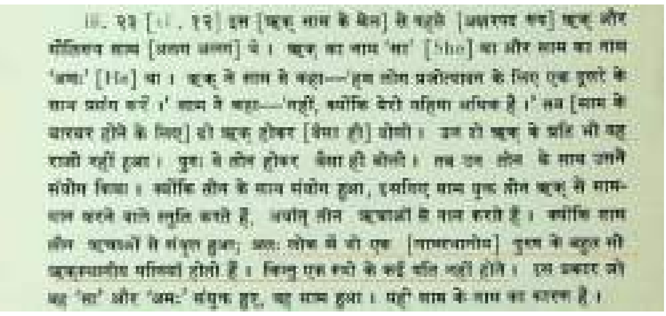
Sayana Bhasya-

साम्न एकस्य महिमा तुल्यः संवृत्तः, तस्माल्लोकेऽप्येकस्य पुरुषस्य सामस्थानीयस्य बहुव्यो जाया ऋक्स्थानीया भवन्ति, न तु विपर्ययेणैकस्याः स्त्रिया 'वहवः' पतयः परस्परैकमत्येन 'सह' वर्तमाना दृश्यन्ते ।

“The greatness of one Sāman is established as equal. Therefore, even in the world, one man of high standing, belonging to the Sāma-station, has many wives belonging to the Ṛk-station. But the reverse is not seen — that one woman should have many husbands living together in mutual harmony.”







"Some may object that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa permits polygamy for men. This is not so. The Kalpa Vedāṅga Āpastamba Dharmasūtra (2.5.11.12–13) clarifies that if a wife is both dharmic and capable of bearing children, a man must not take another wife. Only if she lacks either quality may a second be taken, and even then only before the Agnihotra is established. Thus, the Vedas uphold monogamy as the rule, with polygamy allowed only as a rare, conditional exception."

ADULTERY AND PROSTITUTION IN VEDA

Manu Smriti 5.56 There is no sin in eating meat, in (drinking) spirituous liquor, and in carnal intercourse, for that is the natural way of created beings, but abstention brings great rewards

Refutation-

Just because saying carnal intercourse is the natural way of created beings, how this is promoting adultery? In fact immediately it is written that "abstention brings great rewards", this means remaining without intercourse will bring great rewards, which the author didn't highlight.

Manu Smriti 5.56

न मांस खाने में, न शराब पीने में, न मैथुन करने में कोई दोष है, यह प्राणियों की प्रवृत्ति है, जबकि इनकी निवृत्ति महाफलदायिनी है।। ५६ ।।

"There is no sin in eating meat, in drinking wine, or in sexual union — these are natural tendencies of living beings. But their renunciation bestows the highest fruit." (56)

Acharya Kulluka Bhatta explained it as –

ब्राह्मणादीनां वर्णानां यथाधिकारमविहिताप्रतिषिद्धभक्षणादौ न कश्चिद्दोषः। यस्मात्प्राणिनां भक्षणपानमैथुनादौ प्रवृत्तिः स्वाभाविकोऽयं धर्मः। वर्जनं पुनर्महाफलम्।

"For Brāhmaṇas and the other varṇas, there is no fault in eating, drinking, or sexual intercourse, provided these acts are neither prescribed (as a duty) nor prohibited (by injunction). For among living beings, indulgence in food, drink, and sexual union is a natural tendency, a part of their inherent nature. Yet, renunciation of these brings the highest merit. This statement, declaring the great fruit of renunciation of wine and sexual intercourse (when not enjoined or forbidden), is in fact a reiteration of the earlier declaration about the great fruit of abstaining from meat." (56)

Condemnation of relations with another’s wife: “There is no other act in this world that shortens a man’s lifespan as much as associating with another man’s wife.
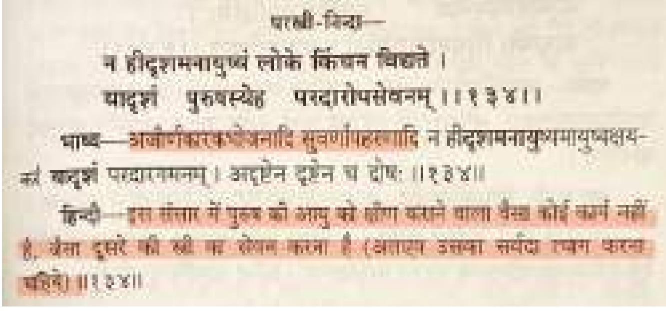
Therefore, it must always be completely avoided.”
(Verse 134)



परस्त्री-निन्दा—

यादृशं पुरुषस्येह परदारोपसेवनम् ।।१३४।।

हिन्दी—इस संसार में पुरुष की आयु को क्षीण करने वाला वैसा कोई कार्य नहीं है, जैसा दूसरे की स्त्री का सेवन करना है (अतएव उसका सर्वदा त्याग करना चाहिये) ।।१३४।।

Manu Smriti. Verse 8.371-2 Ed. Dr. Rakesh Shastri Vidhyanidhi Prakashan. Delhi. 2005. P. 538

जो स्त्री अपनी जाति, सौन्दर्यादि गुण के अहङ्कारवश पति का परित्याग करके व्यभिचार करे, तो राजा जीतेजी उसे सार्वजनिक स्थान पर बहुत से लोगों के सामने कुत्तों से नुचवा डाले ।। ३७१ ।।

इसीप्रकार जो व्यक्ति अपनी स्त्री को छोड़कर परस्त्री (वेश्यादि) गमन करे, तो उस पापी को अग्नि से तप्त लोहे के पलङ्ग पर लिटाकर सबके समक्ष जला डाले।
साथ ही आसपास खड़े हुए लोग उस पर जलती हुई लकड़ियां फेंकें, जिससे वह पापी पूर्णरूप से भस्म हो जाए ।। ३७२ ।।

Verse 371 (Summary): A woman who, out of pride in her caste or beauty, abandons her husband and commits adultery is to be punished by the king. The punishment prescribed is brutal: she should be torn apart by dogs in a public place before many witnesses.

Verse 372 (Summary): Similarly, a man who abandons his wife and engages in sexual relations with another woman (such as a prostitute) is to be laid on a bed of red-hot iron and burned alive in front of others. Onlookers are instructed to throw burning wood upon him until he is completely reduced to ashes.

Manu Smriti 8.352

दूसरे की स्त्री से व्यभिचार करने में प्रवृत्त लोगों को, राजा (नासिका, औष्ठकर्तनादि) अत्यधिक पीड़ा पहुँचाने वाले दण्डों से दण्डित करके देश से बाहर निकाल देवे ।। ३५२ ।

“Those who are inclined towards adultery with another man’s wife should be punished by the king with penalties causing severe suffering (such as cutting off the nose or lips, etc.), and then expelled from the kingdom.” (352)

“In the context of the marriage sacrament, the word dāra (wife) is used. When a man engages in another’s wife with desire — through intercourse, embrace, or other acts that stir pleasure and affection — beginning with touch and ending in sexual union, even sending a messenger or inciting the woman — this is considered adultery. Such a man should be marked with distressing instruments like sharp weapons, spears, etc., and then punished with mutilation of the nose, etc., and banishment. As this is not a case of a general punishment, but a specific one, harsher penalties may apply if the act is repeated. In the case where another punishment (like exile) cannot be implemented, fines and exile together may be enforced, and this will be explained later.”

(2) Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa:

दण्डैः शिश्नच्छेदादिभिः ॥ ३५२
“Punishments include mutilation such as cutting off the penis, etc.”

(3) Kullūka:

“Now explaining the act of taking another’s wife – those men who engage in sexual intercourse with other men’s wives should be punished by the king with afflicting penalties such as cutting off the nose and lips, and expelled from the kingdom.”

(4) Rāghavānanda:

“For those indulging in another’s wife within their own caste, the penalty is given here in the thirty-sixth verse beginning with ‘paradāra’. The word nṛ (man) implies that this law does not apply to relations with divine beings or yakṣas. Using distressing punishments like cutting off the nose and lips, the king should punish them accordingly. A Brāhmaṇa, however, should only be exiled.”

(5) Nandana:

“With punishments such as cutting off the penis and testicles, etc.”

(6) Rāmacandra:

“The king should kill those men who engage in contact with another’s wife. Also, punishments include cutting off the penis, etc.”

Allegations-

Rig Veda mentions story of Apala the daughter of Atri who suffered from skin-disease. She was married but her husband had left her. Indra was attracted to her, she chewed Soma plant which was then drunk by Indra from her mouth. To cure her, Indra dragged her through the wide hole of his chariot, the narrower hole of the cart, and the small hole of the yoke, and she cast off three skins. The first skin became a hedgehog, the second an alligator, and the third a chameleon.

Rig Veda 8.80.1-7 “A young woman going to the water found Soma in the path; as she carried it home she said, I will press thee for Indra, I will press thee for Sakra. Thou who goest from house to house a hero bright in thy splendour, drink this Soma pressed by my teeth, together with fried grains of barley, the karambha, cakes, and hymns… May (Indra) repeatedly make us powerful, may he do abundantly for us, may he repeatedly make us very rich; often hated by our husband and forced to leave him, may we be united to Indra. These three places, do thou cause them all to grow, my father’s (bald) head, his (barren) field, and my body. This field which is our (father’s), and this my body, and the head of my father, do thou make all these bear a crop. Thrice, Satakratu, didst thou purify Apala, in the hole of the chariot, in the hole of the cart, and in the hole of the yoke, and thou didst make her with a skin resplendent like the sun."

1. O Śatakratu (Indra, performer of a hundred sacrifices)! Other than you, we have accepted none as the giver of delight. Therefore, grant us joy.

2. O unharmed Indra! Formerly you protected us for the sake of obtaining food. Now, bestow happiness upon us in every way.

3. O Indra! You are the inspirer of benefactors and the protector of those who perform sacrifices. Therefore, grant us abundant prosperity.

4. O wielder of the thunderbolt! Protect our lagging chariot and bring it to the forefront.

5. O destroyer of enemies, Indra! Why do you sit silently? Place our chariot at the very front, for the food that gives strength rests with you.

6. O Indra! For you all tasks are easy. Protect our food-filled chariot and make us victorious in battle.

7. O fulfiller of desires, Indra! May you prosper. You are the accomplisher of sacrificial works. Our beneficial hymns move toward the virtuous deeds performed for you.

8. May the hostile enemy not come near us. And may Indra not distribute the great wealth of the vast battlefield among those who revile him.

9. O Indra! We seek your sacrificially-related fourth name, which you yourself have established. By this very sacrifice you bestow prosperity upon all.

10. O goddesses and gods! With hymns of praise, we offer soma to you, the sage Ekadyu, to satisfy you and to increase your greatness. Grant us noble wealth. May Indra, the giver of wealth through wisdom, arrive at dawn.

O Indra, may you forever, always, protect and bless us with happiness.

O Indra, you are Radhra-chodana (one who incites wealth, abundance, prosperity).
You are the protector of the sacrificer.
Therefore, may you be very strong and capable for us.
Grant us abundant wealth; or, make us abundant (in fortune and power).

O Indra, protect our chariot.
What kind of chariot? Even if it is left behind by others,

O Indra, wielder of the thunderbolt, make my chariot move in the forefront.

O Indra, why do you remain silent now?
Then what should you do?
Make our chariot the first among all.

Make us victorious in battle, grant us food and offerings in abundance.
What for others is difficult, for you is easy — nothing is impossible for you.
Therefore, grant us certain victory in battle.

O Indra, be firm in battle!
You are like a strong fortress, unshakable.
Or — in our sacrifice, be firm; do not abandon us in favor of others' sacrifices.
You are the fulfiller of desires.

And what more?
O Indra, to you, the blessed, auspicious hymn, this prayer accompanied by the proper ritual, reaches as an offering.

Let no reproach, slander, or blame come upon us from anywhere.
Make us free from sin.

And may the vast, expansive wealth, hidden and stored away, belonging to the enemy, become ours.
And may our enemies, bereft of wealth and deprived of support, be scattered.

Now coming on to Allegations on Brhad Devata VI.99-106 here is Brhad Devata VI.99-106 hindi translation by Chaukhamba Publications

एक समय अत्रि की पुत्री अपाला नामक कन्या हुई जो चर्मरोग से ग्रस्त थी। उसक पिता के निर्जन आश्रम में उसे देखकर इन्द्र उस पर नासक्त हो गये।

वह तप के द्वारा इन्द्र की समस्त इच्छाओं को आन गई। जलकुम्भ लेकर वह पानी लाने के लिये गई। जल के किनारे सोम को देखकर उसने वन में एक ऋचा से उनकी स्तुति की। 'कन्या था' (ऋग्वेद ८ ९१,१) में इस विषय का वर्णन है।

उसने सोम को अपने मुख में दबाया, और उसे दबाकर असौ य एषि' (श्रऋग्वेद ८ ९१, २) ऋचा से इन्द्र का आवाहन किया, और इन्द्र ने उसके गृह पर अपूप और सक्तु खाने के बाद उसके मुख से उसका (योम का) पान कर लिया। और उसने (अपाला ने) उनकी एक ऋचा से स्तुति की, किन्तु तीन ऋचाओं (ऋग्वेद ८ ९१, ५-६) द्वारा उन्हें सम्बोधित करते हुये इस प्रकार कहा 'हे शक्र' मुझे सुलोम और दोषरहित अङ्गी तथा श्रेष्ठ त्वचा बाला बनाओ।' उसके इल वचन को सुनकर पुरन्दर उससे प्रसन्न हुये।

Once, Atri's daughter named Apālā was born, who was afflicted with a skin disease. In her father's secluded hermitage, Indra, upon seeing her, became attached to her.

Through her austerity, she brought Indra under her influence. Carrying a water jar, she went to fetch water. By the riverside, she came across Soma, and in the forest she praised him with a hymn. The Rigveda (8.91.1), beginning with "kanyā thā", describes this incident.

She placed the Soma in her mouth and pressed it, and while pressing it, with the verse "asau ya eṣi" (Rigveda 8.91.2), she invoked Indra. Indra then came to her dwelling, where, after eating cakes and parched grain, he drank the Soma from her mouth. After this, Apālā praised him with one hymn, and then with three verses (Rigveda 8.91.5–6), she addressed him, saying:
"O Śakra, make me one with beautiful hair, flawless limbs, and the best, most radiant skin."

Hearing these words, Purandara (Indra) was pleased with her.

In the Bṛhaddevatā it is narrated that Indra was "attracted" towards Apālā. However, this should not be misunderstood as physical attraction. . According to Sāyaṇa's Bhāṣya on Rig Veda 8.91 , Apālā was afflicted with a skin disease and sought a cure. She knew that Soma was Indra's favorite drink, so she decided to prepare and offer it to him.

Since she had no proper pressing-stone, she pressed the Soma with her teeth. The sound of Soma being pressed thus reached Indra, and it was that sound which drew his attention — not Apālā's person. Because Soma was crushed in her mouth, the only way to offer it was to let Indra drink it from her mouth. This action was entirely ritualistic and symbolic, and in no way suggests adultery or impropriety.

Apālā then prayed to Indra with the hymns (Rigveda 8.91.5–6), asking:
"Make me one with beautiful hair, flawless limbs, and radiant skin."
Indra, pleased with her devotion, granted her request and cured her disease.

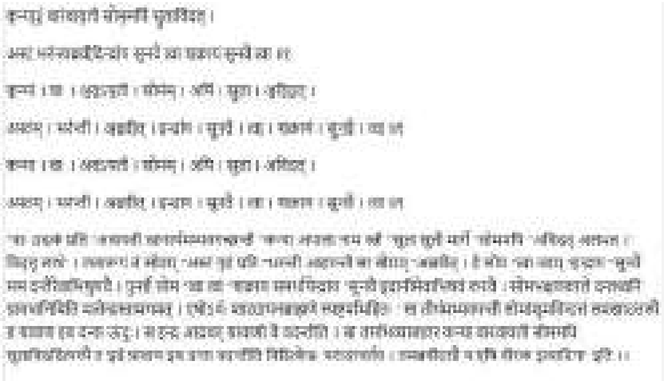
A maiden named Apālā, while going towards the water for bathing, on the way (in the stream, or channel), found and obtained Soma (in the form of a creeper). Carrying that Soma home, she said:

"O Soma! I shall press you with my own teeth and prepare you (for offering) to Indra. Again, O Soma! I shall now prepare you as an oblation for Śakra, the mighty Indra."

While she was chewing the Soma with her teeth, the sound of her teeth resembled the sound of pressing stones (the grinding stones used in Soma ritual). Indra, thinking it was the sound of the Soma stones, approached her.

This meaning is clearly explained in the Śātyāyana Brāhmaṇa:
"As she was going to the ford, she found the Soma shoot. She ate it. Her teeth made a sound like pressing-stones. Indra came swiftly, for the pressing-stones are said to be speaking. Then the maiden addressed him: 'I, the maiden Apālā, going to the ford, found Soma in the channel. My teeth resound like pressing-stones.' Knowing this, Indra turned towards her. She addressed him with the words: 'O hero, you who come…' and so on."



Allegations-

There are numerous verses which praises adultery,

Atharva Veda 5.5.3 Thou clingest close to every tree, as a fond damsel clasps her love.

Rig Veda 3.52.3 "Relish, O illustrious Lord, our delicious roasted corn and butter. Derive enjoyment from our praises, as a lover from his beloved."

Wilson's translation for this verse,

"Eat, Indra, our (offered) cakes and butter; derive enjoyment from our praises, as a lover from his mistress."

Rig Veda 1.134.3 "…O Vayu, come and wake up and energise life like a lover who wakes up and impassions a sleeping beauty…"

Rig Veda 3.33.10 Yea, we will listen to thy words, O singer. With wain and car from far away thou comest. Low, like a nursing mother, will I bend me, and yield me as a maiden to her lover.

Maharishi Yaska writes,

Nirukta 2.27 "We bend down for thy sake, as a nursing mother for her son, or as a maiden bends herself to embrace her lover." Tr. Lakshman Swarup

Verses from Rig Veda 6.75.4, 9.96.23 and 9.101.14 likens the meeting of lovers to Hindu gods, But what's more interesting is that the Vedic heroes are considered Maiden's lovers. However Agni being maiden's lover is regarded by some as allegorical, but still this doesn't disapprove the existence of illicit relationship and it promotes adultery, Rig Veda 1.66.4 Yama, indeed, is what is born, Yama, what shall be born; he [Agni] is the maidens' lover, the matrons' lord.

वायुदेव गमन करने के लिए, भारवहन में सक्षम लाल तथा अरुण रंग के दो बलिष्ठ अश्वों को अपने रथ के धुरे में जोतते हैं। हे वायुदेव ! जैसे प्रेमी पुरुष सोई हुई स्त्री को उठाते हैं, वैसे ही आप मनुष्यों को जगायें, द्यावा-पृथिवी को निश्चित रूप से प्रकाशमान करें तथा ऐश्वर्य के लिए देवी उषा को आलोकित करें ॥३ ॥

“Vāyu, for the purpose of movement, yokes to his chariot two strong horses—red and ruddy in color—capable of bearing weight. O Vāyu! Just as a loving man awakens his sleeping wife, so do you awaken human beings, illumine Heaven and Earth, and brighten the goddess Uṣas for the sake of prosperity.” (3)

हे स्तोता ! हम (दोनों नदियाँ) आपकी स्तुतियाँ सुनती हैं (आप दूरस्थ देश से रथ और शकट के साथ आए हैं); इसलिए जैसे माता पुत्र को स्तन-पान कराने के लिए अवनत होती है अथवा धर्म पत्नी अपने पति के प्रति नम्र होती है, वैसे ही हम आपके लिए अवनत होती हैं (अपने प्रवाह को कम करके आपको जाने का मार्ग प्रदान करती हैं) ॥१० ॥

“O chanter of hymns! We (the two rivers) listen to your praises (you have come from a distant land with chariot and cart); therefore, just as a mother bends down to give her child suck, or as a righteous wife humbly bows before her husband, so do we bend low for you—diminishing our flow to grant you passage.” (10)

ये दोनों (कोटियाँ) समान मन वाली स्त्रियों की तरह (एक ही प्रयोजन के लिए) आचरण करती हैं। माता की भाँति पुत्र (बाण) को गोद में लेकर एक साथ रहने वाली ये, शत्रुओं का वेधन करतीं तथा अमित्रों को बिखेर देती हैं ॥४ ॥

“These two (armies/hosts) act with one mind, like women united in purpose. Like a mother holding her son (the arrow) in her lap, dwelling together, they pierce the enemies and scatter the foes.” (4)

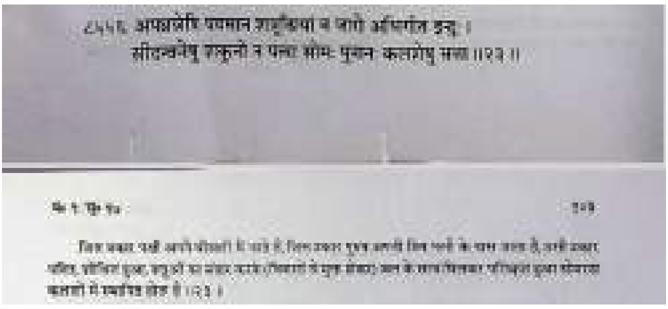
जिस प्रकार पक्षी अपने घोंसलों में जाते हैं, जिस प्रकार पुरुष अपनी प्रिय पत्नी के पास जाता है, उसी प्रकार पवित्र, शोधित हुआ, शत्रुओं का संहार करके (विकारों से मुक्त होकर) जल के साथ मिलकर परिष्कृत हुआ सोमरस कलशों में स्थापित होता है ॥ २३

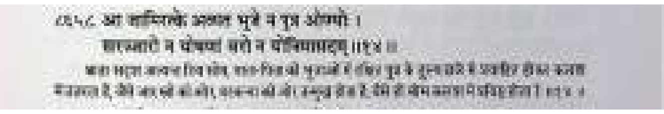
“Just as birds return to their nests, just as a man goes to his beloved wife, so too the purified Soma, cleansed and victorious over enemies (freed from impurities), unites with the waters and is placed within the vessels.” (23)



This is Rig Veda 9.101.14 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya – It has nothing to do with Adultery .

भ्राता सदृश अत्यन्त प्रिय सोम, माता-पिता की भुजाओं में रक्षित पुत्र के तुल्य छत्रे से प्रवाहित होकर कलश में उतरता है, जैसे जार स्त्री की ओर, वरकन्या की ओर उन्मुख होता है; वैसे ही सोम कलश में प्रविष्ट होता है

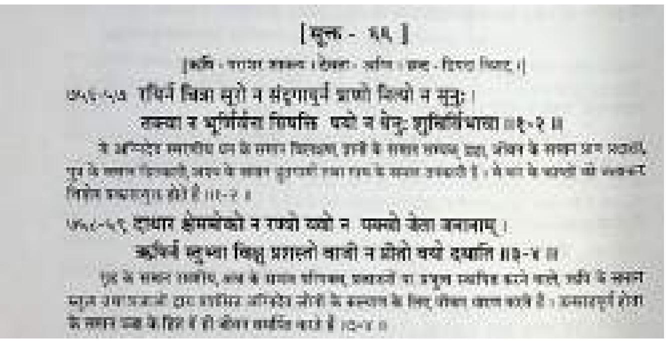
“Soma, most beloved like a brother, flows under the shelter (pressing-filter) into the vessel, like a son protected in the arms of his mother and father. Just as a lover turns toward a woman, or a bridegroom toward his bride, so too does Soma enter into the vessel.”



This is Rig Veda 1.66.4 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya – It has nothing to do with Adultery .

गृह के समान रमणीय, अन्न के समान परिपक्व, प्रजाजनों पर प्रभुत्व स्थापित करने वाले, ऋषि के समान स्तुत्य तथा प्रजाओं द्वारा प्रशंसित अग्निदेव लोगों के कल्याण के लिए जीवन धारण करते हैं। उत्साहपूर्ण होता के समान प्रजा के हित में ही जीवन समर्पित करते हैं ॥३-४ ॥

"Like a house, delightful; like food, nourishing and ripe; establishing sovereignty over the people; praiseworthy like a seer and lauded by the subjects—Agni takes on life for the welfare of humankind. Like an eager worker, he dedicates his very life solely for the good of the people." (3–4)



Coming to Allegations on Nirukta 2.27

"Nirukta 2.27 uses a simile—just as poets say 'the sky weeps' for rain, it compares bowing in reverence to a mother bending to her child or a maiden to her beloved. It is imagery of tenderness, not license for lust. In fact, Nirukta 6.27 strictly forbids adultery and lustful conduct, which shows that taking this verse erotically is a complete distortion of its intent."

Allegations-

These verses clearly shows that adultery wasn't deemed morally wrong, this is why there are numerous verses praising adultery but no where prohibits it.

Refutation-

"I have already refuted his baseless allegations on various mantras from the Ṛgveda and Atharvaveda, where he attempted—but failed miserably—to misinterpret them as supporting adultery. In fact, the Vedic corpus itself explicitly prohibits adultery, with clear injunctions found in the Atharvaveda, Ṛgveda, and further reinforced by Yāska's Nirukta."

Rig Veda 10/5/6 says that anyone who commits any of the seven Moral Restraints (Sapta Maryada)

becomes a Big Sinner

मेधावियों ने सात मर्यादाओं को छोड दिया है. इन कार्यों में से एक को करने वाला भी पाप को प्राप्त करता है. मनुष्यों को पाप से रोकने वाले अग्नि समीपवर्ती मानवलोक में, सूर्यकिरणों के विचरने के स्थान में एवं जलों में रहते हैं

The wise have abandoned the seven moral restraints. Even one who commits any one of these actions incurs sin. Those who restrain humans from sin dwell near the sacred fire, in the realm of humans close to it, in the regions where the sun's rays roam, and in the waters.

सप्त मर्यादाः कवयस्ततक्षुस्तासामेकामिदभ्यंहुरो गात्.

"Sāyaṇācārya, in his commentary on Ṛgveda 10.5.6, has clearly explained that the 'seven maryādās' (moral restraints) are not injunctions meant to be practiced or indulged in, but rather prohibitions—boundaries never to be crossed. These maryādās represent sinful acts that the seers strongly condemned, and Sāyaṇa explicitly interprets them as practices that are to be rejected and renounced, not observed."

कवयः मेधाविन ऋषयः "सप्त "मर्यादाः । कामजेभ्यः क्रोधजेभ्यश्चोद्धृताः पानमक्षाः स्त्रियो मृगया दण्डः पारुष्यमन्यदूषणमिति सप्त मर्यादाः । यद्वा । स्तेयं गुरुतल्पारोहणं ब्रह्महत्यां सुरापानं दुरुकृतकर्मणः पुनःपुनः सेवां पातकेऽनृतोद्यम्' (निरु. ६. २७) इति निरुक्ते निर्दिष्टाः सप्त मर्यादाः । अवस्थिताः "ततक्षुः । तक्षतिः करोतिकर्मा । सुष्ठु लङ्घनीयाश्चक्रुः । त्यक्तवन्त इत्यर्थः । "तासां मर्यादानाम् "एकामित् एकामेव अंहुरः पापवान् पुरुषः "अभि "गात् अभिगच्छति । यस्त्वेवं करोति स पापवान् भवतीत्यर्थः । किंच "आयोः तस्य मनुष्यस्य "स्कम्भः स्कम्भयिता निरोधकोऽग्निः "उपमस्य समीपभूतस्यायोः "नीळे स्थाने "पथाम् आदित्यरूपस्य स्वस्य रश्मीनां "विसर्गे विसर्जनस्थानेऽन्तरिक्षमध्ये वर्तमानेषु "धरुणेषु उदकेषु "तस्थौ विद्युदात्मना तिष्ठति । अनेन लोकत्रयवर्तित्वमिति ।।

"The wise seers, the intelligent Ṛṣis, have declared seven restraints (moral boundaries): desires born of lust, wrath born of anger, indulgence in intoxicating drink, gambling, women (i.e., illicit relations), hunting, punishment (i.e., violence/oppression), harsh speech, and other forms of abuse—these are called the seven restraints (मर्यादाः).

Or alternatively, (the seven restraints are explained as): theft, adultery with the teacher's wife (गुरुतल्पारोहण), killing of a Brāhmaṇa, drinking liquor, repeatedly engaging in wicked deeds, and false undertakings—these are the sins mentioned in the Nirukta (6.27).

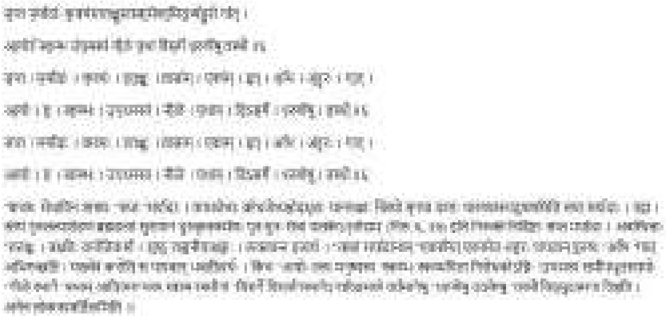
These restraints (मर्यादाः) have been firmly established. They (the wise) cut them off, meaning: they (the virtuous) gave them up, abandoned them. Of these restraints, if even one alone is transgressed by a man, he becomes sinful. Whoever commits such an act is indeed sinful.

Moreover, the pillar (स्कम्भः), the upholder of the life of that man, is Agni, who restrains (as Nirodhaka). In the blue place of the sky, near the abode of the paths, in the region of the sun, at the point of release of its rays, in the midst of the atmosphere, in the supporting waters—there Agni abides in the form of lightning. By this (it is shown) that Agni pervades the three worlds."



In Nirukta 6.27 Rishi Yaska in his explanation on Rig Veda 10/5/6 mentions the seven maryadas which are never to be practiced and it includes व्यभिचार meaning Adultery

'सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, जो जन में से एक को भी माप्तहोता है, वह पापी होता है' (१००५१६) सात मर्यादाएं ऋषिों ने बनाई हैं, उनमें से एक को भी प्राप्त होता हुआ पापी होता है। (वह सात यह हैं-) चोरी, व्यभिचार, ब्रह्म इत्या, गर्भ हत्या, सुरापान, दुष्कर्म का बार२ सेवन, पातक के विषय में झूठ बोलना (किसी पर झूठा पातक लगाना) । (११२) बत यह निपात है खेद और अनुकम्पा अर्थ में ॥२७॥

"Seven restrictions (or codes of conduct) have been established by the sages. Whoever among people violates even one of them is considered sinful. These seven are: theft, adultery, disrespect toward Brahman, abortion, consumption of alcohol, repeated indulgence in sinful acts, and lying about sins (i.e., falsely accusing someone of a sin). This is explained in the sense of causing sorrow and requiring compassion."

लो। मारा जाने से पहले, कहां हो हे पुकार के सुनने वालो'। जाल में पड़े हुए मत्स्यों का यह आर्त (पढ़ने वचन) बतलाते हैं। मत्स्याः = जल में चलते हैं। अथवा एक दूसरे को भक्षण के लिये मस्त होते हैं। जाल = जल में चलने वाला होता है, अथवा जल में होने वाला, या जल में खेलने वाला। (११.१–) अंहुरः = पापवाला; अंहूरण भी इसी का होता है 'पापवाले (अन्य हुए) से बढ़ (रक्षा) करता हुआ' (१।१०५।१७) यह भी निगम होता है। 'सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, जो उन में से एक को भी प्राप्त होता है, वह पापी होता है' (१०।५।६) सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, उनमें से एक को भी प्राप्त होता हुआ पापी होता है। (वह सात यह हैं–) चोरी, व्यभिचार, ब्रह्म हत्या, गर्भ हत्या, सुरापान, दुष्कर्म का बारम्बार सेवन, पातक के विषय में झूठ बोलना (किसी पर झूठा पातक लगाना)। (११.१२–) बत यह निपात है खेद और अनुकम्पा अर्थ में ॥२७॥

The wise made seven boundaries, a man going beyond even one of them becomes distressed. They are theft, adultery, killing of a learned man, abortion, drinking, habitual addiction to wickedness, and false accusation of heinous crime.[1]

There is a prohibition of Adultery in other Authentic Sanatan Scriptures as well . For Detailed information and references access this section

Mahābhārata, Ādi Parva, Chapter 113

Anyone who has sex with a man or woman other than own husband or wife, suffers the pāpa of aborting the embryo.

हे महाभागे ! हमने सुना है, कि तबसे मनुष्य समाजमें यह नियम निश्चित हो गया है; यह दूसरे प्राणियों पर नहीं लागू होता है ॥ १६ ॥

श्वेतकेतुने यह नियम बनाया, कि आजसे जो नारी पतिको तजकर व्यभिचार करेगी, उसको दु:खदायी भ्रूणहत्याका पाप लगेगा ।। १७

तथा इस भूमण्डलमें जो पुरुष कुमारी ब्रह्मचारिणी तथा पतिव्रता प्यारी स्त्रीको तजकर परायी नारीसे मिलेगा उसके भी वैसा ही पाप लगेगा ।। १८ ।।

“O noble one! We have heard that from that time onward, this rule was firmly established in human society; it does not apply to other living beings.”

Śvetaketu established this rule:
From today, any woman who abandons her husband and commits adultery will incur the grievous sin equivalent to the destruction of a fetus (embryo).”

And likewise, in this world, any man who, forsaking a maiden observing brahmacharya (celibacy) or a faithful, devoted wife, engages with another’s wife, will incur the same sin.”

Allegations-

Prostitution was also prevalent in the Vedic period. It is still prevalent in some temples especially in south India where girls are forced to become Devdasi. Devdasi actually means slave or servant of god but they are sexually tortured by the Brahmins, these licentious priests sanction Sacred Prostitution, which is also known as Temple prostitution. However looking in the Vedas one can find the origins of prostitution.

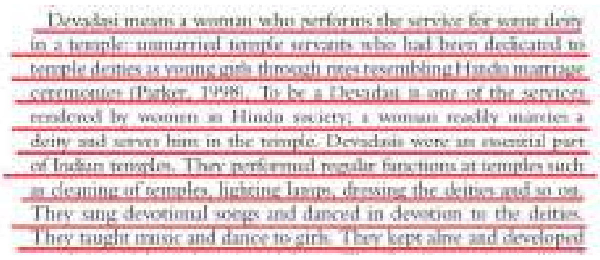
Meaning of Devadaasi as per Shastras

शब्दकल्पद्रुम states, 'देवं इन्द्रियं दासनोति हन्तीति' or देवपरिचारिका च as the definition of devadasi meaning the servants of the temple deities

Likewise, Vachaspatyam defines the term as, 'स्त्री देवमिन्द्रियं दासनोति दाससथ' or देवानां परिचारिकायाम् meaning the servants of the temple deities

The sanskrit term "Devdasi" or Tamil "Devar Adiyal" simply translates to a woman engaged in Service of God. Woman were treated with a lot of respect. Hence In Hindu culture, a Devdasi was a pious position for a woman who engaged in different activities of a temple & were considered married to the temple deity. Their work included, cleaning temples, taking care of the deity & sing devotional songs only.



Devadasi means a woman who performs the service for some deity in a temple: unmarried temple servants who had been dedicated to temple deities as young girls through rites resembling Hindu marriage ceremonies (Parker, 1998). To be a Devadasi is one of the services rendered by women in Hindu society; a woman readily marries a deity and serves him in the temple. Devadasis were an essential part of Indian temples. They performed regular functions at temples such as cleaning of temples, lighting lamps, dressing the deities and so on. They sang devotional songs and danced in devotion to the deities. They taught music and dance to girls. They kept alive and developed

Thus, it's clear that they weren't sex slaves but servants of the deities. If they were sex slaves of brahmin then that should've been the definition of devadasi.

During Hindu period maintaining discipline was mandatory for them. Far from being forced into prostitution, it was considered a strict offence for any man to look at her lecherously coz she was considered the wife of God himself.

> The status of the Devadasi accorded with whom she was given to in marriage; that is, the deity, the God of the temple, and thus she was considered 'Sadasuhagan'– at all times married, hence always blessed. Being married to a deity, her adherence to maintaining strict discipline was mandatory, she was the personal possession of the temple and her elevated position made it unacceptable for her to mingle with the rest of the people and, more precisely, to keep in touch with men.
> A Devadasi was meant to be revered; while she danced in worship, speaking to her or looking at her has been mentioned as a ritual offence in the sectarian texts that lay out the etiquette on blame in other varieties of indiscretion such as spitting in the temple, turning one's

There are inscriptions in the Raja Rajeswhara Temple, Tanjore Temple itself where it says there were 400 Devdasis in the temple whose position was so important only next to the priests of the temple themselves.

> Inscriptions dating back to 1004 AD on the Raja Rajeshwar temple at Tanjore in South India maintain that there were 400 Devadasis in the temples, who were second in importance only to the temple priests who performed the religious rituals. Parallel to this, there is a record of the Someshwar shrine at Gujarat, which maintained 500 Devadasis. They used to live in the streets surrounding the temples and received maintenance in return for service in the temple (Tarachand, 1992).

Infact, Devdasis were quite affluent under the patronage of Hindu kings like cholas or pallavas. They were betowed with a lot of wealth and land. There was no sign of ostracism. Now these is what scholarly research implies, not claiming something without any evidence feom any authentic source.

> The affluent status of Devadasis has been found in Pallava and Chola dynasties in the southern parts of India between the 6th and 13th centuries AD. This phase shows that they were accorded with great respect and dignity in society, being the custodians of culture and the destruction of the temples, devadasis lost not only their patronage but also their status in society, leading to the beginnings of their exploitation. The result of the loss of patronage forced the devadasis, who previously danced at religious temple events, to dance at wedding feasts or other private entertainments. The system was further limited under British rule, which unlike the Islamic Empire reached the entirety of the subcontinent.

(1018–1054 A.D.) provision was made for offerings to the images of Rājendra and Paravai Naṅkaiyār in the Tiruvarur temple.[121)]

2. Temple dancers

The inscription makes mention of donations that were made by dancing girls as well as to them. Temple dancers usually donated gold, lamps, or cows and sheep, and even land.[122)] The revenue from the latter would provide for the supply of oil for perpetual lamps. Donation to temple dancers consisted in personal grants of lands or in the gift of land for the maintenance of a group of temple artists.[123)] From epigraphical material one may assume that the temple dancers were highly respected members of society who were well provided for by the temple and by the community of devotees.

Dancing women

It is clear from the inscriptions that both the court and the temple supported a large number of female dancers and singers; however, it seems that the two centres did not employ each other's artists. We have sufficient evidence to assume that both types of artists, court dancers as well as temple dancers, were held in great esteem and were generally very rich.[17)] Examples of their valuable donations can be found in epigraphical records.

78

It seems that devadasis were held in high esteem in all layers of cultural expression. Their repertoire absorbed a great number of musical and dance compositions that were in vogue during the Vijayanagara period; this fact is attested by the multivalence and divergent character of those ritual compositions that have come to us.

92

European sources

The developments in the artistic field during the Tanjore period were so striking that Indian sources refer to devadasis and art as identical. The other tasks that formed part and parcel of the devadasi tradition were practically entirely obliterated by information about the artistic accomplishments of the devadasis. An indirect proof of the continuation of the ritual nityasumangali, the ever-auspicious female. This auspiciousness is implored by society in the case of wedding ceremonies[231], in processions of the gods[232], and while carrying the sacred water to the temple.[233] Even after retirement from active temple-service the devadasis of Vaishnava temples were called Kali-yuga-Lakshmi (goddess of prosperity in the worst world-period of Kali)[234] and Kali-yuga-Parvati in Saiva temples.[235] The

Secular patrons

Apart from the patronage which the devadasis received from the temple and the king, their services were valued by society at large. Although the devadasis did not visit the houses of pañcamas (outcastes, the so-called 'fifth caste'), they officiated in the houses of Brahmins and of high-caste non-Brahmins (like Mudaliārs). Women of devadasi families took care of the pūjā-room (home-altar or shrine) and performed kumbhārati or ālatti/ ālam for the family-members. This function was called mānikkam.[306] Another instance of their bygone prestige was the code of politeness that prescribed that any dignified person of high social status should travel only with a retinue of devadasis. Important visitors should be received in the same manner

130

The most important function of the devadasis in the houses of private patrons was to be present at their social-cum-ritual functions. These were mostly of the character of rites of passage (samskāras) like the hair-parting ceremony performed for pregnant females, the name-giving and ear-piercing ceremonies for children, and most importantly the wedding-ceremonies. A large bulk in the repertoire of the devadasis concerns songs for such occasions. The mangalas serve mostly the more simple rites of passage, whereas a rather rich variety of songs was sung during the wedding festivities. The major part of these songs are called nalangu, featuring the words nalangkiṭa vārum, 'come to the anointment ceremony of the bride (before marriage)'

Conclusions Chapter I

As far as our historical data go we can distinguish at all times and at all levels of culture and of society a 'ritual' person who deals effectively with the divine which is considered dangerously ambivalent. This female ritualist whom we would like to call nityasumaṅgalī renders her special power effective in three ways: 1. through her female sexuality that is identified with that of the goddess;

2. through a number of implements of ritual value like the pot, the lamp, coloured water, certain flowers, fruits and unguents;

3. through her art.

At different times and in different socio-cultural foci of South Indian culture a different emphasis has been laid on either of the three. In all cases, however, she deals with the ambivalent divine, warding off its evil forces and supporting its benign workings. This, in itself, is an extremely dangerous task, and only specially qualified persons can be up to it. Her special qualification is her auspiciousness which earns her the epithet nityasumaṅgalī.

Nityasumangali: Devadasi Tradition in South India by Saskia Kersenboom

So the Devadasis were exploited by making them affluent to such an extent that they could donate gold, domestic animals, and even land to the temples.
Further, they were exploited through land grants and respect in the society. Can't imagine the horrors encountered by these innocent women.

Devadutta Pattanik wrote that it was due to Satanic Islamic Invasions that the Sacred Devadaasi system was transformed into Prostitution

> Records show that there was another class of mahāris known as sampradā niyoga whose duty was to dance during the ceremonial procession (patuar) of the deities. Religious texts mention such dances during Ratha Jatra, Chandan Jatra, Uthapana Utsaba, Dola Jatra (Holi), Jhoolan Jatra, etc. As the mahāris of this class were also to dance at in patuars (processions), they came to be known as patuari (one who accompanies a procession). Mahāris of this class are completely extinct.

> From the beginning of the 17th century till the conquest of the Marathas in the middle of the 18th century the political life of Orissa remained in turmoil. This also affected the religious, social and cultural life of the people. During this period of 150 years the Muslim as well as Hindu subedars of the Mughal court raided the Puri temple successively and looted its property. The idols were often removed and concealed for fear of defilement. The temple services had to be suspended on such occasions. Due to successive Muslim invasions and the weakening of political authority a degree of moral degeneration must have overtaken the mahāris. It is from this period that the mahāris, who were originally intended for temples alone, came to be employed in royal courts as well. From now on, the mahāris ceased to be respected as dāsis of the Lord and came to be associated with concubinage.

> Around the middle of the 18th century the powerful Marathas came to power. Their occupation of Orissa marked a revolutionary change in the religious and cultural life of the people. The continuous attacks on the Jagannath temple came to an end. As staunch Hindus the Marathas invigorated the religious movement. The temple services were again regulated. The Marathas also built a number of temples and religious institutions and patronized art and literature. During their rule of more than 50 years till the British takeover in 1803, a number of poets and

The Mohamedan invasion of Bharat was the first gateway to subjugation of Devdasis- the same women who were respected in Hindu society. The proof is given By an Islamic scholar Al-Beruni. He describes how Devdasis lost patronage of Hindu kings & protection of Brahman men and Mohamedan rulers used them for their benefits.

> The Muslim invasion (between the 12th and 16th centuries) was the first gateway to their slaughter as the Hindu Empire went to subjugation and the Devadasis lost their royal patronage. By losing virginity earlier, they had to resort to prostitution to earn their living. The testimony of Al-Beruni (Sachau, 1910, p. 157), a traveller during the Muslim invasion, states that kings maintained this institution for the benefit of their revenues, as here the Brahmana or priest was detained to allow into their temples women who sang, danced and played. The kings, however, made them a source of attraction to their subjects so that they might meet the expenditure of their armies out of the revenues derived from them.

After the onslaught of Mohamedan culture, it was British who exploited Devdasis. The end of Royal patronage and capture of temple treasury reduced these woman into prostitution. The women who were given rights second to a priest were forced to become entertainers.

As we will shortly see, the esteemed status of the Devadasis began to wane under Islamic and British rule (Shingal, 2015). By 1818, the Devadasis themselves had been reduced to the level of prostitutes for sustaining their finances. Especially during British rule (1858–1947), there had been a sea change in the economic system of the society, which led the Devadasis to lose the privileges that they had traditionally enjoyed. British rule in India put an end to the local royalty and temple treasuries. Most of the temples at that time ran with royal funding from local kings. All these faced decline with the rise of British power and one of the groups to be financially and socially pursued and victimized were the Devadasis. Gone was the respect they enjoyed as members of a class next only to the priests. Devadasis remained entertainers but their mode of entertainment changed drastically, being performed by their bodies. They evolved into practising courtesans, skilled in the art of love-making. The system spread across the Belgaum, Gulbarga and Bellary districts in Karnataka and the Satara, Kolhapur, Solapur and Osmanabad districts of Maharashtra.

British Missionaries, who did not see free educated women in christian society couldn't believe women had so much rights in Hindu society and based on their victorian morality they started branding free women as Ⓦ hores. It was only Hindu culture that respected women.

Dubois' thinking was clearly influenced by his occidental approach. Western-educated Indians thought no differently. The Indian concept of shringara or eroticism was considered something to be ashamed of when compared to high-minded Victorian idealism. The concept of a free woman entitled to choose her partners and with absolute right to property and access to education was anathema to this band of people. Such a woman by the very nature of her life was considered immoral and branded as a whore.

Thus Christian preachers made dubious claims about Devdasis. Hence colonial sources are definitely not a mirror of what Hindu society actually was. Hindu society can only be judged with contemporary sources

It was a strange situation. On the one hand the community was the storehouse of arts. On the other it was the repository of all evil and every conceivable vice. Opinion was therefore sharply divided. On top of all this was the western mode of education and the relentless pressure from Christian preachers and proselytisers who condemned the entire system as vile. Having never experienced the existence of such a community in their own lands, these people had no hesitation in condemning all Devadasis as prostitutes and their art as sinful.

The Agama shastras have given Devadasis, the right to beat the hell out of pervert priests.

nṛttam in the prakāra of Mahāmāri. Dance should be performed in all utsavas. The tāli for the rudradāsi should be tied in her ninth year. Hereafter it is forbidden to tie the tāli. If desire for sexual enjoyment of the rudrakkaṇṇikai overcomes the deśiyan she may beat him. If the desire arises in the rudrakkaṇṇikai, she is advised to go to the kṣetrapālakan, and in the morning of the next day favour the gurukkal outside, because the Brahmin custom gives the first rights to the deśiyan. It is advisable to perform śāntikam (propitiatory rite to avert evil) with him; it is necessary to remove the tāli, untie it, and destroy it as it is done on the day when a husband has died. The rudradāsis may beat them. If they bear hatred towards them, it is necessary to sprinkle water."

Initiation and marriage ceremonies for the rājagaṇikā, grāmadāsī and rudradāsī: "The rājagaṇikā is within the dharma of the ādiśaivas. A samayadīkṣā is performed in the temple of Durgā. The vṛttakāraṇḍa bottu is strung, Satcittambara is invoked and worshipped, naivedya, etc. is performed, then the vṛttakāraṇḍa bottu is tied around her neck. If there is no temple of Durgā or Lakṣmī, then the bottu should be tied in the shrine of Hanumān, or in her own house, or in the sannidhi of Ambikā situated in the temple of Śiva in that town. The bottu of the grāmadāsī should be tied in the temple of [illegible]. The rudradāsī should have her bottu tied in the temple of Mahākālī. These persons should undergo the ceremony of tying the bottu at the age of nine years. It is not allowed to tie the bottu before or after that age."

No one denies that there wasn't any exploitation. But accusing शास्त्र for such horrors is baseless. Nowhere in the आगमशास्त्र is this mentioned that devadasis are to be employed as prostitutes of Brahmins. A Brahmin who abides by dharma has to engage in rites the whole day. If he will engage in sex every now and then, he'll die constantly purifying himself before these rituals. It doesn't make any sense saying that shastras are ordaining a suicide sort of enjoyment to brahmins. The reason why brahmins are the most revered ones is because of the harsh lifestyle they have to live. The shastras don't allow them rest for a single minute from the time they wake in the morning and perform Vaisvadeva at night.

Every devadasi has to take oaths while undergoing the diksha process. None of the oaths involve becoming a prostitute for brahmins or town. One can also refer to the royal inscription at Jagannath temple which states that devadasis can't be touched.

Listing some famous Devdasis who are world famous for their talent in Art. And definitely arent prostitutes by any means. This is the famous 7th generation Devdasi, Balasaraswati, a Bharatnatyam dancer famous all over the world & has been awarded with Padma Bibhushan which is the 3rd highest civilian award. Indian government respected her by making a postal stamp with her picture as shown below. From which angle she looks like a prostitute to you . Claiming her prostitute is absolutely baseless

Another famous Devdasi Veenai Dhanammal, is considered the torch bearer of Carnatic Music which goes by her name. Hindu society respect women to this level that they could progress to be this famous and have postal stamps commemorating them. Does she look like a prostitute to anyone sensitive ? People who never respected women wont understand how much respect these women enjoy in a free Hindu society.

Devdasi M.S Subbulakshmi, the nightingale of Carnatic music was awarded Bharat Ratna, the highest civilian award. She lived until 2004 which isnt much long ago. Indian Govt commemorated her with postal stamp.

In the modern prostitution system, many young women are kidnapped and forced into this exploitative trade, treated as mere commodities to be bought and sold like goods or animals. Some greedy parents even sell their own children into this vile practice. Such acts of activities have been strongly condemned in the scriptures.

Mahabharat says that selling and buying Human beings especially woman and one's own children is highly condemnable and strictly prohibited

Mahabharat 13.45.23 –किसी दूसरे मनुष्यको भी नहीं बेचना चाहिये; फिर अपनी संतानको बेचनेकी तो बात ही क्या? अधर्ममूलक धनसे किया हुआ कोई भी धर्म सफल नहीं होता ।। २३ ।।-

Verse 47:
Hunting, gambling, daydreaming, slandering others, excessive association with women, intoxication, attachment to dancing, singing and playing musical instruments, and roaming about here and there aimlessly—these are described as the tenfold group that arises from desire (kāma).

Verse 48:
Tale-bearing (backbiting), reckless daring, treachery, jealousy, finding faults in others' virtues, the desire to seize another's wealth, speaking harsh words, and behaving with cruelty—these eight are said to arise from anger (krodha)

Verse 49:
All learned men consider greed (lobha) to be the root cause of both these groups. One should therefore strive with utmost effort to conquer greed, because these two groups spring forth from it.

Verse 50:
Among the group born of desire, drinking liquor, gambling, association with women, and hunting—this group of four should be regarded, in order, as especially more harmful.

Verse 52:
A self-controlled king should consider, in this group of seven (vices), that the earlier ones (arising from desire) have relatively more disastrous effects.

Rig Veda 1.167.4 Far off the brilliant, never-weary Maruts cling to the Sadharani as a joint possession…

The Sanskrit word used here is Sadharani (after separating the words) referring to common woman, public woman or prostitute.

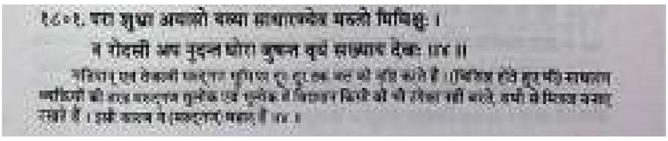
“Sadharani or Samanya (common), synonyms for prostitute, distinguish her as a woman possessed by not one man; this is the desideratum”-(Bhattacharji 1987, 33).

Refutation-

This is Rig Veda 1.167.4 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya – Nowhere Prostitution is mentioned here

गतिमान् एवं तेजस्वी मरुद्गण भूमि पर दूर-दूर तक जल की वृष्टि करते हैं। (विशिष्ट होते हुए भी) साधारण व्यक्तियों की तरह मरुद्गण द्युलोक एवं भूलोक में विद्यमान किसी की भी उपेक्षा नहीं करते, सभी से मित्रता बनाए रखते हैं। इसी कारण ये (मरुद्गण) महान् हैं ॥४ ॥

“Thus moving and radiant, the hosts of the Maruts pour down showers of water far and wide upon the earth. Though distinguished, yet like common men, they disregard none whether in heaven or on earth, maintaining friendship with all. For this reason, the Maruts are truly great.” (4)



Sayanacharya commentary on Rig Veda 1.167.4 – No Prostitution here either .

The Maruts, adorned with shining ornaments, are eager to advance. With lightning, which is mingling and blending, they pour down streams of water in abundance. Just as, in the world, when men unite with women they release their seed, so too do the Maruts, by their actions, cause a great outpouring. By doing so they become terrifying, bringing about excessive rainfall that inspires fear, yet they never drive away (or withhold) the heavens and the earth. The word ródasī here refers to Dyāvā-Pṛthivī (Heaven and Earth), and unlike in most places where it carries an initial high accent, here it is to be understood with a final accent.

Alternatively, ródasī is explained as ‘the consort of Rudra, who is by nature given to roaring.’ Some others say that ródasī is a name of the Maruts’ women. This interpretation is more suitable, since later on the usage is consistently found in this sense. On this view, ródasī is the wife of the Maruts (ródasyām).

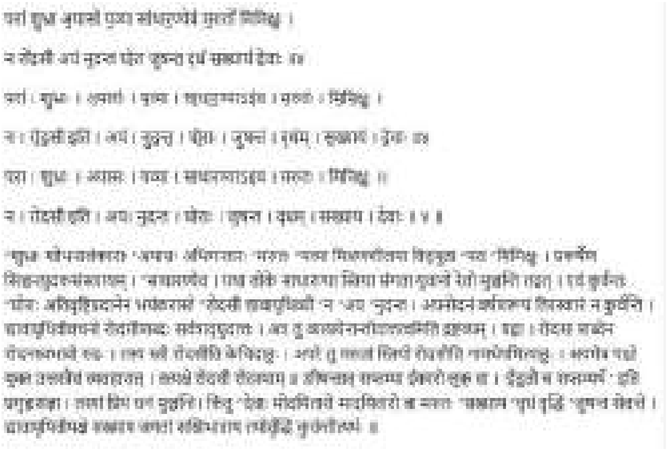
In that (ródasyām), they release precious wealth. Yet, the Maruts are indeed joyful ones, givers of delight. They enjoy growth and prosperity for the sake of friendship. If we take Dyāvā-Pṛthivī as the meaning of ródasī, then the sense is that they promote the flourishing of heaven and earth for the companionship of beings."



Allegations-

As per Vedas everyone is born with a destined profession including prostitution based on their past deeds, it is mentioned that

Yajur Veda 30.5 "For Brahman (Priesthood) he binds a Brahman to the stake… for Kama [Sex] a harlot…"

Some people try to explain this verse by misquoting it, they translate it as,

" May the Lord (of world as well as country) give due reward or punishment to various people – Brahmin for promotion of wisdom…"

Yajur Veda 30.9 For Rendezvous a lover; for Homestead a paramour…

Yajur Veda 30.20 For Pastime a harlot; for Laughter a jester; for Lust a woman with spotty skin…

It may not be a sin to become prostitute as Ishwar himself has assigned these professions to humans. There is no free will to choose the profession you desire, For Brahman Ishwar binds priesthood and for prostitutes he binds Kama (lust, desire, sexuality),

Refutation-

The mantras in the 30th Adhyāya of the Śukla Yajur Veda, which describe the Puruṣa-medha Yajña, dont assert that individuals are born into fixed professions—such as prostitution—due to past deeds. These verses are part of a ritual framework and must be understood in their proper sacrificial and symbolic context.

Acharya Uvat and Acharya Mahidhar said in the beginning of their bhasya on Yajur Veda 30th Chapter

Human Sacrifice is strictly Forbidden in Sanatan Dharma

Srimad Bhagvatam the most authoritative of all Puranas say that those who sacrifice Human beings they would be taken to hell and tortured and punished the same way they killed their innocent victims . So the practice of Human Sacrifice does not have a support of texts – Srimad Bhagvatam 5.26.31

Here actually the word used is 'vadhu' (वधू), which refers to a married woman or bride, not a slave. There is no word related to selling or buying female Slaves in this mantra.

In the commentary on this mantra in the Bṛhaddevatā, it is explained that kings would marry off their daughters to suitable men of the same gotra and varṇa, which is commonly known as 'kanyādāna' (ritual gift of a daughter in marriage). Hence, the word 'vadhu' appears in these mantras, which is always used for a married woman or bride, not a slave.

And as for the mention of giving chariots or other things, that is actually a traditional part of 'strī-dhana' (the wealth given to the bride by her family). For example, in the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, during the wedding of Sītā, King Janaka gave chariots, animals, male and female attendants to look after the bride. This was part of the marriage custom and not some form of slavery.

उसे रूप-सम्पन्न तथा देवपुत्रों के समान देखकर उन्होंने (राजा ने), वर्ण और गोत्र आदि का विरोध न होने पर उसे अपनी पुत्री प्रदान करने का विचार किया ।

तब उसे (कक्षीवत् को) उठाकर उन्होंने उससे उसका वर्ण और गोत्रादि पूछा। उस युवक (कत्तीवत्) ने यह कहते हुये उत्तर दियाः 'हे राजन्, में अङ्गिरम् के वंश का हूँ; हे नृप में उच्च्य-पुत्र ब्रह्मषि दीर्घतमस् का पुत्र हैं।' तब उन्होंने (स्वनय ने) उसे (कक्षीवत्त् को) आभूषणों से अलंकृत दस कम्यायें प्रदान की, और इन कन्याओं को ले जाने के लिये इसी संरया में रथ तथा चार-चार के दल में चलने वाले मुहद शरीर के अश्व,

Seeing that he (Kakṣīvat) was handsome and radiant like a son of the gods, the king, finding no objection in terms of caste or lineage, considered offering him his daughter in marriage.

Then, lifting him up, the king asked about his caste and lineage. The young man (Kakṣīvat) replied respectfully: "O King, I belong to the lineage of the sage Aṅgiras. I am the son of the high-born sage Dīrghatamas."

Thereupon, the king (Svanaya) gave him ten beautifully adorned maidens as companions. To carry these maidens, he also provided a chariot, muscular horses in teams of four, wealth, vessels made of less precious metals, as well as goats and sheep.

Here the word used is 'vadhu' (वधू), which refers to a married woman or bride, not a slave. There is no word related to selling or buying female Slaves in this mantra.

In the commentary on this mantra in the Bṛhaddevatā, it is explained that kings would marry off their daughters to suitable men of the same gotra and varṇa, which is commonly known as 'kanyādāna' (ritual gift of a daughter in marriage). Hence, the word 'vadhu' appears in these mantras, which is always used for a married woman or bride, not a slave.

And as for the mention of giving chariots or other things, that is actually a traditional part of 'strīdhana' (the wealth given to the bride by her family). For example, in the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, during the wedding of Sītā, King Janaka gave chariots, animals, male and female attendants to look after the bride. This was part of the marriage custom and not some form of slavery.

उसे रूप-सम्पन्न तथा देवपुत्रों के समान देखकर उन्होंने (राजा ने), वर्ण और गोत्र आदि का विरोध न होने पर उसे अपनी पुत्री प्रदान करने का विचार किया ।

तब उसे (कक्षीवत् को) उठाकर उन्होंने उससे उसका वर्ण और गोत्रादि पूछा। उस युवक (कत्तीवत्) ने यह कहते हुये उत्तर दियाः 'हे राजन्, में अङ्गिरम् के वंश का हूँ; हे नृप में उच्च्य-पुत्र बऋषि दीर्घतमस् का पुत्र हैं।' तब उन्होंने (स्वनय ने) उसे (कक्षीवत्त् को) आभूषणों से अलंकृत दस कम्यायें प्रदान की, और इन कन्याओं को ले जाने के लिये इसी संरया में रथ तथा चार-चार के दल में चलने वाले मुहद शरीर के अश्व, और धन तथा हीन धातु के वर्तन, और बकरियों तथा भेड़ आदि भी दिये ।

Seeing that he (Kakṣīvat) was handsome and radiant like a son of the gods, the king, finding no objection in terms of caste or lineage, considered offering him his daughter in marriage.

Then, lifting him up, the king asked about his caste and lineage. The young man (Kakṣīvat) replied respectfully: "O King, I belong to the lineage of the sage Aṅgiras. I am the son of the high-born sage Dīrghatamas."

Thereupon, the king (Svanaya) gave him ten beautifully adorned maidens as companions. To carry these maidens, he also provided a chariot, muscular horses in teams of four, wealth, vessels made of less precious metals, as well as goats and sheep.

2. Lexical Meaning from Amarakośa:

वेतनम् । इत्यमरः । २।१०।३८ ॥

"Vetanam" (वेतनम्) means wages, salary, or remuneration. This is from Amarakośa, section 2.10.38.
So the word भृत्या is linked conceptually to वेतनम् — one who serves or supports, and in return receives wages.

Here it says to give numerous donkeys ,sheeps and helpers to the one who spread hymns . We don't have to forget that here Dasa word is used which means one who does service and is paid salary for it . So Dasa means employees . So Accusing slavery on this mantra is baseless .

Atharva Veda 4.34.2 ”The persons firm in their faith, purified, cleansed with their sacerdotal acts and pure in their conscience attain the state of splendid purity. The all-pervading Divinity does not burn or deprive of their organ of enjoyment and generation and in the state of Svarga they have many women, one for each one as his wife.”

Atharva Veda 4.34.2 ”Bereft of physical bodies, pure, cleansed with the wind, brilliant, they go to a brilliant world. The fire does not cause burning in their male organ. In the world of happiness they get plenty of women.”

Coming to Allegations on Atharva Veda 4.34.2

The Sukta 34 of Atharva Veda is – Brahmaudan Sukta]

“Āchārya Rām Sharma Āchārya, in his Atharva Veda Bhāṣya, has explained this sūkta by giving its basic background and meaning.

ऋषि – अथर्वा । देवता – ब्रह्मौदन । छन्द – त्रिष्टुप् ४ उत्तमा भुरिक् त्रिष्टुप् ५ त्र्यवसाना सप्तपदा कृति, ६ पञ्चपदातिशक्वरी, ७ भुरिक् अतिशक्वरी, ८ जगती ।] इस सूक्त के देवता 'ब्रह्मौदन' हैं। लौकिक संदर्भ में यज्ञीय क्रम में संस्कारयुक्त जो अन्न दान किया जाता है, उसे ब्रह्मौदन कहते हैं। पके हुए भोज्य पदार्थ, बिना पकाये भोज्य (दही, शहद, घृतादि) पदार्थ तथा सूखे अन्न भी यज्ञीय ऊर्जा से संस्कारित करके दिये जाने की परम्परा रही है। यज्ञीय-ब्राह्मी संस्कार युक्त इस सेवन के भी महत्त्वपूर्ण लाभ कहे गये हैं; किन्तु सूक्ष्म सन्दर्भमें 'रेतो वा ओदनः ' (श०ब्रा० १३११४, जैसे सूत्रों के अनुसार तह बहुत व्यापक जत्त्व है। ब्रह्मौदन का अर्थ ब्रह्म का उत्पादक तेजस् होता है। ब्रह्म ने सृष्टि सृजन यज्ञ के लिए अपने तेजस् का एक अंश परिपक्व किया। जिस तरह अन्नमयकोश के पोषण एवं विकास के लिए अन्न आवश्यक है, उसी तरह सृष्टि के मूल घटकों के लिये ब्रह्मौदन सृष्टिकारक तेजस् की भूमिका मानी जा सकती है। ब्रहावर्चस इसी के धारण-सेवन करने से विकसित होता है। इस सूक्त तथा अगले सूक्त के मंत्रों में ब्रह्मौदन की जो महत्ता बतलायी गयी है, वह स्थूल अन्न की अपेक्षा ऐसी ही व्यापक अवधारणा का पोषण करती है

[Rishi – Atharva; Devata – Brahmaudan; Metres – Triṣṭubh 4, Uttamā Bhurik Triṣṭubh 5, Tryavasānā Saptapadā Kṛti 6, Pañcapadā Atishakvarī 7, Bhurik Atishakvarī 8, and Jagatī.]

In this hymn the deity is Brahmaudan.

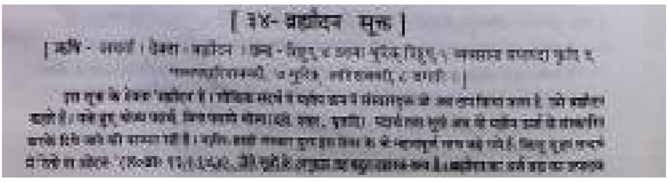
In the worldly context, Brahmaudan refers to the sanctified food that is offered in the sacrificial sequence. Cooked food, uncooked edibles (such as curd, honey, ghee, etc.), and even dry grains were traditionally consecrated through the energy of the sacrifice and then given as offerings. These yajñaimbued, brahma-sanctified consumables were said to have great benefits.

But in the subtler sense, according to formulas such as "Reto vā odanaḥ" (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 13.1.1.4), the meaning is much more expansive. Brahmaudan signifies the radiant power that is the product of Brahman itself. For the cosmic sacrifice of creation, Brahman matured a portion of its own brilliance.

Just as food (anna) is essential for the nourishment and growth of the annamayakośa (the sheath composed of food), in the same way Brahmaudan—as the creative brilliance of Brahman—was regarded as fundamental to the constituents of creation.

Brahmavarcas (spiritual brilliance, the radiance of Brahman) develops through the upholding and assimilation of this Brahmaudan.

Thus, in this hymn and the next one, the greatness of Brahmaudan is described—not merely as gross food, but as a vast concept that sustains creation itself.



[३४- ब्रह्मौदन सूक्त]

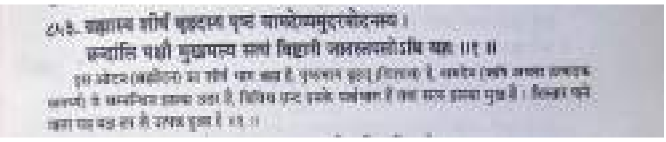
"Atharva Veda 4.34.1–2 speaks about Brahmaudan—the creative brilliance of Brahman. It is presented as the foundational principle behind the constituents of creation itself. The hymn does not describe ordinary human beings or their enjoyments, but rather reveals the cosmic yajña, in which Brahman, Vastness, Ṛṣis, Chandas, Satya, and Tapas are symbolically assigned as its limbs. Thus, the focus is on the metaphysical process of creation, not on normal human affairs."

Atharva Veda 4.34.1

इस ओदन (ब्रह्मौदन) का शीर्ष भाग ब्रह्म है, पृष्ठभाग बृहत् (विशाल) है, वामदेव (ऋषि अथवा उत्पादक सामर्थ्य) से सम्बन्धित इसका उदर है, विविध छन्द इसके पार्श्वभाग हैं तथा सत्य इसका मुख है। विस्तार पाने वाला यह यज्ञ तप से उत्पन्न हुआ है ॥१ ॥

"The top portion of this Odan (Brahmaudan, the cosmic oblation) is Brahman; its back is the Bṛhat (the Vast). Its belly is connected with Vāmadeva

(the Ṛṣi or the productive power). The various Chandas (metres of the Veda) are its sides, and Truth is its mouth. This sacrifice, which expands and grows, has been born of tapas (austerity).” (1)



Atharva Veda 4.34.2 is wrongly rendered as speaking of “men without bones, whose male organ is not burned, and who get many women in heaven.” In reality, the sūkta describes Brahmaudan—the creative brilliance of Brahman—symbolically, not human beings. The word anasthāḥ (“boneless”) means subtle radiance without a gross frame, capable of taking any form. The mention of śiśna does not refer to a physical organ but to the indestructible generative faculty or productive power, which even fire cannot consume. Likewise, bahvyaḥ striyaḥ (“many women”) is Vedic symbolism for fertile powers or creative energies (śaktis), not literal women for enjoyment. As Āchārya Rām Sharma explains, in the worldly sense sacrificial food (havis) retains its sanctity even after fire, and in the subtle sense the pure brilliance of Brahman ascends to higher worlds and empowers creative forces. Thus, the verse is about the metaphysical yajña and cosmic creation, not about human pleasure or sexuality.

Atharva Veda 4.34.2 hindi translation by Shri Ram Sharma Acharya –

यह (ब्रह्मौदन) अस्थिरहित (कोई भी इच्छित आकार लेने में सक्षम) और पवित्र है। वायु से (शरीर में प्राणायाम आदि के द्वारा) शुद्ध और पवित्र होकर यह पवित्र लोकों को ही प्राप्त होता है। अग्नि इसके शिश्न (उत्पादक अंग) को नष्ट नहीं करता। स्वर्ग में (इसका तेजस् धारण करने वाली) इसकी बहुत सी स्त्रियाँ (उत्पादक शक्तियाँ ।) हैं ॥२॥ [लौकिक संदर्भ में यज्ञ से संस्कारित अन्न के दिव्य संस्कार अग्नि पर पकाने से नष्ट नहीं होते। हव्य बनकर यह ऊर्ध्व लोकों में जाकर अनेक उर्वर शक्तियों को अपना तेजस् प्रदान करता है। सूक्ष्म संदर्भ में यह कोई भी रूप लेने में समर्थ तेजस् पवित्र होता है तथा पवित्र माध्यमों द्वारा ही ग्रहणीय है। इसका प्रभाव अग्नि आदि के सम्पर्क से कम नहीं होता ।]

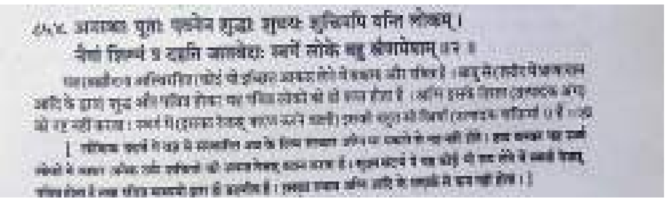
This Brahmaudan is boneless (i.e., without a gross, bony body, capable of taking any desired form) and pure.
Cleansed and sanctified by wind (through prāṇic discipline such as breath-control, or by contact with the life-breath), it attains the pure worlds.
Fire does not destroy its śiśna—that is, its generative faculty / productive power.

In heaven it has many women—meaning, it possesses many productive energies (fertile powers, śaktis) which carry and manifest its brilliance. ॥2॥

Ram Sharma Acharya Explanation-

[लौकिक संदर्भ में यज्ञ से संस्कारित अन्न के दिव्य संस्कार अग्नि पर पकाने से नष्ट नहीं होते। हव्य बनकर यह ऊर्ध्व लोकों में जाकर अनेक उर्वर शक्तियों को अपना तेजस् प्रदान करता है। सूक्ष्म संदर्भ में यह कोई भी रूप लेने में समर्थ तेजस् पवित्र होता है तथा पवित्र माध्यमों द्वारा ही ग्रहणीय है। इसका प्रभाव अग्नि आदि के सम्पर्क से कम नहीं होता ।]

(Worldly context: The divine sanctity infused into sacrificial food is not destroyed by the fire that cooks it. As an offering (havya), it ascends to the higher worlds and transmits its brilliance to many fertile powers.
Subtle context: This brilliance, being able to assume any form, is pure and is receivable only by pure means. Its potency is not diminished by the contact of fire or other forces.)



THE VEDIC VERDICT: WHY SEXUAL PLEASURE AFTER DEATH IS BOTH IMPOSSIBLE AND ANTI-VEDIC

The Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 5.10 clearly states:
"The Self is neither female, nor male, nor neuter; whatever body it adopts, with that body it identifies."

This directly implies that gender is not an inherent property of the soul (ātman), but only a temporary attribute of the physical body (sthūla śarīra). After death, the gross body—which alone possesses reproductive organs and biological functions—perishes. The surviving subtle body (sūkṣma śarīra) does not possess the physical capacity for sexual intercourse. Therefore, any concept of post-mortem sexual activity, such as "enjoying" sexual intercourse in heaven is both physiologically impossible and philosophically opposed to Vedānta.

Vedic teaching views the afterlife not as a playground of sensual indulgence but as a transitional state in the cycle of saṃsāra, whose ultimate aim is mokṣa—liberation from rebirth—not eternal gratification. Post-death, the soul's true nature is beyond male/female distinctions, rendering the idea of sexual enjoyment not only baseless but fundamentally anti-Vedic, as it misrepresents the very purpose of existence described in the Upaniṣads.

Shvetashvatara Upanishad Adhaya 5 Mantra 10 Geeta Press Gorakhpur says

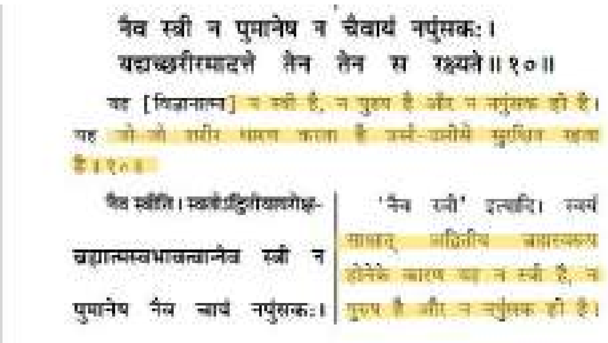
यह [विज्ञानात्मा] न स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जो-जो शरीर धारण करता है उसी उसीसे सुरक्षित रहता है ॥ १० ॥

This [conscious self/Atma] is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever body it takes on, by that very body it is protected. (10)

Shankar Bhasya –

'नैव स्त्री' इत्यादि। स्वयं
साक्षात् अद्वितीय ब्रह्मस्वरूप होनेके कारण यह न स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जिस-जिस स्त्रीशरीर, पुरुषशरीर अथवा नपुंसकशरीरको धारण करता है उसी-उसीसे यह विज्ञानात्मा रक्षित – सुरक्षित रहता है अर्थात् उसी-उसी शरीरके धर्मोको अपनेमें आरोपित कर ऐसा मानने लगता है कि 'मैं स्थूल हूँ, मैं कृश हूँ, मैं पुरुष हूँ, मैं स्त्री हूँ, मैं नपुंसक हूँ' इत्यादि ॥ १० ॥

"Neither female," etc.—Since it is itself the direct, non-dual Brahman in nature, it is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever female body, male body, or neuter body it takes on, by that very body this vijñānātmā is preserved—protected, meaning it superimposes upon itself the qualities (dharma) of that very body and comes to think: "I am stout, I am thin, I am a man, I am a woman, I am a neuter," and so on. (10)

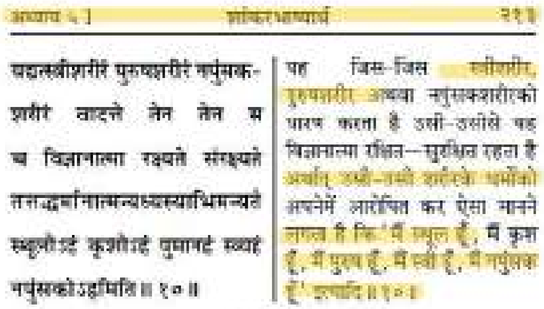


नैव स्त्री न पुमानेष न चैवायं नपुंसकः।
यद्यच्छरीरमादत्ते तेन तेन स रक्ष्यते ॥ १० ॥

यह [विज्ञानात्मा] न स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जो-जो शरीर धारण करता है उसी-उसीसे सुरक्षित रहता है ॥ १० ॥

नैव स्त्रीति। स्वयं अद्वितीयब्रह्मात्मस्वभावत्वान्नैव स्त्री न पुमानेष नैव चायं नपुंसकः।

'नैव स्त्री' इत्यादि। स्वयं साक्षात् अद्वितीय ब्रह्मस्वरूप होनेके कारण यह न स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है।



Explanation of Geeta Press on this Shruti Mantra –

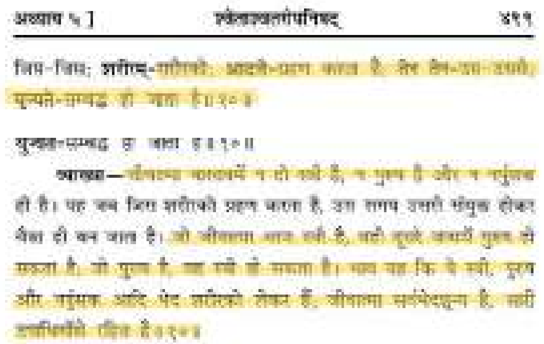
एषः = यह जीवात्मा; नन; एव-तो; स्त्री स्त्री है; नन; पुमान् पुरुष है; च=और; न=न; अयम्-यह; नपुंसकः एव नपुंसक ही है; सः वह; यत् यत्- जिस-जिस; शरीरम्-शरीरको; आदत्ते ग्रहण करता है; तेन तेन- उस-उससे; युज्यते सम्बद्ध हो जाता है ॥ १०॥

This [conscious self/Atma] is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever body it takes on, by that very body it is protected. (10)

व्याख्या – जीवात्मा वास्तवमें न तो स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जब जिस शरीरको ग्रहण करता है, उस समय उससे संयुक्त होकर वैसा ही बन जाता है। जो जीवात्मा आज स्त्री है, वही दूसरे जन्ममें पुरुष हो सकता है; जो पुरुष है, वह स्त्री हो सकता है। भाव यह कि ये स्त्री, पुरुष और नपुंसक आदि भेद शरीरको लेकर हैं; जीवात्मा सर्वभेदशून्य है, सारी उपाधियोंसे रहित है ॥ १० ॥

The jīvātmā (individual soul) in reality is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever body it takes on, at that time it becomes associated with it and appears accordingly. The soul that is now a woman may in another birth become a man; one who is a man now may become a woman. The point is that distinctions such as female, male, and neuter arise only with the taking on of a body; the jīvātmā is entirely free from all such differences and is devoid of all limiting attributes.

नैव स्त्री न पुमानेष न चैवायं नपुंसकः।
यद् यच्छरीरमादत्ते तेन तेन स युज्यते॥१०॥



“This principle is also affirmed in the Mahābhārata, Anuśāsana Parva, Chapter 145 (p. 1278/2566 Geeta Press Gorakhpur), where it is stated that the Jīva-Ātman is neither male nor female. Being beyond gender distinctions, the soul is free from sexual intercourse in Svarga as well as in all other worlds.”

उमाने पूछा- देवदेव ! महादेव! भगवन्! यह विषय तो मैंने अच्छी तरह सुन लिया। अब यह बताइये कि आत्माका स्त्री या पुरुषमेंसे किस जातिके साथ सम्बन्ध है? ।।

जीवात्मा स्त्रीरूप है या पुरुषरूप? एक है या अलग-अलग ? देव! यह मेरा संशय है। आप इसका निवारण करें ।।

श्रीमहेश्वरने कहा- जीवात्मा सदा ही निर्विकार है! वह न स्त्री है न पुरुष। वह कर्मके अनुसार विभिन्न जातियोंमें जन्म लेता है। पुरुषोचित कर्म करके स्त्री भी पुरुष हो सकती है
और स्त्री-भावनासे युक्त पुरुष तदनुरूप कर्म करके उस कर्मके अनुसार स्त्री हो सकता है ।।

Umā asked:
“O Lord of Lords, O Great God, O Bhagavān! This subject I have already heard well. Now please tell me — does the soul (Ātman) have relation with the class (nature) of woman or of man?

Is the Jīva-soul of the nature of woman or of man? Is it one, or are they separate? O Lord, this is my doubt. Please dispel it.”

Śrī Maheśvara (Śiva) said:
“The Jīva (individual soul) is always without modification (nirvikāra). It is neither woman nor man. According to actions (karma), it takes birth in various kinds of beings.

By performing manly deeds, a woman can become a man; and a man, imbued with feminine disposition, by performing such actions, can become a woman according to that karma.”

The Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (4.4.17) declares that the Self in which the five beings and the unmanifest space are established is none other than the immortal Brahman, and the knower of that becomes immortal. Later (4.4.20), the same text describes this Brahman as immeasurable, eternal, pure, subtler than unmanifest space, unborn, the Self, great, and imperishable. Together, these mantras clearly establish that one's true Self (Ātman) is not a perishable body but the immortal Brahman itself—unborn, beyond measure, subtler than space, and free from all physical limitations. Since sexual enjoyment belongs only to the gross body, which perishes at death, and the surviving Self is described as beyond birth, gender, and physicality, the idea of post-mortem sexual activity in heaven is both physiologically impossible and philosophically contrary to the Upaniṣadic teaching. The aim of life, as these verses emphasize, is not sensual gratification but realization of the Self as Brahman, leading to immortality and liberation.

The Chandogya Upaniṣad 8.1.5 declares that the Self (Ātman) is untouched by decay, death, grief, hunger, or thirst, and is described as satyakāma (whose desires are true) and satyasaṅkalpa (whose will is true). This shows that Brahman is not bound to the body's needs or pleasures, for it transcends all material limitations. The mention that "all desires are established in this Brahma-city" means they are perfectly fulfilled in the Self, not through physical gratification but through realization of its truth. Hence, the liberated state described here excludes lustful or sensual indulgence; true fulfillment is the Self's freedom from decay, hunger, thirst, and craving.

"It should be said: This (Brahman, known here as the space within the heart) does not grow old through the old age of the body. It is not slain when the body is slain. This is the true city of Brahman (brahmapura). In it, all desires are well established. This is the Self, free from dharma and adharma, free from old age, free from death, free from sorrow, free from hunger, free from thirst; it is of true desire (satyakāma) and of true resolve (satyasaṅkalpa). Just as in this world people, following the command of a ruler, live according to the place and objects he desires, so too here, whatever objects of desire he longs for, and in whatever region he wishes to live, by that alone he lives."

In Katha Upanishad 1.1.25–28, Yama Ṛṣi deliberately tested Nachiketas to see whether he was fit for the supreme knowledge of the Ātman. Yama offered him every form of worldly enjoyment—wealth, sons, long life, celestial maidens, music, and dance—but Nachiketas firmly rejected them. He declared such pleasures to be śvobhāvāḥ ("ephemeral, uncertain even of lasting till tomorrow"), pointing out that they only weaken the senses and destroy dharma, strength, wisdom, and fame. Even a long span of life, he argued, is trivial when set against the brevity of existence itself—for if even Brahmā's lifespan is short, what to say of mortals?

He further reasoned that a discerning man who has approached the deathless cannot cling to perishable things like sons, gold, or lustful pleasures, which are the desires of the ignorant. The wise naturally seek higher and higher goals, not to be dragged down by unstable enjoyments. Thus, Nachiketas asked Yama not to tempt him with such illusory pleasures, but to grant him the true knowledge he sought—the truth of what lies beyond death.

These verses are a direct rejection of the idea that lasting happiness can come from sensuality, whether in this life or after death. Yama tempts Nachiketas with women, music, and long life precisely to test him, and Nachiketas dismisses them as fleeting and destructive, saying they weaken the senses and cannot satisfy the soul. The contrast between preyas (what merely pleases, like sexual or material indulgence) and śreyas (what truly benefits, the pursuit of Self-knowledge) shows that sensuality is not only irrelevant to immortality but an obstacle to it. The teaching is clear: eternal fulfillment comes only by transcending bodily desires, not by indulging them

Katha Upanishad 1.1.25

मनुष्यलोकमें जो-जो भोग दुर्लभ हैं उन सब भोगोंको तू स्वच्छन्दतापूर्वक माँग ले। यहाँ रथ और बाजोंके सहित ये रमणियाँ हैं। ऐसी स्त्रियाँ मनुष्योंको प्राप्त होने योग्य नहीं होतीं। मेरे द्वारा दी हुई इन कामिनियोंसे तू अपनी सेवा करा। परन्तु हे नचिकेतः ! तू मरणसम्बन्धी प्रश्न मत पूछ ॥ २५॥

“In the world of men, ask freely for all the enjoyments that are rare and difficult to obtain. Here are chariots with steeds and these maidens with lutes and ornaments. Such women are not attainable by mortals. With these damsels, given by me, you may have them serve you as you wish. But, O Nachiketas, do not ask me about the question concerning death.” (25)

Shankara Bhashya-

इस मर्त्यलोकमें जो-जो कामनाएँ- प्रार्थनीय वस्तुएँ दुर्लभ हैं उन सबको छन्दतः – इच्छानुसार माँग ले। इसके सिवा ये रामा- जो पुरुषोंके साथ रमण करती हैं उन्हें 'रामा' कहते हैं, ऐसी ये दिव्य अप्सराएँ सरथा-रथोंके सहित और सतूर्या-तूर्यो (बाजों) के सहित मौजूद हैं। हम-जैसे देवताओंकी कृपाके बिना ये अर्थात् ऐसी स्त्रियाँ मरणधर्मा मनुष्योंको प्राप्त होने योग्य नहीं हैं। मेरे द्वारा दी हुई इन परिचारिकाओंसे तू अपनी परिचर्या अर्थात् पादप्रक्षालनादि सेवा करा; किन्तु हे नचिकेतः ! मरण अर्थात् मरनेके पश्चात् जीव रहता है या नहीं- ऐसा कौएके दाँतोंकी परीक्षाके समान मरणसम्बन्धी प्रश्न मत पूछ, तुझे ऐसा प्रश्न करना उचित नहीं है॥ २५ ॥

“In this mortal world, whatever desires—whatever objects of longing—are rare and hard to obtain, you may freely ask for them as you wish. Besides, here are the celestial maidens—called Rāmā, for they delight in play with men—these divine Apsarās, present along with chariots and attendants, with lutes, lyres, and musical instruments. Such women are not attainable by mortals subject to death without the grace of gods like me. With these attendants granted by me, you may have your service done—such as foot-washing and other ministrations. But, O Nachiketas, do not ask me about death—whether the soul remains after dying or not. That question is like prying into the impossible, like testing the edge of a razor; it is not proper for you to ask such a thing." (25)

"O Lord Yama! These pleasures are such that they are uncertain—whether they will remain till tomorrow or not—and they wear away all the vigor of the senses. This life too is but very short. Let your chariots, your dances, and your songs remain with you [I have no need of them]." (26)

Hence, being causes of the decline of righteousness, strength, wisdom, energy, and fame, they are but sources of misfortune. And as for the long span of life that you wish to bestow—listen: even the full duration of Brahmā's life is indeed but short; then what to say of long life for beings like us? Therefore, let your chariots, your vehicles, and your songs and dances remain with you." (26)

“Having attained the presence of the deathless gods who never suffer decay, and knowing that a far higher purpose is to be gained from them, what mortal—himself subject to old age and death—dwelling here upon the earth (called kvadhah, lower in comparison with the higher worlds), would still desire unstable objects such as sons, wealth, or gold that are longed for by the undiscerning? In another reading, instead of kvadhah-sthaḥ it is kva tad-āsthaḥ—meaning, 'he who places his devotion in such things.' But one who seeks a higher and rarer goal cannot set his heart on these transient gains, for men by nature desire to rise higher, not lower. Therefore, no wise person, understanding their unsubstantiality, can truly crave them. Likewise, who, perceiving the fleeting pleasures of Apsarās and such enjoyments that arise merely from fascination with bodily form, could delight in long life? Hence, do not tempt me with these illusory pleasures, but grant me that for which I have prayed.” (1.1.28)

In Kaṭha Upaniṣad 1.2.3–4, Yama praises Naciketas for rejecting all worldly temptations, including wealth, sons, and celestial maidens, because they are perishable and cannot grant liberation. The verses clearly distinguish between avidyā (ignorance leading to transient enjoyments) and vidyā (knowledge leading to immortality), and they commend Naciketas for choosing the latter. This shows that the Upaniṣads treat sensual and material pleasures as distractions from the higher goal, not as ideals to be pursued.

Katha Upanishad 1.2.3

हे नचिकेतः ! उस तूने पुत्र-वित्तादि प्रिय और अप्सरा आदि प्रियरूप भोगोंको, उनका असारत्व चिन्तन करके त्याग दिया है और जिसमें बहुत-से मनुष्य डूब जाते हैं, उस इस धनप्राया निन्दित गतिको तू प्राप्त नहीं हुआ ॥ ३ ॥

"O Nachiketas! You have rejected pleasures such as sons, wealth, and the enjoyments of maidens—having reflected on their worthlessness. You have not fallen into that condemned course, so money-centered, in which many men sink and perish." (1.2.3)

That path, filled with riches, into which foolish men plunge and thereby suffer, you have not chosen. This is precisely why it was said earlier (in the opening verse of this Valli) that well-being comes to him who embraces śreyas (the good), while he who clings to preyas (the merely pleasant) falls from his own true welfare." Sankara Bhasya-

Of these, O Nachiketas, I regard you as one who longs for vidyā, a true student of the eternal. Why? Because even though many pleasures—such as celestial maidens and other delights that captivate the minds of the foolish—were presented to you, they could not seduce you nor stir a desire for enjoyment in your heart, nor could they turn you away from the path of śreyas. Therefore, I consider you a fit student, one worthy of the higher knowledge.” (1.2.4)

Kaṭhopaniṣad 1.2.6 states that the path of the hereafter (samparāya) is not visible to those who remain deluded by wealth, women, and sexual enjoyment. Śaṅkara clarifies that such persons, blinded by desire, think only “this world exists, nothing beyond,” and thus fall again into death. The text does not deny the natural attraction between man and woman, but it shows that when such enjoyment becomes the highest goal, it prevents one from seeing the eternal. In this way, the Upaniṣad uses the example of women and sexual pleasure to illustrate how powerful sense-attachments are, and why discrimination (viveka) is necessary to transcend them.

Katha Upanishad 1.2.6

"The afterlife (samparāya) does not become evident to the ignorant. Samparāya refers to the realm one enters after the fall of the body (death). The means by which one attains that realm is called the scriptural path to the afterlife. This path does not become visible to the immature or undiscerning person—it does not appear before his mind.

Moreover, one who is negligent, whose mind is attached to worldly goals like children and cattle, and who is deluded by greed for wealth—such a person, covered by ignorance, cannot perceive the means to attain the afterlife.

He believes: 'This visible world of women, food, and drink is all there is; there is no other world beyond this.' A person who holds such views repeatedly falls under my dominion—under the power of death. That is, he remains bound to the cycle of birth and death and the suffering it entails. Most people in this world are of this kind."

NIYOG PRATHA

Niyog Pratha is the ugly practice where the wife copulates with other men to beget children, it is also a license for Brahmins to enjoy numerous women as Vedic law permits them to copulate with any women they desire if they are unable to control their passion. Following verse is taken as a proof for Niyoga from the Vedas, Rig Veda 10.40.2 Where are ye, Aśvins, in the evening, where at morn? Where is your haltingplace, where rest ye for the night? Who brings you homeward, as the widow bedward draws her husband's brother, as the bride attracts the groom?

Yaska explains this verse as,

Nirukta 3.15 "Where do you remain at night, and where during the day? Where do you obtain the necessities of life, and where do you dwell? Who puts you to bed as a widow her husband's brother? From what (root) is Devara derived ? (He is)so called (because) he is the second husband…"

Atharva Veda 14.2.18 "Do thou O woman that givest no pain to thy husband or Devar (husband by Niyoga), art kind to animals in this Order of householders, walk assiduously in the path of righteousness and justice, art well-versed in all the Shastras, hast children and grandchildren, givest birth to valiant the brave boys, desirest a second husband (by Niyoga), and bestoweth happiness on all, accept a man of they choice as thy husband or Devar , and always perform the Homa which is the duty of every householder."

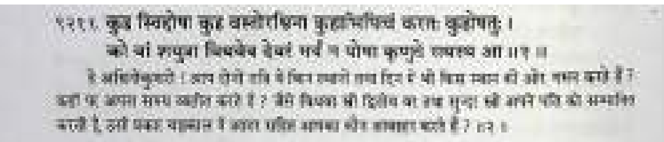
Refutation-

This is Rig Veda 10.40.2 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya. There is no reference for anyone engaging in Niyoga here. The figure of speech called simile is used.

हे अश्विनीकुमारो ! आप दोनों रात्रि में किन स्थानों तथा दिन में भी किस स्थान की ओर गमन करते हैं ? कहाँ पर अपना समय व्यतीत करते हैं? जैसे विधवा स्त्री द्वितीय वर तथा सुन्दर स्त्री अपने पति को सम्मानित करती है, उसी प्रकार यज्ञकाल में आदर सहित आपका कौन आवाहन करते हैं ? ॥ २ ॥

"O Aśvinī Kumāras! To what places do you both go during the night, and to what places also in the daytime? Where do you spend your time? Just as a widow honors her second husband and a beautiful woman honors her own husband, in the same way, who is it that, with reverence, invokes you during the time of sacrifice?" (2)



Sāyaṇācārya, in his Bhāṣya on Ṛgveda 10.40.2, explains that the word devar ("the husband's younger brother") is called the second husband of a widow because, after the death of her husband, the devar could assume his role by marrying and protecting her. This is simply a cultural explanation of the term, and there is no reference whatsoever to the practice of niyoga in this context. The Vedic verse employs this relationship only as a simile (upamā). Just as a widow naturally turns toward her devar for support, and just as a wife turns with affection and fidelity toward her husband, in the same way the sacrificer turns toward the Aśvins during the rite. The comparison, therefore, is not describing a literal social custom, but symbolizing the intimacy, dependence, and reverent turning of one's attention toward the divine.

"O Aśvins! Where indeed do you stay during the night, and where during the day? Where do you go (to reach) and where do you dwell? Furthermore, which sacrificer, in the sacred place (the sacrificial ground called the vedi), turns you toward himself with devotion, for the sake of service and worship?

To explain this, two examples are given:

1. Just as a widow, bereft of her husband, turns toward (abhimukhīkaroti) her brother-in-law (devara, the younger brother of her husband) for protection and support,
2. and just as every woman turns toward her husband at the time of union, in the same way, the sacrificer turns toward you with reverence during the sacrifice.

Yāska (Nirukta 3.15) also explains: 'Where indeed do you dwell at night, where by day, where do you go, where do you reside, who turns you toward himself, as a widow turns toward her brother-in-law, or as a woman turns toward her man at the time of union.'

Here, the devara ('husband's younger brother') is called the 'second husband' because he takes the place of the deceased. A widow is called vidhavā ('deprived of her husband') either from vidh ('to ordain, fate') or from separation from her dhava ('husband'). The devara is so called because of his duty toward the widow. Marya means 'a mortal man, subject to death.' Yoṣā ('woman') comes from the root yū ('to unite'). The term sadastha ('one in the sacrificial seat') refers to the sacrificer."

[illegible]

Yāska in the Nirukta also gives the same etymology of devar, explaining that he is called the "second husband" of a widow because of the traditional reference to widow remarriage. In other words, the term reflects the accepted custom that, after a husband's death, the younger brother could assume his place through marriage to the widow. The passage, therefore, alludes to remarriage within the family, but it makes no mention whatsoever of niyoga .

Here is Atharva Veda 14.2.18 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya – It does not have anything to do with Niyoga

देवर और पति को कष्ट न पहुँचाती हुई, पशुओं के लिए हितकारिणी, श्रेष्ठ नियमों पर चलने वाली, श्रेष्ठ तेजस्विता – सम्पन्न, सन्तानयुक्त वीर सन्तानों को जन्म देने वाली, पतिगृह में देवर का कल्याण चाहती हुई, सुखदायिनी बनकर आप इस गार्हपत्य अग्नि की हवन द्वारा अर्चना करें ॥१८ ॥

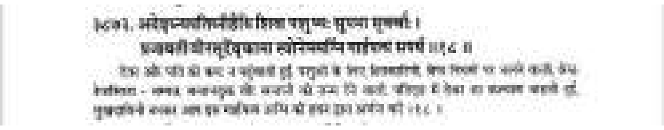
household, becoming a giver of happiness — thus may you worship through the oblation into this Gārhapatya fire.” (18)



Regarding the Practice of Niyoga we have direct evidences from Scriptures prohibiting this practice in the present age of Kaliyuga .

Why Niyog is banned in Kaliyuga

Brhaspati (25.12-14). The Niyoga (authorisation of a widow to raise offspring to her deceased husband), after having been declared by Manu, has been forbidden by himself; on account of the deterioration in the nature of the time-cycles, this cannot he done by all in the proper form. In the Krta, Treta and Dvāpara cycles, men were imbued with austerities and with knowledge; in the Kali cycle a deterioration in the capacity of men has been brought about. Therefore the sons that were obtained by various methods by the ancient sages cannot he obtained by men now, on account of their being without that capacity.’
It is quoted in Nrsimhaprasāda (Vyavahāra, 38a); in Smrticandrikā (Samskāra, p. 226), which says that this prohibition is meant for the Kali-age; and in Viramitrodaya (Vyavahāra, 186a).
Brahmapurāṇa (Aparārka, p. 97).-‘On the death of her husband, or on her having abandoned her husband, a woman may beget a son from a man of her own caste. If she is a child-widow, or has been forcibly abandoned by her husband, she shall go through the sacrament of marriage again, with any other man. But this remarriage of women, or the begetting of a son from the brother-in-law, or the freedom of women, should not be permitted during the Kali age; as during this age, men are inclined to be sinful.’

Apastamba (2.27.2-4).-‘A husband shall not make over his wife, who occupies the position of a gentilis, to others (than to his gentiles), in order to cause children to be begotten for himself. For they declare that a bride is given to the family of her husband (and not to the husband alone). This is forbidden for the present age, on account of the incapacity of men’s senses.’
In simple words in Kaliyug Men will be lusty this practice may be misused, In the 3 yugas sages had capacity to impregnent women even without having sexual intercourse but in kaliyug men are not capable to doing these

Maharishi Manu heavily criticizes this practice of Niyoga in Manu Smriti 5.159

“A woman, overcome by the greed for progeny, who transgresses her husband (i.e., is unfaithful), she indeed incurs reproach in this world and, in the next world, falls down from the realms of the virtuous.” (166).

Acharya Kulluka Bhatta said in his bhasya –

Niyoga has been Criticised as Pashu Dharma in Manu Smriti

"Although during the reign of King Vena, the practice of niyoga (levirate union for progeny) was prescribed among men, yet the learned Brāhmaṇas especially condemned niyoga, calling it merely an animal-like practice." (66)

"Because this practice, being connected with animals, was condemned even when adopted among men by the learned ones. अतः तभी से लेकर जो व्यक्ति अज्ञानवश मृतपति वाली विधवा स्त्री को सन्तान के लिए नियोगक्रिया हेतु प्रेरित करता है। साधु लोग उसकी विशेषरूप से निन्दा करते हैं।। ६८ ।।

“Therefore, from that time onward, whoever, out of ignorance, urges a widow whose husband has died to undergo niyoga (union for the sake of offspring), is especially censured by the virtuous.” (68)

Acharya Kulluka Bhatta bhasya –

वेनकालत्प्रभृति यो मृतभर्तृकादिस्त्रियं शास्त्रार्थाज्ञानादपत्यनिमित्तं देवरादौ नियोजयति तं साधवो नियंतं गर्हयन्ते। अयं च स्वोक्तनियोगनिषेधः कलियुगविषयः । तदाह बृहस्पतिः- “उक्तो निरोगो मुनिना निषिद्धः स्वयमेव तु । युगक्रमादशक्योऽयं कर्तुमन्यैर्विधानतः ।। तपोज्ञानसमायुक्ताः कृतत्रेतायुगे नराः। द्वापरे च कलौ नृणां शक्तिहानिर्हि निर्मिता। अनेकधा कृताः पुत्रा ऋषिभिश्च पुरातनैः। न शक्यन्तेऽधुना कर्तुं शक्तिहीनैरिदंतनैः ।।” अतो यद्गोविन्दराजेन युगविशेषव्यवस्थामज्ञात्वा सर्वदैव संतानाभावे नियोगादनियोगपक्षः श्रेयानिति स्वमनीषया कल्पितं तन्मुनिव्याख्या-विरोधान्नाद्रियामहे। प्रायशो मनुवाक्येषु मुनिव्याख्यानमेव हि। नापराध्योऽस्मि विदुषां क्वाहं सर्वविदः कुधीः ।। ६८ ।।

From the time of King Vena onwards, whoever, out of ignorance of the true intent of the śāstras, causes a widow or any such woman to undergo niyoga (union with the husband’s brother or another) for the sake of offspring, that person is censured by the virtuous. And this prohibition of niyoga is specific to the Kali Yuga. Hence Bṛhaspati has said:
’Niyoga, though once mentioned by the sage, was later forbidden by the sage himself. But due to the sequence of the Yugas, it cannot be practiced any longer in any prescribed manner. For men endowed with austerity and knowledge in the Kṛta and Tretā Yugas could (properly) perform it; but in Dvāpara and Kali, a decline of human power has been ordained. Many sons were indeed begotten by the sages of old in various ways, but now it cannot be practiced by the weakened men of the present time.’

Therefore, the view imagined by Govindarāja—namely, that since there is now generally no progeny, niyoga is preferable to aniyoga (non-niyoga)—is not accepted by us, because it contradicts the authoritative commentaries of the sages. In fact, in most of Manu’s passages the sage-commentaries alone are authoritative. Nor am I guilty before the learned; for where am I, a fool, compared with the all-knowing?” (68)

BRIDE SELLING IN VEDA

When the bridegroom was crippled, mentally unstable or lacked qualification then he purchased the bride from father with huge amount,

Rig Veda 1.109.2 “O Indra and Agni (Electricity and fire or father and Acharya) I have heard that you are more munificent givers than an un-worthy son-in-law or the brother of the bride…”

Nirukta 6.9 "I have heard that you are more liberal indeed than a would be son-in-law, i.e. one whose son-in-lawship is not quite complete. It is well known that the people in the south apply the term vijamata to the husband of a purchased maiden. By this is meant a bridegroom, whose relationship is not complete as it were…"

Refutation-

This is Sāyaṇa Bhāṣya on Ṛgveda 1.109.2. There are two key points to understand regarding this mantra:

This is Sāyaṇa Bhāṣya on Ṛgveda 1.109.2. There are two key points to understand regarding this mantra:

1. The mantra is not literally talking about a bridegroom "buying" a bride from her family in exchange for wealth. Rather, it uses this only as a simile (upamā). The sense is: "Just as a characterless bridegroom, who is devoid of noble qualities, gives wealth in order to obtain a girl, similarly Indra and Agni, who are the greatest bestowers of wealth, may bestow wealth upon us."
2. Even within this simile (upamā) itself, the Veda makes a clear distinction. The mantra explicitly says:
   "श्रुताभिरूप्यादिभिर्गुणैर्विहीनो जामाता" — "the bridegroom devoid of noble qualities such as learning, good conduct, and character does so."
   It is not said anywhere that a noble and virtuous bridegroom engages in such practices. Thus, the mantra itself condemns this type of marriage, showing that only a characterless bridegroom resorts to such behavior.

हे "इन्द्राग्नी "वां युवां "भूरिदावत्तरा अतिशयेन बहुधनस्य दाताराविति "अश्रवं "हि अश्रौषं खलु। कस्मात् पुरुषात् । "विजामातुः। श्रुताभिरूप्यादिभिर्गुणैर्विहीनो जामाता यथा कन्यावते बहु धनं प्रयच्छति कन्यालाभार्थं ततोऽप्यतिशयेन दाताराविन्द्राग्नी इत्यर्थः। "उत "वा अपि च "स्यालात् । स्यं शूर्पम् । तस्मात् लाजानावपति विवाहकाले इति स्यालः कन्याभ्राता। स यथा भगिनीप्रीत्यर्थं बहु धनं प्रयच्छति ततोऽप्यतिशयेन दाताराविन्द्राग्नी ।"ध इति पादपूरणः। तथा च सति "अथ अनन्तरं हे "इन्द्राग्नी युवाभ्यां "सोमस्य "प्रयती अभिषुतस्य सोमस्य प्रदानेन सह "नव्यं नवतरं प्रत्यग्रं "स्तोमं स्तोत्रं "जनयामि निष्पादयामि ।

"O Indra and Agni, I have indeed heard (it said) that you two are the greatest bestowers of abundant wealth. From which kind of man (are you greater)? From the bridegroom (jāmātṛ). For, though devoid of noble qualities such as learning and good character, yet the bridegroom, in order to obtain a maiden, gives away much wealth. Therefore you two, Indra and Agni, are even greater givers than that bridegroom.

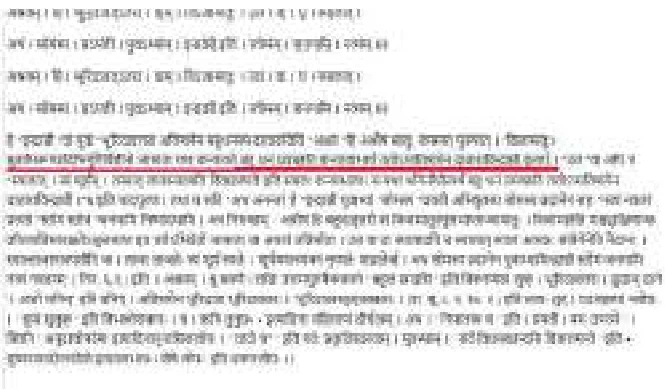
Or again, (you are greater) than the sister's husband's brother (syāla, i.e. the brother of the maiden). For at the time of marriage, he too, in affection for his sister, gives much wealth, as when he pours parched grains (lāja) into the winnowing basket (śūrpa) at the wedding ceremony. Therefore, even more than that, Indra and Agni are the greatest givers.

Thus, after this (comparison), (the hymn continues): 'O Indra and Agni, by the offering of the pressed Soma, I generate a new, ever-fresh hymn (stoma), along with the gift of Soma itself.'



Nirukta 6.9 too says the same thing –

In Nirukta 6.9, Yāska explains Ṛgveda 1.109.2 by stating that Indra and Agni are said to be greater givers than even the vijāmātṛ (bridegroom) and syāla (bride's brother), but this is only a simile (upamā), not a prescription of practice. The term vijāmātṛ itself, as Yāska clarifies, refers specifically to an unworthy groom (asusa-māpta iva) who, being devoid of noble qualities and hence unfit to receive a maiden, obtains her through wealth and is therefore called kṛtāpati (a purchased husband). Thus, the Nirukta explicitly restricts the meaning to such a characterless groom, and nowhere does it describe a virtuous bridegroom engaging in this act. The mantra, therefore, does not endorse bride-buying; on the contrary, by using this negative example as a comparison, it implicitly condemns such marriages and highlights that Indra and Agni surpass even these exaggerated givers in generosity.

हे इन्द्राप्री ! तुम दोनों को मैंने विजामाता से भी और साले से भी बहुत बढ़कर देने वाला सुना है, अब मैं तुम दोनों के लिये सोम देने के साथ नया स्तोत्र बनाता हूं (१।१०९/२) सुना है मैंने तुम दोनों को बहुत बढ़कर देने वाले, विजामाता से, न ठीक पूर्ण हुआ जामाता-विजामाता, यह दाक्षिणास खरीदी हुई कन्या के पति को कहते हैं (अर्थात् जो गुण हीन होने से कन्या पाने के योग्य न होकर रुपया खर्च के किसी से कन्या छेता है, ऐसा जापात। विजामाता है) ऐसा वर अभिमेत है जो मानों ठीक पूरा नहीं हुआ (गुण हीन होने से) । जामाता जा सन्तान, उसका बनाने वाला । 'उतबाधा स्यालात्' माले से भी। स्यालः सम्बन्ध से निकट होता है यह निदान के जानने वाले कहते हैं । अथवा (बहिन के विवाह में) छजली से लाजा देता है (लाजा होम के लिये)। स्पं, छाज का नाम है

"O Indra and Agni! I have heard that you both are even greater givers than the vijāmātā (bridegroom) and the syāla (bride's brother). Now, along with the offering of Soma, I compose a new hymn for you both (Ṛgveda 1.109.2).

I have heard that you two are greater givers even than the vijāmātā. Vijāmātā means the bridegroom of a girl obtained through dakṣiṇā (bride-price). That is to say, a man devoid of qualities, who is not truly worthy of receiving a maiden, yet by spending money obtains her—such a bridegroom is called vijāmātā. Such a bridegroom is considered "not properly complete" (because being without virtues, he is imperfect). The word jāmātā (bridegroom) comes from jā (offspring) + mātā (one who produces), meaning "the one who generates offspring."

'ut vā api ca syālāt' — or even greater than the syāla (the bride's brother). The word syāla means one closely related by connection, as the etymologists say. Or else, at the time of his sister's marriage, the brother offers parched grains (lāja) in a winnowing basket (śūrpa) for the lāja-homa ritual. Śyām (śyām = basket, sieve) is the name of the winnowing tray."

Regarding Asura Vivah we have proofs from the Highest Smritis and Itihasaas that Asura Vivah is Strictly prohibited in Highest Smritis and Itihasaas .

Verse 41:
"When the other remaining four types of improper marriages take place, the children born from them are harsh, untruthful, and hold hatred towards the Vedic Dharma."

Verse 42:
"Children born from a dharmically wedded wife—through a marriage approved by the scriptures and considered noble—are not objects of criticism but of praise. On the other hand, those born of a woman wed through unapproved and blameworthy marriage systems become subjects of contempt. Therefore, to avoid the birth of distress-bringing children, such degraded forms of marriage should be avoided."

In marriages other than the Brahma and similar approved types—i.e., in Gandharva and others—the children speak harshly and untruthfully.
'Harsh' refers to vulgar or abusive language used toward mother, sister, etc.
'Untruthful' refers to lies and well-known dishonesty.
The etymology of 'nṛśaṁsa-anṛta' (cruel and false) is given as those whose nature is to say such things.
'Brahma-dharma' refers to Vedic dharma and the meaning of the Vedas; these people either hate, criticize, or do not believe in it.
Therefore, such marriages are to be condemned."

This verse presents a summary of the results of various types of marriages.
The children (progeny such as sons) born from those marriages which are scripturally sanctioned (अनिन्दित, unblameworthy) are themselves unblameworthy and praiseworthy.
The ones born from condemned (निन्दित) and prohibited (प्रतिषिद्ध) marriages are blameworthy.
Therefore, since such condemned marriages result in sorrow-bringing progeny, one should avoid such condemned marriages."

This verse is a concise statement about the fruits (results) of marriage.
Through deserving (scripturally

But through condemned (गर्हित) marriages, the progeny is also condemned.
Therefore, one should not engage in blameworthy marriages."

Just as in statements like 'he who sings is blessed', there's an implied directive.

So too, this verse implies that one should undertake only unblameworthy marriages; the prohibition of blameworthy ones is conveyed indirectly (arthavāda — a laudatory or cautionary statement with implied command).”

Allegations-

INCEST IN VEDAS

Rig Veda 6.55.4 Pushan, who driveth goats for steeds, the strong and Mighty, who is called His Sister's lover, will we laud.

Yaska Acharya explains this as,

Nirukta 3.16 "The author calls dawn his sister, from companionship, or drawing the juices. Or else this human lover may have been meant; the enjoyment in that case will refer to the woman, derived from (the root) bhaj (to enjoy)"

Leave aside brother sister relationship, Vedas even promote Son-Mother incest,

Rig Veda 6.55.5 "I glorify Pushan, the husband of his mother:may the gallant of his sister hear us ; may the brother of Indra be our friend."

Refutation-

Lets see Acharya Skanda bhasya on Rig Veda 6.55.4 and Rig Veda 6.55.5 to understand this .

Claims that the Vedas promote incest are based on mistranslation and ignoring the traditional commentaries. In Rig Veda 6.55.4–5, Pūṣan is called "his sister's lover" and "husband of his mother," but Vedic authorities like Yāska in the Nirukta (3.16; 12.16) and the Bṛhaddevatā (2.63) and Acharya Skanda in his Rig Veda Bhashya make it explicit that Pūṣan is nothing but the Sun (Āditya) in his nourishing form. The so-called "sister" is Uṣas, the Dawn, who always appears before the Sun, like a sister walking ahead of her brother; the term jāra ("lover/consumer") here means the one who consumes darkness and draws out the essence of life. The so-called "mother" is Rātri (Night), not in the sense that she literally gives birth to the Sun (for, as the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa 3.44 teaches, the Sun never truly rises or sets but remains constant), but rather in the sense that she veils and then reveals him. When the rays are turned away, Night is said to "conceal" him; when the rays return, she is said to "release" him. Thus, Night is figuratively styled as the Sun's mother—because she holds him in her darkness and then yields him back to vision—yet this is entirely a poetic description of cosmic alternation, not any human relationship.. Thus these verses are profound cosmic allegories of night, dawn, and sun in perpetual cycle, using the language of kinship and union to explain natural order. To read them as incest is a modern distortion; in reality they show the Vedic genius for expressing cosmology through symbolic family metaphors, not immoral acts.

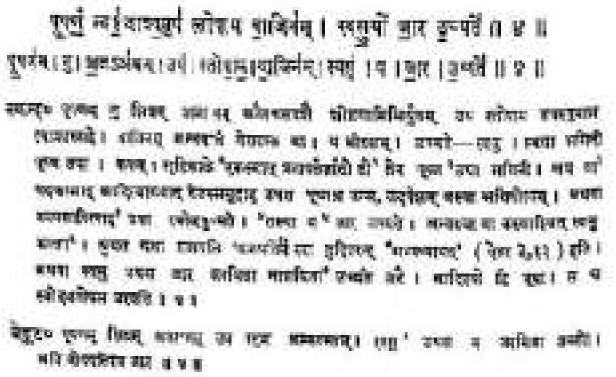
Rig Veda 6.55.4 Skanda Swami Bhasya

स्कन्द० पूषणम् नु क्षित्रम् अजा वम् अनैस्थसहशै शीघ्रगामिभिर्युक्तम् उप स्तोषाम उपस्तुयाम त्याशास्मद्दे । वाजिनम् अन्नयते वेगवन्त वा । य कीदृशम् । उच्यते – स्वतु । स्वसा भगिनी पूष्ण उपा । कथम्। सुटिकाले एकस्मात् प्रजापतेजांतौ तौ तेन पूष्ण 'उपा भगिनी। लय वा यदकरमाडू आदित्याख्यात् तेजस्समूहादू उषस पूष्णश्व जन्म, तदपेक्षम् अध्या भगिनीयम् । अथवा स्वयसारित्याद् उपा स्वसेत्युच्यते । तस्या यजार उच्च्यते । अन्यस्या वा कस्याश्चित् स्वसु भाता । श्रूयत यथा प्रजापति 'प्रजापतिवै स्वा दुहितरम् "अभ्यध्यायत्' (ऐना ३,३३) इति । अथवा स्वसु उपस जर जरपिता माशपिता उच्यते जनै । आदित्यः हि पूषा । स च स्वोदयतोषल जस्यति ॥ ५ ॥

let us indeed praise Pūṣan, the nourisher, who guides the fields, who leads the goats, who is swift-going, yoked with quick steeds. May we honor him, may we extol him. He brings food, he grants vigor. What kind of being is he?

It is said — he is the brother of Uṣas (the Dawn). How so? At the time of creation (at the birthing of beings), from the same Prajāpati they both were produced; hence Pūṣan's 'sister' is Uṣas. Or, since both arise from the same mass of radiance, and since the dawn is born from the light of the Ādityas, and Pūṣan too is born from the same light, therefore she is called his sister. Or again, by natural kinship, Uṣas is called Pūṣan's sister.

Her hymn (yajāra) is recited. Or, another explanation is given: someone else's sister is called by name. For we hear in the Brāhmaṇa: 'Prajāpati indeed desired his own daughter' (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa 3.33). Or again, the sister is metaphorically spoken of as "upa" — meaning near or akin — hence the usage. For Pūṣan is indeed the Sun, and he reaches the delight of the dawn at his rising.



Rig Veda 6.55.5 Skanda Swami Bhasya

स्कन्द० मातु दिधिषुम् पुष्णो माता 'रात्रि, सा हयेन जनयति । दिधिषुशब्द यो ज्येष्ठस्थ भ्रातुर्भार्यायाम् अनियुक्त प्रवर्तत "तस्य या वाचक है। ज्येष्दाया "वा गतिमान् भनूढायो य कनीयख्या बडू।ढा तस्य वा वाचक । वच्चैवत् द्वयमपि न मातर प्रति सम्भवति । मत्तोऽन दिधिघुशब्द दूध धारणे इत्येतस्य क्रियाशब्दो विज्ञायते । स्वस्था माद् शा दिधिषु धारयित्तारम् । स्वोदयैन निरोद्धारमित्यर्थ । पूपा द्यादित्व स स्वोदयेन रात्रि निशणद्धि। तम् अबवम् प्रवीमि यथद्र् विवक्षितम् । स चोच्यमान "स्वप्नु नार" शृणोतु न अस्माकम् आता इदस्य उभपोरिन्द्रापूष्णोरेकस्मात् प्रजापसेजांतत्वात् । सखिस्यानीम मम ॥ ५ ॥

The mother of Pūṣan is Night (Rātri); from her he is born. The word didhīṣu usually refers to 'the elder brother's wife' (sister-in-law), or to one connected with the elder, or to the moon (lord of the stars). But neither of these meanings is applicable here with reference to the mother.

Therefore, another sense of the word didhīṣu is accepted, namely 'milk-holder' (dugdha-dhāraṇa). Thus the mother (Night) is the didhīṣu, the bearer and sustainer.

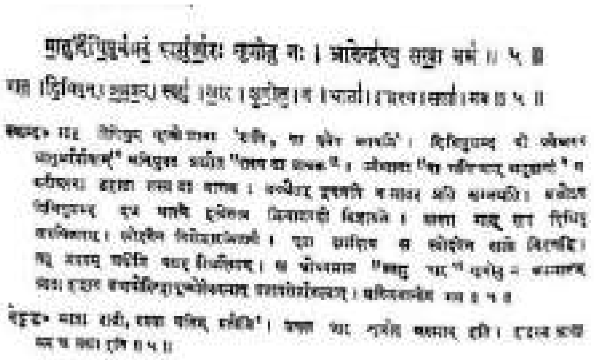
Hence the meaning is: at sunrise (svodaye) she is emptied or dissolved (i.e., Night disappears at the rising of the Sun). Pūṣan, as Āditya, removes Night with his rising.

This is what we declare, in the intended sense.

And when it is said that he is the 'lover of the sister' (svasu-nagara), it must not be taken literally. Rather, Pūṣan is not our mother, but the brother of Indra, and to me he is like a friend, since both (Indra and Pūṣan) are born from the same Prajāpati." (5)



Lets see the explanation of Nirukta 3.16 on these Mantras

दुर्वचन (अनिष्ठ वचन गाली निन्दा आदि के कहने वा सुनने) की कामना न करे, अपितु डरे, जैसा कि चार (पांसे) घारे हुए से (पांनों) के फेंकने तक डरता है (११४१/९.) चार नर्दों को धारे हुए से, सो जैसा ऐसे जुआरिय से डरे. ठीक ऐसे ही दुरुक्त से डरे, दुरुक्त की कभी कामना न करे (सदा सूक्त ही कहने सुनने की कामना करे) । 'आ' उपसर्ग पूर्व ही (११३में) व्याख्या किया गया है। और यह (आ) उपमा अर्थ में भी देखाजाता है। 'सूर्य जैसे अपनी ज्योति को (ऋ० १० १११। ६.) । सूर्य यहां जार कहा जाता है, क्योंकि) रात्रि का जीर्ण करने वाला है, वही (चन्द्र आदि की) प्रभाओं का (जीर्ण करनेवाला है)। वैसा भी निगम है 'उपा का जीर्ण करने वाला (सूर्य) हमें सुने (ऋ० ४ १ ८ १२१ १५) उपा को इस (सूर्य) की वहिन कहता है, साथ विचरने से (जैसे बहिन भाई आगे पीछे चलते है. वैसे उपाके पीछे २ सूर्य चला आता है) अथया रस खींचने मे। अथवा के यह मनुष्य जार ही अभिप्रेत होसकता है, ऐसा होने में स्त्री का भग (ही भग) होसकता है भज (भ्वा० उ०) से।

"One should not desire to speak or hear harsh words (abusive, inauspicious, or insulting speech), but rather should fear them—just as a gambler holding four dice fears until they are thrown. Just as that gambler is fearful, so should one be afraid of evil speech, never wishing for it, but instead always desiring to speak and hear auspicious hymns.

The prefix ā- has already been explained (in verse 113). This ā- is also seen in the sense of simile. For example: 'Just as the sun with his radiance…' (Ṛgveda 10.111.6). Here the sun is called jāra ('lover' or 'one who consumes'), because he wears away (destroys) the night; he is also the one who consumes the lights of the moon and others. Similarly, the Veda says: 'May the sun, who consumes the Upā (dawn), listen to us' . The dawn (Upā) is called his vadhu (wife/consort), since she accompanies him (just as a sister and brother walk together, one behind the other—so the sun follows after the dawn). Or, in another sense, since the sun draws forth the rasa (essence), he is called a jāra. Or it may simply be referring to a man as jāra, and in that case, bhaga (female organ) is understood in the sense derived from bhaj ('to partake, to share')."

“The contemplative form of the Devas —Mitra, Varuṇa, and Agni—has lifted its gaze upward. By its greatness, it has filled the heavenly realm, the earthly realm, and the mid-region. The Sun is the soul of all that moves and all that is stationary in the universe. Now, when he nourishes the rays, he is called Pūṣan. The following hymn is addressed to him.”

Allegations-

Nowadays some defensive Hindus try to turn every obscene verse into metaphor to find a easy route to escape, but according to Yaska Acharya this refers to a human lover. Agni is also described as his sister’s lover,

Rig Veda 10.3.3 ”Attendant on the Blessed Dame the Blessed hath come: the Lover followeth his Sister. Agni, far-spreading with conspicuous lustre…”

Refutation-

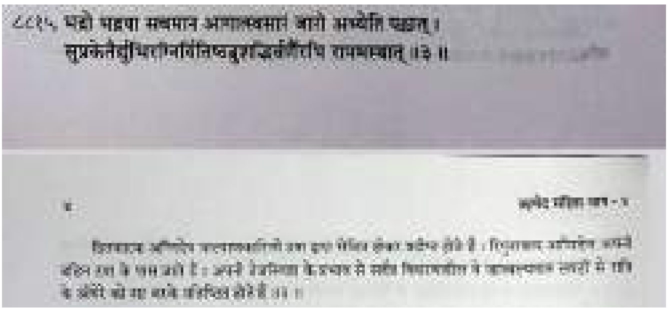
“Regarding the allegations on Rig Veda 10.3.3, I have presented two alternative Hindi translations. In neither of them is it explicitly stated that Agni engaged in incest with his sister Uṣā. It must be understood that Agni and Uṣā are not mortals; Agni represents fire , while Uṣā symbolizes the dawn. These are cosmic and natural forces, not human beings.”

Rig Veda 10.3.3 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya

हितकारक अग्निदेव कल्याणकारिणी उषा द्वारा सेवित होकर प्रदीप्त होते हैं।
रिपुनाशक अग्निदेव अपनी बहिन उषा के पास जाते हैं।

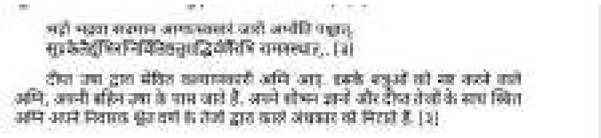
अपनी तेजस्विता के प्रभाव से सर्वत्र विचरणशील वे जाज्वल्यमान लपटों से
रात्रि के अंधेरे को नष्ट करके प्रतिष्ठित होते हैं॥ १३ ॥

“The beneficial god Agni, served by the auspicious goddess Uṣā (Dawn), blazes forth. The enemy-destroying Agni goes to his sister Uṣā. By the power of his brilliance, moving everywhere, he shines with resplendent flames, destroying the darkness of night and establishing light.” (Rigveda 4.3.13)



दीप्त उषा द्वारा सेवित कल्याणकारी अग्नि आए. इसके शत्रुओं को नष्ट करने वाले अग्नि, अपनी बहिन उषा के पास जाते हैं. अपने शोभन ज्ञानों और दीप्त तेजों के साथ स्थित अग्नि अपने निवारक श्वेत वर्ण के तेजों द्वारा काले अंधकार को मिटाते हैं. (३)

“May the auspicious Fire, attended by the radiant Dawn, come forth. Agni, the destroyer of his foes, goes to his sister, Uṣā. Established with his splendid wisdom and blazing radiance, Agni dispels the black darkness with his restraining, white brilliance.” (3)



Allegations-

Vedas speak of brother sister’s incest in several hymns including the Rig Veda 10.10 and Atharva Veda 18.1.8 which is a dialogue between Yama and Yami. But I find no reference of Ishwar prohibiting it. Yami in Rigved 10.10.5; Atharved 18.1.5 says that Tvashtar made them husband and wife in the womb of their mothers only, though Yama rebukes her saying it has not been done before. Veda also allows incest between father and daughter, it is mentioned in Rig Veda

Refutation-

“Rig Veda 10.10 and Atharva Veda 18.1 contain the dialogue between Yama and Yami. In this dialogue, Yami expresses her desire to unite with her brother, but Yama firmly rejects her proposal. He reproves her and instructs her in Dharma, declaring that sexual relations between brother and sister are sinful, forbidden, and destructive. Yama emphasizes why he would never engage in such an act, upholding the sanctity of righteousness.”

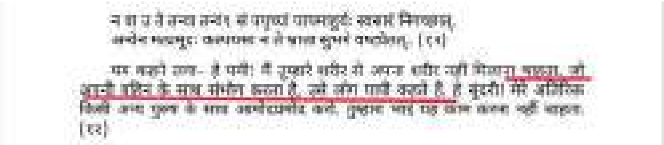
Rig Veda 10/10/12 – Yama condemns sexual relationship between brother and sister as sinful and prohibited

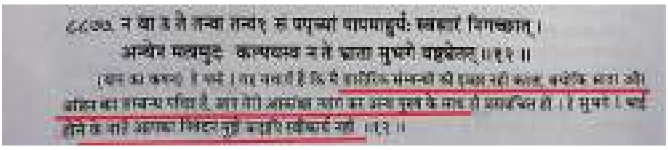
यम कहने लगा- हे यमी! मैं तुम्हारे शरीर से अपना शरीर नहीं मिलाना चाहता. जो अपनी बहिन के साथ संभोग करता है, उसे लोग पापी कहते हैं. हे सुंदरी ! मेरे अतिरिक्त किसी अन्य पुरुष के साथ आमोदप्रमोद करो. तुम्हारा भाई यह काम करना नहीं चाहता. (१२)

Yama said:
“O Yami! I do not wish to unite my body with yours. People call the one who lies with his own sister a sinner. O beautiful one! Enjoy pleasures with some other man, for your brother does not wish to engage in this act.” (12)



(यम का कथन) हे यमी ! यह यथार्थ है कि मैं शारीरिक संम्बन्धों की इच्छा नहीं करता, क्योंकि भ्राता और बहिन का सम्बन्ध पवित्र है, आप मेरी आकांक्षा त्याग कर अन्य पुरुष के साथ ही प्रसन्नचित्त हों । हे सुभगे ! भाई होने के नाते आपका निवेदन मुझे कदापि स्वीकार्य नहीं ॥ १२ ॥

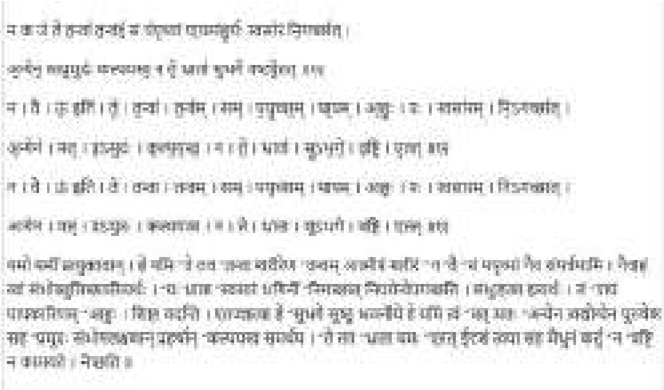
“O Yami! It is indeed true that I have no desire for physical relations, for the bond of brother and sister is sacred. Abandoning your wish, be cheerful with some other man. O fortunate one! As your brother, your request is by no means acceptable to me.” (12)



Sayanacharya commentary on Rig Veda 10/10/12 – The One who approaches and have sexual intercourse with his sister is a big sinner and a evil doer

यमो यमीं प्रत्युक्तवान् । हे यमि “ते तव “तन्वा शरीरेण “तन्वम् आत्मीयं शरीरं “न “वै “सं पपृच्यां नैव संपर्चयामि । नैवाहं त्वां संभोक्तुमिच्छामीत्यर्थः । “यः भ्राता “स्वसारं भगिनीं “निगच्छात् नियमेनोपगच्छति । संभुङ्त्श इत्यर्थः । तं “पापं पापकारिणम् “आहुः । शिष्टा वदन्ति । एतज्ज्ञात्वा हे “सुभगे सुष्ठु भजनीये हे यमि त्वं “मत् मत्तः “अन्येन त्वद्योग्येन पुरुषेण सह “प्रमुदः संभोगलक्षणान् प्रहर्षान् “कल्पयस्व समर्थय । “ते तव “भ्राता यमः “एतत् ईदृशं त्वया सह मैथुनं कर्तुं “न “वष्टि न कामयते । नेच्छति ॥

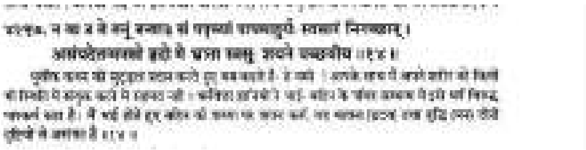
“O Yami! With my body I shall not unite with yours; I do not wish to enjoy you in that way. The man who, being a brother, goes to his sister—who approaches his own sibling for intercourse—him the wise declare to be a sinner, a doer of evil. Knowing this, O fortunate one, O lovable Yami, you should, with some other suitable man (and not with me), create for yourself joys marked by union and delight. For your brother Yama does not desire, does not wish, to commit such an act of intercourse with you.”



Atharva Veda 18.1.14 (Hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya, reframed in English):
“One who approaches his own sister for sexual intercourse is regarded as a grave sinner and an evildoer; such an unrighteous act leads to the destruction of beings.”

पूर्वोक्त कथन को सुदृढ़ता प्रदान करते हुए यम कहते हैं- हे यमी! आपके साथ मैं अपने शरीर को किसी भी स्थिति में संयुक्त करने में सहमत नहीं। धर्मवेत्ता ज्ञानियों ने भाई- बहिन के पवित्र सम्बन्ध में इसे धर्म विरुद्ध, पापकर्म कहा है। मैं भाई होते हुए बहिन की शय्या पर शयन करूँ, यह भावना (हृदय) तथा बुद्धि (मन) दोनों दृष्टियों से असंगत है ॥१४ ॥

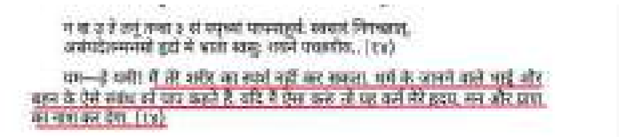
Strengthening his previous statement, Yama said:
“O Yami! Under no circumstance am I willing to join my body with yours. The wise, who know righteousness, have declared that in the sacred bond of brother and sister such a union is unrighteous and sinful. For me, as a brother, to lie upon the bed of my sister—this is incompatible both to the heart and to the mind.” (14)



Another hindi translation of Atharva Veda 18.1.14

यम- हे यमी ! मैं तेरे शरीर का स्पर्श नहीं कर सकता. धर्म के जानने वाले भाई और बहन के ऐसे संबंध को पाप कहते हैं. यदि मैं ऐसा करूं तो यह कर्म मेरे हृदय, मन और प्राण का नाश कर देगा. (१४)

"O Yami! I cannot touch your body. Those who know righteousness declare such a relation between brother and sister to be sinful. If I were to act in this way, the deed would bring ruin to my heart, my mind, and my very life-breath." (14)

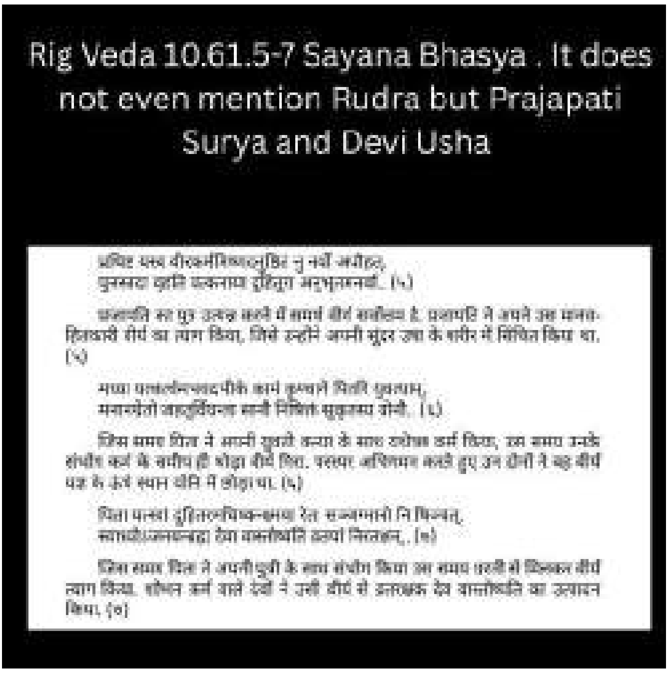


Allegations-

Rig Veda 10.61.5-7 "(Rudra), the benefactor of man, whose eager virile energy was developed, drew it back when disseminated (for the generation of offspring)again the irresistible (Rudra) concentrates (the energy) which was communicated to his maiden daughter. When the deed was done in mid-heaven in the proximity of the father working his will, and the daughter coming together, they let the seed fall slightly; it was poured upon the high place of sacrifice. When the father united with the daughter, then associating with the earth, he sprinkled it with the effusion[Semen]: then the thoughtful gods begot Brahma : they fabricated the lord of the hearth (of sacrifice) ; the defender of sacred rites."

Refutation-

Rig Veda 10.61.5-7 Sayana Bhasya . It does not even mention Rudra but Prajapati Surya and Devi Usha



Prajapati is Sun in Vedas

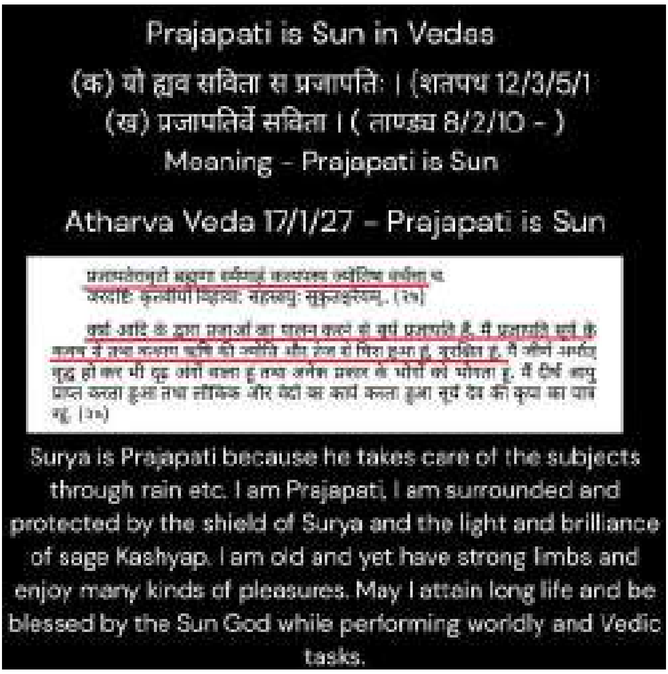
Meaning – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Surya is Prajapati because he takes care of the subjects through rain etc. I am Prajapati, I am surrounded and protected by the shield of Surya and the light and brilliance of sage Kashyap. I am old and yet have strong limbs and enjoy many kinds of pleasures. May I attain long life and be blessed by the Sun God while performing worldly and Vedic tasks.



Rig Veda 4.52.1 tells that Usha is daughter of Sun

Rig Veda 4.52.1-Usha, the daughter of the Sun, who is well praised, the able leader of all living beings and gives birth to the best fruits, appears and destroys the darkness after the night has passed.

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 tells that Usha is the sister of Night and destroys night . Thus Usha is Dawn Atharva Veda 19.12.1 – As soon as Usha arrives, she dispels the darkness of her sister night. After this Usha opens the worldly and Vedic path completely.

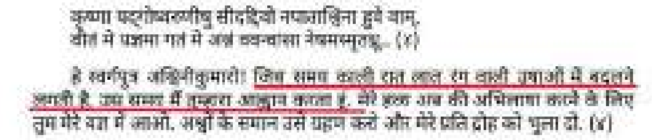
Rig Veda 10.61.14 states जिस समय काली रात लाल रंग वाली उषाओं में बदलने लगती है, उस समय मैं तुम्हारा आह्वान करता हूं – "At the time when the dark night begins to turn into the red-hued dawn (Usha) I invoke you."



हे स्वर्गपुत्र अश्विनीकुमारो! जिस समय काली रात लाल रंग वाली उषाओं में बदलने लगती है, उस समय मैं तुम्हारा आह्वान करता हूं. मेरे हव्य अन्न की अभिलाषा करने के लिए तुम मेरे यज्ञ में आओ. अश्वों के समान उसे ग्रहण करो और मेरे प्रति द्रोह को भुला दो. (४)

It is written in Nirukta (2.18) as well as in the Uṇādi Sūtra (4.235) that Uṣā (the dawn) is that which dispels the darkness of night. The time that follows the night, when the darkness begins to fade away — that early morning period is called Uṣā (dawn).N

Nirukta 2/18

उषाः कस्मादुच्छतीति सत्या रात्रेरपरः कालः ।
कस्मात् किस कारण से उषाः उषा कहा जाता है? क्योंकि उच्छतीति सत्या (अन्धकार को) निवारित करती हुई रहती है-दूर करती हुई रहती है। रात्रः रात्रि का अपरः कालः उत्तरवती (पिछला) काल होता है। विमर्श-

"Why is the dawn (Uṣā) called Uṣā? Because she 'ucchatīti satyā' — she removes, dispels (the darkness). The period following the night is known as Uṣā, the later (subsequent) part of the night, i.e., the early morning."

Discussion (Vimarśa):
The term Uṣā is derived from the root "ucch" (to rise, to remove), indicating that Uṣā is the one who removes darkness — hence, she is called Uṣā. She signifies the later phase of the night, when the darkness begins to withdraw, and light begins to appear. Thus, Uṣā represents the transition from night to day, symbolizing hope, awakening, and illumination.

In the Nirukta, Uṣā is described as a deity associated with the heavenly realm (dyuloka).

In Chapter 12 of the Nirukta, a list of deities associated with the dyuloka (celestial region) is given, where Uṣā is mentioned second, right after the Aśvins, as a deity of the heavenly sphere.

That is why in the Brāhmaṇa texts, Uṣā is referred to as a deity of the dyuloka. Whether one says "Uṣā" or "deity of the dyuloka", both refer to the same entity — there is no disagreement in this regard.

Furthermore, regarding Uṣā — the deity of the dyuloka — it is written in the Nirukta that she spreads light across half the region of the sky before the sun rises. This is what we commonly know as dawn or uṣā-kāla (the time of Uṣā in the early morning).

Now then, from here onwards, the dyusthānāḥ — the deities of the celestial realm (dyuloka) — are being explained.

(2. Uṣas / Ushas)
Uṣā, of the root vaṣṭiḥ meaning "to shine, radiate beauty," is derived from the verb root uśch (उच्छी) in the sense of radiating or rising.
One Uṣā is mādhyamikā, the intermediate — the other kind of Uṣā associated with the mid-region (antarikṣa) and related to lightning.
But here, this Uṣā is dyusthānīya — the heavenly Uṣā.

Vedic Mantra (Ṛgveda 1.92.13):

uṣas tac citram ābharāsmabhyam vājinīvati yena tokaṁ ca tanayaṁ ca dhāmahe Translation: O Uṣā! Bring us that brilliant (wealth), rich in horses, by which we may sustain our offspring and their children.

Explanation:

The word Uṣā refers to the early morning light before sunrise — she is a dyuloka-sthānīya (heavenly) goddess.
The word "Uṣā" is derived from two different roots:

- From the root vaś (वश्) meaning "to shine or radiate beauty" → implying her role in spreading brilliance and charm.
- From the root uśch (उच्छी) meaning "to rise or emit" → again suggesting the dawning or emitting of light.

There is another intermediate Uṣā (antarikṣa-sthānīya), signifying lightning or brilliance in the mid-region — but the current context is about the celestial Uṣā, associated with the dawn.

Mantra meaning:

This Uṣā, belonging to the region of space (rajas), in the eastern half of the sky — before the Sun rises — anoints everything with light (bhānuṁ añjate), illuminating all.
She awakens all beings (ketum akrat) and makes them aware.

Like warriors who cleanse and polish their weapons (dhṛṣṇavaḥ āyudhāni iva), preparing them for battle, similarly, this Uṣā brightens the world, energizing it for the day ahead.

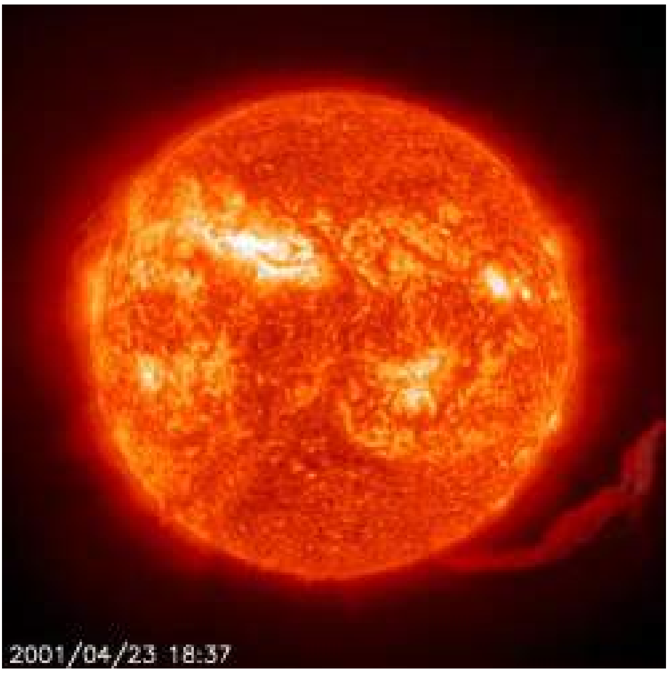
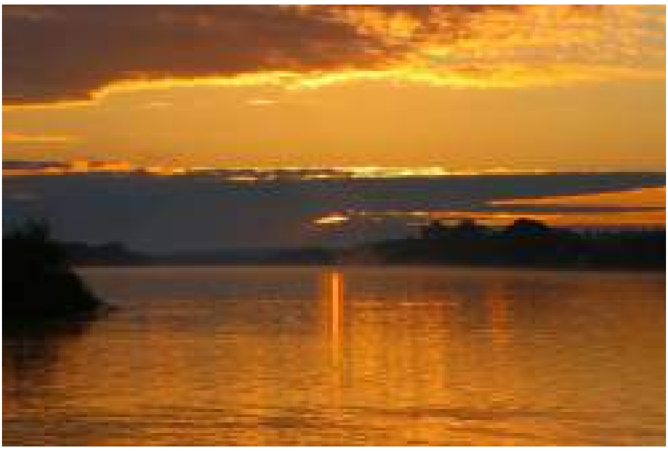
Who is Prajapati here ?

Sun is Prajapati



Who is Usha here ?

Usha is Dawn



Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta a famous Acharya who had defeated the buddhists had explained Prajapati-Usha Prakarn in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7. As per Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta the Prajapati Sun releasing its rays into Usha (Dawn) has been spoken of as intercourse between Man and Woman. This is also Supported by Rig Veda 1.115.2

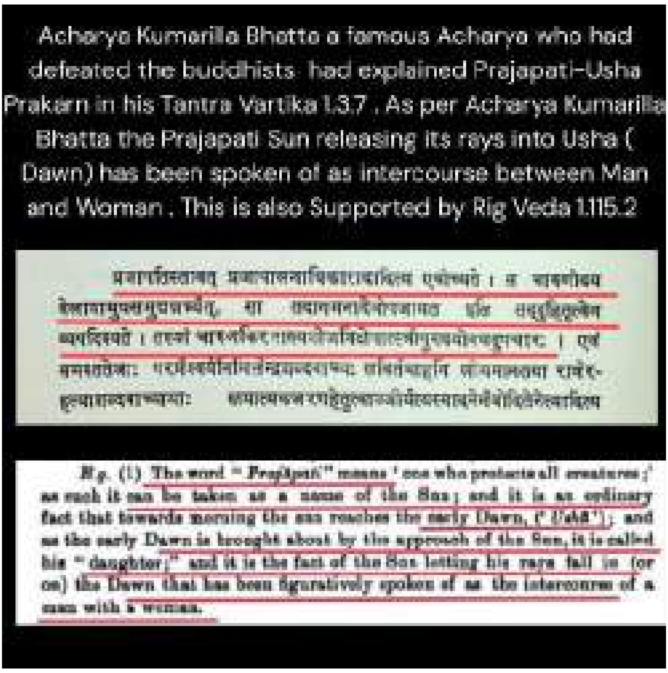
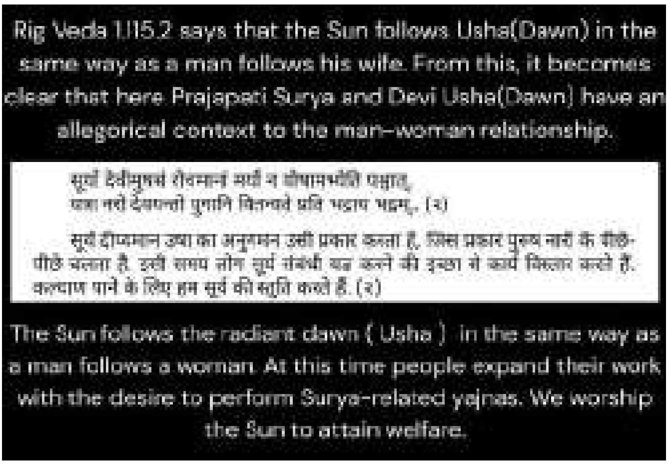
E.g. (1) The word "Prajapati" means 'one who protects all creatures;' as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his "daughter;" and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.



Rig Veda 1.115.2 says that the Sun follows Usha(Dawn) in the same way as a man follows his wife. From this, it becomes clear that here Prajapati Surya and Devi Usha(Dawn) have an allegorical context to the man-woman relationship.

सूर्य दीप्यमान उषा का अनुगमन उसी प्रकार करता है, जिस प्रकार पुरुष नारी के पीछे-पीछे चलता है. इसी समय लोग सूर्य संबंधी यज्ञ करने की इच्छा से कार्य विस्तार करते हैं. कल्याण पाने के लिए हम सूर्य की स्तुति करते हैं. (२)
The Sun follows the radiant dawn (Usha) in the same way as a man follows a woman. At this time people expand their work with the desire to perform Surya-related yajnas. We worship the Sun to attain welfare.



Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.115.2 explains it further-

“सूर्यः “देवीं दानादिगुणयुक्तां “रोचमानां दीप्यमानाम् “उषसं “पश्चात् “अभ्येति उषसः प्रादुर्भावानन्तरं तामभिलक्ष्य गच्छति । तत्र दृष्टान्तः । “मर्यो “न “योषाम् । यथा कश्चिन्मनुष्यः शोभनावयवां गच्छन्तीं युवतिं स्त्रियं सततमनुगच्छति तद्वत् । “यत्र यस्यामुषसि जातायां “देवयन्तः देवं द्योतमानं सूर्यं यष्टुमिच्छन्तः “नरः यज्ञस्य नेतारो यजमानाः “युगानि । युगशब्दः कालवाची । तेन च तत्र कर्तव्यानि कर्माणि लक्ष्यन्ते यथा दर्शपूर्णमासौ इति । अग्निहोत्रादीनि कर्माणि “वितन्वते विस्तारयन्ति । यद्वा । देवयन्तो देवयागार्थं धनमात्मन इच्छन्तो यजमानपुरुषा युगानि हलावयवभूतानि कर्षणाय वितन्वते प्रसारयन्ति । तामुषसमनुगच्छतीत्यर्थः । एवंविधं “भद्रं कल्याणं सूर्यं “प्रति “भद्राय कल्याणरूपाय कर्मफलाय’ स्तुमः इति शेषः । यद्वा । देवयन्तः देवकामा यजमाना युगानि युग्मानि भूत्वा पत्नीभिः सहिताः सन्तो भद्रं कल्याणम् अग्निहोत्रादिकं कर्म भद्राय तत्फलार्थं प्रति प्रत्येकं यस्यामुषसि प्रवृत्तायां वितन्वते विस्तारयन्ति ॥ मर्यः । 'मृङ् प्राणत्यागे'। छन्दसि निष्टर्क्य इत्यादौ यत्प्रत्ययान्तो निपात्यते । ' यतोऽनावः' इत्याद्युदात्तत्वम् । युगानि । युजेः कर्मणि घञ् । युगशब्दः कालविशेषे रथाद्युपकरणे च (का. ६. १. १६०) इति उञ्छादिषु पाठात् गुणाभावः अन्तोदात्तत्वं च । वितन्वते । ' तनु विस्तारे । ' तनादिकृञ्भ्य उः । सहेति योगविभागात तिङोपसर्गस्य समासे सति ' समासस्य ' इत्यन्तोदात्तत्वम् ॥

The Sun follows the radiant goddess Uṣas, who is endowed with divine qualities such as generosity and shines brilliantly. After Uṣas manifests, the Sun, drawn by her beauty, proceeds after her—just as a young man constantly follows a graceful young woman. When Uṣas rises, the worshippers (devayantaḥ), desiring to behold the shining deity (the Sun), prepare to offer their worship. The word yugāni refers to time cycles or ritual periods, such as the new and full moon sacrifices, during which obligatory rites like Agnihotra are performed and expanded. Alternatively, yugāni may refer to the components of a plough, indicating that these sacrificers—desiring divine rewards and wealth—engage in agricultural labor by spreading their yokes for plowing. Thus, it is said that they follow Uṣas into activity. This benevolent and auspicious Sun is praised for auspicious purposes—the fruitful results of sacred actions. Or again, devayantaḥ, the sacrificers, paired with their wives (yugāni as conjugal pairs), perform auspicious acts like Agnihotra during the rise of Uṣas, each extending their rituals in pursuit of divine blessings.

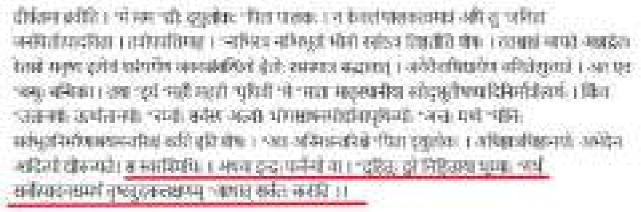
. Then what is the semen of Prajapati Sun here ? Rig Veda 1.164.33 Sayana Bhasya tells that Father form Sun impregnates his daughter Usha/Heaven with Sun rays form Virya/Semen which gives rise to all living beings . Thus the Semen here is Sun rays only

Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.164.33

“स स्वरश्मिभिः । अथवा इन्द्रः पर्जन्यो वा । दुहितुः दूरे निहिताया भूम्याः गर्भं सर्वोत्पादनसमर्थं वृष्ट्युदकलक्षणम् आधात् सर्वतः करोति ।।”

“He, with his own rays places the seed (garbha), capable of producing all beings and characterized by rain or water, into the daughter , who is situated afar. He causes this (fertilization) from all directions.”



Allegations–

Birhadaranyaka Upanishad 1.4.3 ”He was not at all happy. Therefore people (still) are not happy when alone. He desired a mate. He became as big as man and wife embracing each other. He parted this very body into two. From that came husband and wife. Therefore, said Yajnavalkya, this (body) is one-half of oneself, like one of the two halves of a split pea. Therefore this space is indeed filled by the wife. He was united with her. From that men were born.”

AdiShankara Acharya writes on this verse,

‘’He, the Viraj called Manu, was united with her, his daughter called Satarupa, whom he conceived of as his wife. From that union men were born.’’ by Shankara on Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 1.4.3,

“He did not find delight (in being alone). Therefore, a solitary person does not find delight. He desired another. He became of the same measure (form) as a man and woman embracing one another. He then divided this very body into two parts; from that arose husband and wife. That is why this body is like a split pea or grain – so said Yājñavalkya.

Hence, this [half-man] is completed by the woman, like space is completed (filled) by the woman. He united with her; and from that union, human beings were born.” (Verse 3)

उससे उस द्विधा पातनसे पति और पत्नी हुए-यह लौकिक पति-पत्नियों [के पति-पत्नी नाम] का निर्वचन किया गया है। इसीसे, क्योंकि यह जो स्त्री है शरीरका ही पृथग्भूत अर्धभाग है, इसलिये यह शरीर आत्माका अर्धबृगल है।

“From that splitting into two, husband and wife came into being — this explains the origin (etymological explanation) of the worldly terms ‘husband’ and ‘wife.’

And because the woman is a separated half-part of the same body, therefore this body is like a split grain (half of a whole) of the self (ātman).”

Manu Smriti. 11.170 Translation: Pandit Shree Jagannathshastri Tailang. Bharatiya Vidya Prakashan, Varanasi. First Edition. 2011.-

Sex with sister, friend’s wife, daughter-in-law, unwed virgin girl, Chāndāli etc. is a major sin, atoned only by death.

गुरुतल्प (गुरुपत्नीगमन) महापातकों में है, जिसका प्रायश्चित्त प्रधान रूप से मृत्यु का वरण है। सगी बहिन, मित्रपत्नी, पुत्रवधू, अविवाहित अक्षतयोनि कुमारी कन्याएं, चाण्डालादि अन्त्य जाति की स्त्रियां इन के साथ संभोग करने पर उसका प्रायश्चित्त वही है, जो गुरुपत्नी के साथ सम्भोग करने पर है ॥१७०॥

Gurutalpa (sexual intercourse with the wife of one’s guru) is among the Mahāpātakas (greatest sins), the principal expiation for which is the voluntary acceptance of death. The same expiation as for intercourse with the guru’s wife applies in cases of intercourse with one’s own sister, a friend’s wife, one’s daughter-in-law, an unmarried virgin girl of intact chastity (akṣatayoni), or women of the lowest castes such as Chāṇḍālas. ॥170॥

गुरुतल्पव्रतं कुर्याद् रेतः सिक्त्वा स्वयोनिषु ।
सख्युः पुत्रस्य च स्त्रीषु कुमारीष्वन्त्यजासु च ॥१७०॥

अन्वयः—स्वयोनिषु सख्युः पुत्रस्य च स्त्रीषु कुमारीषु अन्त्यजासु च रेतः सिक्त्वा गुरुतल्पव्रतं कुर्यात् ॥१७०॥

मन्वर्थमुक्तावली—''गुरुतल्पे'' ति । स्वयोनिषु सोदर्यभगिनीषु तथा मित्रभार्यासु पुत्रभार्यासु चाण्डालीषु प्रत्येकं रेतः सिक्त्वा गुरुतल्पव्रतमावहितं कुर्यात् । अत्रापि ज्ञानाभ्यासविषयत्वात् मरणान्तिकम् । अत एव –

''रेतः सिक्त्वा कुमारीषु चाण्डालीष्वन्त्यजासु च ।
सपिण्डापत्यदारेषु प्राणत्यागो विधीयते ॥''

इति यमेन मरणान्तिकमुपदिष्टमज्ञानात्तद् व्रतम् ॥१७०॥

तात्पर्यदीपिका—गुरुतल्प (गुरुपत्नीगमन) महापातकों में है, जिसका प्रायश्चित्त प्राणान्त रूप से मृत्यु का वरण है । वह ''गुरुतल्प्यभिभाष्यैनम्'' (११/१०३) इत्यादि पद्य से लेकर ''चान्द्रायणं वा त्रीन् मासान्'' (११/१०६) इत्यादि पद्यतक प्रतिपादित है । मरणान्त-प्रायश्चित्त का समर्थन यमस्मृति भी इस प्रकार करती है—

''रेतः सिक्त्वा कुमारीषु चाण्डालीष्वन्त्यजासु च ।
सपिण्डापत्यदारेषु प्राणत्यागो विधीयते ॥''

मेधातिथि के मत में महापातकों के अतिरिक्त अन्यत्र मरणान्त प्रायश्चित्त का विधान नहीं है । सगी बहिन इत्यादि के साथ बार बार यौनाचार करने पर मरणान्त प्रायश्चित्त है—''गुरुतल्पव्रतमित्यादिविशेषेऽपि न तेन स्वयोन्यादिष्वितिवेषमपि अतिदिश्यते, अपितु ''प्राजापत्यं चोदकम्'' इति महापातकत्वात् । न हि महापातकेभ्योऽन्यत्र मरणान्तं प्रायश्चित्तमस्ति, अभ्यासे तु स्यादेव ॥१७०॥

अविवाहित अक्षतयोनि कुमारी कन्याओं के साथ सहगमन करने पर द्विविध प्रायश्चित्त है-स्वेच्छया सहगमन का प्रायश्चित्त हल्का है और बलात्कार का भारी । चाण्डाली आदि स्त्रियों के साथ ज्ञात-अज्ञात अवस्थाओं में सहगमन के भिन्न-भिन्न प्रायश्चित्त गौतम स्मृति (२३/३२-३३) में इस प्रकार वर्णित है—''अन्त्यावसायिनी गमने कृच्छ्राब्दमकामतः द्वादशरात्रम्'' ॥१७०॥

हिन्दी भावार्थ—सगी बहिन, मित्रपत्नी, पुत्रवधू, अविवाहित अक्षतयोनि कुमारी कन्याएं, चाण्डालादि अन्त्य जाति की स्त्रियां इन के साथ संभोग करने पर उसका प्रायश्चित्त वही है, जो गुरुपत्नी के साथ सम्भोग करने पर है ॥१७०॥

Stretching the Vagina

”O pregnant woman; I the physician and surgeon open your organ; Stretch the mouth of the womb; separate the embryo from arteries adjacent to it…”- Atharva Veda hymn 1.11.5,

Even if Ishwar wanted to convey a message, it would have been better for him to use some decent words, not words like only long penis penetrating deep into vagina can impregnate or I am stretching the labia of vagina. Now let’s see some more vulgar words used by Ishwar.

Yajur Veda 20.9 ”May my memory, navel, knowledge, anus, my wife’s productive womb [Yoni/Vagina], my testicles the givers of pleasure through cohabitation, my sovereignty and penis flourish…”

Yajur Veda 19.76 ‘‘The generative organ [Penis] releases urine, but when it enters the womb [Vagina], it releases semen…” T

Atharva Veda 5.25.1 ‘The phallus of man which sows the seminal fluid, lays in the female organ as feather on a shaft, the seed of embryo which is drawn from limb to limb and from cloud and heavenly region.’

Yajur Veda 8.10 ”…O’ master of a devoted wife, full of prowess and semen, thou art the progenitor of offspring. Impregnate semen in me…”

Atharva Veda 5.25.8 ”Says wife to her husband at the time of pregnation ceremony [Sexual intercourse]— O husband! please rise up, put forth your manly strength, lay the germ of embryo in the womb…”

Yajur Veda 19.87 ‘‘A husband full of semen like a pitcher, enjoyer, progenitor of children…”

Yajur Veda 19.84 "Those learned persons get progeny, who chase afar folly and ill intention, generate near at hand, by milk and medicinal juices, through generative organ, pure, disease-destroying, children-producing semen…"

Atharva Veda 12.3.29 "…Let these drops mingle with these rices as woman sees her husband and embraces him for cohabitation"

Yajur Veda 12.93 "O married man, God has created the various herbs, whose king is Soma, that overspread the earth. With their aid, grant semen for this woman, and spread the knowledge of these medicines unto all."

Atharva Veda 6.101.1 "O man! be strong through practice of continee, gain vitality through vital air, strengthen your body and invigorate extensively your limbs, so that the genitive organ of yours develop in proportion to your body and with that you attend your wife in sexual function."

Atharva Veda 6.101.2-3 "O man of medical science! extend the organ of the importent man like the bow with medicine through which the physicians make the debilitated man strong and stimulant and through which the ailing man excitant. I, the physician extend the potential power of your organ of generation like the bow-string on its arch, O feeble one! and you like the lion pouncing on dear enjoy the sex with your wife without being subject of any agony and discomfiture."

Indra the Testicle breaker

Atharva Veda 6.138.2. "Turn him into a eunuch that wears his hair dressed, and into one that wears a hood! Then Indra with a pair of stones shall break his testicles both!"

Atharva Veda 14.1.36 "Let Ashvinau, Prana and Apana adorn this bride with that sheen or splendour by whatever are filled these Akshas, the organs of body, by whatever is endowed the Sura woman having good bodily strength, by whatever is in the thigh of the woman having great sexual appetite

Refutation-

This is Atharva Veda 1.11.5 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya . Atharva Veda 1.11 is a hymn to use at the time of child birth, i.e, when a woman is giving birth to a baby. Nothing about stretching the Vagina for sex is mentioned.

हे प्रसूता ! निर्विघ्न प्रसव के लिए गर्भमार्ग, योनि एवं नाड़ियों को विशेष प्रकार से खोलता हूँ। माँ व बालक को नाल से अलग करता हूँ। जेरी से शिशु को अलग करता हूँ। जेरी पूर्णरूपेण पृथ्वी पर गिर जाए ॥५

"O woman in labor! For a smooth and unobstructed delivery, I specially open the birth passage, the womb, and the channels. I separate the mother and child from the umbilical cord. I detach the child from the placenta. May the placenta completely fall upon the earth." (5)

"May our navel and heart-consciousness be endowed with special knowledge. May our anus be balanced. May our testicles be filled with delight. May the limbs of our women be auspicious. “The Aśvinī Kumāras and Goddess Sarasvatī produced life-sustaining, nectar-like, fertile semen from milk. By their nearness they dispelled the darkness (tamisrā) born of ignorance and wrong understanding. They cause the non-essential portion located in the stomach to be expelled through the apāna-vāyu via the urinary tract, and the food situated in the intestines to be assimilated with various juices, while eliminating the non-essential part.” (84)

Ram Sharma Acharya had given some basic information about the 136th Sukta of 20th Kanda of Atharva Veda – Again nothing about the so called Mahanagni the naked woman .

यह सूक्त 'आहनस्य' नाम से जाना जाता है। इसमें प्रजा-उत्पत्ति का वर्णन माना जाता है। मन्त्र में 'अस्याः' सम्बोधन को 'योनि' के सन्दर्भ में लेने से 'पस' और मुष्क आदि के अर्थ श्री गुप्तांग परक हो जाते हैं। 'अस्याः' को वेदिका या उर्वरा भूमि के रूप में लेने से व्यापक सृष्टि या राष्ट्र व्यवस्था का भाव बनता है।' पस' का अर्थ पुरुषेन्द्रिय के अतिरिक्त 'पापनाशक' तथा राष्ट्र भी होता है। इसी प्रकार 'मुष्क' का अर्थ अण्डकोशों के अतिरिक्त 'गुच्छक' जटायुक्त तस्कर एवं विषनाशक भी होते हैं। मंत्र क्रमांक ५ से ११ तक महान् अग्नि का वर्णन आया है। वह सृष्टि उत्पादक पोषक अग्नि ही हो सकती है। इस आधार पर प्रारम्भिक मंत्र में 'अस्याः' सम्बोधन उत्पादक या पोषक वेदिका के सन्दर्भ में लिया जाना युक्तिसंगत लगता है-

This hymn is known as the "Āhanasya" Sūkta. It is regarded as describing the origin of progeny (creation of beings).
In the mantra, if the word "asyāḥ" is taken in reference to the yoni (womb), then terms such as "pas" and "muṣka" take on meanings connected with male genital organs.
But if "asyāḥ" is understood as referring to the altar (vedikā) or fertile earth (urvarā bhūmi), then the sense becomes one of universal creation or social/national order.

The word "pas", besides signifying the male organ, also means destroyer of sin and even nation/people.
Similarly, "muṣka", besides signifying the testicles, can also mean a bundle, a plaited-haired robber, or even a poison-destroyer.

From mantras 5 to 11, there is a description of the great Agni (Fire). This can only refer to the creative and nourishing Fire that brings forth the universe.

On this basis, it seems more reasonable that in the opening mantra, the address "asyāḥ" should be taken in the sense of the altar (vedikā) or the nourishing/fruitful ground, rather than in a purely physiological sense.

उसे 'सकल्प' कहते हैं। 'यद् इन्ग्राहम्' (श्र० ८ १४, १; अवे० २० २०, १) ऐतश' के प्रष्ठाप का उदाहरण है, जब कि 'महागझी' (अरे० २० १३६, ५) एक कामनाभिव्ययक मन्त्र है। पुनब्ध 'सु' (अ३० २० १३५, १-३) में प्रतिराध व्यक्त किया गया है।

It is called a "Sankalpa" (resolve or intention). "Yad ingrāham" (Śruti 8.14.1; AV 20.20.1) is an example of prasthāpa (the formal statement of intention), whereas "Mahāgṛhī" (AV 20.136.5) is a hymn expressing kāmanā (desire or wish-fulfillment). Again, in "Su" (AV 20.135.1–3), the intention is expressed through pratirādhā (affirmation or enactment).

Allegations-

Atharva Veda 14.1.22 "You attain a long life, not short of hundred years obeying the rules of disciplined cohabitation without spoiling the semen in vain and according to the law of Dharma play your role accompanied by sons, grandsons…"

Here Ishwar is asking husband and wife to have disciplined sex i.e., they should have sex just like Ishwar has prescribed them. It is considered a sin if semen is spoiled i.e., one should not let semen fall on earth the proper place for depositing semen is Vagina only (as per Hindu texts and scholars), it is mentioned in Upanishad, Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6.4.4-5 "Having known this, Uddalaka the son of Aruna, Naka the son of Mudgala and Kumaraharita said: "Many mortals, brahmins only in name, perform the sexual act without knowledge of what has been said and depart from this world impotent and without merit." Even if this much semen of one asleep or of one awake is spilled, He should touch it and repeat the following mantra: "Whatever semen of mine has split on earth, whatever flowed to plants, whatever to water, I reclaim it." With these words he should take the semen with his ring finger and thumb and rub it between his breasts or eyebrows, repeating the following mantra: "Let the semen return to me, let Vigour come to me again, let glow and good fortune come to me again. May the deities who dwell in the sacrificial fire put the semen back in its proper place."

Following verse says that Vedic god Varuna had become impotent whose virility was restored by Gandharva via a herb and it also has many obscene words,

Atharva Veda 4.4.1-7 "1. Thee, the plant, which the Gandharva dug up for Varuna, when his virility had decayed, thee, that causest strength, we dig up. Ushas (Aurora), Sûrya, (the sun), and this charm of mine; the bull Pragâpati (the lord of creatures) shall with his lusty fire arouse him! This herb shall make thee so very full of lusty strength, that thou shalt, when thou art excited, exhale heat as a thing on fire! The fire of the plants, and the essence of the bulls shall arouse him! Do thou, O Indra, controller of bodies, place the lusty force of men into this person! Thou (O herb) art the first-born sap of the waters and also of the plants. Moreover thou art the brother of Soma, and the lusty force of the antelope buck! Now, O Agni, now, O Savitar, now, O goddess Sarasvatî, now, O Brahmanaspati, do thou stiffen the pasas as a bow! I stiffen thy pasas as a bowstring upon the bow. Embrace thou (women) as the antelope buck the gazelle with ever unfailing (strength)! The strength of the horse, the mule, the goat and the ram, moreover the strength of the bull bestow upon him, O controller of bodies (Indra)!

Yajur Veda 25.26 "This perishable body made of earth, the home of all organs is created for the enjoyment of the soul. God, for the excellent enjoyment of this active soul, grants this enjoyable object."

Yajur Veda 25.7 "...Strengthen scrotum with the testicles. Examine the strength of a horse from his penis. Produce progeny with semen. Digest meals with the force,Strengthen your belly by free discharge of digested food through anus."

"O bride and bridegroom! May you both remain here, never separated from one another. May you enjoy the full span of life in a special way. While upholding your household duties, may you, together with sons, grandsons, and descendants, live a life filled with joy and delight." (22)

Coming on to Allegations on Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6.4.4-5

The often-misinterpreted passage from Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad 6.4.4–5 is not an obscene description but a prescriptive teaching on disciplined sexuality within dharma. Ācāryas like Uddālaka, Naka, and Kumārahārīta equate marital union with a yajña (sacrifice), stressing that it must be performed in accordance with divine ordinance and for progeny, not mere indulgence. Semen (vīrya) is presented as sacred vitality, a form of tejas, whose wastage is viewed as spiritual loss; hence, the text prescribes symbolic rites of reclamation for accidental emissions. Far from promoting obscenity, the Upaniṣad emphasizes self-control (brahmacarya), sanctity of marriage, and the conservation of life-energy, framing sex as a sacramental duty rather than a hedonistic act.

निश्चय ही इस मैथुनकर्मको वाजपेयसम्पन्न जाननेवाले अरुणनन्दन उद्दालक कहते हैं, इसे उस रूपमें जाननेवाले मुद्गलपुत्र नाक कहते हैं तथा इसे उक्त रूपमें जाननेवाले कुमारहारित मुनि भी कहते हैं कि 'बहुत-से ऐसे मरणधर्मा नाममात्रके ब्राह्मण हैं, जो निरिन्द्रिय, सुकृतहीन और मैथुन-विज्ञानसे अपरिचित होकर भी मैथुनकर्ममें आसक्तिपूर्वक प्रवृत्त होते हैं, वे परलोकसे भ्रष्ट हो जाते हैं। यदि पत्नीका ऋतुकाल प्राप्त होनेसे पूर्व इस प्राणोपासकका वीर्य अधिक या कम सोते समय अथवा जागते समय गिर जाता है (तो उसे निम्नाङ्कित प्रायश्चित्त करना चाहिये) ॥ ४॥

उस वीर्यको हाथसे छूए तथा अभिमन्त्रित करे – स्पर्श करते समय इस प्रकार कहे- 'आज जो मेरा वीर्य स्खलित होकर पृथिवीपर गिरा है, जो पहले कभी अन्नमें भी गिरा है तथा जो जलमें पड़ा है उस इस वीर्यको मैं ग्रहण करता हूँ।' ऐसा कहकर अनामिका और अङ्गुष्ठसे उस वीर्यको ग्रहण करके दोनों स्तनों अथवा भौंहोंके बीचमें लगावे। लगाते समय इस प्रकार कहे-' (जो स्खलित वीर्यरूपसे बाहर निकल गयी थी, वह मेरी) इन्द्रिय पुनः मेरे पास लौट आवे। मुझे पुनः तेज और पुनः सौभाग्यकी प्राप्ति हो। अग्नि ही जिनके स्थान हैं, वे देवगण पुनः मेरे शरीरमें उस वीर्यको यथास्थान स्थापित करे दें' ॥५

6.4.4
“Indeed, it is said by Aruṇanandana Uddālaka, who knows the act of maithuna (union) as a Vājapeya sacrifice; by Nak, son of Mudgala; and by the sage Kumārahārīta, who all understand it in this manner: ‘There are many Brāhmaṇas in name only, bound to mortality, devoid of strength, bereft of merit, and ignorant of the sacred knowledge of maithuna, who yet engage in the act with mere attachment—they fall away from the higher world. If, before the wife’s season (ṛtukāla) has arrived, the semen of this upāsaka of prāṇa (vital force) is discharged—whether in sleep or while awake—then he must perform the following expiation.’”

“He should touch that semen with his hand, consecrating it with mantra, and as he touches it he should say: 'That semen of mine which has fallen today upon the earth, which formerly has fallen upon food, or which has been cast into water—this semen I now reclaim.' Having spoken thus, he should take it up with the ring finger and the thumb, and apply it either to his breast or to the space between his eyebrows. As he applies it he should say: 'May my virility return to me again. May I obtain vigor once more, and good fortune once more. May the gods whose dwelling is fire re-establish this semen properly within my body.'"

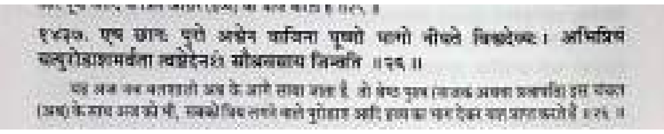
This is Yajur Veda 25.26 hindi translation by Ram Sharma Acharya – Nothing obscene here

यह अज जब बलशाली अश्व के आगे लाया जाता है, तो श्रेष्ठ पुरुष (याजक अथवा प्रजापति) इस चंचल (अश्व) के साथ अज को भी, सबको प्रिय लगने वाले पुरोडाश आदि हव्य का भाग देकर यश प्राप्त करते हैं ॥ २६ ॥

“When the ram is brought before the powerful horse, then the noble man (the priest or Prajāpati), together with this restless steed, offers the ram a share of the oblation—such as the beloved sacrificial cake (puroḍāśa)—and thereby attains glory.” (26)



Coming on to allegations on Yajur Veda 25.7

“Āchārya Uvaṭa’s Bhāṣya on Yajurveda 25.7 explains the verse as a symbolic act of gratifying various deities through different bodily organs. The interpretation is purely metaphorical, illustrating the body as a microcosm of the cosmos. There is no reference to sexual activity or obscenity in this passage.”

With the large intestine, I please the deity Pūṣan. The anus is called apāna or pāyu according to Amarakoṣa. The feminine gender here is Vedic usage (chāndasa). It is large and also called sthūlagudā; by its larger portion I propitiate the deities called Andhas (the blind ones). With the other portions of the anus, apart from the sthūlagudā, I please the serpents.

With the small intestines (āntras), connected with the digestive channels (since 'am' means to move or to partake, therefore food is divided by them), I gratify the gods.

With the bladder (vasti, 'the vessel below the navel in which urine is contained'), I satisfy the deities of waters.

With the testicles (muṣka, aṇḍa, vṛṣaṇa—the fleshy globes on both sides of the generative organ), I please the deity Vṛṣaṇa.

With the generative organ , I gratify the deity Vājī (the vigorous one). By the seed (retaḥ), which means semen, vigor, or potency, I please the deity of progeny.

With bile (pitta, which 'falls, trickles, or flows'), a special bodily humor, I please the Cāṣa deities (certain bird-deities).

With the third portion of the rectum (pāyu, apart from the anus already mentioned), by means of the excretion of faeces, I please the Pradara deities.

With the dung-balls (śakapinḍa, faecal lumps), I gratify the Kūṣmān deities.

CONCLUSION-

The Vedas have severely condemned Adultery and any type of Lustful Activities

Rig Veda 10.5.6 Sayana Bhasya

Sāyaṇācārya, in his commentary on Ṛgveda 10.5.6, has clearly explained that the 'seven maryādās' (moral restraints) are not injunctions meant to be practiced or indulged in, but rather prohibitions—boundaries never to be crossed. These maryādās represent sinful acts that the seers strongly condemned, and Sāyaṇa explicitly interprets them as practices that are to be rejected and renounced, not observed."

कवयः मेधाविन ऋषयः "सप्त "मर्यादाः । कामजेभ्यः क्रोधजेभ्यश्चोद्धृताः पानमक्षाः स्त्रियो मृगया दण्डः पारुष्यमन्यदूषणमिति सप्त मर्यादाः । यद्वा । स्तेयं गुरुतल्पारोहणं ब्रह्महत्यां सुरापानं दुरुकृतकर्मणः पुनःपुनः सेवां पातकेऽनृतोद्यम्' (निरु. ६. २७) इति निरुक्ते निर्दिष्टाः सप्त मर्यादाः । अवस्थिताः "ततक्षुः । तक्षतिः करोतिकर्मा । सुष्ठु लङ्घनीयाश्चक्रुः । त्यक्तवन्त इत्यर्थः । "तासां मर्यादानाम् "एकामित् एकामेव अंहुरः पापवान् पुरुषः "अभि "गात् अभिगच्छति । यस्त्वेवं करोति स पापवान् भवतीत्यर्थः । किंच "आयोः तस्य मनुष्यस्य "स्कम्भः स्कम्भयिता निरोधकोऽग्निः "उपमस्य समीपभूतस्यायोः "नीळे स्थाने "पथाम् आदित्यरूपस्य स्वस्य रश्मीनां "विसर्गे विसर्जनस्थानेऽन्तरिक्षमध्ये वर्तमानेषु "धरुणेषु उदकेषु "तस्थौ विद्युदात्मना तिष्ठति । अनेन लोकत्रयवर्तित्वमिति ।।

"The wise seers, the intelligent Ṛṣis, have declared seven restraints (moral boundaries): desires born of lust, wrath born of anger, indulgence in intoxicating drink, gambling, women (i.e., illicit relations), hunting, punishment (i.e., violence/oppression), harsh speech, and other forms of abuse—these are called the seven restraints (मर्यादाः).

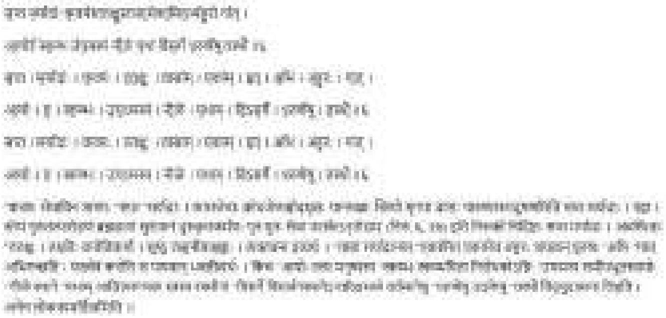
Or alternatively, (the seven restraints are explained as): theft, adultery with the teacher's wife (गुरुतल्पारोहण), killing of a Brāhmaṇa, drinking liquor, repeatedly engaging in wicked deeds, and false undertakings—these are the sins mentioned in the Nirukta (6.27).

These restraints (मर्यादाः) have been firmly established. They (the wise) cut them off, meaning: they (the virtuous) gave them up, abandoned them. Of these restraints, if even one alone is transgressed by a man, he becomes sinful. Whoever commits such an act is indeed sinful.

Moreover, the pillar (स्कम्भः), the upholder of the life of that man, is Agni, who restrains (as Nirodhaka). In the blue place of the sky, near the abode of the paths, in the region of the sun, at the point of release of its rays, in the midst of the atmosphere, in the supporting waters—there Agni abides in the form of lightning. By this (it is shown) that Agni pervades the three worlds."



In Nirukta 6.27 Rishi Yaska the seven maryadas which are never to be practiced and it includes व्यभिचार meaning Adultery

'सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, जो जन में से एक को भी माप्तहोता है, वह पापी होता है' (१००५१६) सात मर्यादाएं ऋषिों ने बनाई हैं, उनमें से एक को भी प्राप्त होता हुआ पापी होता है। (वह सात यह हैं-) चोरी, व्यभिचार, ब्रह्म इत्या, गर्भ हत्या, सुरापान, दुष्कर्म का बार२ सेवन, पातक के विषय में झूठ बोलना (किसी पर झूठा पातक लगाना) । (११२) बत यह निपात है खेद और अनुकम्पा अर्थ में ॥२७॥

"Seven restrictions (or codes of conduct) have been established by the sages. Whoever among people violates even one of them is considered sinful. These seven are: theft, adultery, disrespect toward Brahman, abortion, consumption of alcohol, repeated indulgence in sinful acts, and lying about sins (i.e., falsely accusing someone of a sin). This is explained in the sense of causing sorrow and requiring compassion."

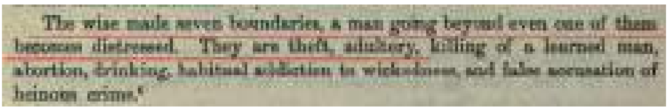
ओ। माया जाने से पड़के, कहाँ हो हे पुकार के सुनने वालो'। जाल में पड़े हुए मत्स्यों का यह आर्त (पद्ये वचन) बतलाते हैं। मत्स्याः = जल में चलते हैं। अथवा एक दूसरे को भक्षण के लिये मस्त होते हैं। जाल = जल में चलने वाला होता है, अथवा जल में होने वाला, या जल में लेटने वाला। (१२.१–) अंहुरः= पापवाला; अंहुरण भी इसी का होता है 'पापवाले (अन्य पुरुषों) से यहाँ (रक्षा) करता हुआ' (१।१०५।१७) यह भी निगम होता है। 'सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, जो उन में से एक को भी प्राप्त होता है, वह पापी होता है' (१०।५।६) सात मर्यादाएं ऋषियों ने बनाई हैं, उनमें से एक को भी प्राप्त होता हुआ पापी होता है। (वह सात यह हैं—) चोरी, व्यभिचार, ब्रह्म हत्या, गर्भ हत्या, सुरापान, दुष्कर्म का बारम्बार सेवन, पातक के विषय में झूठ बोलना (किसी पर झूठा पातक लगाना)। (१२.२–) बत यह निपात है खेद और अनुकम्पा अर्थ में ॥२७॥



The wise made seven boundaries, a man going beyond even one of them becomes distressed. They are theft, adultery, killing of a learned man, abortion, drinking, habitual addiction to wickedness, and false accusation of heinous crime.[1]

Refutation of ” Hinduism and Lust ” Article by Vedkabhed

Allegations-

Parashara Smriti 3.28-29 Celestial damsels seize for themselves, and take delight with the hero, whose body is wounded or cut by arrows, clubs, or maces. Thousands of celestial damsels, rush forward in a hurry towards a hero killed in battle, each proclaiming, ‘He is my lord, he is mine’.

Parashara Smriti 3.31 If victorious, wealth is won; if death results, beautiful women fall to his share; since this corporeal frame is liable to perish in an instant’s time, why should we be shy of meeting death on a field of battle?

Mahabharata 12.98.46-51 ”Foremost of Apsaras, numbering by thousands, go out with great speed (for receiving the spirit of the slain hero) coveting him for their lord.”

Hindu fanatics should somehow make sure that their wives don’t immolate themselves in their funeral pyre. Because if the wife immolates with her husband then he can’t enjoy Virgins in heaven,

Srimad Devi Bhagavatam 3.15.10-13 ”Some warriors on being slain in the battle instantly arose in a celestial car to the heavens and was seen addressing the celestial nymph, who came already within his embrace, thus “O one of beautiful thighs. Behold! how my beautiful body is lying on the earth below!” Another warrrior thus slain got up in the heavens on a celestial car, came in possession of a celestial nymph and when he was sitting with her in the car, his former wife in the earth made herself a sati and burnt herself up in the funeral pyre, thus got a celestial body, came up to the heavens; nd that chaste virtuous woman drew away perforce her own husband away from that celestial nymph. Two warriors, went up, slew each other and lay down dead at the same time. They went up in the heavens at the same time and there began quarrel with each other and fight with their weapons for one and the same celestial nymph. Some hero got in the heavens a nymph more lovely and beautiful than himself and he thus became very much attached and devoted her. He began to describe his own heroic qualities and also to copy dotedly the qualities of his lover so that she might remain faithfully attached to him."

His fellow warriors enjoyed the virgins but this poor guy couldn't because his wife immolated herself in his pyre. And took him away forcibly from the celestial nymph (Apsara).

Mahabharata 13.79.27 "That man who habitually makes gifts of kine comes to be regarded as the foremost of his species. When thus proceeding to Heaven, he is received by a thousand celestial damsels of beautiful hips and adorned with handsome robes and ornaments. These girls wait upon him there and minister to his delight. He sleeps there in peace and is awakened by the musical laughter of those gazelle-eyed damsels, the sweet notes of their Vinas, the soft strains of their Vallakis, and the melodious tinkle of their Nupuras. "

Mahabharata 3.42.23 "…It is through thy grace, O mountain, that Brahmanas and Kshatriyas and Vaisyas attain heaven, and their anxieties gone, sport with the celestials…" "

Mahabharata 13.106.53-55 "'…That man who, unafflicted by disease and free from every malady, observes a fast, verily acquires, at every step the merits that attach to Sacrifices. Such a man ascends to Heaven on a car drawn by swans. Endued with puissance, he enjoys every kind of happiness in heaven for a hundred years. A hundred Apsaras of the most beautiful features wait upon and sport with him…"

Padma Purana VII.9.99b-104 "I shall tell you about the abode of him whose dead body is seen on the sandy bank of Ganga heated by the rays of the sun: with his entire body smeared with divine fragrant substances and sandal he always sports with divine damsels in heaven."

Shiva Purana, Vidyeshwara Samhita 1, 24.66-70 "He who wears Tripundra raises a thousand predecessors and a thousand successors in his family. In this life he will enjoy all wordly pleasures… He will assume then a divine auspicious body endowed with eight accomplishments. He will travel by a divine aerial chariot attended by celestial gods… finally reach Brahma's region where he will sport with a hundred virgins."

Skanda Purana V.iii.198.115-117 "The man who has become pure (by taking bath) and who has observed fast shall keep awake in the night on the fourteenth lunar day in the dark half. He shall then worship Siva. Dispelling the delusion caused by sins, he goes to Rudraloka. He will acquire the form of Rudra with three eyes and four arms. He will sport about with celestial girls as long as the moon, sun and stars shine."

Skanda Purana VI.232.26 "If any one always makes arrangement for dance and music programmes in the abode (shrine) of Visnu, the celestial damsels will dance before him when he goes to heaven."

Brahma Purana 65.4-5 "Brahma said:- O sages, listen all of you, even as I speak about that highest region which is wished for by the devotees. It is blessed, holy land and destructive of the world. It is most excellent of all the worlds. it is named (Visnu-loka) after the name of Visnu. It is a sacred abode full of mysteries. It is honoured and worshipped by the three worlds.[18-29] In that city of Visnu, worshipped by all, people walk about in divine aerial chariots…They are adorned by the celestial maidens…The people sport about with the various young women of Gandharvas and the group of celestial clans. The young women look very splendid with their faces as charming as the moon. Their breasts are plump and lifted up. Their waists are beautiful and elegant. Some are dark in complexion and some fair. Their gait is like that of elephants in their rut…As long as the heaven stands alongwith the moon and stars, they dally with the celestial nymphs. They resemble heated gold. They are devoid of old age and death."

Brahma Purana 59.3-8 "O brahmins, by taking the holy dip perfectly in the ocean thus, in that excellent holy centre, by duly worshipping Narayana…He goes to the world of Visnu on an aerial chariot with the lustre and colour of the sun…For the period of a hundred Manvantaras or more he will enjoy excellent pleasures and carry on dalliance with the celestial damsels. He will be devoid of old age and death."

Devi Bhagavatam 4.6.56-58 "The Apsaras said :– Of the five senses; sound, etc., the pleasures attained through the sensation of touch are excellent, and are reckoned as the source of Bliss; no other pleasures stand equal to it…If you like to go to Heaven, be pleased to know that there is no Superior Heaven to Gandhamadan (the mountain like intoxicating happiness of the senses). Dost thou enjoy the highest bliss, the pleasant sexual intercourse with us, the heavenly damsels in this very beautiful and lovely place."

Skanda Purana III.i.1.77 "If one takes the holy bath for the sake of sexual pleasure with celestial damsels in heaven, he attains the same."

Agni Purana 292.10-17 "…The Man who joins the cows in their dance of wild ecstasy, is sure to enjoy the fruits of heaven in the company of celestial dancing girls…"

Matsya Purana 78.10 "He also goes to the all the seven lokas, in each kalpa, where he enjoys in the company of the nymphs and get bliss…"

Matsya Purana 107.4-5 "One who resides on the banks of the Ganges, with or without any object in view, and dies there, goes to heaven and remains far away out of the sight of hell. Such a man sits in a vimana, adorned by decent birds, like swans and flamingoes, where celestial nymphs sing lovely songs. Thus he enjoys long life in heaven."

Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Krishna Janma Khanda 59.77-103 "… Virtuous men, after having performed sacred deeds in India, go to heaven and there attended by celestial damsels enjoy celestial bliss for a long time…Fair one, this Heaven is not a field of action; it is a place of enjoyment. And of all enjoyments, association with an excellent woman is the best…"

Varaha Purana 149.24-25 "In Dvaraka which gives delight to the Vaisnavas, there is the great place called Pancasara which is a little within the shore. He who bathes there foregoing siz meals, delights himself with the Apsarases in heaven."

Vamana Purana 9.52 "One this occasion the musical instruments of gods and demons began to play, groups of saints and Siddhas stationed in the sky began to witness the brave warriors who were killed in the open battle, fighting each other and whom the best of the Apsarases were conveying to heaven."

Narada Purana, Uttarabhaga 63.153b-156a "Willingly or unwillingly he who dies in Ganga, attains the abode of Sakra. He never goes to hell. He rides in an aerial chariot to which swans and Sarasa birds are yoked. He sleeps in the midst of Apsaras and is wakened by them…"

Shiva Purana, Umasamhita 7.45-46 "Yama tells them -'You are noble souls duly blessed, since you have performed what is ordained in the Vedas. Good deeds that are conducive to divine happiness have been performed by you. Ascend the celestial aerial chariot and go to heaven to enjoy the pleasures in the company of celestial damsels and fulfil your cherished desires."

Who are the Apsaras (Nymphs/Heavenly Virgins)?

Srimad Devi Bhagavatam 9.1.96-143 "…those that are sprung from Tamo Guna are recognised as worst and belonging to the unknown families. They are very scurrilous, cheats, ruining their families, fond of their own free ways, quarrelsome and no seconds are found equal to them. Such women become prostitutes in this world and Apsaras in the Heavens…"

In other words, Ishwar provides the Dvijas (Brahmins, Kshatriyas, Vaisyas) with numerous prostitutes in heaven. Especially for those who are slain on the battlefield. After reading these verses will Hindu fanatics post these verses on their social media accounts?

Refutation-

This false allegation, made by these Halala Putra Pedophile Followers to cover up their own doctrine of 72 virgins (Hūrīs) in Islamic Jannah for male sexual gratification, attempts to quate Apsaras with such figures. This comparison is entirely baseless and historically dishonest. In Islamic theology, Hūrīs are explicitly described as perpetual sexual partners provided to men in paradise. In contrast, in the Hindu tradition, Apsaras are not prostitutes, nor sexual commodities.

As attested in the Nāṭyaśāstra (1.46–51, 1.82–88), Apsaras were divinely created by Lord Brahmā from his mind, not for sensual indulgence, but to serve a sacred artistic function — to assist in the performance of the Nāṭyaveda, the Fifth Veda, intended for the moral, cultural, and spiritual elevation of society. They were skilled dancers, embodying the Kaiśikī (Graceful) Style in classical theatre, and served as guardians and beautifiers of the sacred playhouse (nāṭyamaṇḍapa). Their role was tied to religious performance, music, and the preservation of dharma through art, not to sexual servitude.

Thus, conflating Apsaras with Hūrīs is a deliberate distortion — ignoring scriptural evidence and misrepresenting the spiritual and cultural role of these divine dancers in Sanātana Dharma.

Apsara (अप्सर) is a Sanskrit word referring to "celestial nymphs".
Acording to the Nātyaśāstra 1.82-88, when Brahmā, Indra and all other gods went to inspect the natyamandapa designed by Viśvakarmā, Ihe assigned different deities for the protection of the playhouse itself as well as for the objects relating to dramatic performance (prayoga).
As such, Brahmā assigned the Apsaras to its rooms (gallery, śālā). The protection of the playhouse was enacted because of the jealous Vighnas (malevolent spirits), who began to create terror for the actors.

Chapter I – Origin of Drama (nātya)
7-12 :Indra as their head, [approached] Brahmā and spoke to him, be pleased to create another Veda which will belong [equally] to all the Colour-groups (varna)."
14-15:Brahma said"I shall make a fifth Veda on the Natya with the Semi-historical Tales (itihāsa), which will conduce to duty (dharma), wealth (artha) as well as fame, will contain good counsel and collection, will give guidance to people of the future as well, in all their actions, will be enriched by the teaching of all authoritative works (śāstra) and will give a review of all arts and crafts."

With this resolve the Holy One from his memory of all the Vedas, shaped this Natyaveda compiled from the four of them.
19-20.After the creation of the Natyaveda, Brahmā said to Indra "Semi-historical Tales have been composed by me; you are to get them [dramatized and] acted by gods. Pass on this Nātyaveda to those of the gods who are skilful, learned, bold in speech and inured to hard work."

Creation of Apsarasas for the Graceful Style
46-47. This Style cannot be practised properly by men except with the help of women." Then the powerful Lord (Brahmā) created from his mind apsaras(nymphs) who were skillful in embellishing the drama, and gave them over to me [for helping me] in the performance.
47-50. [Their names are]: Mañjukeśī, Sukeśī, Miśrakeśi, Sulocana, Saudāminī, Devadattā, Devasenā, Manoramā, Sudatī, Sundarī, Vidagdhā, Sumālā, Santati, Sunandā, Sumukhi, Māgadhī, Arjunī, Saralā, Kerala, Dhṛti, Nandā, Supuskalā and Kalabhā.

Conclusion: Devastri(apasara) were dancers created by bramba for benifit of Natya Veda.

In both the Ṛgveda (10.123.5) and Atharvaveda (2.2.5), Apsaras are clearly described as the lawful wives of Gandharvas, not as prostitutes. The Ṛgveda depicts "the Lady, sweetly smiling, who supports her Lover (Gandharva) in the sublimest heaven," showing a divine conjugal bond, while the Atharvaveda calls them directly "the Gandharva's wives, Apsaras," to whom homage is paid. These verses affirm their status as married celestial women in a sacred partnership, leaving no scriptural basis for equating them with sexual commodities or the "72 virgins" concept of Islamic paradise.

2)Husbands of Apsaras:
Atharva Veda and Rig veda mentions them as wives of Gandharvas,
1)The Apsaras, the Lady, sweetly smiling, supports her Lover (Gandharva) in sublimest heaven – (RV 10.123.5). 2) Haunters of darkness, shrill in voice, dice-lovers, maddeners of the mind. To these have I paid homage, the Gandharva's wives, Apsaras- (AV 2.2.5).

2)Husbands of Apsaras:

Atharva Veda and Rig veda mentions them as wives of Gandharvas,
1)The Apsaras, the Lady, sweetly smiling, supports her Lover (Gandharva) in sublimest heaven – (RV 10.123.5).
2) Haunters of darkness, shrill in voice, dice-lovers, maddeners of the mind. To these have I paid homage, the Gandharva's wives, Apsaras– (AV 2.2.5).

Rig Veda 10/123/5 Sayana Bhasya –

Apsarāḥ — “Apsaras” means “those who draw (sārayitrī) the essence (sāra) of the waters (apām),” or “those who move (saranti) upon the waters for sport or play.”
In the phrase upasiṣmiyāṇā kānta-samīpam upagamya īṣat-hasantī, the term means “approaching her beloved, with a gentle smile.” (Smig form here is an old Vedic perfect, and the gentle smile is implied by īṣat-hasane.)

Such a woman (yoṣā) is of lightning-like form (vidyud-rūpā), approaching her lover (jāram, literally “paramour” — either an unlawful lover or one she is passionately attached to). The lover (jāra) is “the one who causes her to enjoy” — in the simile, the beloved Vena is sustained (bibharati, “nourishes”) in the highest sky (vyoman).

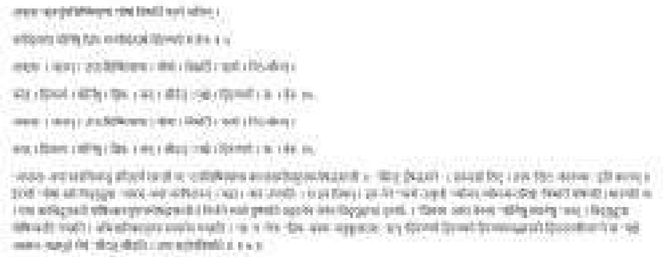
Just as a beautiful woman, approaching her lover with a soft smile, nourishes and pleases him in a secluded place, so too does she (the lightning-like woman) with her face (or mouth) nurture and delight Vena — that is, the flash of lightning delights the sky (Vena here is a poetic metaphor).

The phrase priyasya asya venasya means “of this dear Vena,” and yoniṣu sthāneṣu carat means “moving in the places of origin,” i.e., in the regions where lightning appears. Being lightning-formed, the woman moves (goes) herself, like an abhisārikā (a heroine who goes of her own accord to meet her beloved).

And “Vena,” her beloved, being the most agreeable to her, sits (sīdat) in the golden (hiraṇyaya) — meaning in a golden, shining, splendid form — or, in another interpretation, “in the cloud which is like his own wing (support).” There he sits together with her.



Atharva Veda 2.2.5 Sayana Bhasya

Thus, there are such Apsaras, and to these belong the wives of the Gandharvas (gandharva-patnīḥ), whose husbands are the Gandharvas themselves. By the rule vibhāṣā sa-pūrvasya (Pāṇini 4.1.34), the feminine form takes īn and bka endings. The offering (namaḥ) is made to the

Moksha-Mukthi

The ultimate goal of Hinduism is to attain moksha(escape from reincarnation) not enjoying heavenly pleasures.

Upanishads nor any Sanatan scripture says that after death hindus will get 1000 apsaras for sexual pleasure as these malech claim, well we don't have these islamic concept of 72 prostitutes in Quranic heaven

Four Goals in life in Hinduism
Dharma – Artha – Kama – Moksha

Purushartha means an "object of human pursuit". It is a key concept in Hinduism, and refers to the four proper goals or aims of a human life. Hindu scriptures say there are four goals in civilised religious life:
1) dharma – righteousness
2) artha – economic development
3) kama – Love
4)moksha – liberation, the ultimate goal.
Moksha is achieved through union with God (yoga) also called mukti, means to liberation from the cycle of death and rebirth (samsara). Derived from the Sanskrit word muc ("to free"), the term moksha literally means freedom from samsara.

Importance of Moksha in Sanatan Dharma

Srimad Bhagavad Geeta 2.51 Shankar Bhasya

For, men of wisdom, possessing evenness of mind, cast off the fruit of works i.e., escape from good and bad births. They then attain knowledge. While still alive, they are released from the bond of birth, and attain the supreme abode of Vishnu the state of moksha or liberation... which is free from all turmoils.

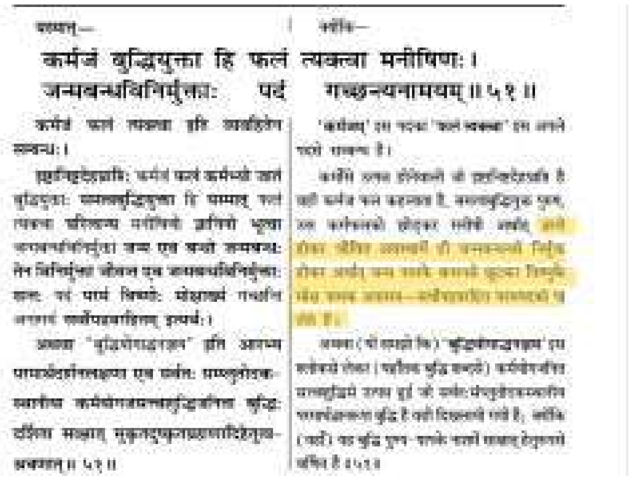
For, men of wisdom, possessing evenness of mind, cast off the fruit of works i.e., escape from good and bad births. They then attain knowledge. While still alive, they are released from the bond of birth, and attain the supreme abode of Vishnu—the state of moksha or liberation...which is free from all turmoils.

Or, the wisdom (buddhi) referred to in the three verses (ii. 49—51) may be the Sankhya-(not the Yoga-) wisdom, the knowledge of the Absolute Reality, (corresponding to the wide-spread expanse of water), which arises when the mind is purified by Karma-Yoga; for, it is said in ii. 50 that wisdom directly brings about the destruction of good and bad deeds.

When is that conviction attained which (it is said) arises as soon as the mind is purified by Karma-Yoga or devotion through works? The answer follows:



कर्मजं बुद्धियुक्ता हि फलं त्यक्त्वा मनीषिणः।

THE VEDIC VERDICT: WHY SEXUAL PLEASURE AFTER DEATH IS BOTH

IMPOSSIBLE AND ANTI-VEDIC

The Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 5.10 clearly states:
"The Self is neither female, nor male, nor neuter; whatever body it adopts, with that body it identifies."

This directly implies that gender is not an inherent property of the soul (ātman), but only a temporary attribute of the physical body (sthūla śarīra). After death, the gross body—which alone possesses reproductive organs and biological functions—perishes. The surviving subtle body (sūkṣma śarīra) does not possess the physical capacity for sexual intercourse. Therefore, any concept of post-mortem sexual activity, such as "enjoying" sexual intercourse in heaven is both physiologically impossible and philosophically opposed to Vedānta.

Vedic teaching views the afterlife not as a playground of sensual indulgence but as a transitional state in the cycle of saṃsāra, whose ultimate aim is mokṣa—liberation from rebirth—not eternal gratification. Post-death, the soul's true nature is beyond male/female distinctions, rendering the idea of sexual enjoyment not only baseless but fundamentally anti-Vedic, as it misrepresents the very purpose of existence described in the Upaniṣads.

Shvetashvatara Upanishad Adhaya 5 Mantra 10 Geeta Press Gorakhpur says

यह [विज्ञानात्मा] न स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जो-जो शरीर धारण करता है उसी उसीसे सुरक्षित रहता है ॥ १० ॥

This [conscious self/Atma] is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever body it takes on, by that very body it is protected. (10)

Shankar Bhasya –

'नैव स्त्री' इत्यादि। स्वयं
साक्षात् अद्वितीय ब्रह्मस्वरूप होनेके कारण यह न स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जिस-जिस स्त्रीशरीर, पुरुषशरीर अथवा नपुंसकशरीरको धारण करता है उसी-उसीसे यह विज्ञानात्मा रक्षित – सुरक्षित रहता है अर्थात् उसी-उसी शरीरके धर्मोको अपनेमें आरोपित कर ऐसा मानने लगता है कि 'मैं स्थूल हूँ, मैं कृश हूँ, मैं पुरुष हूँ, मैं स्त्री हूँ, मैं नपुंसक हूँ' इत्यादि ॥ १० ॥

"Neither female," etc.—Since it is itself the direct, non-dual Brahman in nature, it is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever female body, male body, or neuter body it takes on, by that very body this vijñānātmā is preserved—protected, meaning it superimposes upon itself the qualities (dharma) of that very body and comes to think: "I am stout, I am thin, I am a man, I am a woman, I am a neuter," and so on. (10)

नैव स्त्री न पुमानेष न चैवायं नपुंसकः।

यद्यत्स्त्रीशरीरं पुरुषशरीरं नपुंसकशरीरं वादत्ते तेन तेन स च विज्ञानात्मा रक्ष्यते संरक्ष्यते तत्तद्धर्मानात्मन्यध्यस्याभिमन्यते स्थूलोऽहं कृशोऽहं पुमानहं स्त्र्यहं नपुंसकोऽहमिति ॥ १० ॥	यह जिस-जिस स्त्रीशरीर, पुरुषशरीर अथवा नपुंसकशरीरको धारण करता है उसी-उसीसे यह विज्ञानात्मा रक्षित—सुरक्षित रहता है अर्थात् उसी-उसी शरीरके धर्मोंको अपनेमें आरोपित कर ऐसा मानने लगता है कि 'मैं स्थूल हूँ, मैं कृश हूँ, मैं पुरुष हूँ, मैं स्त्री हूँ, मैं नपुंसक हूँ' इत्यादि ॥ १० ॥

Explanation of Geeta Press on this Shruti Mantra –

एषः = यह जीवात्मा; नन; एव-तो; स्त्री स्त्री है; नन; पुमान् पुरुष है; च=और; न=न; अयम्-यह; नपुंसकः एव नपुंसक ही है; सः वह; यत् यत्- जिस-जिस; शरीरम्-शरीरको; आदत्ते ग्रहण करता है; तेन तेन-उस-उससे; युज्यते सम्बद्ध हो जाता है ॥ १०॥

This [conscious self/Atma] is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever body it takes on, by that very body it is protected. (10)

व्याख्या – जीवात्मा वास्तवमें न तो स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जब जिस शरीरको ग्रहण करता है, उस समय उससे संयुक्त होकर वैसा ही बन जाता है। जो जीवात्मा आज स्त्री है, वही दूसरे जन्ममें पुरुष हो सकता है; जो पुरुष है, वह स्त्री हो सकता है। भाव यह कि ये स्त्री, पुरुष और नपुंसक आदि भेद शरीरको लेकर हैं; जीवात्मा सर्वभेदशून्य है, सारी उपाधियोंसे रहित है ॥ १० ॥

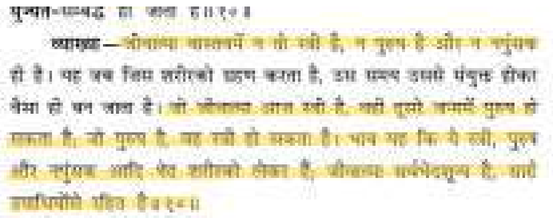
The jīvātmā (individual soul) in reality is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever body it takes on, at that time it becomes associated with it and appears accordingly. The soul that is now a woman may in another birth become a man; one who is a man now may become a woman. The point is that distinctions such as female, male, and neuter arise only with the taking on of a body; the jīvātmā is entirely free from all such differences and is devoid of all limiting attributes.

नैव स्त्री न पुमानेष न चैवायं नपुंसकः।
यद् यच्छरीरमादत्ते तेन तेन स युज्यते ॥ १० ॥

एषः=यह जीवात्मा; न=न; एव-तो; स्त्री=स्त्री है; न=न; पुमान्=पुरुष है; च=और; न=न; अयम्=यह; नपुंसकः एव=नपुंसक ही है; सः=वह; यत् यत्=

अध्याय ५] श्वेताश्वतरोपनिषद् ४९१

जिस-जिस; शरीरम्=शरीरको; आदत्ते=ग्रहण करता है; तेन तेन=उस-उससे; युज्यते=सम्बद्ध हो जाता है ॥ १० ॥



पुन्नाम-सम्बद्ध हो जाता है॥२७॥

व्याख्या—जीवात्मा वास्तवमें न तो स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जब जिस शरीरको ग्रहण करता है, उस समय उससे संयुक्त होकर वैसा ही बन जाता है। जो जीवात्मा आज स्त्री है, वही दूसरे जन्ममें पुरुष हो सकता है, जो पुरुष है, वह स्त्री हो सकता है। भाव यह कि ये स्त्री, पुरुष और नपुंसक आदि भेद शरीरको लेकर हैं, जीवात्मा सर्वभेदशून्य है, सारी उपाधियोंसे रहित है॥२८॥

This principle is also affirmed in the Mahābhārata, Anuśāsana Parva, Chapter 145 (p. 1278/2566 Geeta Press Gorakhpur), where it is stated that the Jīva-Ātman is neither male nor female. Being beyond gender distinctions, the soul is free from sexual intercourse in Svarga as well as in all other worlds."

उमाने पूछा- देवदेव ! महादेव! भगवन्! यह विषय तो मैंने अच्छी तरह सुन लिया। अब यह बताइये कि आत्माका स्त्री या पुरुषमेंसे किस जातिके साथ सम्बन्ध है? ।।

जीवात्मा स्त्रीरूप है या पुरुषरूप? एक है या अलग-अलग ? देव! यह मेरा संशय है। आप इसका निवारण करें ।।

श्रीमहेश्वरने कहा- जीवात्मा सदा ही निर्विकार है! वह न स्त्री है न पुरुष। वह कर्मके अनुसार विभिन्न जातियोंमें जन्म लेता है। पुरुषोचित कर्म करके स्त्री भी पुरुष हो सकती है
और स्त्री-भावनासे युक्त पुरुष तदनुरूप कर्म करके उस कर्मके अनुसार स्त्री हो सकता है ।।

Umā asked:
"O Lord of Lords, O Great God, O Bhagavān! This subject I have already heard well. Now please tell me — does the soul (Ātman) have relation with the class (nature) of woman or of man?

Is the Jīva-soul of the nature of woman or of man? Is it one, or are they separate? O Lord, this is my doubt. Please dispel it."

Śrī Maheśvara (Śiva) said:
"The Jīva (individual soul) is always without modification (nirvikāra). It is neither woman nor man. According to actions (karma), it takes birth in various kinds of beings.

By performing manly deeds, a woman can become a man; and a man, imbued with feminine disposition, by performing such actions, can become a woman according to that karma."

The Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (4.4.17) declares that the Self in which the five beings and the unmanifest space are established is none other than the immortal Brahman, and the knower of that becomes immortal. Later (4.4.20), the same text describes this Brahman as immeasurable, eternal, pure, subtler than unmanifest space, unborn, the Self, great, and imperishable. Together, these mantras clearly establish that one's true Self (Ātman) is not a perishable body but the immortal Brahman itself—unborn, beyond measure, subtler than space, and free from all physical limitations. Since sexual enjoyment belongs only to the gross body, which perishes at death, and the surviving Self is described as beyond birth, gender, and physicality, the idea of post-mortem sexual activity in heaven is both physiologically impossible and philosophically contrary to the Upaniṣadic teaching. The aim of life, as these verses emphasize, is not sensual gratification but realization of the Self as Brahman, leading to immortality and liberation.

established (some count Niṣāda as the fifth, or the five varṇas beginning with Brāhmaṇa); and also that unmanifest space (avyākṛta ākāśa) of which it has been said 'in which the thread is interwoven,' and of which it was earlier declared, 'O Gārgī, in this Imperishable (Akṣara) indeed space is woven back and forth'—that very Self I regard as the immortal Brahman. I do not know the Self apart from that. What follows from this? By knowing that Brahman, I am immortal. 'Beyond space'—it is distinct from, subtler and more pervasive than that space which is called the unmanifest (avyākṛta). It is unborn; by denying birth, all other modifications such as 'it exists, it grows,' and so on are also denied, since all change begins with birth. That is the Self, it is great—supreme in measure -and it is eternal and imperishable."

The Chandogya Upaniṣad 8.1.5 declares that the Self (Ātman) is untouched by decay, death, grief, hunger, or thirst, and is described as satyakāma (whose desires are true) and satyasaṅkalpa (whose will is true). This shows that Brahman is not bound to the body's needs or pleasures, for it transcends all material limitations. The mention that "all desires are established in this Brahma-city" means they are perfectly fulfilled in the Self, not through physical gratification but through realization of its truth. Hence, the liberated state described here excludes lustful or sensual indulgence; true fulfillment is the Self's freedom from decay, hunger, thirst, and craving.

उसे कहना चाहिये 'इस (देह) की जरावस्थासे यह (आकाशाख्य ब्रह्म) जीर्ण नहीं होता। इसके वधसे उसका नाश नहीं होता। यह ब्रह्मपुर सत्य है; इसमें [सम्पूर्ण] कामनाएँ सम्यक् प्रकारसे स्थित हैं; यह आत्मा है, धर्माधर्मसे शून्य है तथा जराहीन, मृत्युहीन, शोकरहित, भोजनेच्छारहित, पिपासाशून्य, सत्यकाम और सत्यसंकल्प है; जिस प्रकार इस लोकमें प्रजा राजाकी आज्ञाका अनुवर्तन करती है तो वह जिस-जिस सन्निहित वस्तुकी कामना करती है तथा जिस-जिस देश या भूभागकी इच्छा करती है उसी-उसीके आश्रित जीवन धारण करती है' ॥५॥

"It should be said: This (Brahman, known here as the space within the heart) does not grow old through the old age of the body. It is not slain when the body is slain. This is the true city of Brahman (brahmapura). In it, all desires are well established. This is the Self, free from dharma and adharma, free from old age, free from death, free from sorrow, free from hunger, free from thirst; it is of true desire (satyakāma) and of true resolve (satyasaṅkalpa). Just as in this world people, following the command of a ruler, live according to the place and objects he desires, so too here, whatever objects of desire he longs for, and in whatever region he wishes to live, by that alone he lives."

In Katha Upanishad 1.1.25–28, Yama Ṛṣi deliberately tested Nachiketas to see whether he was fit for the supreme knowledge of the Ātman. Yama offered him every form of worldly enjoyment—wealth, sons, long life, celestial maidens, music, and dance—but Nachiketas firmly rejected them. He declared such pleasures to be śvobhāvāḥ ("ephemeral, uncertain even of lasting till tomorrow"), pointing out that they only weaken the senses and destroy dharma, strength, wisdom, and fame. Even a long span of life, he argued, is trivial when set against the brevity of existence itself—for if even Brahmā's lifespan is short, what to say of mortals?

He further reasoned that a discerning man who has approached the deathless cannot cling to perishable things like sons, gold, or lustful pleasures, which are the desires of the ignorant. The wise naturally seek higher and higher goals, not to be dragged down by unstable enjoyments. Thus, Nachiketas asked Yama not to tempt him with such illusory pleasures, but to grant him the true knowledge he sought—the truth of what lies beyond death.

These verses are a direct rejection of the idea that lasting happiness can come from sensuality, whether in this life or after death. Yama tempts Nachiketas with women, music, and long life precisely to test him, and Nachiketas dismisses them as fleeting and destructive, saying they weaken the senses and cannot satisfy the soul. The contrast between preyas (what merely pleases, like sexual or material indulgence) and śreyas (what truly benefits, the pursuit of Self-knowledge) shows that sensuality is not only irrelevant to immortality but an obstacle to it. The teaching is clear: eternal fulfillment comes only by transcending bodily desires, not by indulging them

With these attendants granted by me, you may have your service done—such as foot-washing and other ministrations. “Having attained the presence of the deathless gods who never suffer decay, and knowing that a far higher purpose is to be gained from them, what mortal—himself subject to old age and death—dwelling here upon the earth (called kvadhah, lower in comparison with the higher worlds), would still desire unstable objects such as sons, wealth, or gold that are longed for by the undiscerning? In another reading, instead of kvadhah-sthaḥ it is kva tad-āsthaḥ—meaning, ‘he who places his devotion in such things.’ But one who seeks a higher and rarer goal cannot set his heart on these transient gains, for men by nature desire to rise higher, not lower. Therefore, no wise person, understanding their unsubstantiality, can truly crave them. Likewise, who, perceiving the fleeting pleasures of Apsarās and such enjoyments that arise merely from fascination with bodily form, could delight in long life? Hence, do not tempt me with these illusory pleasures, but grant me that for which I have prayed.” (1.1.28)

In Kaṭha Upaniṣad 1.2.3–4, Yama praises Naciketas for rejecting all worldly temptations, including wealth, sons, and celestial maidens, because they are perishable and cannot grant liberation. The verses clearly distinguish between avidyā (ignorance leading to transient enjoyments) and vidyā (knowledge leading to immortality), and they commend Naciketas for choosing the latter. This shows that the Upaniṣads treat sensual and material pleasures as distractions from the higher goal, not as ideals to be pursued.

Katha Upanishad 1.2.3

हे नचिकेतः ! उस तूने पुत्र-वित्तादि प्रिय और अप्सरा आदि प्रियरूप भोगोंको, उनका असारत्व चिन्तन करके त्याग दिया है और जिसमें बहुत-से मनुष्य डूब जाते हैं, उस इस धनप्राया निन्दित गतिको तू प्राप्त नहीं हुआ ॥ ३ ॥

“O Nachiketas! You have rejected pleasures such as sons, wealth, and the enjoyments of maidens—having reflected on their worthlessness. You have not fallen into that condemned course, so money-centered, in which many men sink and perish.” (1.2.3)

Sankara Bhasya –

हे नचिकेतः ! तेरी बुद्धिमत्ता धन्य है; जिस तूने कि मेरे द्वारा बारम्बार प्रलोभित किये जानेपर भी पुत्रादि प्रिय तथा अप्सरा आदि प्रियरूप भोगोंको, उनकी अनित्यता और असारता आदि दोषोंका विचार करके परित्याग कर दिया, और जिसमें मूढ पुरुष प्रवृत्त हुआ करते हैं उस वित्तमयी – धनप्राया निन्दित गतिको तू प्राप्त नहीं हुआ, जिस मार्गमें कि बहुत-से मूढ पुरुष डूब जाते अर्थात् दुःख उठाते हैं ॥ ३ ॥

“O Nachiketas! Blessed is your wisdom, for though I tempted ou again and again with sons and wealth and the delights of celestial maidens, you have, reflecting upon their impermanence and worthlessness, firmly renounced them. That path, filled with riches, into which foolish men plunge and thereby suffer, you have not chosen. This is precisely why it was said earlier (in the opening verse of this Valli) that well-being comes to him who embraces śreyas (the good), while he who clings to preyas (the merely pleasant) falls from his own true welfare." "These two—śreyas (the good) and preyas (the merely pleasant)—are opposed to one another, as different as light and darkness, utterly distinct and leading to divergent ends: one to liberation, the other to bondage in the world. The wise know them as vidyā (knowledge, leading to the good) and avidyā (ignorance, leading to the pleasant). Of these, O Nachiketas, I regard you as one who longs for vidyā, a true student of the eternal. Why? Because even though many pleasures—such as celestial maidens and other delights that captivate the minds of the foolish—were presented to you, they could not seduce you nor stir a desire for enjoyment in your heart, nor could they turn you away from the path of śreyas. Therefore, I consider you a fit student, one worthy of the higher knowledge." (1.2.4)

Kaṭhopaniṣad 1.2.6 states that the path of the hereafter (samparāya) is not visible to those who remain deluded by wealth, women, and sexual enjoyment. Śaṅkara clarifies that such persons, blinded by desire, think only "this world exists, nothing beyond," and thus fall again into death. The text does not deny the natural attraction between man and woman, but it shows that when such enjoyment becomes the highest goal, it prevents one from seeing the eternal. In this way, the Upaniṣad uses the example of women and sexual pleasure to illustrate how powerful sense-attachments are, and why discrimination (viveka) is necessary to transcend them.

Katha Upanishad 1.2.6

धनके मोहसे अन्धे हुए और प्रमाद करनेवाले उस मूर्खको परलोकका साधन नहीं सूझता। यह लोक है, परलोक नहीं है – ऐसा माननेवाला पुरुष बारम्बार मेरे वशको प्राप्त होता है ॥ ६॥

“Blinded by the delusion of wealth and given to heedlessness, that foolish man does not perceive the means for the next world. 'This world alone exists, there is no other'—thinking thus, that man repeatedly comes under my sway.”

Sankara Bhsaya-

“The afterlife (samparāya) does not become evident to the ignorant. Samparāya refers to the realm one enters after the fall of the body (death). The means by which one attains that realm is called the scriptural path to the afterlife. This path does not become visible to the immature or undiscerning person—it does not appear before his mind.

Moreover, one who is negligent, whose mind is attached to worldly goals like children and cattle, and who is deluded by greed for wealth—such a person, covered by ignorance, cannot perceive the means to attain the afterlife.

He believes: 'This visible world of women, food, and drink is all there is; there is no other world beyond this.' A person who holds such views repeatedly falls under my dominion—under the power of death. That is, he remains bound to the cycle of birth and death and the suffering it entails. Most people in this world are of this kind.”

In Bhaja Govindam (Verse 4), Ādi Śaṅkarācārya, as rendered by Swami Chinmayananda, reminds us that the features of a woman that appear attractive—such as the breasts—are merely modifications of flesh and fat. Recognizing this truth, one should renounce lustful passions and carnal desires, turning the mind instead toward higher, spiritual pursuit.

   (Seek Govind, Seek Govind...)
   In the previous stanza a true seeker is advised to give up all covetousness for the wealth of the world, and here he is advised to give up lusty passions for women. From the days of the Upanishads to our own times, we find in all masters this constant warning against wealth (kaanchana) and woman (kaaminee). But no insult is meant to either; this is a state-ment of a scientific truth. All intelligent living creatures have these two irresistible urges, 'to possess more' (wealth) and 'to enjoy' (woman).

Commentary by Swami Chinmayananda

Biologically, nature has made man and woman, with a natural affinity for the charms of the opposite sex. This natural urge is to be controlled, disciplined, purified, sub-limated. An intelligent intellect alone can achieve this. An animal cannot; to act according to its instincts and impulses is but its privilege. The glory of man is that he can, by his rational intellect, curb and control the flow of his instincts for carnal pleasures and redivert them, thus ultimately sublimat-ing himself into something nobler and more divine.

Sri Chaitanya Mahaprabhu said –" 'O Lord of the universe, I do not desire material wealth, materialistic followers, a beautiful wife or fruitive activities described in flowery language. All I want, life after life, is unmotivated devotional service to You.'

The Bhagavad Gītā (16.21), with Śaṅkara's commentary, makes it clear that kāma (lust), krodha (anger), and lobha (greed) are the "three gates to hell" that destroy the soul's capacity for higher pursuits. The concept of indulging in sexual pleasure after death directly falls under kāma, which the Gītā warns against as spiritually ruinous. Far from being a reward, post-mortem sensual indulgence would be a mark of bondage and degradation, opposing the Gītā's core teaching that one must renounce desire to attain liberation (mokṣa). Thus, such an idea is not only un-Vedic but also explicitly condemned in Vedantic wisdom.

Srimad Bhagavad Geeta 16.21 Shankar Bhashya Geeta Press Gorakhpur

आत्माका नाश करनेवाले, ये तीन प्रकारके दोष, नरकप्राप्तिके द्वार हैं। इनमें प्रवेश करनेमात्रसे ही आत्मा नष्ट हो जाता है, अर्थात् किसी पुरुषार्थके योग्य नहीं रहता। इसलिये ये तीनों आत्माका नाश करनेवाले द्वार कहलाते हैं।
वे कौन हैं? काम, क्रोध और लोभ। सुतरां इन तीनोंका त्याग कर देना चाहिये। क्योंकि ये काम आदि तीनों नरकद्वार आत्माका नाश करनेवाले हैं, इसलिये इनका त्याग कर देना चाहिये। यह त्यागकी स्तुति है ॥ २१ ॥

There are three types of faults that lead to the destruction of the soul and open the gates to hell: desire, anger, and greed. As soon as one falls into them, the soul is ruined and becomes unfit for any noble pursuit. Therefore, these three are called the gates of hell and must be renounced, because they destroy the soul."

CONCLUSION-

Apsarās are not “Hūrīs” or prostitutes. Created by Lord Brahmā from His mind, they were meant to serve the sacred art of Nāṭyaveda—the Fifth Veda—for the moral and spiritual uplift of society, not sensual indulgence. Vedic texts describe them as the lawful wives of Gandharvas, affirming their status as married celestial women, not sexual commodities. The Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad (5.10) declares the Self neither male nor female, with gender only a temporary attribute of the gross body, which perishes at death. The surviving subtle body lacks organs for intercourse, making post-mortem sexuality physiologically impossible and Vedantically absurd. Thus, equating Apsarās with the “72 virgins” concept is baseless and anti-Vedic. Now we shall move forward to debunk his false allegations on this topic

Parashara Smriti 3.31 If victorious, wealth is won; if death results, beautiful women fall to his share; since this corporeal frame is liable to perish in an instant’s time, why should we be shy of meeting death on a field of battle?

The verse in Mahābhārata 12.98.46 that mentions “thousands of apsarās running towards a slain warrior” is not laying down any rule or system of heavenly enjoyment, but is part of Indra’s poetic praise of valor while speaking to Ambarīṣa. This entire section is full of hyperboles – for example, a warrior who slays the enemy commander is said to become as powerful as Viṣṇu and as wise as Bṛhaspati.

Mahabharat 12.98.42 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

जो योद्धा शत्रुके सेनापतिका वध करके उसके रथपर आरूढ़ हो जाता है, वह भगवान् विष्णुके समान पराक्रमशाली, बृहस्पतिके समान बुद्धिमान् तथा शक्तिशाली वीर समझा जाता है ।। ४२ ।।

“The warrior who slays the enemy commander and ascends his chariot is regarded as as powerful as Lord Viṣṇu in valor, as intelligent as Bṛhaspati, and as mighty as a hero.” (12.98.42)

यस्तु सेनापतिं हत्वा तद्यानमधिरोहति ।। ४२ ।।

Clearly, no human can literally become Viṣṇu; it is simply a way to glorify courage and strength. In the same style, the apsarā imagery expresses how attractive bravery is – that not only worldly women, but even celestial maidens would wish such a hero as their husband. The perspective here is from the apsarās’ side, not the warrior’s. Nowhere is it said that warriors fight or die for the sake of sensual reward. In fact, just a couple of verses later (12.98.48), the Mahābhārata lays down strict ethics of warfare: a warrior must not kill the aged, children, or women, must not strike a fleeing enemy from behind, and must not harm one who surrenders seeking refuge.

Mahabharat 12.98.45

युद्धमें वृद्ध, बालक और स्त्रियोंका वध नहीं करना चाहिये, किसी भागते हुएकी पीठमें आघात नहीं करना चाहिये, जो मुँहमें तिनका लिये शरण में आ जाय और कहने लगे कि मैं आपका ही हूँ, उसका भी वध नहीं करना चाहिये ।। ४८ ।।

"In battle, one should not slay the aged, the child, or women. One should not strike a fleeing enemy from behind. And if someone comes holding a blade of grass in his mouth, seeking refuge and saying, 'I am yours,' he too should not be slain." (12.98.48)

वृद्धबालौ न हन्तव्यौ न च स्त्री नैव पृष्ठतः ॥ ४८ ॥
तृणपूर्णमुखश्चैव तवास्मीति च यो वदेत् ।
युद्धमें वृद्ध, बालक और स्त्रियोंका वध नहीं करना चाहिये, किसी भागते हुएकी पीठमें आघात नहीं करना चाहिये, जो मुँहमें तिनका लिये शरण में आ जाय और कहने लगे कि मैं आपका ही हूँ, उसका भी वध नहीं करना चाहिये ॥ ४८ ॥

This shows clearly that the focus of the chapter is dharma-yuddha and glorification of courage, not sensual gratification. History itself proves this – Bhīṣma Pitāmah, one of the greatest warriors, was a lifelong brahmacārī, never married, and sought no pleasure even in earthly life. His valor was for dharma, not for desire. Therefore, taking this metaphor literally and reducing it to "Hinduism promises apsarās as a reward" is a shallow, Kaliyugī misinterpretation. The true essence of the passage is that supreme courage and sacrifice command universal admiration, even from the divine.

Coming to Allegations on Atharva Veda 4.34.2

The Sukta 34 of Atharva Veda is – Brahmaudan Sukta]

"Āchārya Rām Sharma Āchārya, in his Atharva Veda Bhāṣya, has explained this sūkta by giving its basic background and meaning.

ऋषि – अथर्वा । देवता – ब्रह्मौदन । छन्द – त्रिष्टुप् ४ उत्तमा भुरिक् त्रिष्टुप् ५ त्र्यवसाना सप्तपदा कृति, ६ पञ्चपदातिशक्वरी, ७ भुरिक् अतिशक्वरी, ८ जगती ।] इस सूक्त के देवता 'ब्रह्मौदन' हैं। लौकिक संदर्भ में यज्ञीय क्रम में संस्कारयुक्त जो अन्न दान किया जाता है, उसे ब्रह्मौदन कहते हैं। पके हुए भोज्य पदार्थ, बिना पकाये भोज्य (दही, शहद, घृतादि) पदार्थ तथा सूखे अन्न भी यज्ञीय ऊर्जा से संस्कारित करके दिये जाने की परम्परा रही है। यज्ञीय-ब्राह्मी संस्कार युक्त इस सेवन के भी महत्त्वपूर्ण लाभ कहे गये हैं; किन्तु सूक्ष्म सन्दर्भमें 'रेतो वा ओदनः ' (श०ब्रा० १३११४, जैसे सूत्रों के अनुसार तह बहुत व्यापक जत्त्व है। ब्रह्मौदन का अर्थ ब्रह्म का उत्पादक तेजस् होता है। ब्रह्म ने सृष्टि सृजन यज्ञ के लिए अपने तेजस् का एक अंश परिपक्व किया। जिस तरह अन्नमयकोश के पोषण एवं विकास के लिए अन्न आवश्यक है, उसी तरह सृष्टि के मूल घटकों के लिये ब्रह्मौदन सृष्टिकारक तेजस् की भूमिका मानी जा सकती है। ब्रहावर्चस इसी के धारण-सेवन करने से विकसित होता है। इस सूक्त तथा अगले सूक्त के मंत्रों में ब्रह्मौदन की जो महत्ता बतलायी गयी है, वह स्थूल अन्न की अपेक्षा ऐसी ही व्यापक अवधारणा का पोषण करती है

[Rishi – Atharva; Devata – Brahmaudan; Metres – Triṣṭubh 4, Uttamā Bhurik Triṣṭubh 5, Tryavasānā Saptapadā Kṛti 6, Pañcapadā Atishakvarī 7, Bhurik Atishakvarī 8, and Jagatī.]

In this hymn the deity is Brahmaudan.

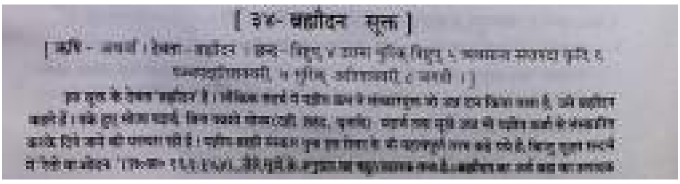
In the worldly context, Brahmaudan refers to the sanctified food that is offered in the sacrificial sequence. Cooked food, uncooked edibles (such as curd, honey, ghee, etc.), and even dry grains were traditionally consecrated through the energy of the sacrifice and then given as offerings. These yajña-imbued, brahma-sanctified consumables were said to have great benefits.

But in the subtler sense, according to formulas such as "Reto vā odanaḥ" (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 13.1.1.4), the meaning is much more expansive. Brahmaudan signifies the radiant power that is the product of Brahman itself. For the cosmic sacrifice of creation, Brahman matured a portion of its own brilliance.

Just as food (anna) is essential for the nourishment and growth of the annamayakośa (the sheath composed of food), in the same way Brahmaudan—as the creative brilliance of Brahman—was regarded as fundamental to the constituents of creation.

Brahmavarcas (spiritual brilliance, the radiance of Brahman) develops through the upholding and assimilation of this Brahmaudan.

Thus, in this hymn and the next one, the greatness of Brahmaudan is described—not merely as gross food, but as a vast concept that sustains creation itself.



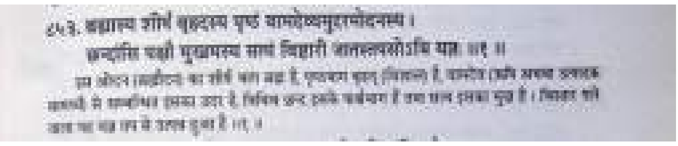
[३४- ब्रह्मौदन सूक्त]

"Atharva Veda 4.34.1–2 speaks about Brahmaudan—the creative brilliance of Brahman. It is presented as the foundational principle behind the constituents of creation itself. The hymn does not describe ordinary human beings or their enjoyments, but rather reveals the cosmic yajña, in which Brahman, Vastness, Ṛṣis, Chandas, Satya, and Tapas are symbolically assigned as its limbs. Thus, the focus is on the metaphysical process of creation, not on normal human affairs."

Atharva Veda 4.34.1

इस ओदन (ब्रह्मौदन) का शीर्ष भाग ब्रह्म है, पृष्ठभाग बृहत् (विशाल) है, वामदेव (ऋषि अथवा उत्पादक सामर्थ्य) से सम्बन्धित इसका उदर है, विविध छन्द इसके पार्श्वभाग हैं तथा सत्य इसका मुख है। विस्तार पाने वाला यह यज्ञ तप से उत्पन्न हुआ है ॥१ ॥

"The top portion of this Odan (Brahmaudan, the cosmic oblation) is Brahman; its back is the Bṛhat (the Vast). Its belly is connected with Vāmadeva (the Ṛṣi or the productive power). The various Chandas (metres of the Veda) are its sides, and Truth is its mouth. This sacrifice, which expands and grows, has been born of tapas (austerity)." (1)



Atharva Veda 4.34.2 is wrongly rendered as speaking of "men without bones, whose male organ is not burned, and who get many women in heaven." In reality, the sūkta describes Brahmaudan—the creative brilliance of Brahman—symbolically, not human beings. The word anasthāḥ ("boneless") means subtle radiance without a gross frame, capable of taking any form. The mention of śiśna does not refer to a physical organ but to the indestructible generative faculty or productive power, which even fire cannot consume. Likewise, bahvyaḥ striyaḥ ("many women") is Vedic symbolism for fertile powers or creative energies (śaktis), not literal women for enjoyment. As Āchārya Rām Sharma explains, in the worldly sense sacrificial food (havis) retains its sanctity even after fire, and in the subtle sense the pure brilliance of Brahman ascends to higher worlds and empowers creative forces. Thus, the verse is about the metaphysical yajña and cosmic creation, not about human pleasure or sexuality.

Atharva Veda 4.34.2 hindi translation by Shri Ram Sharma Acharya –

यह (ब्रह्मौदन) अस्थिरहित (कोई भी इच्छित आकार लेने में सक्षम) और पवित्र है। वायु से (शरीर में प्राणायाम आदि के द्वारा) शुद्ध और पवित्र होकर यह पवित्र लोकों को ही प्राप्त होता है। अग्नि इसके शिश्न (उत्पादक अंग) को नष्ट नहीं करता। स्वर्ग में (इसका तेजस् धारण करने वाली) इसकी बहुत सी स्त्रियाँ (उत्पादक शक्तियाँ।) हैं ॥२॥ [लौकिक संदर्भ में यज्ञ से संस्कारित अन्न के दिव्य संस्कार अग्नि पर पकाने से नष्ट नहीं होते। हव्य बनकर यह ऊर्ध्व लोकों में जाकर अनेक उर्वर शक्तियों को अपना तेजस् प्रदान करता है। सूक्ष्म संदर्भ में यह कोई भी रूप लेने में समर्थ तेजस् पवित्र होता है तथा पवित्र माध्यमों द्वारा ही ग्रहणीय है। इसका प्रभाव अग्नि आदि के सम्पर्क से कम नहीं होता।]

This Brahmaudan is boneless (i.e., without a gross, bony body, capable of taking any desired form) and pure.
Cleansed and sanctified by wind (through prāṇic discipline such as breath-control, or by contact with the life-breath), it attains the pure worlds.
Fire does not destroy its śiśna—that is, its generative faculty / productive power.
In heaven it has many women—meaning, it possesses many productive energies (fertile powers, śaktis) which carry and manifest its brilliance. ॥2॥

Ram Sharma Acharya Explanation-

[लौकिक संदर्भ में यज्ञ से संस्कारित अन्न के दिव्य संस्कार अग्नि पर पकाने से नष्ट नहीं होते। हव्य बनकर यह ऊर्ध्व लोकों में जाकर अनेक उर्वर शक्तियों को अपना तेजस् प्रदान करता है। सूक्ष्म संदर्भ में यह कोई भी रूप लेने में समर्थ तेजस् पवित्र होता है तथा पवित्र माध्यमों द्वारा ही ग्रहणीय है। इसका प्रभाव अग्नि आदि के सम्पर्क से कम नहीं होता।]

(Worldly context: The divine sanctity infused into sacrificial food is not destroyed by the fire that cooks it. As an offering (havya), it ascends to the higher worlds and transmits its brilliance to many fertile powers.
Subtle context: This brilliance, being able to assume any form, is pure and is receivable only by pure means.

Its potency is not diminished by the contact of fire or other forces.)

A hundred Apsaras of the most beautiful features wait upon and sport with him…"

Refutation-

In Mahābhārata 13.106.53–55 (Gita Press, Gorakhpur), it is simply stated that those who observe this fast will dwell in heaven for a hundred thousand years, enjoying bliss and being entertained by hundreds of Apsarās. As the Nāṭyaśāstra (1.46–47) records, Apsarās were created by Lord Brahmā for the promotion of Vedic dance and music arts, meant for the moral, cultural, and spiritual upliftment of society. Therefore, there is nothing sexual in witnessing the classical Vedic dance and music performed by Apsarās; it is a sacred and elevating cultural experience, not an act of sensual indulgence.

Even a person who is sick or in pain, if he observes a fast, dwells happily in heaven for one hundred thousand years.

Refutation-

Here is Śiva Purāṇa, Vidyeśvara Saṃhitā 1.24.66–70, Hindi translation by Geeta Press, Gorakhpur. It is nowhere stated that those who apply Tripuṇḍra will receive hundreds of virgins in Svarga for sexual purposes, especially when, as per Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 5.10, sexual intercourse is not even possible after death since the Ātman is neither male nor female. It simply says — "ब्रह्माके पदपर आसीन होकर वहाँ [दिव्यलोककी] सैकड़ों कन्याओंके साथ आनन्दित होता है" — meaning he becomes seated in the positions of the Prajāpatis and of Brahmā, rejoicing there in the company of hundreds of divine maidens (Apsarās) of the heavenly world. This rejoicing refers to witnessing their classical Vedic Nṛtya and Saṅgīta-kalā, the sacred arts of dance and music, for which the Apsarās were created by Lord Brahmā as per Nāṭya Śāstra 1.46–47 to grace divine assemblies with beauty, auspiciousness, and uplifting artistic performances, not for sensual indulgence.

One who wears the tripuṇḍra obtains in this world a long life free from disease, enjoys all kinds of pleasures, and at the end of life attains death peacefully. After death, he attains Śiva, endowed with the eight powers (aṇimā, mahimā, etc.) and noble qualities, with a divine body, and ascending a divine aerial chariot (vimāna) served by the gods of the celestial realms, he goes to Śivaloka. On the full moon day (Pūrṇimā) of the month of Jyeṣṭha, when the lunar asterism Jyeṣṭhā, presided over by the deity of the Moon, is present, meditation upon Hari is highly auspicious. This full moon should coincide with the Jyeṣṭhā constellation. At that time (in Puṣoṭtama Kṣetra and elsewhere) all wells become pure, filled with the merit of all sacred fords (tīrthas), and sanctified. On that occasion, the goddess Bhogavatī herself becomes manifest. Therefore, for the bathing of Balarāma, Kṛṣṇa, and Subhadrā, a golden vessel should be prepared, and water should be drawn from a well with it. Then, for the bathing of Kṛṣṇa and the others, a platform should be constructed. Here is Brahma Purana Adhaya 59 slokas 3-8 hindi translation by Chaukhamba Publications page 397/754 . Nowhere Apsaras or Sexual intercourse with Apsaras mentioned here –

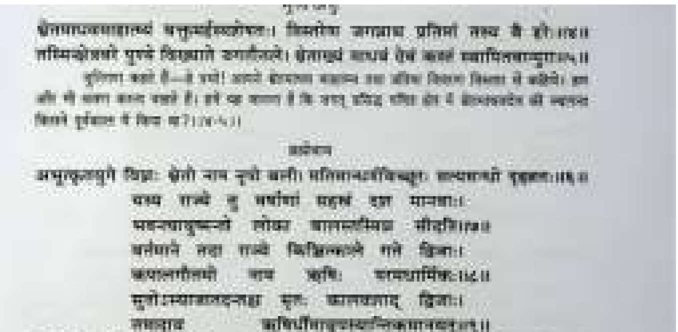
मुनिगण कहते हैं- हे प्रभो! आपने श्वेतमाधव माहात्म्य तथा प्रतिमा विवरण विस्तार से कहिये। हम और भी श्रवण करना चाहते हैं। हमें यह जानना है कि जगत् प्रसिद्ध पवित्र क्षेत्र में श्वेतमाधवदेव की स्थापना किसने पूर्वकाल में किया था?।।४-५।।

ब्रह्मा कहते हैं- पूर्व सत्ययुग के समय श्वेत नामक एक प्रबल राजा थे। वे बुद्धिमान्, धार्मिक, शूर, सत्यप्रतिज्ञ तथा दृढ़व्रती थे। उनके (राज्यकाल में मनुष्यों की परमायु १० हजार वर्ष थी)। बाल्यकाल में कोई भी उनके राज्य में मृत नहीं होता था। हे ब्राह्मणों! कुछ काल अतीत होने पर कपाल गौतम नामक एक परम धार्मिक ऋषि का एक पुत्र जिसका दांत भी नहीं निकला था, कालवशात् मृत हो गया। धीमान् ऋषि तब उस मृत बालक का शव लेकर राजा के यहां आये। नृपति ने इसे ऋषिपुत्र को चैतन्यहीन देखकर उसके जीवन रक्षा हेतु प्रण किया।।६-१०।।

The sages said—O Lord! Please narrate in detail the greatness of Śveta Mādhava and the description of His image. We wish to hear more. We desire to know who, in ancient times, first installed Śveta Mādhava Deva in that world-famous sacred place. (Verses 4–5)

Brahmā said—In the former Satya-yuga, there was a mighty king named Śveta. He was wise, righteous, valiant, true to his word, and firm in his vows. (In his reign, the maximum human lifespan was ten thousand years.) In his kingdom, no child ever died in infancy. O Brāhmaṇas! After some time had passed, by the force of Time, the infant son—whose teeth had not yet emerged—of a highly pious sage named Kapāla Gautama died. The wise sage then brought the dead body of that child to the king. Seeing the sage's son lifeless, the king vowed to restore the child's life. (Verses 6–10)



Allegation-

Matsya Purana 78.10 "He also goes to the all the seven lokas, in each kalpa, where he enjoys in the company of the nymphs and get bliss…"

Refutation-

Here is Matsya Purāṇa, Adhyāya 78, śloka 10, Hindi translation by Geeta Press, Gorakhpur. It simply states that one who performs Kamala Saptamī attains Svarga, where he is surrounded by Apsarās. Nowhere does it say that he engages in sexual intercourse with them, which is not even possible since Apsarās are not prostitutes, and the genderless Ātman cannot partake in sexual acts.

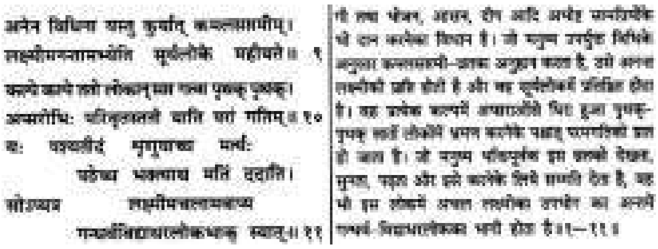
जो मनुष्य उपर्युक्त विधिके अनुसार कमलसप्तमी-व्रतका अनुष्ठान करता है, उसे अनन्त लक्ष्मीकी प्राप्ति होती है और वह सूर्यलोकमें प्रतिष्ठित होता है। वह प्रत्येक कल्पमें अप्सराओंसे घिरा हुआ पृथक् पृथक् सातों लोकोंमें भ्रमण करनेके पश्चात् परमगतिको प्राप्त हो जाता है। जो मनुष्य भक्तिपूर्वक इस व्रतको देखता, सुनता, पढ़ता और इसे करनेके लिये सम्मति देता है, वह भी इस लोकमें अचल लक्ष्मीका उपभोग कर अन्तमें गन्धर्व-विद्याधरलोकका भागी होता है॥१-११॥

The person who performs the Kamala Saptamī vow in the prescribed manner obtains inexhaustible wealth (ananta Lakṣmī) and becomes established in the world of the Sun (Sūryaloka). Surrounded by Apsarās, he wanders through each of the seven worlds in succession during every cosmic age (kalpa), and thereafter attains the supreme state (parama gati). Even one who, with devotion, merely beholds, hears about, reads, or gives consent to the observance of this vow also enjoys unfailing prosperity in this world and, in the end, attains a share in the realms of the Gandharvas and Vidyādharas. (Verses 1–11)



अनेन विधिना यस्तु कुर्यात् कमलसप्तमीम्।

Allegations-

Agni Purana 292.10-17 "...The Man who joins the cows in their dance of wild ecstasy, is sure to enjoy the fruits of heaven in the company of celestial dancing girls..."

Refutation-

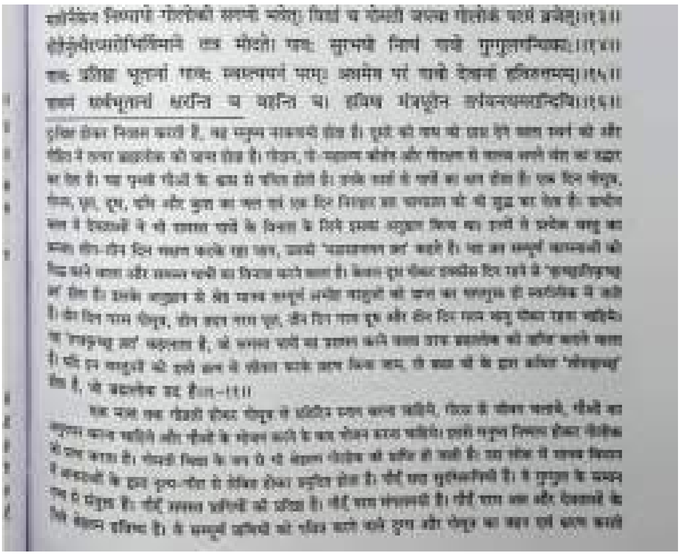
Here is Agni Purāṇa, Adhyāya 292, ślokas 10–17, Hindi translation by Choukhamba Publications. Nowhere does it state that one who observes cow vows (Govrati) receives prostitutes in heaven for sexual purposes. It simply says — "उस लोक में मानव विमान मैं अप्सराओं के द्वारा नृत्य-गीत से सेवित होकर प्रमुदित होता है" — meaning that in that realm, one rejoices while being served by Apsarās through their dance and music, enjoying divine entertainment and auspicious celebration, not sexual activity.

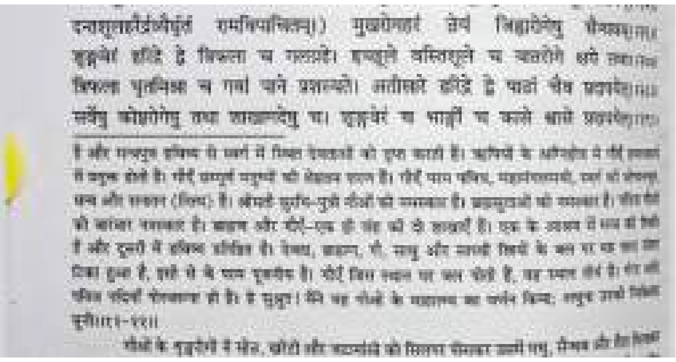
एक मास तक गोव्रती होकर प्रतिदिन स्नान करना चाहिये, गोरस से जीवन चलावे, गौओं का अनुगमन करना चाहिये और गौओं के भोजन करने के बाद भोजन करना चाहिये। इससे मनुष्य निष्पाप होकर गोलोक को प्राप्त करता है। गोमती विद्या के जप से भी श्रेष्ठतम गोलोक की प्राप्ति हो जाती है। उस लोक में मानव विमान मैं अप्सराओं के द्वारा नृत्य-गीत से सेवित होकर प्रमुदित होता है। गौएँ सदा सुरभिरूपिणी हैं। वे गुग्गुल के समान गन्ध से संयुक्त हैं। गौएँ समस्त प्राणियों की प्रतिष्ठा हैं। गौएँ परम मंगलमयी हैं। गौएँ परम अन्न और देवताओं के हैं और मन्त्रपूज हविष्य से स्वर्ग में स्थित देवताओं को तृप्त करती हैं। ऋषियों के अग्निहोत्र में गौएँ हवनकार्य में प्रयुक्त होती हैं। गौएँ सम्पूर्ण मनुष्यों की श्रेष्ठतम शरण हैं। गौएँ परम पवित्र, महामंगलमयी, स्वर्ग की सोपानभूत, धन्य और सनातन (नित्य) हैं। श्रीमती सुरभि-पुत्री गौओं को नमस्कार है। ब्रह्मसुताओं को नमस्कार है। पवित्र गौओं को बारंबार नमस्कार है। ब्राह्मण और गौएँ-एक ही वंश की दो शाखाएँ हैं। एक के आश्रय में मन्त्र की स्थिति है और दूसरी में हविष्य प्रतिष्ठित है। देवता, ब्राह्मण, गौ, साधु और साध्वी स्त्रियों के बल पर यह सारा संसार टिका हुआ है, इसी से वे परम पूजनीय हैं। गौएँ जिस स्थान पर जल पीती हैं, वह स्थान तीर्थ है। गंगा आदि पवित्र नदियाँ गोस्वरूपा ही हैं। हे सुश्रुत! मैंने यह गौओं के माहात्म्य ...ा वर्णन किया; अधुना उनकी चिकित्सा सुनो।।१२-२२।।

One should observe cow-vows (Govratī) for a month, bathing daily , sustaining life with cow dung, following the cows, and eating only after they have eaten. By doing this, a person becomes sinless and attains Goloka. The chanting of Gomatī Vidyā also grants the attainment of the highest Goloka. In that realm, one rejoices, served by Apsarās through dance and song, while traveling in a celestial vehicle.

Cows are always embodiments of fragrance (surabhirūpī), endowed with a scent like guggula (aromatic resin). They are the honor of all living beings, supremely auspicious, the highest source of nourishment, and belong to the Devas, satisfying them in heaven through mantras, worship, and offerings. Cows are used in the sacred rituals (havan) of sages' fire sacrifices. They are the supreme refuge for all humans, most sacred, supremely auspicious, the stairway to heaven, blessed, and eternal (sanātana). Salutations to the daughters of Surabhi, the cows; salutations to the Brahmasutas; repeated salutations to the holy cows.

Brahmins and cows are like two branches of the same lineage—one harbors mantras, and the other harbors sacrificial offerings (haviṣya). The entire world is sustained by the power of the Devas, Brahmins, cows, and virtuous men and women; this is why they are supremely worshipful. The places where cows drink water become sacred (tīrtha). Sacred rivers like the Ganga are themselves in the form of cows. O Suśruta! I have described the greatness of cows; now hear their treatment and care. (Verses 12–22)





Allegations-

Matsya Purana 107.4-5 "One who resides on the banks of the Ganges, with or without any object in view, and dies there, goes to heaven and remains far away out of the sight of hell. Such a man sits in a vimana, adorned by decent birds, like swans and flamingoes, where celestial nymphs sing lovely songs. Thus he enjoys long life in heaven.”

Refutation-

In Matsya Purana, Adhyaya 107, shlokas 4–5 (Hindi translation by Gita Press, Gorakhpur), there is no explicit mention that a person engages in sexual intercourse with Apsaras in heaven. The text only describes the soul being welcomed in Swarga, awakened by the melodious songs of Apsaras, and enjoying heavenly pleasures — which are depicted in a dignified and non-explicit manner.

जो मनुष्य निष्कामभावसे अथवा किसी कामनाको लेकर गङ्गाकी धारमें डूबकर मर जाता है, वह स्वर्गमें चला जाता है। उसे नरकका दर्शन नहीं करना पड़ता; वह हंस और सारससे युक्त विमानपर चढ़कर देवलोकको जाता है। वहाँ वह अप्सरासमूहके सुमधुर गान-शब्दधारा से निंद्रसे जगाया जाता है। राजेन्द्र! इस प्रकार वह अनेकों हजार वर्षोंतक स्वर्ग-सुखका उपयोग करता है।

A person attains the same result as he would by actually obtaining the fruit, merely by remembering the holy place in his mind.
A man, whether without desire or with some wish, who dies by drowning in the stream of the Ganga, goes to heaven.
He never has to see the sight of hell; instead, he ascends to the world of the gods, riding a celestial chariot adorned with swans and cranes.
There, he is awakened from sleep by the melodious flow of songs sung by groups of Apsaras (celestial maidens).
O King! In this way, he enjoys the pleasures of heaven for thousands of years.

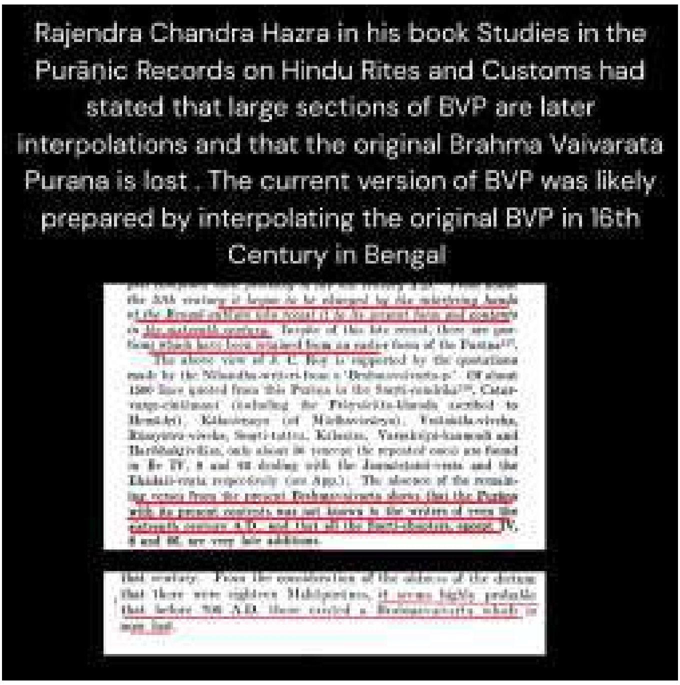
Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Krishna Janma Khanda 59.77-103 ”… Virtuous men, after having performed sacred deeds in India, go to heaven and there attended by celestial damsels enjoy celestial bliss for a long time…Fair one, this Heaven is not a field of action; it is a place of enjoyment. And of all enjoyments, association with an excellent woman is the best…”

Refutation-

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. Refutation-

Here is Narada Purana, Uttarabhaga 63.153b-156a hindi translation by Chaukhamba Publications . Here also nowhere its mentioned explicitly that one enjoys sexual intercourse with Apsaras or any other sexual act . Thereafter, when his karmic merit is exhausted, that person, having fallen from heaven, is born as the lord of Jambūdvīpa. (Verses 155–158)

At that time, the drums of the gods and the demons were sounding. Groups of sages and siddhas stationed in the sky were witnessing the battle. The heroes who fell in that battle were being taken directly to heaven by the apsaras.

(198.117)
“There, with three eyes and four arms, appearing as Rudra himself, he delights with the divine maidens (Apsaras) as long as the moon, the sun, and the stars endure.”

How does one delight in the Apsarās?

One delights in the Apsarās through their divine dance and celestial music, for this was their purpose of creation as described in the Nāṭyaśāstra (1.46–47)—to preserve the sacred art of nāṭya (performance), part of the fifth Veda, for the joy and elevation of beings.

The Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad (5.10) makes it clear that the Self is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Sex distinctions belong only to the body, not to the ātman. As Śaṅkara explains, it is the superimposition of bodily qualities that leads one to think "I am a man" or "I am a woman." Thus, after death, when the ātman is free of the body, there can be no sexual union.

Therefore, the "delight" in Apsarās must be understood as the joy of witnessing their divine nṛtya and saṅgīta, not bodily pleasure. It is a spiritual, aesthetic enjoyment aligned with dharma and higher bliss.

Allegations-

Skanda Purana III.i.1.77 "If one takes the holy bath for the sake of sexual pleasure with celestial damsels in heaven, he attains the same."

Refutation-

The statement in Skanda Purāṇa III.i.1.77 that a holy bath leads to sexual pleasure with celestial damsels is anti-Vedic and must be rejected, for the Vedas never sanction lust as a fruit of dharma. The Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad (5.10) teaches that the ātman is neither female, nor male, nor neuter, but only superimposes such identities through the body; once freed from the body, sexual activity is impossible. Therefore, to claim heavenly intercourse contradicts the very foundation of Vedānta. As Vyāsa Smṛti (1.4) and Manu Smṛti (12.95) affirm, anything opposed to the Vedas, even if found in Purāṇa or Smṛti, is unacceptable. The true Vedic purpose of Apsarās, as shown in the Nāṭyaśāstra, is in dance and music for divine delight, not sensuality—hence this verse is a later corruption, not genuine .

The Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 5.10 clearly states:
"The Self is neither female, nor male, nor neuter; whatever body it adopts, with that body it identifies."

This directly implies that gender is not an inherent property of the soul (ātman), but only a temporary attribute of the physical body (sthūla śarīra). After death, the gross body—which alone possesses reproductive organs and biological functions—perishes. The surviving subtle body (sūkṣma śarīra) does not possess the physical capacity for sexual intercourse. Therefore, any concept of post-mortem sexual activity, such as "enjoying" sexual intercourse in heaven is both physiologically impossible and philosophically opposed to Vedānta.

Vedic teaching views the afterlife not as a playground of sensual indulgence but as a transitional state in the cycle of saṃsāra, whose ultimate aim is mokṣa—liberation from rebirth—not eternal gratification. Post-death, the soul's true nature is beyond male/female distinctions, rendering the idea of sexual enjoyment not only baseless but fundamentally anti-Vedic, as it misrepresents the very purpose of existence described in the Upaniṣads.

Shvetashvatara Upanishad Adhaya 5 Mantra 10 Geeta Press Gorakhpur says

यह [विज्ञानात्मा] न स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जो-जो शरीर धारण करता है उसी उसीसे सुरक्षित रहता है ॥ १० ॥

This [conscious self/Atma] is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever body it takes on, by that very body it is protected. (10)

Shankar Bhasya –

'नैव स्त्री' इत्यादि। स्वयं
साक्षात् अद्वितीय ब्रह्मस्वरूप होनेके कारण यह न स्त्री है, न पुरुष है और न नपुंसक ही है। यह जिस-जिस स्त्रीशरीर, पुरुषशरीर अथवा नपुंसकशरीरको धारण करता है उसी-उसीसे यह विज्ञानात्मा रक्षित – सुरक्षित रहता है अर्थात् उसी-उसी शरीरके धर्मोको अपनेमें आरोपित कर ऐसा मानने लगता है कि 'मैं स्थूल हूँ, मैं कृश हूँ, मैं पुरुष हूँ, मैं स्त्री हूँ, मैं नपुंसक हूँ' इत्यादि ॥ १० ॥

"Neither female," etc.—Since it is itself the direct, non-dual Brahman in nature, it is neither female, nor male, nor neuter. Whatever female body, male body, or neuter body it takes on, by that very body this vijñānātmā is preserved—protected, meaning it superimposes upon itself the qualities (dharma) of that very body and comes to think: "I am stout, I am thin, I am a man, I am a woman, I am a neuter," and so on. Who are the Apsaras (Nymphs/Heavenly Virgins)?

Srimad Devi Bhagavatam 9.1.96-143 "…those that are sprung from Tamo Guna are recognised as worst and belonging to the unknown families. They are very scurrilous, cheats, ruining their families, fond of their own free ways, quarrelsome and no seconds are found equal to them. Such women become prostitutes in this world and Apsaras in the Heavens…"

Devi Bhagavatam 4.6.56-58 "The Apsaras said :– Of the five senses; sound, etc., the pleasures attained through the sensation of touch are excellent, and are reckoned as the source of Bliss; no other pleasures stand equal to it…If you like to go to Heaven, be pleased to know that there is no Superior Heaven to Gandhamadan (the mountain like intoxicating happiness of the senses). Dost thou enjoy the highest bliss, the pleasant sexual intercourse with us, the heavenly damsels in this very beautiful and lovely place."

Srimad Devi Bhagavatam 3.15.10-13 "Some warriors on being slain in the battle instantly arose in a celestial car to the heavens and was seen addressing the celestial nymph, who came already within his embrace, thus "O one of beautiful thighs. Behold! how my beautiful body is lying on the earth below!" Another warrrior thus slain got up in the heavens on a celestial car, came in possession of a celestial nymph and when he was sitting with her in the car, his former wife in the earth made herself a sati and burnt herself up in the funeral pyre, thus got a celestial body, came up to the heavens; and that chaste virtuous woman drew away perforce her own husband away from that celestial nymph. Two warriors, went up, slew each other and lay down dead at the same time. They went up in the heavens at the same time and there began quarrel with each other and fight with their weapons for one and the same celestial nymph.

He alleged on Devi Bhagvatam which does not come under the canto of 18 Puranas written by Ved Vyasa so I will not consider it authentic to comment on – Srimad Bhagvatam 12.7.22-25

Ludo Rucher in his book the Puranas page 172 dated Devi hagvatm to be written between 1100-1350 AD and not later

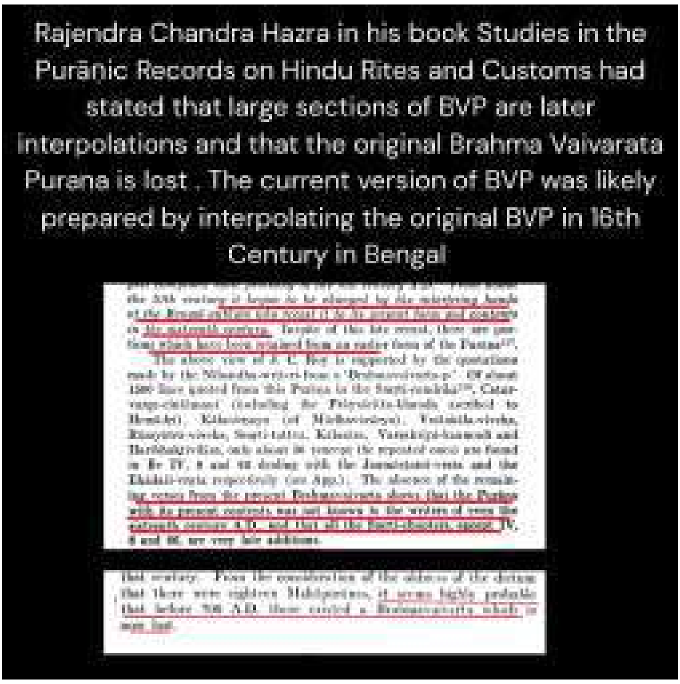
Gods use Apsaras for Their own Sexual Pleasures

📚Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Krishna Janma Khanda 32.55📚
Some of the ladies becomes the whores and earn their living by selling away their body. I am an apsara of the heaven and am used by the gods in the heaven and am quite respectable

Refutation-

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

In Normal Interpolated Manuscript of Brahma Vaivarta Purana the chapter is about Stortra of Lord Krishna beginning with the slokas -मोहिनीस्तवनेनैव कामस्तुष्टो बभूव ह। चकार शरसंधानमन्तरिक्षे स्थितः स्वयम् ।।१।। मन्त्रपूतं महास्त्रं च चिक्षेप पितरं मुदा। बभूव चञ्चलो ब्रह्मा कामास्त्रेण च कामुकः

Thereafter Brahmā, the creator of the universe spoke to passionate Mohini who was looking at him smilingly with a side-glance.

You can read ASI Manuscript here there is no such chapter with such topic and no such slokas most importantly proving that the entire chapter is interpolated

Additionally All Devas follow Brahmacharya and abstrain from Illicit Sexual intercourse as part of Brahmacharya

Atharva Veda Brahmacharya Sukta 11/7/19

ब्रह्मचर्य रूपी तप के द्वारा देवों ने मृत्यु का हनन कर दिया अर्थात् देव अमर हो गए. इंद्र ने ब्रह्मचर्य के द्वारा देवों के लिए स्वर्ग पर अधिकार किया

Through the penance of Brahmacharya , the Devas defeated death, that is, the Devas became immortal. Indra took control of Swarga for the Devas through Brahmacharya.

Atharva Veda 11/7/14 states all Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas follow Strict Brahmacharya and live in Brahmacharya

ब्रह्मचर्य का पालन करने वाला पुरुष दीप्ति वाले वेदरूपी ब्रह्म को धारण करता है. उस वेद से सभी देव संबंधित हैं. देवों का निवास बना हुआ ब्रह्मचारी प्राण और अपान के बाद ज्ञान को, मन, वाणी, हृदय और मेधा को उत्पन्न करता है

A man who practices Brahmacharya attains the Brahm in the form of the Veda which is full of light. All the Devas are related to that Veda. Brahmacharya is the abode of the Devas it produces knowledge, mind, speech, heart and intelligence after Prana and Apan.

Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 says अपहतपाप्मानो देवा अप पाप्मानं हतेऽमृता देवा नामृतत्वस्याशास्ति। that is Devas do not do any sinful activity and Devas attained immortality by destroying Sins

Acharya Sayana in his commentary on Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 said – तदेतत् प्रशंसति अपहतपाप्मान इति । देवानां पाप। हित्यान्मरणधर्मराहित्याच्च तत्सम्बन्धि-न्ययनेऽग्न्याधानकारिणोऽपि तदुभयं सिद्धयतीत्यर्थः ' This is praised with the expression 'Apahatapāpman' (i.e., one who is free from sin). Because the Devas are free from sin and from the condition of mortality, therefore, even one who performs the Agnyādheya (the rite of establishing the sacred fire), by becoming related to them, attains both

He remains there for forty kalpas, experiencing many rare enjoyments and pleasures, and then he goes to the realm of the stars (Nakṣatra-loka).
There, for thirty kalpas, after enjoying many desirable objects, he proceeds to the lunar world (Candra-loka).

O Brāhmaṇas! In that world, the Moon-god (Soma-deva), adorned with all the gods, shines resplendent.
Having gone there, he enjoys rare pleasures for twenty kalpas, and then goes on to the world of the Sun (Āditya-loka), worshipped by the gods, marvelous in many ways, and attended by Gandharvas and Apsarās.

There he experiences pleasures for ten kalpas, and from there he reaches the rare Gandharva-loka, where he remains for one kalpa.

In Gandharva-loka, after enjoying many pleasures, he is born again upon earth as a righteous, universal monarch (Cakravartin), endowed with great prowess and adorned with every noble quality.
In that birth, ruling his kingdom in accordance with Dharma, he performs grand sacrifices (yajñas) with abundant gifts (dakṣiṇā) and extensive rituals.

मुनिगण कहते हैं- हे ब्रह्मन्! नर अथवा नारी संयत होकर यात्रा का अनुष्ठान करके जो फल पाते हैं, आप उस एक यात्रा के फल को अलग-अलग कहिये ।।१।। ब्रह्मा कहते हैं- मानवगण को उस क्षेत्र में सुसंयत भाव से यात्रा करने से जो फल मिलता है, मैं उस प्रत्येक यात्रा का फल कहता हूं। श्रवण करें। उत्थान एकादशी, फाल्गुन पूर्णिमा तथा विषुव काल में (अर्थात् जब दिन-रात का समान काल हो) तब व्यक्ति यात्रा करके सविधि कृष्ण-बलराम तथा सुभद्रा का दर्शन तथा प्रणाम निवेदन करे। इस गुण्डीवा की यात्रा से मनुष्य सभी फलों को प्राप्त करते हैं। वे चौदहों इन्द्र के इन्द्रत्व काल तक विष्णुलोक में रहते हैं। जितने समय तक व्यक्ति ज्येष्ठमास में जितनी बार यथाविधि यात्रा करते हैं, वह उतने कल्प तक विष्णुलोक वासी रहते हैं। वे वहां सुखभोग करते हैं। यह भोग-मोक्षप्रद, सभी को सुखप्रद, पवित्र पुरुषोत्तम क्षेत्र है। यहां जो कोई स्त्री-पुरुष ज्येष्ठ मास में बारह बार सविधि यात्रा करता है, शठता तथा द्वेषरहित होकर दम्भादि दुर्गुण त्याग कर देव स्थापना करता है, वह जीवन काल में नाना भोगों को भोग कर अन्त काल में मोक्ष लाभ करता है।।२-८11 मुनिगण कहते हैं- हे देव! जगत्पति की प्रतिष्ठा पूजाविधि तथा उनको प्रसन्न करने वाले दान का फल हम तुरन्त सुनना चाहते हैं। कृपया कहिये ।।९।। ब्रह्मा कहते हैं- हे मुनिप्रवरगण! मानवगण को जिसका अनुष्ठान करने से विशेष फल मिलता है, मैं उस विधि निर्दिष्ट प्रतिष्ठा का वर्णन करता हूं। श्रवण करें। हे ब्राह्मणवृन्द ! जब द्वादश यात्रा सम्पन्न हो जाये, तब विधि के साथ पापनाशिनी प्रतिष्ठा करनी चाहिये। ज्येष्ठ मास की शुक्ला एकादशी के दिन समाहित होकर पवित्र जलाशय पर जाकर पवित्रता के साथ आचमन एवं सर्वतीर्थ आवाहन करने के उपरान्त नारायण का ध्यान करके (सविधि आचमन करे) तब स्नान करना चाहिये। ऋषियों ने जिसके लिये जैसी स्नान विधि का निर्देश किया है, उसे उसी विधान के अनुरूप ही स्नान करना होगा।।१०-१४।।

The sages said:
"O Brahman! Whether man or woman, when they perform the sacred journey (yātrā) with self-restraint, what fruits do they obtain? Please describe separately the results of a single journey." (1)

Brahmā said:
“For human beings, the results attained by performing this pilgrimage with a disciplined mind in that holy region—I shall now describe each fruit. Listen attentively. (2)

On Utthāna Ekādaśī, on Phālguna Pūrṇimā, and at the time of Viṣuva (equinox), when the day and night are equal, a person who undertakes the journey, and with proper rites offers obeisance and worship to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma, and Subhadrā, obtains the fruits of all pilgrimages through this Guṇḍicā-yātrā. (3–4)

They dwell in Viṣṇuloka for as long as the reign of the fourteen Indras lasts. (5)
And, as many times as a person, during the month of Jyeṣṭha, performs the journey according to proper rites, he dwells in Viṣṇuloka for that many kalpas. (6)

There they enjoy supreme bliss. This Puruṣottama-kṣetra bestows both enjoyment (bhoga) and liberation (mokṣa), it gives happiness to all, and is supremely holy. (7)

Whoever, man or woman, during the month of Jyeṣṭha, performs the journey twelve times with proper rites, free from malice and deceit, abandoning arrogance and all vices, and establishes the deity with devotion—such a one, after enjoying many pleasures in this life, attains liberation at the end. (8)

The sages said:
“O Lord! We desire to hear at once about the fruit of pratiṣṭhā (installation), the method of worship, and the gifts that please the Lord of the Universe. Kindly tell us.” (9)

Brahmā said:
“O best among sages! I shall now describe the ordained rite of installation (pratiṣṭhā), which yields great fruit to human beings. Listen attentively. (10)

O Brāhmaṇas! After the completion of the twelve journeys, one should, according to injunction, perform the sin-destroying pratiṣṭhā. (11)
